- 3 His work is ^z honourable and glorious:—and ^a his righteousness endureth for ever.
- 4 ^b He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered:
^c The LORD is gracious and full of compassion.
- 5 He hath given^d ^e meat [prey] unto them that fear him:
^e He will ever be mindful of his covenant.
- 6 ^f He hath showed his people the power of his works, ^g That he may give them the heritage of the heathen.
- 7 The works of his hands are ^h verity and judgment;
ⁱ All his commandments are sure:⁵
- 8 ^k They stand fast for ever and ever,—and are ^l done in truth and uprightness.
- 9 ^m He sent redemption unto his people:
ⁿ He hath commanded his covenant for ever:—^o holy and reverend is his name.
- 10 ^p The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom:
^q A good understanding have all they that ^r do his commandments.

PSALM CXII.⁷

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.
^s Blessed⁸ is the man that feareth the LORD,
That ^t delighteth greatly in his commandments.
- 2 ‘His seed shall be mighty upon earth:
The generation of the upright shall be blessed.
- 3 ^x Wealth and riches shall be in his house:
And ^y his righteousness endureth for ever.⁹
- 4 ^z Unto the upright there ariseth light in the darkness:¹⁰
^a He is gracious, and full of compassion, and ^b righteous.
- 5 ^c A good man¹¹ sheweth favour, and lendeth:
He will guide his affairs ^d with discretion.¹²
- 6 Surely ^e he shall not be moved for ever:
^f The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance.
- 7 ^g He shall not be afraid of evil tidings:
His ^h heart is fixed, ⁱ trusting in the LORD.
- 8 ^k His heart is established, ^l he shall not be afraid,
Until he ^m see his desire upon his enemies.
- 9 ⁿ He hath dispersed,¹³ he hath given to the poor;
^o His righteousness endureth for ever;—^p his horn shall be exalted with honour.
- 10 ^q The wicked shall see it, and be grieved;
^r He shall gnash with his teeth, and ^s melt away:
^t The desire of the wicked shall perish.

1 Psalm cxi. is an alphabetical one, in which the successive clauses begin with the successive Hebrew letters. There are two such clauses in each of the first eight verses; and three in each of the last two. It contains nothing to determine its date or its historical occasion. It is a hymn of public praise to Jehovah for his mercy and righteousness to his people.

2 Or, ‘company.’ The word denotes a select society in distinction from a congregation. In the general community, the righteous formed a smaller company.

3 Or, ‘sought out according to all their wishes;’ i. e. the wonders of God’s doings are so great, as fully to satisfy the hopes and desires of his people.

4 This and the following verses doubtless include the gift of manna and quails, the deliverance from Egypt, and the conquest of Canaan; but they must not be restricted to these, which are only some of the many proofs that Jehovah is mindful of his covenant.

5 As God’s works are true and just, so his commands may be regarded with confidence, as being the best possible for those to whom they are given.

6 This verse is the inference from all that had gone before. As all God’s dealings are faithful and gracious, and all his commands good and sure, it must be essential to true wisdom to reverence and obey him.

7 Psalm cxii. is a companion to the preceding, to which it is precisely similar in its construction, whilst it also corresponds with it in subject; since Psa. cxi. contains the praise of Jehovah for his dealings with his people, and Psa. cxii. describes their character and blessedness. The same or similar expressions also occur in both; applied in the former to Jehovah, in the latter to his people; and showing that it is their honour and happiness to resemble him.

8 At the close of the preceding psalm, the fear of the Lord is declared to be the first principle of all true wisdom; here it is commended as the source of all true happiness.

9 The same expression which occurs in Psa. cxi. 3.

10 Guidance in seasons of perplexity, and relief in time of trouble.

11 Rather, ‘Good (i. e. happy, prosperous) is the man who sheweth favour,’ etc.

12 Or, ‘He shall sustain his cause in judgment;’ he shall come out unharmed from all conflicts with litigious adversaries.

13 That is, he hath distributed munificently.

PSALM CXIII.¹

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.
- ^a Praise, O ye servants of the LORD,—praise the name of the LORD.
- 2 ^x Blessed be the name of the LORD—from this time forth and for evermore.
- 3 ^y From the rising of the sun unto the going down of the same the LORD's name is to be praised.
- 4 The LORD is ^z high above all nations,—and ^a his glory above the heavens.
- 5 ^b Who is like unto the LORD our God,—who dwelleth on high,
- 6 ^c Who humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth!
- 7 ^d He raiseth up the poor out of the dust,—and lifteth the needy out of the dunghill;
- 8 That he may ^e set ² him with princes,—even with the princes of his people.
- 9 ^f He maketh the barren woman to keep house,
And to be a joyful mother of children.³—Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXIV.⁴

- 1 WHEN ^g Israel went out of Egypt,
The house of Jacob ^h from a people of strange language;
- 2 ⁱ Judah was his sanctuary,⁵—and Israel his dominion.
- 3 ^h The sea saw it, and fled:—^l Jordan was driven back.
- 4 ^m The mountains skipped⁶ like rams,—and the little hills like lambs.
- 5 ⁿ What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou fleddest?
Thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?
- 6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams;—and ye little hills, like lambs?
- 7 Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the LORD,
At the presence of the God of Jacob;
- 8 ^o Which turned the rock into a standing water,—the flint into a fountain of waters.⁷

PSALM CXV.⁸

- 1 NOT ^p unto us, O LORD, not unto us,
But unto thy name give glory,⁹—for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake.
- 2 Wherefore should the heathen say,—^q Where is now their God?
- 3 ^r But our God is in the heavens:—^s he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased.
- 4 ^t Their idols are silver and gold,—the work of men's hands.
- 5 They have mouths, but they speak not:—eyes have they, but they see not:
- 6 They have ears, but they hear not:—noses have they, but they smell not:
- 7 They have hands, but they handle not:—feet have they, but they walk not:
Neither speak they through their throat.
- 8 ^u They that make them are like unto them;—so is every one that trusteth in them.
- 9 ^x O Israel, ^y trust thou in the LORD:—^z he is their help and their shield.¹⁰
- 10 O house of Aaron, trust in the LORD:—he is their help and their shield.
- 11 ^a Ye that fear the LORD, trust in the LORD:—he is their help and their shield.
- 12 ^b The LORD hath been mindful of us: he will bless us;
He will bless the house of Israel;—he will bless the house of Aaron.
- 13 ^c He will bless them that fear the LORD,—both small and great.
- 14 The LORD shall increase you more and more,—you and your children.¹¹
- 15 Ye are ^d blessed of the LORD ^e which made heaven and earth.

Ge. 1. 1.

1 According to a Jewish usage, which is thought to have existed even in the time of Christ, Psalms cxiii.—cxviii. constitute the greater Hallel, sung at the annual festivals, especially at the passover and the feast of tabernacles. It is commonly supposed to have been a portion of these psalms that our Saviour and his disciples sung after the passover (Matt. xxvi. 30; Mark xiv. 26). Psalm cxiii. calls upon all God's people to praise him for his majesty, condescension, and compassion. Nothing is known of its date or its author.

2 That is, make him to sit with them; namely, as their equal and associate.

3 There is here an allusion to the history of Hannah, from whose song most of the expressions in vers. 7, 8 are borrowed: see 1 Sam. ii. 8.

4 This sublime psalm briefly and powerfully celebrates God's deliverance of his chosen people from Egypt (vers. 1, 2) by stupendous miracles (3, 4), which are appealed to (5, 6) as proofs of his power over the earth (7, 8). It is calculated to encourage his people in all circumstances to believe that nothing is 'too hard for the Lord.' The writer and occasion of this psalm are both undiscovered.

5 Or, 'his holy thing;' set apart to his service.

6 Referring to the concussion of Sinai. See refs.

7 This refers to the miraculous supply of water. See refs.

8 Psalm cxv. entreates God's help, for the glory of his own name (vers. 1—3) in opposition to senseless idols (4—8); and exhorts to trust in Him alone (9—11), with full confidence that he will still bless his people (12—15), who will therefore praise him (16—18). It appears to have been composed when the restoration from Babylon was partially accomplished; the regal family and office being now less prominent than the priesthood.

9 That is, 'Glorify not us but thyself, in completing our deliverance.' The captivity of his people might appear to the heathen to cast a shade over God's truth and mercy as well as power, which their restoration would remove; showing that he had done as he pleased, and had done right.

10 That is, of those who trust in him. See Ps. xxxiii. 20.

11 The people had probably been diminished during their exile.

PSALM CXV. 16—CXVIII. 1.

- 16 ^f The heaven, even the heavens, are the LORD's :
But ^s the earth hath he given to the children of men.¹
17 ^h The dead praise not the LORD,—neither any that ⁱ go down into silence.
18 ^k But we will bless the LORD—from this time forth and for evermore.

PSALM CXVI.²

- 1 I ^l LOVE the LORD, ^m because he hath heard my voice and my supplications.
2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me,
Therefore will I call upon him ⁿ as long as I live.
3 ^o The sorrows of death compassed me,—and the pains of hell gat hold upon me :
I found trouble and sorrow.
4 Then called I upon the name of the LORD ;
^p O LORD, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.
5 ^q Gracious is the LORD, and ^r righteous ;—yea, our God is merciful.
6 The LORD preserveth the simple :—I was brought low, and he helped me.
7 Return unto thy ^s rest,³ O my soul ;
For ^t the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee.
8 ^u For thou hast delivered my soul from death,
^v Mine eyes from tears, and ^y my feet from falling.
9 I will ^z walk before the LORD ^a in the land of the living.⁴
10 ^b I believed, therefore⁵ have I spoken :—I was greatly afflicted.
11 ^c I said in my haste,—^d All men are liars.⁶
12 ^e What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits towards me ?
13 I will take the cup of salvation,⁷—and call upon the name of the LORD.
14 ^f I will pay my vows unto the LORD—now⁸ in the presence of all his people.
15 ^g Precious in the sight of the LORD is the death⁹ of his saints.
16 O LORD, truly ^h I am thy servant ;
I am thy servant, and ⁱ the son of thine handmaid :—^k thou hast loosed my bonds.¹⁰
17 I will offer to thee ^l the sacrifice of thanksgiving,
And will call upon the name of the LORD.
18 ^m I will pay my vows unto the LORD—now in the presence of all his people, Because his mercy endureth for ever.

Ezra 3. 11.

1 Jehovah has heaven for his glorious residence ; but in his bounty has created the earth for man, who should therefore praise him in it. This the living only can do, and we will therefore do it.

2 In Psalm cxvi., one who, in answer to prayer, had recently experienced Divine deliverance from imminent destruction professes his gratitude to Jehovah (vers. 1—11), and declares his intention of publicly paying his vows (12—19). The psalm bears every mark of being the language of individual experience, and was probably written after the captivity in Babylon. It is not unlikely, however, that in the great Hallel it was used as the voice of the church.

3 To thy former tranquil confidence in God.

4 That is, aiming to serve Him and to do his will on earth. The expressions in vers. 8, 9 are taken from Ps. lvi. 13, as those in ver. 3 are from Ps. xviii. 4, 5.

5 The meaning probably is, 'My faith caused me to speak or call upon God' (vers. 2, 4). The psalmist had not ceased to place his confidence in Jehovah, although his circumstances seemed so desperate.

6 That is, 'they disappoint the hopes which are placed in them.' Reliance on human aid is vain.

7 Perhaps referring to the cup of thanksgiving for salvation ; which, as Jewish writers say, commonly accompanied the thank-offerings after deliverance.

8 The Hebrew word here and in ver. 18 translated 'now,' is not an adverb of time, but an interjection of entreaty ; and, in such a place as this, it appears to mean, 'oh that I may do so : ' similar to our phrase, 'with Divine permission.'

9 This is the same as saying, 'their life is precious.' God so highly values the lives of his servants, that he will not lightly permit their death.

10 By delivering me from the bondage of affliction thou hast made me thy servant.

11 This very short psalm was perhaps designed to be a chorus or doxology to a longer ode. Many think it was used at the close of the public services of the temple.

12 These exhortations are quoted (Rom. xv. 11) as equivalent to prophetic intimations of the future calling of the Gentiles into the church of God.

13 In Psalm cxviii., the people of Israel, and especially the priests, are called upon to praise the ever-merciful Jehovah (vers. 1—4) for hearing their prayers and sanctioning their confidence by a mighty deliverance from their foes (5—16) ; for which reason the psalmist determines to spend the feast day in God's house in offering praise and sacrifice (17—29). This psalm has been attributed to various authors and occasions, but it seems to suit none so well as the defeat of Haman's plot, the exaltation of Mordecai, and the destruction of the enemies of the Jews. See Esth. viii., ix. Its form is evidently dramatic ; different parts being sung in the names of different persons, and probably by different voices.

PSALM CXVIII. 2—CXIX. 1.

- 2 ^s Let Israel now ¹ say,—that his mercy endureth for ever.
 3 Let the house of Aaron now say,—that his mercy endureth for ever.
 4 ^t Let them now that fear the LORD say,—that his mercy endureth for ever.
 5 "I called upon the LORD in distress :
 The LORD answered me, and ^x set me in a large place.²
 6 ^y The LORD is on my side;—I will not fear: what can man do unto me?
 7 ^z The LORD taketh my part with them that help me:
 Therefore shall ^a I see my desire upon them that hate me.
 8 ^b It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in man.
 9 ^c It is better to trust in the LORD than to put confidence in princes.
 10 ^d All nations compassed me about :
 But in the name of the LORD will I destroy them.
 11 They ^e compassed me about; yea, they compassed me about :
 But in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.
 12 They compassed me about ^f like bees;—they are quenched ^g as the fire of thorns :³
 For ^h in the name of the LORD I will destroy them.
 13 ⁱ Thou⁴ hast thrust sore at me that I might fall:—but the LORD helped me.
 14 ^j The LORD is my strength and song,—and is become my salvation.
 15 ^k The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous :
^l The right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.
 16 ^m The right hand of the LORD is exalted :
 The right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly.
 17 "I shall not die, but live,—and ⁿ declare the works of the LORD.
 18 The LORD hath ^o chastened me sore:—but he hath not given me over unto death.
 19 ^p Open to me the gates of righteousness :
^r I will go into them, and I will praise the LORD ;
 20 ^s This gate of the LORD,—^t into which the righteous shall enter.
 21 I will praise thee: for thou hast ^u heard me,—and ^x art become my salvation.
 22 ^y The stone which the builders refused is become ^z the head stone of the corner.⁵
 23 This is the LORD's doing;—it is marvellous in our eyes.
 24 This is the day which the LORD hath made;⁶—we will rejoice and be glad in it.
 25 ^a Save now, I beseech thee, O LORD:—O LORD, I beseech thee, send now prosperity.
 26 ^b Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD:⁷
 We have blessed you out of the house of the LORD.
 27 God is the LORD, which hath showed us ^c light.⁸
 Bind the sacrifice with cords, even unto ^d the horns of the altar.
 28 Thou art my God, and I will praise thee:—^e thou art my God, I will exalt thee.
 29 ^f Oh give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good:—for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXIX. 9

⌘ ALEPH.

- 1 ^g BLESSED are the undefiled [or, perfect, or, sincere] in the way,
^h Who walk in the law of the LORD.

^h Ps. 123. 1.

1 Rather, 'Oh, that Israel would say:' see note on Ps. cxvi. 14. And so in vers. 3, 4.

2 See note on Ps. xviii. 19.

3 A fire of thorns is soon kindled, and burns fiercely; but is speedily extinguished.

4 If the supposition in the note on the heading of this psalm is correct, this verse may be an address to Haman, 'the Jews' enemy.'

5 This probably was a proverbial expression, applicable to any case in which some person or thing which had been regarded as contemptible had come to honour. Those who refer the psalm to the time of David understand the 'corner stone' as alluding primarily to himself; and it may also well be referred to Mordecai. But it certainly applies with the fullest meaning to our Lord Jesus Christ; who, though he was rejected by the Jewish authorities, was nevertheless destined to unite both Jews and Gentiles in one vast and glorious spiritual building. See refs.

6 The meaning is, It is God who has wrought for us the deliverance which we this day celebrate. This applies well to the feast of Purim.

7 This was afterwards given as a standing appellation to the Messiah, in allusion either to this passage or to Mal. iii. 1. See Matt. xi. 3; xxi. 9; Heb. x. 37.

8 That is, He has granted us a season of extraordinary tranquillity and joy.

9 Psalm cxix. is the most extended alphabetical poem in the Bible. It consists of twenty-two divisions, which are severally headed, in the English Bible, by the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet; and each part comprises eight verses, all beginning with the Hebrew letter which forms the heading. Like other psalms of this class, it is entirely occupied with one subject. Its one simple theme is the excellence of the word of God, which is here presented in every variety of form, and mostly in short detached sentences; though occasionally the same thought is pursued through two or more verses. We find here, as in Ps. xix. 7—9 (on which see note), various terms employed, as almost synonymous, to designate the law, or revealed will of God; and one or more of these is found in nearly every verse. The only exceptions are vers. 122, 132, and perhaps 84, 90, 91, 120, 121. All that is here said of the value and use of the ancient Scriptures may be applied, with far greater force, to the complete and perfect revelation which we possess. Many commentators, both Jewish and Christian, ascribe this psalm to David, and suppose it to have been written by him while oppressed and persecuted by Saul and his party; referring, in support of that opinion, to vers. 9,

- 2 Blessed are they that ⁱkeep his testimonies,¹
And that ^hseek him with the whole heart.
3 ⁱThey also do no iniquity:—they walk in his ways.
4 Thou hast commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently.
5 Oh that my ways were directed² to keep thy statutes!
6 ^mThen shall I not be ashamed,—when I have respect unto all thy commandments.
7 ⁿI will praise thee with uprightness of heart,
When I shall have learned thy righteous judgments.
8 ^oI will keep thy statutes:—oh ^pforsake me not utterly.

1 BETH.

- 9 Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?
^qBy taking³ heed thereto according to thy word.
10 With my whole heart have I ^rsought thee:
Oh let me not ^swander from thy commandments.
11 ^tThy word have I hid in mine heart,—that I might not sin against thee.
12 Blessed art thou, O LORD:—^uteach me thy statutes.
13 With my lips have I ^vdeclared all the judgments of thy mouth.
14 I have ^wrejoiced in the way of thy testimonies,—^zas much as in all riches.
15 I will ^ameditate in thy precepts,—and have respect unto thy ways.
16 I will ^bdelight myself in thy statutes:—I will not forget thy word.

2 GIMEL.

- 17 ^cDeal bountifully with thy servant, that I may live,—and keep thy word.
18 Open⁴ thou mine eyes,—that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.
19 ^dI am a stranger in the earth:—hide not thy commandments from me.⁵
20 ^eMy soul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times.
21 Thou hast rebuked ^fthe proud that are cursed,
Which do ^gerr from thy commandments.
22 ^hRemove from me reproach and contempt;—for I have kept thy testimonies.
23 ⁱPrinces also did sit and speak against me:
But thy servant did ^kmeditate in thy statutes.
24 ^lThy testimonies also are my delight ^mand my counsellors.

3 DALETH.

- 25 ⁿMy soul cleaveth unto the dust:⁶—^oquicken thou me according to thy word.
26 ^pI have declared my ways,⁷ and thou heardest me:—^qteach me thy statutes.
27 Make me to understand the way of thy precepts:
So ^rshall I talk of thy wondrous works.
28 ^sMy soul melteth for heaviness:—^tstrengthen thou me according unto thy word.
29 ^uRemove from me the way of lying:⁸—and grant me thy law graciously.
30 ^vI have chosen the way of truth:—thy judgments have I laid before me.
31 I have ^wstuck unto thy testimonies:—O LORD, ^xput me not to shame.
32 I will run⁹ the way of thy commandments,—when thou shalt ^aenlarge my heart.

4 HE.

- 33 ^bTeach me, O LORD, the way of thy statutes;—and I shall keep it ^cunto the end.
34 ^dGive me understanding,¹⁰ and I shall keep thy law;
Yea, I shall observe it with ^emy whole heart.
35 ^fMake me to go in the path of thy commandments;—for therein do I ^gdelight.
36 ^hIncline my heart unto thy testimonies,—and not to ⁱcovetousness.¹¹
37 ^kTurn away mine eyes from ^lbeholding vanity;
And ^mquicken thou me in thy way.

23, 46, 141, 161. These expressions, however, and all the rest of the psalm, would be quite as applicable to the circumstances of some pious exile in Babylon; and it is not unlikely that the composer availed himself of the recorded sayings of inspired men of an earlier time. It was evidently, at first, designed for private meditation, for which it is peculiarly adapted.

¹ Those precepts which bear witness to God's holiness and goodness, and against sin.

² Rather, 'fixed,' 'established;' in opposition to unsteadiness and vacillation.

³ Rather, 'so as to keep it according to thy word.' The whole psalm is the answer to this question. Prayerful meditation on God's word is the best corrective of youthful passions.

⁴ Or, 'uncover.'

⁵ As a traveller in a strange land needs a directory to guide his course, so does a pilgrim on the earth need the guidance of God's truth.

⁶ See Ps. xxii. 15, 29, for expressions somewhat similar. 'I am ready to die: give me life according to thy word.' When all else fails, we may betake ourselves to God, in whose hand are the issues of life.

⁷ 'I have made known to thee all my affairs and anxieties.'

⁸ This seems to refer particularly to all insincerity and unfaithfulness to convictions and solemn engagements: see next verse.

⁹ 'My obedience shall be earnest and zealous.'

¹⁰ Or, 'Make me understand it;' as in ver. 27.

¹¹ Or, 'gain.' That the inordinate love of gain is opposed to a faithful observance of the Divine testimonies is taught by our Saviour, in Matt. xiii. 22; Luke xvi. 13; and by the apostle Paul, in 1 Tim. vi. 10.

- 38 ⁿ Stablish thy word unto thy servant,—^o who is devoted to thy fear.
39 ^p Turn away my reproach which I fear:—^q for thy judgments are good.
40 Behold, I have ^r longed after thy precepts:—^s quicken me in thy righteousness.

VAU.

- 41 'Let thy mercies come also unto me, O LORD,
Even thy salvation, according to thy word.
42 So shall I have wherewith to answer him that reproacheth me: ¹
"For I trust in thy word.
43 And take not the word of truth utterly out of my mouth;
For I have hoped in thy judgments.
44 ² So shall I keep thy law continually—for ever and ever.
45 And ³ I will walk at liberty:—² for I seek thy precepts.
46 ³ I will speak of thy testimonies also before kings,—and ^a will not be ashamed
47 And I will ^b delight myself in thy commandments,—^c which I have loved.
48 My hands also will I lift up ³ unto thy commandments, which I have loved;
And I will ^d meditate in thy statutes.

ZAIN.

- 49 Remember the word unto thy servant,
Upon which ⁴ thou hast caused me to ^e hope.
50 This is my ^f comfort in my affliction:—^g for thy word hath quickened me.
51 The proud have had me greatly ^h in derision:
Yet have I not ⁱ declined from thy law.
52 ^h I remembered thy judgments of old, O LORD;—and have comforted myself.
53 'Horror hath taken hold upon me—because of the wicked that forsake thy law.
54 Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage. ⁵
55 ^m I have remembered thy name, O LORD, in the night,—and have kept thy law.
56 This I had,—because I kept thy precepts.

CHETH.

- 57 ⁿ Thou art my portion, O LORD:—^o I have said that I would keep thy words.
58 ^p I intreated thy favour with my whole heart:
Be merciful unto me ^q according to thy word.
59 I ^r thought on my ways,—and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.
60 I made haste, ⁶ and delayed not to keep thy commandments.
61 'The bands of the wicked have robbed ⁷ me:—^c but I have not forgotten thy law.
62 "At midnight ⁸ I will rise to give thanks unto thee,
Because of thy righteous judgments.
63 ^z I am a companion of all them that fear thee,—and of them that keep thy precepts.
64 ^v The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy:—⁹—^z teach me thy statutes.

TETH.

- 65 Thou hast ^a dealt well with thy servant, O LORD,—according unto thy word.
66 ^b Teach me good judgment and knowledge:
For I have believed thy commandments.
67 ^c Before I was afflicted I went astray:—but now have I kept thy word.
68 Thou art ^d good, and doest good;—^e teach me thy statutes.
69 The proud have ^f forged a lie against me:
^g But I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart.
70 ^h Their heart is as fat as grease; ¹⁰—^c but I ⁱ delight in thy law.
71 ^h It is good for me that I have been afflicted;—that I might learn thy statutes.
72 'The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.

JOD.

1 The best answer to the calumnies of his enemies would be his manifest enjoyment of the Divine favour.

2 Or, 'at large.' See note on Psa. xviii. 19.

3 A symbol of earnest desire, derived from the raising of the hands in prayer.

4 Or, 'because thou hast made me to hope.'

5 Or, 'my sojournings.' A description of human life, derived from the habits of the early patriarchs: see Gen. xlvii. 9.

6 Love to our work is shown by promptitude in setting about it.

7 Or, 'The bonds (i. e. snares) of the wicked have surrounded me.'

8 Thus showing the ardour of his love to God. So our Lord spent the night in prayer: see Matt. xiv. 23; Luke vi. 12.

9 The Divine mercy displayed around us is a pledge of God's willingness to bestow the mercy that we need for our souls.

10 See note on Psa. xvii. 10.

11 The sentiment of this verse is, 'As I owe all to thee, so I look for all to thee.'

- 74 ^o They that fear thee will be glad when they see me ;
Because ^p I have hoped in thy word.
75 ^q I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are right,
And ^r that thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me.
76 Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kindness be for my comfort,
According to thy word unto thy servant.
77 ^s Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live :
For ^t thy law is my delight.
78 Let the proud ^u be ashamed ; ^x for they dealt perversely with me without a cause :
But I will ^y meditate in thy precepts.
79 ^z Let those that fear thee turn unto me,¹
And those that have known thy testimonies.
80 Let my heart be sound in thy statutes ;—that I be not ashamed.

▷ CAPH.

- 81 ^a My soul fainteth for thy salvation :—but ^b I hope in thy word.
82 ^c Mine eyes fail for thy word,—saying, ^d When wilt thou comfort me ?
83 For ^e I am become like a bottle in the smoke ;²—yet do I not forget thy statutes.
84 ^f How many³ are the days of thy servant ?
^g When wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me ?
85 ^h The proud have digged pits for me,—which are not after thy law.
86 ⁱ All thy commandments are faithful :
^j They persecute me ^m wrongfully ; ⁿ help thou me.
87 ^o They had almost consumed me upon earth ;—^p but I forsook not thy precepts.
88 ^q Quicken me after thy lovingkindness ;
So shall I keep the testimony of thy mouth.

↳ LAMED.

- 89 ^r For ever, O LORD, thy word is settled in heaven.⁴
90 ^s Thy faithfulness is unto all generations :
^t Thou hast established the earth, and it abideth.
91 They continue this day according to ^u thine ordinances :—^x for all are thy servants.
92 Unless ^y thy law had been my delights,
^z I should then have perished in mine affliction.
93 ^a I will never forget thy precepts :—^b for with them thou hast quickened me.
94 ^c I am thine, save me ;—for I have sought thy precepts.
95 ^d The wicked have waited for me to destroy me :
But ^e I will consider thy testimonies.
96 ^f I have seen an end of all perfection :
But ^g thy commandment is exceeding broad.⁵

▷ MEM.

- 97 ^h Oh how love I thy law !—ⁱ it is my meditation all the day.
98 Thou ^k through thy commandments hast made me ^l wiser than mine enemies :
For they are ever with me.⁶
99 ^m I have more understanding than all my teachers :
ⁿ For thy testimonies are my meditation.
100 ^o I understand more than the ancients,—^p because I keep thy precepts.
101 I have ^q refrained my feet from every evil way,—that I might keep thy word.
102 I have ^r not departed from thy judgments :—^s for thou hast taught me.
103 ^t How sweet are thy words unto my taste !
Yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth !
104 Through thy precepts I get understanding :—therefore ^u I hate every false way.⁷

² The skin-bottles of the East (see Josh. ix. 4) are often hung up near the roof, where they become blackened with smoke, and sometimes shrivelled with heat : hence they afford a figure for one whom affliction has made an object of pity rather than of attraction.

³ This is equivalent to, 'Remember how few they are.' The shortness of his life is urged by the psalmist as a reason for imploring speedy succour.

⁴ The stability and order of the material universe are a guarantee of the certainty of all God's purposes and promises. Comp. vers. 89—91 with Jer. xxxi. 35—37, xxxiii. 19—21.

⁵ The absolute perfection of the Divine law is here contrasted either with the real incompleteness and frailty of the (apparently) most perfect works of men, or with the deficiency which is found in all human goodness when brought to this standard.

⁶ Or, 'Thy commandment hath made me wiser than mine enemies : for it is for ever mine ;' i. e. my inalienable possession. God's truth, received with simplicity and cordiality, confers upon its humblest possessors a Divine wisdom which will foil the cunning of their enemies (ver. 98), will surpass all merely human endowments and attainments (99), and will be more available than the maxims of antiquity or the greatest knowledge of the world (100).

⁷ Thy word both helps me to discern error and teaches me to hate it.

2 NUN.

- 105 *Thy word is a lamp unto my feet,—and a light unto my path.
 106 y I have sworn, and I will perform it,—that I will keep thy righteous judgments.
 107 I am afflicted very much:—^z quicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word.
 108 Accept, I beseech thee, ^a the freewill offerings of my mouth, ¹ O LORD,
 And ^b teach me thy judgments.
 109 ^c My soul² is continually in my hand:—^d yet do I not forget thy law.
 110 ^e The wicked have laid a snare for me:—yet I ^f erred not from thy precepts.
 111 ^g Thy testimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever:
 For ^h they are the rejoicing of my heart.
 112 I have inclined mine heart to perform thy statutes alway,—ⁱ even unto the end.

3 SAMECH.

- 113 I hate ^k vain thoughts:³—^l but thy law do I love.
 114 ^m Thou art my hiding place and ⁿ my shield:—^o I hope in thy word.
 115 ^p Depart from me, ye evildoers:—^q for I will keep the commandments of my God.
 116 ^r Uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live:
 And let me not ^s be ashamed of my hope.
 117 ^t Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe:
 And ^u I will have respect unto thy statutes continually.
 118 Thou hast trodden down⁴ all them that ^x err from thy statutes:
 For their deceit is falsehood.
 119 Thou puttest away all the wicked of the earth ^y like dross;
^z Therefore I love thy testimonies.
 120 ^a My flesh trembleth for fear of thee;—and I am afraid of thy judgments.⁵

4 AIN.

- 121 ^b I have done judgment and justice:—^c leave me not to mine oppressors.
 122 Be ^d surety for thy servant for good:—^e let not the proud oppress me.
 123 ^f Mine eyes fail for thy salvation,—and for the word of thy righteousness.
 124 ^g Deal with thy servant according unto thy mercy,—and ^h teach me thy statutes.
 125 ⁱ I am thy servant; give me understanding,—that I may know thy testimonies.
 126 ^k It is time for thee, LORD, to work:⁶—for they have ^l made void thy law.
 127 ^m Therefore⁷ I love thy commandments above gold;—yea, above fine gold.
 128 Therefore I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things ⁿ to be right;
 And I ^o hate every false way.

5 PE.

- 129 Thy testimonies are wonderful:—therefore doth my soul keep them.
 130 ^p The entrance of thy words giveth light;
^q It giveth understanding unto the simple.
 131 I opened my mouth, and ^r panted:—for I ^s longed for thy commandments.
 132 ^t Look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me,
^u As thou usest to do unto those that love thy name.
 133 ^x Order⁸ my steps in thy word:—and ^y let not any iniquity have dominion over me.
 134 ^z Deliver me from the oppression of man:—so will I keep thy precepts.
 135 ^a Make thy face to shine upon thy servant;—and ^b teach me thy statutes.
 136 ^c Rivers of waters run down mine eyes,—because they keep not thy law.

6 TZADDI.

- 137 ^d Righteous art thou, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments.
 138 ^e Thy testimonies that thou hast commanded are righteous and very faithful.
 139 ^f My zeal hath consumed me,—because mine enemies have forgotten thy words.
 140 ^g Thy word is very pure:—therefore thy servant loveth it.
 141 ^h I am small and despised:—ⁱ yet do not I forget thy precepts.
 142 ^k Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness,—and thy law is ^l the truth.
 143 ^m Trouble and anguish have taken hold on me:
 Yet thy commandments are ⁿ my delights.
 144 ^o The righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting:
^p Give me understanding, and I shall live.

PSALM CXX. 8

A Song of degrees. 9

1 IN ^l my distress I cried unto the LORD,—and he heard me.
 2 Deliver my soul, O LORD, from lying lips,—and from a deceitful tongue.

1 That is, 'anticipated;' 'was beforehand with.' So intent was the psalmist on devout meditation that he arose before the night was ended for that purpose.

2 'My enemies are near to injure (ver. 150); but thou art near to save.'

3 Rather, 'Many;' in opposition to the 'many persecutors' in the next verse.

4 Or, 'The head (meaning probably 'the sum') of thy word is truth.'

5 See note on Numb. xiv. 22.

6 Heb., 'and [there is] to them no stumbling-block.' A temptation or occasion to sin is often so designated. See Ezek. vii. 19; xiv. 3, 4, 7; xlv. 12 (marg. reading). The words rendered 'offend' and 'offence' in the New Testament have the same meaning. See Matt. v. 29, 30.

7 Rather, 'sing;' perhaps in the sense, respond to.

8 In Psalm cxx., an exile encourages himself by God's past mercies to pray confidently for deliverance from treacherous foes (vers. 1—4), among whom he dwells in misery (5—7). Mesech and Kedar (ver. 5), in the extreme north and south, probably represent the dispersion of the Israelites among barbarous heathen nations.

9 Literally, 'of goings up.' This title is prefixed to fifteen psalms (cxx.—cxxxiv.), which appear to have been composed by different authors, and at various periods. Though not without personal allusions, they are mainly national; and probably received this title when collected together into a liturgy. Some suppose the term 'songs of degrees' to refer to a peculiarity of structure; a phrase of one sentence being repeated in the next with some addition, so as to form a progression, or gradation, of thought and language. But this is found only in one or two of these psalms. The Jews say that it means 'songs of the steps;' and that these psalms were sung on the steps of the temple, or in bringing up the water from Siloam: see note on Lev. xxiii. 34. But probably the title refers to going up to Jerusalem, either on the return of the exiles from Babylon, or at the annual festivals. The frequent allusions to the exile (cxxx. 5), and to the degradation (cxxxiii. 3, 4) and almost complete extinction of the nation (cxxxiv. 1—5), and to their preservation and restoration (cxxxvi. etc.), as well as the mingling of sadness with joy in these psalms, suggest the supposition that they were first arranged in this manner for the solemn services described in Neh. viii. To this supposition many of the notes on these psalms will have reference.

1 See note on 1 Kings xix. 4. The roots of the retem are regarded by the Arabs as yielding the best charcoal. Keen arrows and hot coals, or 'sword and fire,' are the punishment by which a nation is exterminated.

2 In Psalm cxxi., the returning exiles animate themselves in their dangerous and toilsome march by thoughts of the unerring guidance and incessant watchfulness of their Divine Protector. The psalm is so perfectly accordant with the spirit of Ezra (see ch. viii. 21—23), that it may with probability be attributed to him or one of his companions. It may have been intended to be sung responsively.

3 This means, perhaps, the mountain-land of Judea generally; and especially the heights on which Jerusalem and the temple were built. To this the Israelites were taught to look as the place where Jehovah displayed his grace to his people. See 1 Kings viii. 47—49; Dan. vi. 10.

4 Or, 'May he not,' etc. To this ver. 4 is the affirmative response, 'Lo! he shall not slumber,' etc.

5 Thy protector. This image would be understood and felt in the East, where the beams of the sun are often more scorching than among ourselves.

6 This may refer to the supposed deleterious influence of the night (commonly attributed to the moon) on those who sleep in the open air.

7 A proverbial phrase for all the affairs and occupations of life: see refs.

8 Psalm cxxii. appears to be an earlier composition than the preceding; being written whilst 'the house of David' held the 'throne' at Jerusalem (ver. 5). It was placed third in this series, probably, as expressing the gladness of the exiles on regaining their holy city (vers. 1, 2), whose ancient glories are celebrated (3—5), and whose prosperity is prayed for (6—9).

9 Rather, 'are standing.'

10 This expression of admiration at the completeness of the city seems to imply that it had recently been finished and adorned.

11 Or, 'according to the law for Israel' (that all the males were to go up three times a year). See Exod. xxiii. 17; Ps. lxxxvi. 3—5.

12 Jerusalem was the civil as well as the religious metropolis.

13 Or, 'they shall be in security;' and so in ver. 7, 'prosperity' should be 'security.'

14 That is, 'the good of the city.' The psalmist would pray for, and strive to promote, its civil interests, because of the importance he attached to its religious interests.

15 Psalm cxxiii. expresses the humility of one who waits for Divine help (vers. 1, 2), which is his only hope under scornful oppression (3, 4). It probably refers to the contempt and enmity of surrounding nations towards the restored exiles. See Ezra iv.; Neh. ii. 19; iv.

16 In the East, orders are rarely given to an attendant in words, but commonly by signs. These are often so slight as to escape notice unless the eyes of the servant are kept fixed on the master or mistress. Just so (says the psalmist) our expectations are all fixed upon Jehovah.

PSALM CXXIII. 3—CXXVII. 1.

- ¹ So our eyes wait upon the LORD our God,—until that he have mercy upon us.
 3 Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us:
^u For we are exceedingly filled with contempt.
 4 Our soul is exceedingly filled with the scorning of those that are at ease,
 And with the contempt of the proud.

PSALM CXXIV. ¹

A Song of degrees of David.

- 1 IF it had not been ^x the LORD who was on our side,—^y now ^z may Israel say;
 2 If it had not been the LORD who was on our side,—when men ^z rose up against us:
 3 Then they had ^aswallowed us up quick,³—when their wrath was kindled against us:
 4 Then ^b the waters had overwhelmed us,—the stream had gone over our soul:
 5 Then ^c the proud waters had gone over our soul.
 6 Blessed be the LORD—^d who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth.
 7 Our soul is escaped ^e as a bird out of the snare of the fowlers:
 The snare is broken, and we are escaped.
 8 ^f Our help is in the name of the LORD,—^g who made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXV. ⁴

A Song of degrees.

- 1 THEY that trust in the LORD shall be as mount Zion,
 Which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever.
 2 As the mountains are round about Jerusalem,⁵ ^h So the LORD is round about his people from henceforth even for ever.
 3 For ⁱ the rod of the wicked shall not rest⁶ upon the lot of the righteous;
^k Lest the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity.
 4 ^l Do good, O LORD, unto those that be good,
 And to them that are ^m upright in their hearts.
 5 As for ⁿ such as turn aside unto their ^o crooked ways,⁷
 The LORD shall lead them forth ^p with the workers of iniquity:
 But ^q peace shall be upon Israel.

PSALM CXXVI. ⁸

A Song of degrees.

- 1 WHEN the LORD ^r turned again the captivity of Zion,
^s We were like them that dream.
 2 Then ^t was our mouth filled with laughter,—and our tongue with singing:
^u Then said they among the heathen,—The LORD hath done great things for them.
 3 The LORD hath done great things for us;—whereof we are glad.
 4 Turn again our captivity, O LORD,—as the streams in the south.⁹
 5 ^x They that sow in tears—shall reap in joy [or, singing].
 6 ^y He that ^z goeth forth and weepeth,—bearing precious seed,
 Shall doubtless come again with rejoicing,—bringing his sheaves with him.

1 Psalm cxxiv. celebrates some signal and most timely deliverance from God, when no other help could avail. It contains, however, nothing that will serve to fix the period of its composition. It may perhaps have been inserted here with reference to the dangers mentioned in Neh. iv. 1, 2, 7—10.

2 Rather, 'Oh let Israel say.' See note on Ps. cxvi. 14.

3 That is, 'alive.' See Numb. xvi. 30, 33.

4 Psalm cxxv. pronounces those who trust in Jehovah to be stable and safe (vers. 1—3), and invokes a blessing upon them and upon all Israel; but denounces destruction on the wicked (4, 5). Its date cannot be ascertained; but here it seems to allude to the plots of Sanballat, which were defeated by the firmness and uprightness of Nehemiah: see Neh. vi. 5—19.

5 Jerusalem, seated on hills, is surrounded by hills still higher, which appear to inclose and shelter it, and therefore represent the all-surrounding protection of Jehovah.

6 That is, 'shall not always remain.' The God of the righteous will not suffer the wicked permanently to oppress them; lest their faith and patience should fail, and they should be tempted to renounce the service of God as unprofitable and even ruinous. See Ps. lxxiii. 13, 14.

7 Deviating from the straight and narrow highway of God's commandments. See Deut. ix. 16; Mal. ii. 8, 9.

8 In Psalm cxxvi., the grateful joy of the exiles restored to their homes (vers. 1—3) leads to prayer for the complete restoration of Israel (4—6). It was evidently written about the time of Ezra, and perhaps, as was anciently thought, by him.

9 The word rendered 'south' means dry: see Josh. xv. 19. The land of Palestine, deprived for a time of its inhabitants by the captivity, and then replenished by the return of the exiles, is compared to the streams in the southern deserts, which dry up in the summer, but are filled again after the rains. See Job vi. 15.

10 The Hebrew is very expressive: 'Going he shall go and weep, bearing a load of seed: coming he shall come with singing, bearing his sheaves.' Sowing and reaping are often put proverbially for the beginning and end of a course of events.

11 Psalm cxxvii. is didactic; teaching man's entire dependence upon God for success in all his works (vers. 1, 2), and the enjoyment of family blessings (3—5). It Except ^b the LORD keep the city,—^c the watchman waketh but in vain.

2 ^d It is vain for you to rise up early, to sit up late,—to ^e eat the bread of sorrows :
^f For so he giveth his beloved ¹ sleep.

3 Lo, ^g children are an heritage of the LORD :
And ^h the fruit of the womb is his reward.
4 As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man ;—ⁱ so are children of the youth. ²
5 Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them :—^k they shall not be ashamed,
But they shall speak ³ with [or, subdue ^l] the enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVIII. 4

A Song of degrees.

1 BLESSED ^m is every one that feareth the LORD ;—ⁿ that walketh in his ways.
2 ^o For thou shalt eat the labour ⁵ of thine hands :
Happy shalt thou be, and ^p it shall be well with thee.
3 Thy wife shall be ^q as a fruitful vine by ⁶ the sides of thine house :
Thy children ^r like olive plants round about thy table.
4 Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the LORD.
5 ^s The LORD shall bless thee out of Zion :
And 'thou shalt see the good of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.
6 Yea, thou shalt ^t see thy children's children,—and ^x peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXIX. 7

A Song of degrees.

1 MANY a time ^y have they afflicted me from ^z my youth, ⁸—^a may Israel now say :
2 Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth :
^b Yet they have not prevailed against me.
3 ^c The plowers plowed upon my back :—they made long their furrows.
4 ^d The LORD is righteous :—he hath cut asunder the cords of the wicked.
5 Let them all ^e be confounded and turned back that hate Zion.
6 Let them be as ^f the grass upon the housetops, was probably written in a time of prosperity, when men are apt to lose sight of God ; and is ascribed by many to Solomon. It was probably inserted in this series as being well suited to check self-gratulation and self-reliance on the part of those who were rejoicing in their national restoration.

1 That is, 'to his beloved.' Whilst those who forget God disturb their rest and embitter their lives by anxiety, those who cast all their care upon him enjoy the 'peace of God which passeth understanding' (Phil. iv. 6, 7).

2 That is, sons born while their parents are still young, who would therefore be grown up, and able to protect the declining years of their parents.

3 They will stand up to defend their father's rights against unjust litigation. But the word may be rendered, as in 2 Chron. xxii. 10, 'destroy ;' and this will carry out the figure of the former clause.

4 Psalm cxxviii. promises to those who fear God domestic happiness (vers. 1—3), and public prosperity (4—6). It is a suitable companion for the preceding, and may have proceeded from the same writer.

5 That is, the fruit of thy labour, as in Psa. cv. 44.

6 Rather, 'in the hinder (i. e. innermost) parts of thy house ;' the part appropriated to the females of the family.

7 Psalm cxxix. refers to past oppressions and deliverances (vers. 1—4) as a ground of hope in prayer for the overthrow of present foes (5—8). It was probably occasioned by the difficulties which attended the rebuilding of the temple and city. This psalm has been by many commentators attributed to Ezra.

8 The Jewish nation is here personified, as in Jer. ii. 2 ; Hos. ii. 15. In its youth, the earliest period of its history, it was oppressed in Egypt.

9 Or, 'it is plucked up.' On the flat roofs of Oriental houses, grass often springs up in the rainy season ; but afterwards quickly withers, yielding nothing useful. Comp. Isa. xxxvii. 27.

10 That is, to the reapers and the sheaf-gatherers (ver. 7). See Ruth ii. 4.

11 Psalm cxxx., like the preceding, builds hopes for the future on the basis of former Divine mercies ; but these are for pardon, not for deliverance from enemies. It records the penitent's prayer (vers. 1, 2), his confession, not without hope of forgiveness (3, 4), his patient reliance on God's mercy (5, 6), and his exhortation to Israel to cherish a like confidence (7, 8). It is a probable supposition that it refers to the penitential service spoken of in the book of Ezra, ch. ix., x.

12 Rather, 'For.' 'I make this confession and supplication because there is forgiveness with thee.'

13 The belief in Divine mercy destroys the enmity of the sinner, and inspires him with those sentiments of filial reverence which lead him to seek God. On the other hand, the effect of despair is sullen resentment.

- 5 ^m I wait for the LORD, my soul doth wait,—and ⁿ in his word do I hope.
 6 ^o My soul waiteth for the LORD more than they that watch for the morning: ¹
I say, more than they that watch for the morning.
 7 ^p Let Israel hope ² in the LORD:
 For ^q with the LORD there is mercy,—and with him is plenteous redemption.
 8 And ^r he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXXI.³

A Song of degrees of David.

- 1 LORD, ^s my heart is not haughty,—nor mine eyes lofty:
^t Neither do I exercise myself in great matters,
 Or in things too high [wonderful^u] for me.
 2 Surely I have behaved and ^v quieted myself, ^y as a child⁴ that is weaned of his mother:
 My soul is even as a weaned child.
 3 ^z Let Israel hope in the LORD—from henceforth and for ever.

PSALM CXXXII.⁵

A Song of degrees.

- 1 LORD, remember David,—and all his afflictions: ⁶
 2 ^a How he sware unto the LORD,—^b and vowed unto ^c the mighty God of Jacob;
 3 Surely I will not come into the tabernacle of my house,—nor go up into my bed;
 4 I will ^d not give sleep to mine eyes,—or slumber to mine eyelids,
 5 Until I ^e find out a place for the LORD,
 An habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.
 6 Lo, we heard of it ^f at Ephratah: ⁷—^g we found it ^h in the fields of the wood. ⁸
 7 We will go ⁱ into his tabernacles:—^j we will worship at his footstool.
 8 ^k Arise, O LORD, into thy rest;—thou, and ^l the ark of thy strength.
 9 Let thy priests ^m be clothed with righteousness; ¹⁰
 And let thy saints shout for joy.
 10 ⁿ For thy servant David's sake—turn not away ^o the face of thine anointed. ¹¹
 11 ^p The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it;
^q Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.
 12 ^r If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them,
 Their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore. ¹²
 13 ^s For the LORD hath chosen Zion;—^t he hath desired it for his habitation.
 14 ^u This ¹³ is my rest for ever:—here will I dwell; for I have desired it.
 15 ^v I will abundantly bless her provision:—I will satisfy her poor with bread.
 16 ^y I will also clothe her priests with salvation:
^z And her saints shall shout aloud for joy.
 17 ^a There will I make the horn of David to bud: ¹⁴
^b I have ordained a lamp for mine anointed.
 18 His enemies will I ^c clothe with shame:
 But upon himself shall his crown flourish.

1 Perhaps referring to the temple-watchmen, who looked out for the dawn. The repetition expresses earnestness.

2 Rather, 'O Israel, hope thou in Jehovah.'

3 Ps. cxxxi. expresses the meek humility of the pardoned and restored sinner, and thus aptly follows Ps. cxxx.

4 Submissively yielding my desires to thy will.

5 Psalm cxxxii. describes David's desire to find a home for the ark (vers. 1—5), the bringing up the ark with prayer (6—10), and the promise of Divine favour to David and to Zion (11—18). From the latter part it is evident that the psalm was composed after the ark was settled at Jerusalem (comp. 2 Sam. vii.); yet it can hardly have been so late as the captivity (see ver. 10). Hence it is likely that it was composed for the dedication of Solomon's temple (see 2 Chron. vi. 41, 42), and therefore appropriately employed at the first great festival after the full restoration of the temple and city (Neh. viii.)

6 Rather, 'Remember for David (i. e. for his good) all his trouble;' referring perhaps to his earnest anxiety, unabated by trials and disappointments, for the settlement of the ark and the erection of a permanent sanctuary. Comp. 2 Sam. vi. 8, 9, 12—15; vii.; 1 Chron. xxii.

7 On comparing various passages (see 1 Sam. i. 1;

1 Chron. ii. 24), it appears probable that the ancient name of the town (see Gen. xlviii. 7) had been extended to a district comprising the southern part of the mountains of Ephraim, whilst the town had received the name of Bethlehem. Hence 'Ephratah' is the district, 'Kirjath-jearim' the town where the ark was heard of and found.

8 Or, 'in the lands of Jaar;' a poetical abbreviation of 'Kirjath-jearim,' which signifies Town of the Woods.

9 Or, 'Let us go,' etc.

10 The same figure occurs in Job xxix. 14; but the variation in 2 Chron. vi. 41 ('salvation') indicates a difference in the meaning. The allusion here is to the way in which the priests of God, in discharging their sacred functions, set forth his righteousness in the salvation of his people.

11 David or his successors.

12 See note on 2 Sam. vii. 12.

13 The following verses describe the blessings which flow to God's people from his special presence among them.

14 Rather, 'There will I make a horn to bud to David: I have trimmed a lamp,' etc. The 'horn' is an emblem of power and glory, and the 'lamp' of joy and prosperity. See refs.

PSALM CXXXIII.¹

- 1 BEHOLD, how good and how pleasant it is for ^abrethren to dwell together in unity!
 2 It is like ^cthe precious ointment upon the head,
 That ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard:
 That went down to the skirts² of his garments;

- 1 BEHOLD, bless ye the LORD, ⁱAll ye servants of the LORD,—^kwhich by night stand in the house of the LORD.
 2 ^lLift up your hands in the sanctuary,—and bless the LORD.
 3 ^mThe LORD that made heaven and earth—ⁿbless thee out of Zion.

PSALM CXXXV.⁵

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.

Praise ye the name of the LORD;—^opraise him, O ye servants of the LORD.

- 2 ^pYe that stand in the house of the LORD,—in ^qthe courts of the house of our God,
 3 Praise the LORD; for ^rthe LORD is good:
 Sing praises unto his name; ^s*for it is* pleasant.⁶

- 4 For ^tthe LORD hath chosen Jacob unto himself,
 And Israel for his peculiar treasure.

- 5 For I know that ^uthe LORD is great,—and that our Lord is above all gods.

- 6 ^xWhatsoever the LORD pleased, that did he in heaven, and in earth,
 In the seas, and all deep places.

- 7 ^yHe causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth;

^zHe maketh lightnings for⁷ the rain;

^aHe bringeth the wind out of his ^btreasures.

- 8 ^cWho smote the firstborn of Egypt,—both of man and beast.

- 9 ^dWho sent tokens and wonders into the midst of thee, O Egypt, ^eUpon Pharaoh, and upon all his servants.

- 10 ^fWho smote great nations,—and slew mighty kings;

- 11 Sihon king of the Amorites,—and Og king of Bashan,

And ^gall the kingdoms of Canaan:

- 12 ^hAnd gave their land for an heritage,—an heritage unto Israel his people.

- 13 ⁱThy name, O LORD, endureth for ever;

And thy memorial, O LORD, throughout all generations.

- 14 ^jFor the LORD will judge⁸ his people,

And he will ^krepent himself, concerning his servants.

- 15 ^lThe idols of the heathen are silver and gold,—the work of men's hands.

- 16 They have mouths, but they speak not;—eyes have they, but they see not;

- 17 They have ears, but they hear not;—neither is there any breath in their mouths.

- 18 They that make them are like unto them:—so is every one that trusteth in them.

- 19 ^mBless the LORD, O house of Israel:—bless the LORD, O house of Aaron:

- 20 Bless the LORD, O house of Levi:—ye that fear the LORD, bless the LORD.

- 21 Blessed be the LORD ⁿout of Zion,—^owhich dwelleth at Jerusalem.

² Heb., 'the mouth' or 'orifice of the garment;' the collar round the neck. See Exod. xxviii. 31, 32.

⁴ Psalm cxxxiv. beautifully closes the series by calling upon the priests and Levites who were to remain for the daily service of the temple to praise God, and by responding in a benediction on the people who were dispersing to their homes. It was probably written for the occasion. See note on title of Ps. exx.

⁵ Psalm cxxxv. begins and ends with calling on the people, and especially the ministers of Jehovah, to bless him (vers. 1—3, 19—21); and the intervening verses describe the subjects of praise, namely, his works recorded in their national histories (4—12), and his superiority to false gods (13—18). Several verses greatly resemble those of Ps. cxv.; and it is probable that this sacred song was composed for constant use when the service had been fully re-established by Nehemiah.

⁶ Or, 'for He is lovely.'

⁷ That is, to accompany the rain, as they do in hot climates.

⁸ That is, He will do justice with respect to them; fulfilling the promise in Deut. xxxii. 36.

PSALM CXXXVI.¹

- 1 OH ^pgive thanks unto the LORD; for he is good:
^qFor his mercy endureth for ever.
- 2 Oh give thanks unto ^rthe God of gods:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 3 Oh give thanks to ^sthe Lord of lords:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 4 To him ^twho alone doeth great wonders:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 5 "To him that by wisdom made the heavens:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 6 ^uTo him that stretched out the earth above the waters:
For his mercy endureth for ever.
- 7 ^vTo him that made great lights:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 8 ^zThe sun to rule by day:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 9 ^aThe moon and stars to rule by night:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 10 ^bTo him that smote Egypt in their firstborn:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 11 ^cAnd brought out Israel from among them:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 12 ^dWith a strong hand, and with a stretched out ^earm:
For his mercy endureth for ever.
- 13 ^fTo him which divided the Red Sea into parts:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 14 And made Israel to pass through the midst of it:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 15 ^gBut overthrew Pharaoh and his host in the Red Sea:
For his mercy endureth for ever.
- 16 ^hTo him which led his people through the wilderness:
For his mercy endureth for ever.
- 17 ⁱTo him which smote great kings:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 18 ^jAnd slew famous kings:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 19 ^kSihon king of the Amorites:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 20 ^lAnd Og the king of Bashan:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 21 ^mAnd gave their land for an heritage:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 22 Even an heritage unto Israel his servant:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 23 Who ⁿremembered us in our low estate:—for his mercy endureth for ever:
- 24 ^oAnd hath redeemed us from our enemies:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 25 ^pWho giveth food to all flesh:—for his mercy endureth for ever.
- 26 Oh give thanks unto ^qthe God of heaven:—for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVII.²

- 1 BY the rivers³ of Babylon, there we sat down,
Yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.
- 2 We hanged our harps⁴ upon the willows in the midst thereof.
- 3 For there they that carried us away captive required of us a song;
And they that ^rwasted us required of us mirth,
Saying, Sing us one of the songs of Zion.
- 4 How shall we sing the LORD's song in a strange land?
- 5 ^sIf I forget thee, O Jerusalem,—let my right hand forget her cunning.
- 6 If I do not ^tremember thee, let my ^utongue cleave to the roof of my mouth;
If I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy.
- 7 Remember, O LORD, ^xthe children of Edom—in the day of Jerusalem;⁵
Who said, Rase it,—rase it, even to the foundation thereof.
- 8 O daughter of Babylon,⁶ ^ywho art to be destroyed;⁷
Happy shall he be, ^zthat rewardeth thee as thou hast served us.
- 9 Happy shall he be, that taketh and ^adasheth thy little ones against the stones.

1 Psalm cxxxvi. is a companion to the preceding, and was probably composed at the same time. It, however, refers more distinctly to the return of the captives (see vers. 23, 24). It differs from Ps. cxxxv. mainly in the use of figures and terms derived from the books of Moses, and in the insertion of a response (borrowed from the ancient psalmody) to each sentence or clause, probably designed to be sung in full chorus by the people.

2 Psalm cxxxvii. is the plaintive song of one who had been (and perhaps still was) a captive in Babylon. The writer, in reply to the taunts of the conquerors (vers. 1—3), declares that his vivid remembrances of Jerusalem forbid him to sing her songs during her deep affliction (4—6), and sings, instead of them, a fearful prophetic denunciation of her cruel foes Edom and Babylon (7—9).

3 Besides the Euphrates, there were in the land of Babylon the Tigris, the Chebar (Ezek. i. 1; iii. 15), the Ulai (Dan. viii. 2), and their branches.

4 Instruments generally used on joyful occasions (Job xxx. 31; Ps. lvii. 8; xcii. 3). Hence to hang them up was a sign of grief.

5 That is, in the day of the great catastrophe of Jerusalem. The Edomites had expressed, in the most indecent and insulting manner, the joy they felt at the downfall of their rival: see Ezek. xxv. 12—14; Obad. 10—14.

6 See note on Ps. xlv. 12.

7 Or, 'who art the destroyed.' The prophets often speak as if their predictions were already accomplished.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

*A Psalm of David.*¹

- 1 ^b I WILL praise thee with my whole heart :
^c Before² the gods will I sing praise unto thee.
 2 ^d I will worship ^e toward thy holy temple,
 And praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth :
 For thou hast ^f magnified thy word³ above all thy name.
 3 ^g In the day when I cried thou answeredst me,
 And ^h strengthenedst me with strength in my soul.
 4 ' All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O LORD,
 When they hear the words of thy mouth.
 5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways⁴ of the LORD :
^k For great is the glory of the LORD.
 6 ' Though the LORD be high, yet ^m hath he respect unto the lowly :
ⁿ But the proud he knoweth afar off.
 7 ^o Though I walk in the midst of trouble, ^p thou wilt revive me :
^q Thou shalt stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies,
 And ^r thy right hand shall save me.
 8 ^s The LORD will perfect that which concerneth me :
 Thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever :
^t Forsake not the works of thine own hands.

PSALM CXXXIX. 5

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.

- 1 O LORD, ^u thou hast searched me, and known me.
 2 ^x Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising,
 Thou ^y understandest my thought afar off.
 3 ^z Thou compassest [or, winnowest] my path and my lying down,
^a And art acquainted with all my ways.
 4 For there is not a word in my tongue,
 But, lo, O LORD, ^b thou knowest it altogether.
 5 Thou hast beset me behind and before,—and laid thine hand upon me.⁶
 6 ^c Such knowledge is too wonderful for me ;—it is high, I cannot attain unto it.
 7 ^d Whither shall I go from thy spirit ?—or whither shall I flee from thy presence ?
 8 ^e If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there :
^f If I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there.
 9 ^g If I take the wings of the morning,⁷—and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea ;
 10 Even there shall ^h thy hand lead me,—and thy right hand shall hold me.
 11 ⁱ If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me ;
 Even⁸ the night shall be light about me.
 12 Yea, ^k the darkness hideth not from thee ;—but the night shineth as the day :
 The darkness and the light are both alike to thee.
 13 For thou hast possessed⁹ my reins :
^l Thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.
 14 I will praise thee ; for I am fearfully and wonderfully made :
^m Marvellous are thy works ;—and that my soul knoweth right well.
 15 ⁿ My substance¹⁰ was not hid from thee,—when I was made in secret,
 And curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.

1 The eight following psalms (cxxxviii.—cxlv.) are all attributed in the titles to David; but, if this be correct, their position among psalms of later date seems to indicate that they were first introduced to public use after the captivity. Psalm cxxxviii. praises God for past favours (vers. 1—3), anticipates the universal recognition of his authority (4, 5), and expresses a confident hope of personal blessings (6—8).

2 Heb., 'In the presence of.' This may refer to idols, as a strong expression of contempt.

3 'Thy promise.' So great are God's promises, and so faithful and complete is his performance of them, as even to surpass the expectations which the greatness of his name has excited.

4 Walking in his ways, as converts to the true religion.

5 Psalm cxxxix. solemnly addresses Him before whom all man's nature and life lie open (vers. 1—6), hidden neither by distance nor by darkness (7—12), since he is their Author and Preserver (13—18); appealing to Him with respect to the psalmist's determined hatred of sin in others and in himself (19—24). It is a most striking illustration of the practical effects of devoutly contemplating the attributes of God.

6 Thou hast me completely in thy power.

7 Flying as quickly as the light of dawn shoots across the sky.

8 Rather, 'and the light around me shall become night;' continuing the supposed expression of a purpose to hide himself from God by the darkness of night.

9 'Thou hast gotten (or acquired) my reins;' my vitals; that is, 'Thou hast made me for thy possession.'

10 Or, 'my strength;' probably the bones and sinews, as the strong framework of the body. The words 'curiously wrought' refer to the art of embroidering (Exod. xxviii. 8), and beautifully depict the fine tissues and complicated texture of the human frame. 'The lowest parts of the earth' are a figure for what is impenetrably secret, applied both to the grave and to the womb. Comp. Job i. 21.

- 16 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being unperfect;
And ^o in thy book all my members were written,
Which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them.¹
- 17 ^p How precious also are thy thoughts² unto me, O God!
How great is the sum of them!
- 18 If I should count them,—they are more in number than the sand:
^q When I awake, I am still with thee.
- 19 Surely thou wilt ^rslay the wicked, O God:
^s Depart from me therefore, ye bloody men.
- 20 For they ^t speak against thee wickedly,
And thine enemies ^u take thy name in vain.
- 21 ^v Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee?
And ^w am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?
- 22 ^z I hate³ them with perfect hatred:—I count them mine enemies.
- 23 ^a Search me, O God, and know my heart:—try me, and know my thoughts:
- 24 And ^b see if there be any wicked way [way of pain, or, grief] in me,
And ^c lead me in the way everlasting.⁴

PSALM CXL.

To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David.⁵

- 1 ^d DELIVER me, O LORD, from the evil man:
^e Preserve me from the violent man;
- 2 Which imagine mischiefs in their heart;
^f Continually are they gathered together for war.
- 3 They have ^g sharpened their tongues ^h like a serpent;
ⁱ Adders' poison is under their lips. Selah.
- 4 ^k Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked;
^l Preserve me from the violent man;—who have purposed to overthrow my goings.
- 5 ^m The proud have hid a snare for me, and cords;
They have spread a net by the wayside;—they have set gins for me. Selah.
- 6 ⁿ I said unto the LORD, Thou art my God:
^o Hear the voice of my supplications, O LORD.
- 7 O GOD the LORD, ^p the strength of my salvation, ^q Thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.
- 8 ^r Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the wicked:
Further not his wicked device;—^s lest they exalt themselves. Selah.
- 9 ^t As for the head of those that compass me about,
^u Let the mischief of their own lips cover them.⁶
- 10 ^v Let burning coals fall upon them:—let them be cast into the fire;
^w Into deep pits, that they rise not up again.
- 11 Let not ^x an evil speaker be established in the earth:
Evil shall hunt the violent man to overthrow him.
- 12 I know that the LORD will ^z maintain the cause of the afflicted,
And the right of the poor.
- 13 ^a Surely the righteous shall give thanks unto thy name:
^b The upright shall dwell in thy presence.

PSALM CXLI.

A Psalm of David.⁷

- 1 LORD, I cry unto thee: ^c make haste unto me;
Give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee.

^c Ps. 40. 13; 70. 5.

1 Or, 'And in thy book all [my] days were inscribed, they were fixed when [there was] not one of them,' etc.

2 The psalmist now turns to God's kind and watchful care of him ever since his birth; so that every morning brings fresh occasion to adore Him who knows and supplies all his wants (ver. 18).

3 They were in no other way his enemies than as they were the enemies of his God.

4 Either the way which leads to everlasting life, in opposition to the way of the ungodly, which will perish (see Ps. i. 6); or the ancient way, which Jeremiah calls (ch. vi. 16) 'the old paths,' and 'the good way'—that pursued by patriarchs, prophets, and saints of old. See Jer. xviii. 15.

5 Psalm cxl. contains prayers for deliverance from slander and persecution (vers. 1–5), and for the punishment of the wicked (9–11); sustained by the recollection of former help (6–8), and by the assurance that Jehovah is the Friend of the oppressed (12, 13). If the psalm was written by David, it may be supposed to allude to either Saul or Shimei; and ver. 7 may relate to his encounter with the Philistine. See 1 Sam. xvii. 49, 50; xix. 5.

6 'While my head (see ver. 7) is covered by the Divine protection, let the heads of those who attack me be covered with the consequences of their own calumnies.'

7 Psalm cxli. is obscure, and its particular occasion is not known; but it appears to be an earnest cry for immediate help (vers. 1, 2, 8–10) under great temptations, and under persecution (3, 4, 7), at the same time expressing a desire to receive, and gratefully to acknowledge, friendly reproof (5, 6).

- 2 Let ^d my prayer be set forth¹ before thee ^e as incense;
And ^f the lifting up of my hands as ^g the evening sacrifice.
- 3 ^h Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth;—keep ⁱ the door of my lips.
- 4 ^k Incline not my heart to any evil thing,
^l To practise wicked works with men that work iniquity:
^m And let me not eat of their dainties.
- 5 " Let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness:—and let him reprove me;
It shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break my head:
ⁿ For yet my prayer also shall be in their calamities.²
- 6 When their judges are overthrown in stony places,
They shall hear my words; for they are sweet.
- 7 Our bones are scattered ^p at the grave's mouth,
As when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth.
- 8 But ^q mine eyes are unto thee, O God the Lord:
In thee is my trust; ^r leave not my soul destitute.
- 9 Keep me from ^s the snares which they have laid for me,
And the gins of the workers of iniquity.
- 10 'Let the wicked fall into their own nets,—whilst that I withal escape.

PSALM CXXII.

^u Maschil of David [or, A Psalm of David, giving instruction]; a Prayer ^x when he was in the cave.³

- 1 I CRIED unto the LORD with my voice;
With my voice unto the LORD did I make my supplication.
- 2 ^y I poured out my complaint before him;—I showed before him my trouble.
- 3 ^z When my spirit was overwhelmed within me,—^a then thou knewest my path.⁴
^b In the way wherein I walked—have they privily laid a snare for me.
- 4 ^c I looked on my right hand, and beheld,
But ^d there was no man that would know me:⁵
Refuge failed me;—no man cared for my soul.
- 5 I cried unto thee, O LORD:
I said, ^e 'Thou art my refuge and ^f my portion ^g in the land of the living.
- 6 Attend unto my cry; for I am ^h brought very low:
Deliver me from my persecutors;—ⁱ for they are stronger than I.
- 7 ^k Bring my soul out of prison,⁶—that I may praise thy name:
^l 'The righteous shall compass me about;⁷
^m For thou shalt deal bountifully with me.

PSALM CXXIII.

A Psalm of David.⁸

- 1 HEAR my prayer, O LORD,—give ear to my supplications:
ⁿ In thy faithfulness answer me, and in thy righteousness.⁹
- 2 And ^o enter not into judgment with thy servant:
For ^p in thy sight shall no man living be justified.¹⁰
- 3 For ^q the enemy hath persecuted my soul;
^r He hath smitten my life down to the ground;
He hath made me to dwell in darkness,—^s as those that have been long dead.¹¹
- 4 'Therefore is my spirit overwhelmed within me;—my heart within me is desolate.
- 5 " I remember the days of old;—I meditate on all thy works;

¹ Or, 'established'; referring probably to the Divine appointment and the daily offering of this oblation: 'So let my constant prayers, in conformity with thine own appointment, be acceptable.'

² Perhaps the best rendering of this difficult verse is, 'Let the righteous smite me kindly, and rebuke me: the oil for the head (i. e. this salutary rebuke) my head shall not refuse, though [it should come] again (i. e. though it should be repeated); and my prayer [shall] be in their evils' (i. e. either the injuries inflicted by the wicked, against which he would pray, or the calamities of his righteous friends, whose kind reproofs he would requite by intercession); [so that] when their leaders stumble in rocky places, they shall hear my words [of prayer]: for they are sweet (i. e. encouraging), ver. 6.

³ Psalm cxlii. is the prayer of one who is overwhelmed and helpless (vers. 1—4); and, betaking himself to God as his Saviour, finds hope in him (5—7). It will suit the occasion referred to in the title, as well as many others.

⁴ All the difficulties which beset my course.

⁵ Rather, 'Look on the right hand, and see; but none knows me; refuge has failed me,' etc.

⁶ A prison is an image of trouble and distress.

⁷ Sympathizing in the joy of my deliverance.

⁹ God's 'faithfulness' refers to his covenant engagements; his 'righteousness,' probably, to his vindication of those who are unjustly oppressed.

¹⁰ This verse makes it evident that, in appealing to God's 'righteousness' (ver. 1), the psalmist had no thought of claiming personal merit in his sight.

7 ^z Hear me speedily, O LORD :—my spirit faileth :

^a Hide not thy face from me,

^b Lest I be [or, for I am become^c] like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me to hear thy lovingkindness ^d in the morning ;¹—for in thee do I trust :

^e Cause me to know the way wherein I should walk ;

For ^f I lift up my soul unto thee.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies :—^g I flee unto thee to hide me.

10 ^h Teach me to do thy will ;—for thou art my God :

PSALM CXLIV.

*A Psalm of David.*⁴

1 BLESSED be the LORD ^p my strength,

^q Which teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight :

2 ^r My goodness, and my fortress ;—my high tower, and my deliverer ;

My shield, and he in whom I trust ;—^s who subdueth my people under me.

3 ^t LORD, what is man, that thou takest knowledge of him !

^u Or the son of man, that thou makest account of him !

4 ^x Man is like to vanity :—^y his days are as a shadow that passeth away.

5 ^z Bow thy heavens, O LORD, and come down :

^a Touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 ^b Cast forth lightning, and scatter them :

^c Shoot out thine arrows, and destroy them.

7 ^d Send thine hand from above ;—^e rid me, and deliver me out of great waters,⁵

From the hand of ^f strange children ;⁶

8 Whose mouth ^g speaketh vanity,

9 I will ^h sing a new song unto thee, O God :

Upon a psaltery and an instrument of ten strings will I sing praises unto thee.

10 ⁱ It is he that giveth salvation [or, victory] unto kings :

^k Who delivereth David his servant from the hurtful sword.

11 ^l Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of strange children,

Whose mouth speaketh vanity,—and their right hand is a right hand of falsehood :

12 That our sons may be ^m as plants—grown up⁸ in their youth ;

That our daughters may be as corner stones,⁹

Polished after the similitude of a palace :

13 That our garners may be full,—affording all manner of store :

That our sheep may bring forth thousands—and ten thousands in our streets :

14 That our oxen¹⁰ may be strong to labour ;

That there be no breaking in, nor going out ;

That there be no complaining in our streets.

15 ⁿ Happy is that people, that is in such a case :

Yea, happy is that people, whose God is the LORD.

1 That is, 'soon,' or 'early,' as the same word is rendered in Ps. xlv. 5.

2 Rather, 'in a land of directness' or 'evenness,' along a straight and plain path.

3 Who may hope for aid from thee, as one who is engaged in thy service.

4 Psalm cxliv. is composed chiefly of passages taken from various psalms of David, especially viii. and xviii., and is probably on this account attributed to him. The psalmist blesses Jehovah for his protection and condescension (vers. 1—4), prays for his interposition on his own behalf (5—8), which he gratefully anticipates (9, 10), and then extends his prayer to embrace the welfare of the whole people (11—15). The marginal references will direct to other similar passages on which there are notes.

5 See note on Ps. xviii. 16.

6 Or, 'of strangers,' as the same phrase is translated in Ps. xviii. 44, 45.

7 That is, 'of perjury,' the right hand being lifted up in taking an oath.

8 That is, 'grown vigorous.' The blessings desired in vers. 12, 13 are those promised in Deut. xxviii. 4.

9 Or, 'corner pillars,' ornamental, and therefore well suited to express female beauty, as the flourishing 'plants' represent manly strength.

10 The Hebrew word here used does not anywhere else mean an ox, but a guide, friend, governor, or captain ; as in Prov. ii. 17 ; xvi. 28 ; Zech. xii. 5, 6 ; Jer. xiii. 21. It may therefore be rendered, 'That our captains may be strong ; that there be no breaking in [of the enemy], and no going out [of the people into captivity],' etc.

PSALM CXLV.

David's o Psalm of praise.¹

- 1 I WILL extol thee, my God, O King;
And I will bless thy name for ever and ever.
- 2 Every day will I bless thee;—and I will praise thy name for ever and ever.
- 3 ^pGreat is the LORD, and greatly to be praised;—and ^qhis greatness is unsearchable.
- 4 ^rOne generation shall praise thy works to another,
And shall declare thy mighty acts.
- 5 ^sI will speak of the glorious honour of thy majesty,—and of thy wondrous works.
- 6 And men shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts:
And I will declare thy greatness.
- 7 They shall abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodness,
And shall sing of thy righteousness.
- 8 ^t'The LORD is gracious, and full of compassion;
Slow to anger, and of great mercy.
- 9 ^u'The LORD is good to all:—and his tender mercies are over all his works.
- 10 ^vAll thy works shall praise thee, O LORD;—^vand thy saints shall bless thee.
- 11 They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom,—and talk of thy power;
- 12 ^zTo make known to the sons of men his mighty acts,
And the glorious majesty of his kingdom.
- 13 ^a'Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom,
And thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.²
- 14 The LORD ^bupholdeth all that fall,
And ^craiseth up all those that be bowed down.
- 15 ^dThe eyes of all wait upon thee;
And ^ethou givest them their meat in due season.³
- 16 Thou openest thine hand,—^fand satisfiest the desire of every living thing.
- 17 ^gThe LORD is righteous in all his ways,—and holy ^hin all his works.
- 18 ⁱ'The LORD is nigh unto all them that call upon him,
To all that call upon him ⁱin truth.
- 19 ^kHe will fulfil the desire of them that fear⁵ him:
^l'He also will hear their cry, and will save them.
- 20 ^mThe LORD preserveth all them that love him:
ⁿ'But all the wicked will he destroy.
- 21 ^oMy mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD:
And ^plet all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLVI.⁶

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.—⁷Praise the LORD, O my soul.
- 2 ^rWhile I live will I praise the LORD:
I will sing praises unto my God while I have any being.⁷
- 3 ^sPut not your trust in princes,—nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help.⁸
- 4 ^t'His breath goeth forth, he returneth⁹ to his earth;
In that very day ^uhis thoughts perish.
- 5 ^v'Happy is he that hath ^vthe God of Jacob for his help, ^wWhose hope is in the LORD his God:
- 6 ^x'Which made heaven, and earth,—^ythe sea, and all that therein is:
- 7 Which ^zkeepeth truth for ever:—^awhich executeth judgment for the oppressed:
^b'Which giveth food to the hungry.—^cThe LORD looseth the prisoners:

¹ This is an alphabetical psalm (see note on title of Ps. xxv.); celebrating in the most beautiful manner the majesty, righteousness, and goodness of God.

² As in the Hebrew there is here no couplet beginning with the next alphabetical letter, some supply from the ancient versions, 'Faithful is Jehovah in all his words, and holy in all his works:' but on such deficiencies, see note on Ps. xxv. title.

⁴ Rather, 'merciful.' Justice and mercy are united in Jehovah's government. Comp. Ps. lxxxv. 10; Rom. iii. 26.

⁵ These are said, in ver. 20, to 'love him;' for godly reverence is perfectly compatible, and is indeed always united, with holy love.

⁶ Psalm cxlvi., and all that follow it, are evidently hymns of public praise, and appear to have been composed for the service of the second temple. In the Sept. this psalm is ascribed to Haggai and Zechariah; and if they were not the actual authors, these psalms were probably composed during their times. Ps. cxlvi. presents Jehovah, in opposition to earthly princes, as the sole object of praise and confidence (vers. 1—4); since his power, truth, justice, compassion, and eternity, all insure the happiness of his people (5—10).

⁷ This is almost the same as Ps. civ. 33.

⁸ Who cannot save either himself or others, but is wholly dependent on a higher power.

⁹ Even with the best intentions, men are often unable to assist others, or are cut off in the midst of their efforts.

PSALM CXLVII.²

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD :
For ⁿ it is good to sing praises unto our God ;
^o For it is pleasant ; and ^p praise is comely.
2 The LORD doth ^q build up Jerusalem :
^r He gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.³
3 ^s He healeth the broken in heart,—and bindeth up their wounds.
4 ^t He telleth the number of the stars ;—he calleth them all by their names.
5 ^u Great is our LORD, and ^x of great power :—^y his understanding is infinite.
6 ^z The LORD lifteth up the meek :—he casteth the wicked down to the ground.
7 Sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving ;—sing praise upon the harp unto our God :
8 ^a Who covereth the heaven with clouds,—^b who prepareth rain for the earth,
Who maketh grass to grow upon the mountains.
9 ^c He giveth to the beast his food,—and ^d to the young ravens which cry.
10 ^e He delighteth not in the strength of the horse
^f He taketh not pleasure in the legs of a man.⁴
11 The LORD ^g taketh pleasure in them ^h that fear him,
In those that hope in his mercy.
12 Praise the LORD, O Jerusalem ;—praise ⁱ thy God, O Zion.
13 For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates ;
^k He hath blessed thy children within thee.
14 ^l He maketh peace in thy borders,—and ^m filleth thee with the ⁿ finest of the wheat.
15 ^o He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth :
His word runneth very swiftly.⁵
16 ^p He giveth snow like wool :—^q he scattereth the hoarfrost like ashes.⁶
17 He casteth forth his ice⁷ like morsels :—who can stand before his cold ?
18 ^r He sendeth out his word, and melteth them :
He causeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow.
19 ^s He showeth his word unto Jacob,—^t his statutes and his judgments unto Israel.
20 ^u He hath not dealt so with any nation :
And as for his judgments, they have not known them.
Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLVIII.⁸

- 1 PRAISE ye the LORD.
Praise ye the LORD ^x from the heavens :—praise him in the heights.
2 ^y Praise ye him, all his angels :—praise ye him, ^z all his hosts.
3 Praise ye him, sun and moon :—praise him, all ye stars of light.

1 Rather, 'turns aside;' i. e. he defeats their designs.

2 Psalm cxlvii. beautifully mingles the recognition of God as the Lord of Nature with grateful acknowledgment of him as the Shepherd of Israel, and exhibits the greatness and wisdom of the Supreme in connection with his condescension to the meek and humble. Its transitions from one subject to another are frequent and rapid, allowing no regular analysis of its contents, but giving the greater force and beauty to the representations of God's works of power and of grace. See vers. 3, 4; 5, 6; 10, 11; 18, 19. Many of its expressions are evidently suggested by earlier psalms and prophecies.

3 Rather, 'The Lord is building up Jerusalem: He is gathering together the outcasts of Israel.' A grateful acknowledgment of the present fulfilment of the promises in Isa. xi. 12; xlv. 26, 28; lvi. 8.

4 The two clauses of this verse are probably intended to describe cavalry and infantry, as forming the military strength of nations. It is not to those who trust in such resources that Jehovah shows favour, but to those who rely on his protection (ver. 11). Comp. Isa. xxxi. 1. The care which he takes of those who trust in him is illustrated in vers. 13, 14.

5 The authoritative word of God is here personified as his messenger or agent, the 'swift running' of which signifies the prompt execution of his will.

6 Referring to the fine grey ashes of wood burned in the open air.

7 Probably the hail is meant, which descends like so many crumbs of ice.

8 In Psalm cxlviii. the whole of creation is summoned to praise Jehovah, whether in heaven (vers. 1—6) or on earth (7—12), for his universal glory and his special favour to his people (13, 14).

9 The immutability ascribed, in passages like this, to the works of nature is not absolute, but relative to the will of the Creator. No created powers can revoke the laws which he has imposed on their being.

- 7 Praise the LORD ^c from the earth,—^f ye dragons, and all deeps :
 8 Fire, and hail ; snow, and vapours ;—stormy wind ¹ & fulfilling his word :

 10 Beasts, and all cattle ;—creeping things, and flying fowl :
 11 Kings of the earth, and all people ;—princes, and all judges of the earth :
 12 Both young men, and maidens ;—old men, and children :
 13 Let them praise the name of the LORD :
 For ⁱ his name alone is excellent ;—^k his glory is above the earth and heaven.
 14 ^l He also exalteth the horn of his people,—^m the praise of all his saints ; ³

1 An agency which appears the least subject to control.

2 That is, 'fruit trees;' in distinction from forest trees, which are represented by 'cedars.'

3 That is, He gives them occasion for the highest praise.

4 Psalm cxlix. is wholly composed of the praises of the God of Israel as their King, who favours them (vers. 1—4), and will execute through them judgments on his and their foes (5—9).

5 God made the Israelites a nation, formed for his praise; and on their deliverance from Babylon, by a kind of new creation, restored them to their temple to worship Him. Comp. Isa. xliii. 1—7.

6 Meaning either 'gloriously,' or 'on account of their present glorious state.'

7 In opposition to the nights of sleepless grief which many had spent while exiles. See Hos. vii. 14.

8 That is, at the same time: see Neh. iv. 17, 18.

9 Not their own vengeance, but that of God, to whom all 'vengeance belongeth.' This was partially fulfilled in the successes of the Jews under the Maccabees; and in a far nobler sense may be said to be so in the spiritual triumphs of the religion of Christ, especially in those which are yet to come.

10 The punishment denounced in the law against the idolatrous heathen. See Deut. vii. 2; xxxii. 41, etc.

11 Psalm cl. is a doxology which marks the end of the fifth book of Psalms and of the whole Psalter. It was probably intended to be sung with all the musical instruments used in the temple worship. It describes the place (ver. 1), the theme (2), the mode (3—5), and the universality (6) of the praise to be presented to Jehovah.

12 The temple on earth. 'The firmament of his power' is the heavenly temple. According to a Jewish tradition, this psalm was sung by persons who came to present the first-fruits, while the Levites met them singing Ps. xxx.

13 Rather, 'pipe;' denoting the whole class of wind instruments, as the 'timbrel' represents all of the pulsatile kind.

14 'The Psalms,' says Dr. Chalmers, 'have their final and most appropriate outgoing in praise, that highest of all the exercises of godliness.' 'As the life of the faithful,' says Hengstenberg, 'and the history of the church, so also the Psalter, with all its cries from the depths, runs out in a hallelujah.' 'There is nothing in the Psalter,' says Alexander, 'more majestic or more beautiful than this brief but most significant finale, in which solemnity predominates, without disturbing the exhilaration which the close of the Psalter seems intended to produce, as if in emblematical allusion to the triumph which awaits the church, and all its members, when, 'through much tribulation,' they shall 'enter into rest.'

THE PROVERBS.

THERE is every reason to believe that the whole of the book of Proverbs, excepting the last two chapters, was either written by Solomon or adopted by him; but the various titles (see ch. i. 1; x. 1; xxii. 17; xxv. 1), and the repetition of some of the proverbs (comp. ch. xviii. 8 with xxvi. 22; xix. 24 with xxvi. 15; xx. 16 with xxvii. 13; xxi. 9 with xxv. 24; and xxii. 3 with xxvii. 12) make it evident that it was brought to its present form by the labours of different persons at different times.

Though the book contains some continuous discourses, it derives its name from those short, pithy, pointed sentences of which it chiefly consists. Proverbial teaching has been employed from the most remote antiquity, and was particularly adapted to the simplicity of the early ages. When books were but few, and the reasonings of systematic philosophers almost unknown, just observations on life and manners,—the results of long experience and reflection,—and useful moral precepts, delivered in concise language, and often in verse, would form a body of the most valuable practical wisdom, which, by its influence on the views and conduct of men, must have contributed largely to the well-being of society. And in every age the maxims of proverbial wisdom are not only well fitted to impress the minds of the young and uninformed; but they are also most valuable guides in the affairs of life, when men are called upon not to deliberate, but to act. Accordingly, every nation has its proverbs. But this mode of communicating instruction appears to be peculiarly suited to the genius and disposition of the Asiatics, among whom it has prevailed from the earliest ages.

The Proverbs of Solomon possess in the highest degree all the excellencies of this species of composition. The great object in each of them is to enforce a moral or religious principle in words so few that they may be easily learned, and so skilfully selected and arranged that they may strike and fix the attention instantaneously; while, to prevent the mind from becoming fatigued by a long series of detached sentences, they are perpetually diversified by the changes of style and figure. Sometimes the style is rendered striking by its peculiar simplicity, or the familiarity of its illustration; sometimes by the grandeur or beauty of the simile employed on the occasion; sometimes by an enigmatical obscurity, which rouses the curiosity; very frequently by a strong and catching antithesis; occasionally by a playful iteration of the same word; and, in numerous instances, by an elegant pleonasm, or the expansion of a single or common idea by a luxuriance of agreeable words.

The religious teachings of this book are peculiarly clear and spiritual. Jehovah is set forth as the Creator and Governor of the universe, and the Disposer of human destinies (ch. iii. 19; viii. 22—29, etc.), incomprehensible alike in his nature and his works (xxv. 2; xxx. 3, 4). His providence is represented as ever active and universal (v. 21; xv. 3), controlling not only the outward fortunes (x. 22), but the minds (xxi. 1) of men. He is declared to be holy and just; loving, commending and rewarding piety and virtue, and abhorring and punishing all sin (iii. 33; x. 3, 29; xii. 2), not only in this life, but also in a future state (xiv. 32).

The necessity of religion, ‘the fear of the Lord,’ is inculcated in this book, in strong and emphatic language, as the ‘beginning of wisdom’ (i. 7) and the fountain of happiness (xiv. 27; xix. 23). Trust in God (iii. 5, 6; xvi. 3, 20; xviii. 10), reverence for him (iii. 34; x. 27; xxiii. 17), cheerful submission to his paternal chastisements (iii. 11, 12), the love of our fellow-men (xi. 17; xiv. 21), justice (xi. 1), kindness (iii. 27, 28; xix. 17), gentleness of spirit and demeanour (xv. 1), charity (x. 12), prudence (xiv. 15; xxii. 3), active diligence (x. 4; xii. 24; xxii. 29), purity of heart (iv. 23), humility (viii. 13; xv. 33), modesty (xxv. 6, 7), temperance (xxiii. 20, 21), and, in short, all those things which make men happy in themselves, and create a happy state of society, are here exhibited and urged in the most forcible manner; and, after all the light which the Gospel has shed upon us, we are still thankful to resort to this book for guidance, encouragement, and warning.

The very nature of the book of Proverbs is such, that it has a direct application to people of all times, all conditions, and all countries. It says very little about the sacrifices and offerings, and other ceremonial institutions, of the Mosaic economy, but is almost wholly occupied with the substantial duties of morality and religion; and it is so comprehensive, that all ranks and classes have here their ‘word in season.’

As we may judge, to some extent, of the social, moral, and religious culture and condition of a nation by its proverbial lore, we must surely place the Hebrews in the highest rank among the nations of former times. A people amongst whom such maxims as these were brought into popular use, must have made great advance in civil and social life.

This book may be divided into five distinct parts:—

I. A series of discourses on the excellency and advantages of wisdom, and the hatefulness and mischievous consequences of sin. They are addressed chiefly to the young, and are marked by peculiar earnestness, beauty, and tenderness.

II. A collection of unconnected maxims on various subjects (ch. x.—xxii. 16).

III. Short discourses, on a variety of subjects (ch. xxii. 17—xxiv. 22); with a brief appendix of maxims (ch. xxiv. 23—34).

IV. A second collection of Solomon’s Proverbs made in the time of Hezekiah (ch. xxv.—xxix.)

V. The remainder of the book (ch. xxx., xxxi.) contains precepts delivered by Agur, admonitions given to king Lemuel by his mother, and a description of the excellencies of a virtuous wife. The thirtieth chapter affords examples of a species of writing closely allied to the proverb, and equally in favour among the Orientals—namely, a kind of riddles or enigmas, designed to exercise the ingenuity of the hearer, as well as to impart instruction.

PART I.

General Introduction.

- 1 THE ^aPROVERBS OF ^bSOLOMON THE SON OF DAVID, KING OF ISRAEL;
- 2 To know¹ wisdom and instruction;—to perceive the words of understanding;
- 3 To ^creceive the instruction of wisdom,²—justice, and judgment, and equity;

¹ Written in order that we may know, etc.

² The word ‘wisdom,’ in most parts of this book, means a considerate, thoughtful state of mind in relation to truth and duty, religious, moral, or prudential; but here the Hebrew word is different, and means prudence or circumspectness.

Admonitions and cautions.

- 7 ^h THE fear of the LORD⁴ is the beginning [or, the principal part] of knowledge:⁵
 But ⁱ fools despise wisdom and instruction.
 8 ^k My son,⁶ hear the instruction of thy father,
 And forsake not the law of thy mother:
 9 For ^l they shall be an ornament of grace⁷ unto thy head,
 And chains about thy neck.
 10 My son, if sinners entice thee, ^m consent thou not.
 11 If they say, Come with us,—let us ⁿ lay wait for blood,
^o Let us lurk privily for the innocent without cause:⁸
 12 Let us ^p swallow them up alive as the grave;
 And whole⁹ ^q as those that go down into the pit:
 13 We shall find all precious substance,¹⁰—we shall fill our houses with spoil:
 14 Cast in thy lot among us;¹¹—let us all have one purse:
 15 My son, ^r walk not thou in the way with them;—^s refrain thy foot from their path:
 16 ^t For their feet run to evil,—and make haste to shed blood.
 17 Surely in vain the net is spread in the sight of any bird.¹²
 18 And ^u they lay wait for their own blood;—they lurk privily for their own lives.
 19 ^v So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain;¹³
^w Which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

Wisdom's invitation and warning.

- 20 ^z WISDOM¹⁴ crieth without;¹⁵—she uttereth her voice in the streets:
 21 She crieth in the chief place of concourse,¹⁶
 In the openings of the gates:—in the city she uttereth her words, saying, 22 How long, ^a ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity?
 And the scorers delight in their scorning,—and fools¹⁷ hate knowledge?
 23 ^b Turn you at my reproof:—behold, ^c I will pour out my spirit unto you,¹⁸
 I will make known my words unto you.
 24 ^d Because I have called—and ye refused;

^z ch. 8. 1, etc.; 9. 1—4; John 7. 37; 1 Cor. 1. 24, 30; Col. 2. 3.

^a ch. 7. 7.

^b Eze. 33. 11.
^c Joel 2. 28; Zec. 12. 10; John 7. 38, 37.

^d Is. 65. 12; 66. 4; Jer. 7. 13; Zec. 7. 11.

1 Or, 'To give cautiousness to the inexperienced;' the young man who is liable to be led astray. This invitation to the 'simple' stands in striking contrast with the exclusiveness of the heathen philosophers.

2 While the simple are especially invited, the wise man also is assured that he may obtain further instruction. It is the part of wisdom to be willing to learn. It is the conceited who refuse to profit by the counsels of the more experienced.

3 'Proverbs' are such maxims or pointed and figurative sayings as are found in the subsequent parts of this book: 'dark sayings' are probably the enigmas of ch. xxx. See notes on Judg. xiv. 12; 1 Kings x. 1, where the same Hebrew word occurs.

4 This fear is not terror, but that affectionate reverence with which the children of God regard his law: hence the appropriateness of the language in ver. 8.

5 That without which men are not really wise, however great their other attainments.

6 The word 'son' may mean scholar or disciple. See 1 Sam. x. 12; 1 Cor. iv. 15. The mention of both parents, however, shows that the writer designed to represent his admonitions as suggested by the tenderest affection, as well as enforced by the highest authority. See Exod. xx. 12; Deut. xxi. 18.

7 Or, 'a graceful ornament.'

8 Rather, 'in vain' (as in ver. 17): meaning that the innocence of these persons is of no avail to preserve them from the machinations of their enemies.

9 That is, 'while in full strength.' The unhappy victims, though now in vigorous health, shall be as completely hidden, and as easily destroyed, as the unresisting dead are by the grave.

10 The promise of worldly gain is the bait with which the tempter has, in all ages, set his most successful snares.

11 Or, 'Thou shalt cast thy lot in the midst of us; sharing equally with us when the booty is distributed.'

12 The meaning of vers. 17—19 probably is, that as the sight of the net does not avail to deter the bird from snatching at the bait, so the hazard of life does not avail to restrain those who are greedy of plunder from crimes which ensure their destruction. Comp. ch. vii. 23.

13 Literally, 'of every one plundering plunder; it (i. e. plunder) taketh away the life of its possessor.'

14 The inviting voice of wisdom is to be heard everywhere, in the lessons of every-day life, in the works of creation and providence, and, above all, in the word of God. Among her messengers are comprised all the prophets, teachers, and wise men, who in various ways and in different places proclaimed to men their duty; and He especially who is emphatically styled the 'wisdom of God' (1 Cor. i. 24).

15 In contrast with the secret enticement of the wicked, wisdom is represented as publicly appealing to men.

16 There is here an enumeration of the principal places where public proclamations were usually made, and where discussions on religion and morals were held. As the people were accustomed to read but little, these were frequently the chief means of instruction on such subjects. Thus wisdom is represented as giving her instructions where teachers are wont to communicate theirs.

17 If by these different terms different classes are intended, the first may denote the thoughtless, the second those who deride religion, and the third the hardened and determined enemies of truth and goodness.

18 Some render these words as in ch. xxix. 11, 'I will freely utter my mind to you.' The parallelism is thus better preserved.

I have ^c stretched out my hand ¹—and no man regarded ;
 25 But ye ^f have set at nought all my counsel,—and ^g would none of my reproof:
 26 ^h I also will laugh at your calamity;—I will mock when your fear cometh;
 27 When ⁱ your fear cometh as desolation,²
 And your destruction cometh as a whirlwind;³
 When distress and anguish cometh upon you.
 28 ^k Then shall they call upon me,—but I will not answer;
^l They shall seek me early,⁴—but they shall not find me.
 29 For that they ^m hated knowledge,—and did not ⁿ choose the fear of the LORD:
 30 ^o They would none of my counsel:—they despised all my reproof.
 31 Therefore ^p shall they eat of the fruit⁵ of their own way,
 And be filled with their own devices.
 32 For ^q the turning away⁶ of the simple shall slay them,
 And ^r the prosperity⁷ of fools shall destroy them.
 33 But ^s whoso hearkeneth unto me shall dwell safely,
 And ^t shall be quiet from fear of evil.

Excellencies and advantages of wisdom.

2 MY son,⁸ if thou wilt receive my words,
 And ^u hide⁹ my commandments with thee;
 2 So that thou incline thine ear unto wisdom,
 And apply thine heart to understanding;
 3 Yea, ^x if thou criest¹⁰ after knowledge,—and liftest up thy voice for understanding;
 4 ^y If thou seekest her as silver,—and ^z searchest for her as for hid treasures;
 5 ^a Then shalt thou understand the fear of the LORD,
^b And find the knowledge of God.
 6 ^c For¹¹ the LORD giveth wisdom:
^d Out of his mouth cometh knowledge and understanding.
 7 He layeth up sound wisdom for the righteous;
^e He is a buckler to them that walk uprightly;
 8 ^f He keepeth¹² the paths of judgment,—and ^g preserveth the way of his saints.
 9 Then shalt thou understand righteousness, and judgment,
 And equity; yea, every good path.
 10 When wisdom entereth into thine heart,
^h And knowledge is pleasant unto thy soul;
 11 Discretion shall preserve thee,—ⁱ understanding shall keep thee:
 12 To deliver thee from the way of the evil man,
 From the man that speaketh froward things;¹³
 13 Who leave the paths of uprightness,—to ^k walk in the ways of darkness;¹⁴
 14 Who ^l rejoice to do evil,—and ^m delight in the frowardness of the wicked;
 15 ⁿ Whose ways are crooked,—and they froward in their paths:
 16 To deliver thee from ^o the strange woman,
^p Even from the stranger¹⁵ which flattereth with her words;
 17 ^q Which forsaketh the guide of her youth,¹⁶
 And forgetteth the covenant of her God.
 18 For ^r her house inclineth¹⁷ unto death,—and her paths unto the dead.

1 Or, 'beckoned.' This is a gesture of entreaty. See Acts xii. 17; xxi. 40. Wisdom does not use any harsh accents, till her gentler tones have been disregarded.

2 Or, 'a storm;' as in Ezek. xxxviii. 9.

3 These tempests are sometimes so impetuous in the neighbourhood of the deserts, that the traveller is overwhelmed in a moment.

4 That is, 'earnestly:' see refs.

5 Impenitence is followed by punishment, as the blossom is by the fruit.

6 That is, from the admonitions of wisdom.

7 Rather, 'ease;' or, 'careless security.'

8 This simple and beautiful poem assures the young that the diligent pursuit of wisdom shall be successful (vers. 1—5); for Jehovah will give it to all who thus seek it (6—9); and that it will be found an infallible preservative (10, 11) from wicked men (12—15) and women (16—19); securing the blessings of the righteous, and averting the punishment of the ungodly (20—22).

9 Or, 'treasure up,' as a valuable possession.

10 This and the following metaphors represent an earnest and laborious search.

11 Vers. 6—9 describe the second condition of obtaining wisdom, which is quite as essential as the first. If the earnest pursuit previously enjoined be combined with humble dependence upon the Giver of wisdom (see Job xxxviii. 36; Dan. ii. 21; James i. 5), it will certainly be successful.

12 Rather, 'so as to guard the ways of justice;' carrying on the thought of the preceding clause. From what God shields those who seek his heavenly wisdom is mentioned below.

13 Or, 'perverse things;' the sophistries of error, and the seductions of vice.

14 'Darkness' is probably put here for wickedness. See Eph. iv. 18.

15 Though the term translated 'stranger' in this verse generally signifies 'foreign women,' yet ver. 17 shows that the writer does not refer particularly to such persons, but to any other than a lawful wife.

16 Or, 'the companion of her youth' (see Ps. lv. 13, and note); the husband to whom in youth she had been united, with all the sanctions of religion, according to the ordinance, or 'the covenant of her God.' Comp. Gen. ii. 24. The adulteress is here charged with a double crime, as being false both to her husband and to God.

17 Or, 'sinks down.' A premature grave will be the consequence of such sinful associations.

Exhortations to cultivate the graces essential to godliness.

- 3 MY son,³ ^y forget not my law;—^z but let thine heart keep my commandments:
 2 For ^a length of days, and long life,⁴—and ^b peace, shall they add to thee.
 3 Let not ^c mercy and truth forsake thee:⁵
^d Bind them about thy neck;⁶—^e write them upon the table of thine heart:⁷
 4 ^f So shalt thou find favour and good understanding⁸
 In the sight of God and man.
 5 ^g Trust in the LORD with all thine heart;
^h And lean not unto⁹ thine own understanding.
 6 ⁱ In all thy ways acknowledge him,—and he shall ^k direct thy paths.
 7 ^l Be not wise in thine own eyes:—^m fear the LORD, and depart from evil.
 8 ⁿ It shall be health to thy navel,—and ^o marrow¹⁰ to thy bones.
 9 ^p Honour the LORD with thy substance,
 And with the firstfruits of all thine increase:¹¹
 10 ^q So shall thy barns be filled with plenty,
 And thy presses shall burst out with new wine.
 11 ^r My son, despise not the chastening of the LORD;
^s Neither be weary of¹² his correction:
 12 For whom the LORD loveth he correcteth;
^t Even as a father the son in whom he delighteth.¹³

 15 She is more precious than rubies:
 And ^y all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared unto her.
 16 ^z Length of days is in her right hand;—and ^a in her left hand riches and honour.

1 Unchastity, more rapidly and certainly than any other sin, pollutes the imagination, whilst it deadens moral sensibility, paralyses conscience, and destroys all that conviction might effectually fasten upon.

2 A long life in the land of Canaan was one of the chief earthly blessings promised to the faithful Israelite. See Exod. xx. 12. Hence it was used to represent the highest good, as in Matt. v. 5.

3 Ch. iii. 1—12 very beautifully displays the various graces which are essential to godliness (comp. Gal. v. 22, 23; 2 Pet. i. 5—8), together with the blessings which flow from them.

4 See note on ch. ii. 21.

5 Let them be thy constant companions.

6 Let them conspicuously adorn thy life.

7 Let thy heart be as a tablet on which they shall be indelibly engraven; i. e. let them always be affectionately remembered.

8 Rather, 'good success. See Josh. i. 8; 1 Sam. xviii. 5. But the Septuagint (without altering a letter) renders it, 'and provide good in the sight of the Lord and of man.' And this reading is quoted in part by the apostle Paul, in Rom. xii. 17; 2 Cor. viii. 21.

9 Rather, 'upon,' as one leans upon a staff. Instead of trusting to our own sagacity, we are taught to seek Divine guidance, acknowledging God in all our ways (ver. 6).

10 Or, 'moisture;' the bones being supposed to be dried up in sickness: see Job xxi. 24; Psa. cii. 3. Thus godliness is represented as beneficial for the present life, promoting health of body and cheerfulness of mind.

11 Obeying the directions of the law as to tithes and first-fruits. See refs.

12 Or, 'loathe.'

13 The Septuagint here has a slightly different reading, and consequently a different rendering, which is quoted in Heb. xii. 6.

14 Vers. 13—26 contain an elegant and touching description of the unspeakable advantages of possessing true wisdom, or godliness. Apart from its future eternal rewards, there is a peace and a pleasure in goodness which makes even the present enjoyment far higher than any gratification that worldly riches can procure for us. Comp. Job xxviii., from which many of the expressions here used are taken.

15 That is, the blessings to be obtained by it are better than any which wealth can purchase.

16 This probably alludes to the tree of life in Paradise (Gen. ii. 9; iii. 22) as an emblem of constant and durable happiness, which has been forfeited by sin, but may still be regained by heavenly wisdom.

17 This is the highest testimony which can be given to the excellence of Wisdom. She has been as it were a counsellor to the Most High, and must therefore be invaluable to erring men. Comp. ch. viii. 22—29.

1 Or, 'By his knowledge are the abysses cleft;' probably referring to the preparation of the ocean-depths for the reception of the waters. See Gen. i. 9, 10; Job xxxviii. 8—11.

2 That is, the things which I have just said respecting wisdom and discretion.

3 Or, 'Thou needest not be afraid.'

4 Meaning either the mischief which the wicked are preparing for the purpose of ensnaring the foot of the righteous (ver. 26), or the sudden and overwhelming judgment in which the wicked shall be taken.

5 Literally, 'its owners.' Kindness is due from one man to another, and cannot be withheld without violating the law of God: see refs.

6 That is, 'his confidential friendship.' See note on Job xix. 19; Psa. xxv. 14.

7 Or, 'Scorners he treats scornfully;' i. e. 'he will make their punishment correspond with their sin.' See ch. i. 24—31. The Greek version of this verse is quoted in James iv. 6; 1 Pet. v. 5.

8 This probably means, they shall be exposed to public infamy.

9 Ch. iv., v. form one poem, containing the advice of a father (probably David) to his son, who repeats it, with additional admonitions, to his children. Its subject, like that of the preceding discourses, is the value of wisdom, to which are added warnings of the danger of bad company, especially of unchaste women.

10 That is, beloved like an only child.

11 A Hebrew idiom, conveying the promise, 'Thou shalt live.'

12 That is, the most important and valuable of all possessions. See Matt. vi. 33.

13 The love and honour paid to wisdom will be abundantly repaid in the dignity and advantages which she will confer upon her disciples.

14 Running increases the danger of stumbling; but even the greatest dangers attending the course of duty shall be warded off from those who earnestly and diligently pursue it.

- 13 Take fast hold of instruction; let her not go:—keep her; for she is thy life.
 14 ^y Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not in the way of evil men;
 15 Avoid it, pass not by it,—turn from it, and pass away.
 16 ^z For they sleep not, except they have done mischief;
 And their sleep is taken away, unless they cause some to fall.
 17 For they eat the bread of wickedness,—and drink the wine of violence.¹
 18 ^a But the path of the just ^b is as the shining light,
 That shineth more and more unto the perfect day.
 19 ^c The way of the wicked is as darkness:²—they know not at what they stumble.
 20 My son, attend to my words;—incline thine ear unto my sayings.
 21 ^d Let them not depart from thine eyes;—^e keep them in the midst of thine heart.
 22 For they are ^f life unto those that find them,—and ^g health to all their flesh.
 23 ^h Keep thy heart with all diligence;³—ⁱ for out of it are the issues of life.
 24 Put away from thee a froward mouth,—and perverse lips put far from thee.
 25 ^k Let thine eyes look right on,⁴—and let thine eyelids look straight before thee.
 26 ^l Ponder⁵ the path of thy feet,—and let all thy ways be established.
 27 ^m Turn not to the right hand nor to the left:—ⁿ remove thy foot from evil.
 5 My son, attend unto my wisdom,—and ^o bow thine ear to my understanding:
 2 That thou mayest regard discretion,—and that thy lips may ^p keep knowledge.⁶
 3 ^q For the lips of a strange woman drop as an honeycomb,⁷
 And her mouth is ^r smoother than oil:
 4 But her end⁸ is ^s bitter as wormwood,—^t sharp as a two-edged sword.
 5 ^u Her feet go down to death;—her steps take hold on hell.⁹
 6 Lest thou shouldest ponder the path of life,
 Her ways are moveable, that thou canst not know them.¹⁰
 7 Hear me now therefore, O ye children,
 And depart not from the words of my mouth.
 8 ^x Remove thy way far from her,—and come not nigh the door of her house:¹¹
 9 ^y Lest thou give thine honour¹² unto others,—and thy years unto the cruel:
 10 Lest strangers be filled with thy wealth;

 17 Let them be only thine own,—and not strangers' with thee.
 18 Let thy fountain be blessed:—and rejoice with ^e the wife of thy youth.

² Rather, 'as thick darkness' (see Exod. x. 22); a striking contrast with 'the path of the righteous' in the preceding verse.

³ Literally, 'more than all keeping;' i. e. keep it with the greatest possible care. It is added as a reason for this, that the heart is the fountain from which springs the whole course of life.

⁴ That is, avoid all crooked and tortuous policy.

⁵ Or, 'weigh;' that is, inspect it carefully and deliberately.

⁶ So as to impart wisdom to others.

⁷ Rather, 'drop honey.'

⁸ The destruction in which she involves her victims with herself.

⁹ Heb., 'Sheol.' See notes on Deut. xxxii. 22; Job xi. 8.

¹² Either, 'thy comeliness,' as in Dan. x. 8; or 'thy vigour.' Some suppose that the adulterer was sold into slavery, so that his person and earnings were at the mercy of a master. But it is more natural to understand the whole as referring to the ruinous effects of this crime, entailing disease, poverty, and despair.

¹³ Perhaps this means, 'I was well nigh brought to the extreme of evil;' alluding to the public trial and punishment of his sin: see Lev. xx. 10; Ezek. xvi. 40; John viii. 5. Or, 'Even in religious assemblies I was indulging my wicked thoughts.'

¹⁴ Or, 'fountain.'

¹⁶ The figure is now changed for one by which the Orientals are particularly fond of representing a gentle and elegant woman.

- 21 ^h For the ways of man are before the eyes of the LORD,
And he pondereth all his goings.
22 ⁱ His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself,
And he shall be holden with the cords¹ of his sins.
23 ^k He shall die without instruction;
And in the greatness of his folly he shall go astray.²

Against suretiship, idleness, and deceit.

- 6 MY son,³ if thou be surety for thy friend,⁴
If thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,
2 Thou art snared⁵ with the words of thy mouth,
Thou art taken with the words of thy mouth;
3 Do this now, my son, and deliver thyself,
When thou art come ^minto the hand of thy friend;
Go, humble thyself, and make sure thy friend.⁶
4 ⁿ Give not sleep to thine eyes,—nor slumber to thine eyelids.
5 Deliver thyself as a roe from the hand of the hunter,

14 Frowardness is in his heart, ^u he deviseth mischief continually;
^v He soweth [casteth forth] discord.
15 Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly;
Suddenly shall he ^y be broken ^z without remedy
16 These six *things*¹⁰ doth the LORD hate:—yea, seven are an abomination unto him:
17 ^a A proud look, ^b a lying tongue,—and ^c hands that shed innocent blood,
18 ^d An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations,
^e Feet that be swift in running to mischief,
19 ^f A false witness that speaketh lies,—and he ^g that soweth discord among brethren.

1 Like a wild beast caught in the toils of the hunter. It is true of all sins, but most strikingly so of sensual lusts, that they enslave and punish the man who indulges them.

2 Literally, 'he shall stagger;' i. e. he shall fall. The sensualist is represented as reeling into his grave.

3 Ch. vi. 1—19 warns the inexperienced against imprudent suretiship, indolence, and those injurious insinuations which are amongst the most heinous of sins.

4 Rather, 'neighbour,' as in ch. iii. 28, 29. In very early times suretiship was practised, and was entered into by striking or joining hands. It brought the surety's person and property into all the liabilities of the man for whom he bound himself. Comp. Gen. xlv. 32, 33; Job xvii. 3. Such engagements were, therefore, commonly very imprudent.

5 Rather, 'If thou art snared with the words of thy mouth; if thou art taken,' etc.

6 Rather, 'Since thou hast come into the power of thy neighbour, go, prostrate thyself, and urge thy neighbour;' i. e. in seeking deliverance from the engagement which thou hast contracted.

7 A wise, thoughtful study of God's works, even the humblest, will not only exalt our conceptions of Him, but will also teach us many lessons of practical value. The ants exhibit a provident industry in labouring for a common object, which men rarely display except under the guidance and oversight of a ruling mind (ver. 7).

8 Perhaps, 'as a courier;' i. e. unexpectedly. The next clause adds, that it will come to destroy.

9 Rather, 'A man of Belial (see Deut. xiii. 13, and note), a man of wickedness [is he who] walketh [in] perverseness of mouth, [who] winketh with his eyes.' Not only actions, but words, and even signs, may be made instruments of mischief, and are often employed by those who hope thereby to escape punishment for the injuries they inflict. But God will make such hope vain (ver. 15), for he regards them with as much displeasure as murderers themselves (vers. 16—19).

10 Such enumerations as this are not uncommon in Arabian and Persian writings, and are found in Prov. xxx. and other places in the Bible. They are intended to show some point of resemblance between certain well-known things and the subject in hand, which is commonly mentioned last. Here the sin of sowing discord by words or signs is said to be as hateful to Jehovah as six other sins which he had most emphatically denounced.

11 The following section (ch. vi. 20—35; vii.) contains another earnest warning against adultery; the artifices, guilt, danger, and punishment of which are most forcibly described.

12 That is, 'the commandment,' 'the law' (ver. 20).

- 23 ^m For the commandment is a lamp; and the law is light:
And ⁿ reproofs of instruction are the way of life:
- 24 ^o To keep thee from the evil woman,
From the flattery of the tongue of a strange woman.
- 25 ^p Lust not after her beauty in thine heart;
Neither let her take thee ^q with her eyelids.¹
- 26 For ^r by means of a whorish woman a man is brought to a piece of bread:²
^s And the adulteress will ^t hunt for the precious life.
- 27 Can a man take fire in his bosom,—and his clothes not be burned?
- 28 Can one go upon hot coals,—and his feet not be burned?
- 29 So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife;
Whosoever ^u toucheth her shall not be innocent.
- 30 Men do not despise a thief,—if he steal to satisfy his soul when he is hungry;
- 31 But if he be found, ^x he shall restore sevenfold;³
^y He shall give all the substance of his house.
- 32 But whoso committeth adultery with a woman ^z lacketh understanding:
He that doeth it ^a destroyeth his own soul.⁴
- 33 ^b A wound and dishonour shall he get;—and ^c his reproach shall not be wiped away.
- 34 For ^d jealousy is the rage⁵ of a man:
Therefore he⁶ will not spare in the day of vengeance.
- 35 He will not regard any ransom;
Neither will he rest content, though thou givest many gifts.
- 7 My son, ^e keep my words,—and ^f lay up my commandments with thee.
^g Keep my commandments, and live;—^h and my law as the apple of thine eye.
ⁱ Bind them upon thy fingers,⁷—write them upon the table of thine heart.
^k Say unto wisdom, ^l Thou art my sister;⁸
And call understanding thy kinswoman:
^m That they may keep thee from the strange woman,
From the stranger which flattereth with her words.
- 6 For at the window of my house I looked through my casement,⁹
7 And beheld among the simple ones,
I discerned among the youths, a young man ⁿ void of understanding,
8 Passing through the street near her corner;—and he went the way to her house,
9 ^o In the twilight, in the evening,—in the black and dark night:
10 And, behold, there met him a woman
With the attire of an harlot, and subtil of heart.
11 (^p She is loud and stubborn;¹⁰—^q her feet abide not in her house:
12 Now is she ^r without, now in the streets,—and ^s lieth in wait at every corner.)
13 So she caught him, and kissed him,—and with an impudent face said unto him, 14 I have peace offerings with me;¹¹—this day have I paid my vows.
15 Therefore came I forth to meet thee,
Diligently to seek thy face, and I have found thee.
16 I have decked my bed with coverings of tapestry,
With carved works, with ^t fine linen of Egypt.
17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.
18 Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning:
Let us solace ourselves with loves.
19 For the goodman¹² is not at home,—he is gone a long journey:
20 He hath taken a bag of money with him,
And will come home at the day appointed [or, the new moon].

2 That is, to abject poverty. Some regard the two clauses of the verse as differing thus: the harlot brings a man to penury, the adulteress to death.

3 Not literally sevenfold (see Exod. xxii. 1); but he shall make full restitution, though he may thereby be deprived of all that he has.

4 The argument appears to be this: The thief, driven by hunger to steal, is regarded with pity rather than contempt, and yet is punished for the protection of society; how much more, then, shall the adulterer be despised, as one who 'lacketh understanding,' and visited with a punishment for which there is no redemption.

5 That is, it rouses a man's most violent and lasting resentment.

6 That is, the injured husband.

7 As a ring on which some memento is engraved.

8 Cultivate the most endearing intimacy with her.

9 Rather, 'lattice:' see Judg. v. 28. This circumstantial and lifelike narrative or parable affords to the young and inexperienced an impressive warning against the dangers which beset the loiterer or the pleasure-seeker.

10 Or, 'refractory,' rejecting the customary restraints of modesty, which required a woman to keep at home.

11 Or, 'upon me;' i. e. peace-offerings were due from me, and I have just paid my vows by offering them. I have therefore come out to find some one to partake of them with me. See note on Lev. iii. 1. This description strikingly exhibits the woman's character—her levity, falsehood, and shameless impiety, in making her pretended religious observances a prelude to sin.

12 This is an old English word for the master of a family: in Hebrew it is simply 'the man,' meaning of course 'my husband.'

- 21 With ^a her much fair speech she caused him to yield, ^x With the flattering of her lips she forced him.
 22 He goeth after her straightway,—as an ox goeth to the slaughter,
 Or as a fool to ^y the correction of the stocks;¹
 23 Till a dart strike through his liver;—^z as a bird hasteth to the snare,
 And ^a knoweth not that it is for his life.
 24 Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children,
 And attend to the words of my mouth.
 25 ^b Let not thine heart decline to her ways,—go not astray in her paths.
 26 For ^c she hath cast down many wounded:
 Yea, ^d many strong men have been slain by her.²
 27 ^e Her house is the way to hell,—going down to the chambers of death.³

Wisdom described and commended; her promises and warnings.

- 8 DOTH not ^f wisdom cry?⁴—and understanding put forth her voice?
 2 She standeth in the top of high places,⁵—by the way in the places of the paths.⁶
 3 She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city,—at the coming in at the doors.
 4 Unto you, O men, I call;—and my voice is to the sons of man.
 5 O ^g ye simple, understand wisdom:—and, ye fools, be ye of an understanding heart.
 6 Hear; for I will speak of ^h excellent things;
 And the opening of my lips⁷ shall be right things.
 7 For ⁱ my mouth shall speak truth;—and wickedness is an abomination to my lips.
 8 ^k All the words of my mouth are in righteousness;⁸
 There is nothing froward or perverse in them.
 9 ^l They are all plain to him that understandeth,
 And right to them that find knowledge.
 10 Receive my instruction, and not silver;⁹—and knowledge rather than choice gold.
 11 ^m For wisdom is better than rubies;
 And all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it.
 12 ⁿ I wisdom dwell with prudence,¹⁰
 And find out knowledge of witty inventions.¹¹
 13 ^o The fear of the LORD is to hate evil:
^p Pride, and arrogancy, and the evil way, and ^q the froward mouth, do I hate.
 14 ^r Counsel¹² is mine, and sound wisdom:—I am understanding; ^s I have strength.¹³
 15 ^t By me kings reign,¹⁴—and princes ^u decree justice.
 16 By me princes rule,—and nobles, even all the judges of the earth.
 17 ^x I love them that love me;—and ^y those that seek me early¹⁵ shall find me.
 18 ^z Riches and honour are with me;—yea, ^a durable¹⁶ riches and ^b righteousness.
 19 ^c My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold;
 And my revenue than choice silver.
 20 ^d I lead in the way of righteousness,—in the midst of the paths¹⁷ of judgment:
 21 That I may cause those that love me ^e to inherit substance;¹⁸
 And I will ^f fill their treasures.

1 Or, 'And as one in fetters to the chastisement of the fool.' But the ancient versions had a different reading, which seems to have been, 'and as a dog to the chain; and as a stag till an arrow pierce his liver,' etc. This makes the whole passage more consistent.

2 Rather, 'and mighty men have been altogether slain by her.' Her victims are not only many, but mighty; not only wounded, but slain outright. Then, how can the young and inexperienced hope to escape?

3 An allusion to the spacious sepulchres around which were cut out small recesses, each prepared to hold a corpse.

4 See notes on ch. i. 20, 21. The first part of the Book concludes with a solemn and powerful appeal addressed to all, and especially to the young, in the name of Divine Wisdom, whose attributes and benefits are fully set forth, and contrasted with the allurements of wanton pleasure (ch. viii., ix.) Many commentators suppose wisdom to be 'the Word' (John i. 1); but it is better to regard this description as a personification of that Divine attribute which the Son of God possesses equally with the Father.

5 Like a herald making proclamations.

6 That is, where several paths meet.

7 That is, 'those things which my lips utter shall be right'—honest and open, without any duplicity.

8 A strong mode of saying 'they are righteous.'

9 That is, rather than silver. See Job xxviii. 15—19.

10 Wisdom asserts that between herself and prudence there is an inseparable connection. In vers. 12—21, wisdom is extolled as being needful in the conduct of the most important affairs of human life; and in vers. 22—31, as being one of the essential attributes of God.

11 Or, 'skilful plans.'

12 That is, the capacity of managing successfully difficult affairs.

13 Some render this, 'As for me, understanding is my strength;' so as to resemble our proverb, 'Knowledge is power.' Comp. Eccles. vii. 19; ix. 16.

14 Legislative and judicial authority, the lowest as well as the highest, can be beneficial and permanent only as it is guided by true wisdom.

15 This promise is the counterpart of the threatening in ch. i. 28.

16 Or, 'firm;' i. e. substantial, real. It is probably with reference to this passage that our Lord speaks of 'the mammon of unrighteousness' and 'the true riches' (Luke xvi. 9—12). By 'righteousness' here we should probably understand the fruits of righteousness, namely, prosperity, happiness, etc.

17 Keeping as far as possible from even the appearance of deviating.

18 Or, 'I have wherewith to enrich those that love me.'

- 22 ^gThe LORD possessed me¹ in the beginning of his way,—before his works of old.
 23 ^hI was set up² from everlasting,—from the beginning, or ever the earth was.
 24 When there were no depths, I was brought forth;
 When there were no fountains abounding with water.
 25 ⁱBefore the mountains were settled,—before the hills, was I brought forth.
 26 While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the fields,
 Nor the highest part³ of the dust of the world.
 27 When he prepared the heavens, ^kI was there:
 When he set a compass⁴ upon the face of the depth:
 28 When he established⁵ the clouds above:
 When he strengthened the fountains of the deep:
 29 ^lWhen he gave to the sea his decree,
 That the waters should not pass his commandment:⁶
 When ^mhe appointed the foundations of the earth:
 30 ⁿThen I was by him, as one brought up⁷ with him:
^oAnd I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him;⁸
 31 Rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth;
 And ^pmy delights were with the sons of men.
 32 Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children:
 For ^qblessed are they that keep my ways.
 33 Hear instruction, and be wise,—and refuse it not.
 34 ^rBlessed is the man that heareth me,
 Watching daily at my gates,⁹—^swaiting at the posts of my doors.
 35 For whoso findeth me findeth life,—and shall ^tobtain favour of the LORD.
 36 But he that sinneth against me ^uwrongeth his own soul:
 All they that hate me love death.¹⁰
 9 Wisdom hath ^xbuilded her house,—she hath hewn out her ^yseven pillars:¹¹
 2 ^zShe hath killed her beasts;
^aShe hath mingled her wine;¹² she hath also furnished her table.
 3 She hath ^bsent forth her maidens:
^cShe crieth¹³ ^dupon the highest places of the city,
 4 ^eWhoso is simple, let him turn in hither:
 As ^ffor him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,
 5 ^fCome, eat of my bread,—and drink of the wine which I have mingled.
 6 ^gForsake the foolish, and live;—and go in the way of understanding.
 7 He that reproveth a scorner getteth to himself shame:¹⁴
 And he that rebuketh a wicked man getteth himself a blot.
 8 ^hReprove not a scorner,—ⁱlest he hate thee:
^kRebuke a wise man,—and he will love thee.
 9 ^jGive instruction to a wise man,—and he will be yet wiser:
 Teach a just man,—^mand he will increase in learning.
 10 ⁿThe fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom:
 And ^othe knowledge of the holy¹⁵ is understanding.

1 Or, 'got me.' Comp. Gen. iv. 1. Wisdom is here regarded as prominently exhibited in all God's manifestations and works, from the very earliest acts of creation; and is therefore personified as his first-born daughter (vers. 22, 24, 25), fostered, happy, and beloved (30), and publicly recognised as his counsellor (23). Such a personification naturally furnished some language well adapted to express the intimate relation subsisting between the Father and the Son. See Col. i. 15, 16.

2 Literally, 'anointed;' publicly inducted into my high office.

3 Heb., 'the head;' meaning either the 'first clod of the earth,' or the sum total (as in Psa. cxxxix. 17), i. e. the mass of the dust of the earth.

4 Or, 'drew a circle;' alluding to the curved appearance of the boundary of the sea. See note on Job xxvi. 10.

5 That is, 'When he fixed the clouds on high.' See Gen. i. 6, 7; Job xxvi. 8, and notes.

6 Rather, 'When he put to the sea its limit, so that the waters should not pass its shore.'

7 As a foster child. This beautiful figure is carried out in the glad some joy of the child in her parent's presence and in all his doings, and the father's delight in her.

8 The personality of the Creator is here strikingly shown. The creation is not a soulless development of nature. It is the happiness of God to create; and he rejoices in all the works of his power and wisdom, but chiefly in man created after his own image, and therefore capable of enjoying the communications of Divine wisdom which he delights to impart.

9 It is customary in the East for persons to attend at the gates of royal palaces, either in the course of established duty, or in testimony of respect, or expectation of favours from the sovereign or his family.

10 They court destruction. See ch. i. 29–32.

11 'Seven' was the number of completeness or perfection. As the beloved daughter of the Universal King, Wisdom builds her royal pavilion (ver. 1), provides a magnificent banquet, and publicly invites all who are inclined to partake of it (2–5).

12 Either flavouring it with spices, or diluting it with water.

13 By means of her messengers.

14 Or, 'reproach;' i. e. shameful and insulting treatment; so that wisdom is necessary to teach us when and to whom reproof should be given.

15 Rather, 'of the Most Holy.'

- And the years of thy life shall be increased.
 12 ^a If thou be wise, thou shalt be wise for thyself:¹
 But if thou scornest, thou alone shalt bear² it.
 13 ^r A foolish woman³ is clamorous:—she is simple, and knoweth nothing.
 14 For she sitteth at the door of her house,—on a seat ^s in the high places of the city,
 15 ^t To call passengers who go right on their ways:⁴
 16 ^u Whoso is simple,⁵ let him turn in hither:
 And as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,
 17 ^x Stolen⁶ waters are sweet,—and bread caten in secret is pleasant.
 18 But he knoweth not that ^y the dead are there;
 And that her guests are in the depths of hell.

10 THE PROVERBS⁷ OF SOLOMON.

- ^a A wise son maketh a glad father:—^a but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother.
 2 ^b Treasures of wickedness profit nothing:—^c but righteousness delivereth from death.⁸
 3 ^d The LORD will not suffer the soul of the righteous to famish:

 4 ^f He becometh poor that dealeth¹⁰ with a slack hand:
^g But the hand of the diligent maketh rich.
 5 ^h He that gathereth in summer is a wise son:
 But he that sleepeth in harvest is ⁱ a son that causeth shame.¹¹
 6 ^k Blessings¹² are upon the head of the just:
 But ^l violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.¹³
 7 ^m The memory of the just is blessed:—but ⁿ the name of the wicked shall rot.
 8 ^o The wise in heart will receive commandments:—^p but¹⁴ a prating fool shall fall.
 9 ^q He that walketh uprightly walketh surely:
 But he that perverteth his ways shall be known.¹⁵
 10 ^r He that winketh with the eye¹⁶ causeth sorrow:—^s but¹⁷ a prating fool shall fall.

1 That is, the advantage will be thine own.
 2 Neither personal responsibility nor the penalties of transgression can be shifted on others. See Ezek. xviii. 1—22.
 3 The address of Wisdom having ended with ver. 12, the adulteress now appears as her opponent, and as the representative of folly. She sits at her door, and herself invites the passer-by.
 4 That is, those who are going straightforward in their paths. Such are, of course, here considered as unwary and unguarded. The tempters to evil in this world are unhappily far more numerous than guides and counsellors to good.
 5 Imitating the language of religion (see ver. 4), as the tempter has done in every age.
 6 This proverb has peculiar force in Eastern countries, where water is often scarce and dear.
 7 Here begins the more ancient collection of Proverbs or aphorisms, properly so called, which extends to ch. xxii. 16. The language in which they are expressed is very concise, and marked by certain peculiarities. Every proverb consists of two members, containing commonly, in the Hebrew, from three to five words each; and it has a meaning complete in itself, even when a leading thought is separated into distinct portions, which are the subject of as many separate verses. The requisite point, distinctness, and vividness are obtained by the antithetic parallelism. All these proverbs have reference to the standard of religious and moral duty, as it existed among the Israelites in their best times.

8 That is, prolongeth life; according to the Old Testament promises.
 9 Or, 'disappoints the cravings of the wicked.'
 10 Rather, 'that worketh.'
 11 The misery which flows from indolence disgraces the family to which a man belongs as well as himself.
 12 That is, benedictions.
 13 Rather, 'but the mouth of the wicked concealeth violence,' and therefore no one blesses him.
 14 'But the fool in lips rushes headlong' to destruction; forming a striking antithesis to the former clause. The 'fool in lips' is one who is so eager to talk as not to listen to the advice of others.
 15 He who turns from the ways of uprightness into crooked and deceitful bye-paths shall be detected and exposed.
 16 See note on ch. vi. 12. Here these words appear to mean that the communications which proceed from the wicked tend only to the injury of others.
 17 Rather, 'and.' This verse is a warning against deceit and against inconsiderate language; the first injuring others, the second ourselves.
 18 See note on ver. 6.
 19 This means that love to others, instead of publishing their sins, casts a veil over them. See 1 Pet. iv. 8.
 20 The talk of such a man is so mischievous as to require punishment.
 21 Or, 'is destruction near at hand.' The wise 'lay by,' or reserve their knowledge for a seasonable juncture; while the hasty measures of the foolish soon prove ruinous.

- 15 ^d The rich man's wealth is his strong city :¹
The destruction of the poor is their poverty.
- 16 ^e The labour of the righteous tendeth to life :—^f the fruit² of the wicked to sin.
- 17 He is in the way of life that keepeth instruction :
But he that refuseth reproof erreth [or, causeth to err].
- 18 ^g He that hideth hatred with lying lips,³
And ^h he that uttereth a slander, is a fool.
- 19 ⁱ In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin :⁴
But ^h he that refraineth his lips is wise.
- 20 The tongue of the just is as choice silver :—the heart of the wicked is little worth.
- 21 The lips of the righteous feed many :—but ^l fools die for want of wisdom.
- 22 ^m The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich,—and he addeth no sorrow with it.⁵
- 23 ⁿ It is as sport to a fool to do mischief :
But a man of understanding hath wisdom.⁶
- 24 ^o The fear of the wicked,⁷ it shall come upon him :
But ^p the desire of the righteous shall be granted.
- 25 As the whirlwind passeth, ^q so is the wicked no more :
But ^r the righteous is an everlasting foundation.
- 26 ^s As vinegar to the teeth, and as smoke to the eyes,
So is the sluggard to them that send him.
- 27 ^t The fear of the Lord prolongeth days :
But ^u the years of the wicked shall be shortened.
- 28 ^x The hope of the righteous shall be gladness :⁸
But the ^y expectation of the wicked shall perish.
- 29 ^z The way of the Lord is strength to the upright :
^a But destruction shall be to the workers of iniquity.⁹
- 30 ^b The righteous shall never be removed :
^c But the wicked shall not inhabit the earth.¹⁰
- 31 ^d The mouth of the just bringeth forth wisdom :
But the froward tongue shall be cut out.
- 32 The lips of the righteous ^e know¹¹ what is acceptable :
But the mouth of the wicked speaketh frowardness.
- 11 ^f A ^f false balance is abomination to the Lord :—but a just weight¹² is his delight.
- 2 ^g When pride cometh, then cometh shame :—^h but with the lowly is wisdom.
- 3 ⁱ The integrity of the upright shall guide them :
^h But the perverseness of transgressors shall destroy them.
- 4 ^j Riches profit not in the day of wrath :¹³
But ^m righteousness delivereth from death.
- 5 The righteousness of the perfect shall direct his way :
ⁿ But the wicked shall fall by his own wickedness.
- 6 ^o The righteousness of the upright shall deliver them :
But ^p transgressors shall be taken in their own naughtiness.
- 7 ^q When a wicked man dieth, his expectation shall perish :
And the hope of unjust men perisheth.
- 8 ^r The righteous is delivered out of trouble,—^s and the wicked cometh in his stead.¹⁴
- 9 An ^t hypocrite¹⁵ with his mouth destroyeth his neighbour :
^u But through knowledge shall the just be delivered.¹⁶

¹ That is, it helps him to ward off many evils which the poor cannot avert, and therefore suffer.

² Rather, 'earnings.' A similar sentiment is expressed in our proverb, 'Ill-gotten wealth never spends well.'

³ Rather, 'He that hideth hatred is of lying lips;' i. e. is a liar.

⁴ Compare Eccles. v. 1—7.

⁵ Or, perhaps, 'and sorrow (i. e. anxiety) adds nothing to it.' Comp. Ps. cxxvii. 2; Matt. vi. 25—34.

⁶ This verse may be rendered, 'As mischief is delight to a fool, so wisdom [is delight] to a man of understanding.'

⁷ That is, what he fears. Comp. Gen. xxxi. 42.

⁸ That is, it shall be fulfilled to his joy.

⁹ Rather, 'A fortress to uprightness [is] the way of Jehovah; but [it is] destruction to the workers of iniquity.' Comp. Hos. xiv. 9.

¹⁰ Or, 'the land;' i. e. Canaan. See note on ch. ii. 21.

¹¹ He has useful and opportune words always ready.

¹² Heb., 'stone;' stones being used for weights, as they were also anciently in England.

¹³ That is, in the day of the wrath of God: see Ezek. vii. 19; Rom. ii. 5.

¹⁴ That is, he falls into the troubles from which the good man is delivered. See refs.

¹⁵ Or, 'The polluted.' See note on Job viii. 13.

¹⁶ Rather, 'Through the knowledge of the righteous, men are delivered.' The wicked injures his fellow men, but the just man's wisdom profits them.

- 10 ^x When it goeth well with the righteous, the city rejoiceth :
And ^y when the wicked perish, there is shouting.
- 11 ^z By the blessing¹ of the upright the city is exalted :
But it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.
- 12 He that is void of wisdom despiseth his neighbour :²
But ^a a man of understanding holdeth his peace.
- 13 ^b A talebearer³ revealeth secrets :
But he that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter.
- 14 ^c Where no counsel⁴ is, the people fall :
But in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.
- 15 ^d He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it :
And he that hateth suretiship is sure.
- 16 ^e A gracious woman retaineth honour :—and strong men retain riches.⁵
- 17 ^f The merciful man doeth good to his own soul :
^g But he that is cruel troubleth his own flesh.
- 18 The wicked worketh a deceitful work :
But ^h to him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward.⁶
- 19 ⁱ As⁷ righteousness tendeth to life :
^k So he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death.
- 20 They that are ^l of a froward heart are abomination to the LORD :
^m But such as are upright in their way are his delight.
- 21 ⁿ Though hand join in hand,⁸ the wicked shall not be unpunished :
But ^o the seed of the righteous shall be delivered.
- 22 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout,
So is a fair woman which is without [departeth from] discretion.
- 23 ^p The desire of the righteous is only good :
But the expectation of the wicked ^q is wrath.
- 24 There is that ^r scattereth, and yet increaseth ;
And there is that withholdeth more than is meet, ^s but it tendeth to poverty.⁹
- 25 ^t The liberal soul¹⁰ shall be made fat :
^u And he that watereth shall be watered also himself.
- 26 ^v He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him :
But ^w blessing¹¹ shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.
- 27 He that diligently seeketh good procureth favour :
^z But he that seeketh mischief, it shall come unto him.
- 28 ^a He that trusteth in his riches shall fall :
But ^b the righteous shall flourish as a branch.
- 29 He that troubleth¹² his own house ^c shall inherit the wind :
And the fool shall be servant to the wise of heart.
- 30 ^d The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life ;—and ^e he that winneth souls is wise.¹³
- 31 ^f Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed¹⁴ in the earth :
Much more the wicked and the sinner.[—]
- 12 Whoso loveth instruction¹⁵ loveth knowledge :
But he that hateth reproof is brutish.

1 The blessing they invoke; i. e. their prayers.
2 Rather, 'He that despiseth his neighbour is void of wisdom.' The man who treats others with disrespect disgraces himself.

3 Or, 'slanderer.' See Lev. xix. 16; Jer. vi. 28; ix. 4.

4 Or, 'guidance.' See Job xxxvii. 12.

5 The meaning perhaps is, 'A woman of grace (i. e. beauty) holds fast honour, as strong men hold fast riches.' Beauty is as dangerous a possession as wealth; and she who has it needs firmness of principle to preserve herself from shame.

6 Or, 'the wicked obtains a delusive gain; but he that sows righteousness [obtains] a true (i. e. real) reward.' In the Hebrew there is an emphatic alliteration.

7 Or, referring to the preceding verse, 'Thus righteousness tendeth to life,' etc.

8 Literally, 'Hand to hand.' The parallel clause and a similar idiom in Persian suggest the meaning, through all generations.

9 Neither will a judicious benevolence impoverish any, nor will a selfish and inhuman thriftiness enrich.

10 Heb., 'The soul of blessing.' Benevolence enriches the heart in which it dwells.

11 That is, the benedictions of the people. This seems to refer especially to times of famine, when some men hoarded corn in order to obtain exorbitant profit.

12 This may, perhaps, refer to undue exaction of labour, which produces vexation; but more probably to mismanagement, which may reduce a man to extreme poverty, and so oblige him to become a servant to the careful.

13 Rather, 'the wise man winneth souls;' i. e. by his wisdom he gains the confidence of others, and wins them over to virtue and goodness.

14 Rather, 'requited;' i. e. even the righteous, if he sins, shall be chastised; much more shall the wilful and habitual sinner. The Septuagint has a very free rendering of this verse, which is quoted in 1 Pet. iv. 18.

15 Rather, 'correction;' as in ch. xxii. 15.

- 2 ^g A good man obtaineth favour of the LORD :
But a man of wicked devices will he condemn.
- 3 ^h A man shall not be established by wickedness
But the 'root of the righteous shall not be moved.
- 4 ⁱ A virtuous woman is a crown to her husband :
But she that maketh ashamed is 'as rottenness in his bones.¹
- 5 The thoughts of the righteous are right :²
^m But the counsels of the wicked are deceit.
- 6 ⁿ The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood :
^o But the mouth of the upright shall deliver them.³
- 7 ^p The wicked are overthrown, and are not :⁴
But the house of the righteous shall stand.
- 8 A man shall be commended according to his wisdom :
^q But he that is of a perverse heart shall be despised.
- 9 ^r He that is despised, and hath a servant,
Is better than he that honoureth himself, and lacketh bread.⁵
- 10 ^s A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast :⁶
But the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.
- 11 ^t He that tilleth his land shall be satisfied with bread :
But he that followeth vain *persons*⁷ is void of understanding.
- 12 The wicked desireth the net⁸ of evil men :
^u But the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.
- 13 ^v The wicked is snared by the transgression of his lips :
^z But the just shall come out of trouble.
- 14 ^a A man shall be satisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth :
^b And the recompence⁹ of a man's hands shall be rendered unto him.
- 15 ^c The way of a fool is right in his own eyes :
^d But he that hearkeneth unto counsel is wise.
- 16 ^e A fool's wrath is presently known :—but a prudent man covereth shame.¹⁰
- 17 ^f He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness :¹¹
But a false witness deceit.
- 18 ^g There is that speaketh¹² like the piercings of a sword :
^h But the tongue of the wise is health.
- 19 The lip of truth shall be established for ever :
ⁱ But a lying tongue is but for a moment.
- 20 Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil :
But to the counsellors of peace is joy.¹³
- 21 There shall ^h no evil happen to the just :
But the wicked shall be filled with mischief.
- 22 ⁱ Lying lips are abomination to the LORD :
^m But they that deal truly are his delight.
- 23 ⁿ A prudent man concealeth knowledge :
^o But the heart of fools proclaimeth foolishness.
- 24 ^p The hand of the diligent shall bear rule :
^q But the slothful shall be under tribute.
- 25 ^r Heaviness in the heart of man maketh it stoop :
But ^s a good word maketh it glad.
- 26 The righteous is more excellent than his neighbour :¹⁴
^t But the way of the wicked seduceth them.

1 Destroying all comfort, and wasting health and life.
2 Rather, 'justice.'
3 That is, the intended victims of the wicked.
4 When once the wicked are overthrown, there is no hope of restoration.
5 Rank without comfort is much to be pitied.
6 Heb., 'knows the soul of his beast;' i. e. regards its desires and necessities.
7 Or, 'indolent persons.'
8 It is better to render the verse, 'The wicked desireth the protection of wicked men;' i. e. looks to his comrades for help; 'but the root of the righteous yieldeth it;' i. e. the upright man finds safety in his righteousness.

9 Every man's words and deeds shall bring back to himself good or evil.
10 That is, he suppresses his feelings under shameful treatment. This is put in contrast to the conduct of the indiscreet man in the preceding clause.
11 That is, a true witness aids justice.
12 Rather, 'babbleth.' This may refer to the hasty words of anger, or to the thoughtless talk of gossip.
13 'Deceit' may be put here for 'disappointment;' but more probably 'joy' stands for its cause, 'truth,' which is the opposite of 'deceit.'
14 Rather, 'The righteous shows the way to his neighbour;' i. e. he instructs and guides him by his example.

- 27 The slothful man roasteth not that which he took in hunting :
But the substance of a diligent man is precious.¹
- 28 " In the way of righteousness is life ;
And in the pathway thereof there is no death.
- 13 A wise son heareth his father's ^v instruction :—^x but a scorner heareth not rebuke.
- 2 ^y A man shall eat good by the fruit of his mouth :
^z But the soul of the transgressors shall eat violence.
- 3 ^a He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his life :
But he that openeth wide his lips² shall have destruction.
- 4 ^b The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing :
^c But the soul of the diligent ^d shall be made fat.
- 5 ^e A righteous man hateth lying :
^f But a wicked man is loathsome, and cometh to shame.³
- 6 ^g Righteousness keepeth him that is upright in the way :
^h But wickedness overthroweth the sinner.
- 7 ⁱ There is that maketh himself rich,⁴ yet hath nothing :
^k There is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches.
- 8 ^l The ransom of a man's life are his riches :—^m but the poor heareth not rebuke.⁵
- 9 ⁿ The light of the righteous rejoiceth :⁶
^o But the lamp of the wicked shall be put out.
- 10 Only by pride cometh contention :—^p but with the well advised is wisdom.⁷
- 11 ^q Wealth gotten by vanity shall be diminished :
But he that gathereth by labour shall increase.⁸
- 12 ^r Hope deferred maketh the heart sick :
But ^s when the desire cometh, it is a tree of life.
- 13 Whoso 'despiseth the word⁹ shall be destroyed :
^t But he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded.
- 14 ^x The law of the wise is a fountain of life,—^y to depart from ^z the snares of death.
- 15 ^a Good understanding giveth favour :—but ^b the way of transgressors¹⁰ is hard.
- 16 ^c Every prudent man dealeth¹¹ with knowledge :—^d but a fool layeth open his folly.
- 17 A wicked messenger falleth into mischief :
But ^e a faithful ambassador is health.
- 18 Poverty and shame shall be to him that refuseth instruction :
But ^f he that regardeth reproof shall be honoured.
- 19 ^g The desire accomplished is sweet to the soul :¹²
But it is abomination to fools to depart from evil.
- 20 ^h He that walketh with wise men shall be wise :
ⁱ But a companion of fools shall be destroyed.
- 21 ^k Evil pursueth sinners :—^l but to the righteous good shall be repaid.
- 22 ^m A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children :
And ⁿ the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.¹³
- 23 ^o Much food is in the tillage of the poor ;

¹ Or, 'A man's precious treasure is a diligent person.' An idle man, who neglects even the game he has caught, is contrasted with one who is valuable for his diligence.

² That is, he that speaks inconsiderately.

³ Or, 'but the wicked man acts foully and disgracefully.'

⁵ Or, 'accusation.' Under arbitrary governments, rich men are often falsely accused, for the purpose of exacting a ransom from them. To this the poor are not exposed.

⁶ That is, 'shines cheerfully;' their prosperity is real and lasting.

⁷ The meaning is, By pride (i. e. by proudly holding to one's own opinion) one shall cause contention; but with those who allow themselves to be advised there is wisdom.

⁸ Or, 'Wealth is diminished by vanity,' i. e. folly. But some render it, 'Wealth dwindles away sooner than a breath; but he that gathers it into his hands (i. e. with care and perseverance) increases it.'

⁹ The 'word' here is the same as 'the law (or instruction) of the wise' in ver. 14.

¹⁰ Rather, 'the way of treacherous men is stony.' Straightforward good sense procures esteem; but crafty dealings, instead of making a man's course easier, make it more rough and difficult.

¹¹ That is, he acts with deliberation.

¹² The gratification of a man's desire is sweet to him; and [therefore] fools cannot bear to depart from evil.

¹³ So that the dealings of Providence must not be judged of by the condition of one generation. Comp. ch. xxviii. 8; Job xxvii. 16, 17.

¹⁴ That is, justice. The poor, by honest industry, often attain competence, whilst the unjust come to ruin.

- 24 ^q He that spareth his rod ¹ hateth his son :
^r But he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.
- 25 ^s The righteous eateth to the satisfying of his soul :
^t But the belly of the wicked shall want.
- 14 Every ^u wise woman ^v buildeth her house : ²
 But the foolish plucketh it down with her hands.
- 2 ^y He that walketh in his uprightness feareth the LORD : ³
^z But he that is perverse in his ways despiseth him.
- 3 In the mouth of the foolish is a rod of pride : ⁴
^a But the lips of the wise shall preserve them.
- 4 Where no oxen are, the crib is clean : ⁵
 But much increase is by the strength of the ox.
- 5 ^b A faithful witness will not lie :—^c but a false witness will utter lies.
- 6 A scorner seeketh wisdom, and findeth it not : ⁶
 But ^d knowledge is easy unto him that understandeth.
- 7 ^e Go from the presence of a foolish man,
 When thou perceivest not in him the lips of knowledge. ⁷
- 8 The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way :
^f But the folly of fools is deceit. ⁸
- 9 ^g Fools make a mock at sin : ⁹—^h but among the righteous there is favour.
- 10 The heart knoweth his own ⁱ bitterness ;
 And a stranger doth not intermeddle with his joy. ¹⁰
- 11 ^j The house of the wicked shall be overthrown :
^k But the tabernacle of the upright shall flourish.
- 12 ^l There is a way which seemeth right unto a man,
 But ^m the end thereof are the ways of death.
- 13 Even in laughter the heart is sorrowful ;
 And ⁿ the end of that mirth ¹¹ is heaviness.
- 14 The backslider in heart ¹² shall be ^o filled with his own ways :
^p And a good man shall be satisfied from himself.
- 15 ^q The simple believeth every word :
^r But the prudent man looketh well to his going.
- 16 ^s A wise man feareth, and departeth from evil :
 But the fool rageth, and is confident. ¹³
- 17 ^t He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly :—and a man of wicked devices is hated.
- 18 The simple inherit folly :—but ^u the prudent are crowned with knowledge.
- 19 The evil bow before the good ;—and the wicked at the gates of the righteous.
- 20 ^x The poor is hated even of his own neighbour :—^y but the rich hath many friends.
- 21 He that despiseth his neighbour sinneth :
^z But he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he. ¹⁴
- 22 Do they not err ¹⁵ that devise evil ?
 But mercy and truth shall be to them that devise good.
- 23 ^a In all labour there is profit :—but the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury. ¹⁶
- 24 The crown ^b of the wise is their riches : ¹⁷—but the foolishness of fools is folly.
- 25 ^c A true witness delivereth souls : ¹⁸—but a deceitful witness speaketh lies.

1 That is, correction. Corporal punishment is not the only, and not always the best, chastening.

2 By her wisdom and diligence she keeps her family in comfort and peace. It is on females that the happiness or the discomfort of domestic life mainly depends.

3 True piety produces correct behaviour.

4 His proud speeches bring their own punishment.

5 Oxen are much used in the husbandry of the East ; and the meaning seems to be, that every good must have some inconvenience, to which a wise man will cheerfully submit for his advantage.

6 Without sincerity and humility no man can hope to attain true wisdom. Comp. Ps. xxv. 9.

7 Rather, 'for thou dost not perceive [in him] lips of knowledge ;' i. e. he has none to give thee.

8 That is, it deceives them.

9 Some render this, 'Sin mocks fools.'

10 Human sympathy cannot reach the heights and depths of personal experience. But God understands all, and to Him we may open our hearts.

11 Rather, 'of mirth itself.' This may mean, that beneath apparent joy, grief may be concealed ; and that earthly joy surely ends in the grief of disappointment.

12 Or, 'He whose heart is turned from God.'

13 Or, 'But the fool is haughty and confident.'

14 Or, 'Blessed be he !'

15 That is, 'Do not they stagger and wander ?' i. e. like drunken men, who miss their way and hurt themselves.

16 Working without talking may make men rich ; but talking without working will make men poor.

17 Because the wise know how to use them well. But in all circumstances and stations, a fool is a fool still.

18 That is, persons endangered by false accusation.

- 26 ^d In the fear of the LORD is strong confidence :
And ^e his children¹ shall have a place of refuge.
- 27 ^f The fear of the LORD is a fountain of life,—to depart from the snares of death.
- 28 In the multitude of people² is the king's honour :
But in the want of people is the destruction of the prince.
- 29 ^g He that is slow to wrath is of great understanding :
^h But he that is hasty of spirit exalteth folly.
- 30 ⁱ A sound heart³ is the life of the flesh :—but ^k envy⁴ the rottenness of the bones.
- 31 ^m He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker :⁴
ⁿ But he that honoureth him hath mercy on the poor.
- 32 ^o The wicked is driven away in his wickedness :
But ^p the righteous hath hope in his death.⁵
- 33 Wisdom resteth in the heart of him that hath understanding :
But ^q that which is in the midst of fools is made known.
- 34 ^r Righteousness exalteth a nation :—^s but sin is a reproach to any people.
- 35 ^t The king's favour is toward a wise servant :
But his wrath is against him that causeth shame.⁶
- 15 A ^u soft answer turneth away wrath :—but ^v grievous words stir up anger.
- 2 The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright :⁷
^y But the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness.
- 3 ^z The eyes of the LORD are in every place,—beholding the evil and the good.
- 4 ^a A wholesome tongue is a tree of life :
^b But perverseness therein is⁸ a breach in the spirit.
- 5 ^c A fool despiseth his father's instruction :
^d But he that regardeth reproof is prudent.
- 6 ^e In the house of the righteous is much treasure :⁹
^f But in the revenues of the wicked is trouble.
- 7 ^g The lips of the wise disperse knowledge :
But the heart of the foolish doeth not so.¹⁰
- 8 ^h The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD :¹¹
ⁱ But the prayer of the upright is his delight.
- 9 ^k The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD :
But he loveth him that followeth after righteousness.
- 10 Correction is ^m grievous¹² unto him that forsaketh the way :
And ⁿ he that hateth reproof shall die.
- 11 ^o Hell and destruction¹³ are before the LORD :
How much more then ^p the hearts of the children of men ?
- 12 ^q A scorner loveth not one that reproveth him :—neither will he go unto the wise.
- 13 ^r A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance :

1 Either God's children, or the children of the man who fears God : see Ps. ciii. 17.

2 This being commonly a mark of good government.

3 Or, 'A healthy heart.' Bodily health is greatly promoted by spiritual health—by the self-government, contentedness, and peace of true piety.

4 Who has placed him in poverty.

5 Hence it appears that good men, under the former economy, enjoyed a 'hope in death.' See Heb. xi. 16.

6 Or, 'that acts disgracefully.'

7 Heb., 'maketh knowledge good ;' i. e. useful, or pleasing.

8 It is better to supply the word 'maketh ;' i. e. maketh a breach, or a wound, in the spirit.

9 Under the Jewish dispensation, worldly prosperity was often a mark of Divine favour ; but the meaning here probably is, that righteousness is itself a treasure in the house in which it prevails.

10 Or, 'is not right,' or 'stable.'

11 The costliest offering from one who is leading a wicked life is hateful in the sight of God ; while the prayer of the good man, though he may have no sacrifice to offer, is acceptable to Him. This maxim shows the worthlessness of mere outward religious observances without a right state of heart. See refs.

12 Rather, 'Sore correction shall be to him who forsaketh the way ;' i. e. the way of rectitude.

13 See Job xxvi. 6, and note.

14 The mind gives to outward objects its own colour and complexion.

- 17 ^y Better is a dinner of herbs¹ where love is,
Than a stalled ox and hatred therewith.
- 18 ^z A wrathful man stirreth up strife:
^a But he that is slow to anger appeaseth strife.
- 19 ^b The way of the slothful man is as an hedge of thorns:²
^c But the way of the righteous is made plain.
- 20 ^d A wise son maketh a glad father:—^e but a foolish man despiseth his mother.
- 21 ^f Folly is joy to him that is destitute of wisdom:
^g But a man of understanding walketh uprightly.
- 22 ^h Without counsel purposes are disappointed:
But in the multitude of counsellors they are established.
- 23 A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth:³
And ⁱ a word spoken in due season, how good is it!
- 24 ^k The way of life is above to the wise,⁴—that he may depart from hell beneath.
- 25 ^l The LORD will destroy the house of the proud:
But ^m he will establish the border of the widow.⁵
- 26 ⁿ The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord:
^o But the words of the pure are pleasant words.⁶
- 27 ^p He that is greedy of gain troubleth his own house:
^q But he that hateth gifts⁷ shall live.
- 28 The heart of the righteous ^r studieth to answer:
^s But the mouth of the wicked poureth out evil things.
- 29 ^t The LORD is far from the wicked:—but ^u he heareth the prayer of the righteous.
- 30 The light of the eyes⁸ rejoiceth the heart:

- 31 ^v The ear that heareth the reproof of life⁹ abideth among the wise.
- 32 He that refuseth instruction despiseth his own soul:

1 The poorest fare is here contrasted with the greatest luxury, which is dearly bought when accompanied with hatred and envy.

2 Every effort is painful to the slothful.

3 That is, from the consciousness of having said what is opportune and useful. See the next clause.

4 Or, 'The path of life [leads] upward for the wise,' towards life and happiness: in opposition to the way of sin, which leads downward to destruction.

5 Who, having no earthly support, rests the more entirely upon Providence. 'Establishing the border,' means protecting the property or interests.

6 Or, 'But pleasant words (i. e. kindly words, which aim to impart happiness to others) are pure (i. e. acceptable to God).'

7 Or, 'bribes.'

8 This may mean, the favourable regards of others, like the phrase, 'the light of the countenance.' Or, perhaps, the whole verse may be rendered, 'As the light of the eyes (the pleasure derived through the eyes) rejoiceth the heart; so do good tidings make the bones fat.'

9 Either, 'reproof of [his] life,' i. e. of his conduct; or, reproof leading to life, i. e. salutary.

10 That is, that which teaches wisdom. Honour is derived from wisdom; wisdom is derived from the fear of God, which is essential to true humility.

11 Rather, 'To man belong the preparations of the heart, but from Jehovah [is] the answer of the tongue;' meaning either that man may lay his plans, but their success must depend on God's answer to his prayer; or, that man may plan, but cannot utter without assistance. See Matt. x. 19, 20.

12 And therefore He often sees sinful motives prompting to conduct that appears to man to be good.

13 More literally, 'God has made everything for its (or his) correspondency;' i. e. so that one thing answers to, or corresponds with, another. Thus, 'even the wicked [corresponds] to the day of evil;' i. e. by Divine arrangement the punishment is not only connected with, but is adapted to, the sin.

14 See note on ch. xi. 21.

15 Or, 'expiated;' i. e. forgiven. See Dan. iv. 27; Matt. xxiii. 23. This is evidently intended as a warning to those who misused Divinely-appointed sacrifices, supposing that these might exonerate the offerers from personal holiness. See James ii. 14—26.

- 7 When a man's ways ⁿ please the LORD,
^o He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him.
- 8 ^p Better is a little with righteousness—than ^q great revenues without right.
- 9 ^r A man's heart deviseth his way:—^s but the LORD directeth his steps.
- 10 A divine sentence¹ [Heb. divination] is in the lips of the king:
 His mouth transgresseth not in judgment.
- 11 ^t A just weight and balance are the LORD's:
 All the weights of the bag² are his work.
- 12 It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedness:
 For ^u the throne is established by righteousness.
- 13 ^x Righteous lips are the delight of kings;—and they love him that speaketh right.
- 14 ^y The wrath of a king³ is as messengers of death:—^z but a wise man will pacify it.
- 15 In the light of the king's countenance is life;
 And ^a his favour is ^b as a cloud of the latter rain.⁴
- 16 ^c How much better is it to get wisdom than gold?
 And to get understanding rather to be chosen than silver?
- 17 The highway of the upright is to depart from evil:
^d He that keepeth his way preserveth his soul.
- 18 ^e Pride goeth before destruction,—and an haughty spirit before a fall.
- 19 Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly,
 Than to divide the spoil with the proud.
- 20 ^f He that handleth a matter wisely shall find good:⁵
 And whoso ^g trusteth in the LORD, happy is he.
- 21 The wise in heart shall be called prudent:
 And the sweetness of the lips increaseth learning.⁶
- 22 ^h Understanding is a wellspring of life unto him that hath it:
ⁱ But the instruction of fools⁷ is folly.
- 23 ^k The heart of the wise teacheth his mouth,—and addeth learning to his lips.
- 24 ^l Pleasant words are as an honeycomb,—sweet to the soul, and health to the bones.
- 25 ^m There is a way that seemeth right unto a man,
 But the end thereof are the ways of death.
- 26 ⁿ He that laboureth laboureth for himself;—for his mouth⁸ craveth it of him.
- 27 An ungodly man diggeth up evil:—and ^o in his lips there is as a burning fire.
- 28 ^p A froward man soweth strife;—and ^q a whisperer separateth chief friends.
- 29 A violent man ^r enticeth his neighbour,
 And leadeth him into the way that is not good.
- 30 ^s He shutteth his eyes⁹ to devise froward things:
 Moving his lips he bringeth evil to pass.
- 31 ^t The hoary head is a crown of glory,—if it be found¹⁰ in the way of righteousness.
- 32 ^u He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty;¹¹
^x And he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.¹²
- 33 ^y The lot is cast into the lap;¹³—but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD.

1 That is, a decision which is authoritative and conclusive, as that of God is; so that the passage means, Since the sentence of a king is decisive, his mouth should not transgress in judgment. But some suppose that the verse is intended to claim oracular correctness for the king's judgments.

2 See note on ch. xi. 1. Just weights are said to be the work of Jehovah, because he has prescribed them, and has condemned all fraud in respect of them (see Lev. xix. 36), and in respect of all our dealings with others.

3 This very expressively represents the summary and extreme punishment inflicted by Oriental monarchs, who often, without any trial, send a messenger to execute any person who displeases them: see 1 Kings ii. 25; Dan. ii. 12, 13; Matt. xiv. 10.

4 That is, producing joy and prosperity. See note on Deut. xi. 14.

5 Or, 'He who gives heed to the word (i. e. the word of God) shall find success.'

6 He who is wise will gain respect; but if he should also possess a pleasant method of imparting his wisdom, he will be a more efficient teacher.

7 Or, 'the chastisement of fools;' i. e. their folly brings punishment with it. But the whole sentence may mean, The wise man is by his example and counsel a fountain of life to others; but fools can teach nothing but folly.

8 His hunger or appetite. See Eccles. vi. 7.

9 Some suppose these motions of the eyes and lips to be signs employed to direct accomplices in executing plans of mischief. See ch. vi. 13. But the half-closed eye may designate deep deliberation, and the compressed lip firm determination; so that the man may be said already to have completed his crime.

10 Or, 'It is found;' i. e. a venerable old age is one of the rewards of righteousness.

11 That is, the warrior or hero.

12 Self-conquest is the greatest of victories.

13 This alludes to the ancient custom of drawing lots from the bosom-folds. Events apparently the most fortuitous are entirely under the control of God.

- 17 Better is ^z a dry morsel, and quietness therewith,
Than an house full of sacrifices¹ with strife.
- 2 A wise servant shall have rule over ^a a son that causeth shame,
And shall have part of the inheritance among the brethren.²
- 3 ^b The fining pot is for silver, and the furnace for gold :
But the LORD trieth the hearts.³
- 4 ^c A wicked doer giveth heed to false lips ;
And a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue.
- 5 ^d Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker :⁴
And ^e he that is glad at calamities shall not be unpunished.
- 6 ^f Children's children are the crown of old men ;
And the glory of children are their fathers.
- 7 ^g Excellent speech⁵ becometh not a fool :—^h much less do lying lips a prince.
- 8 ⁱ A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it :⁶
Whithersoever it turneth, it prospereth.⁷
- 9 ^k He that covereth a transgression seeketh love ;
But ^l he that repeateth a matter separateth very friends.
- 10 A reproof entereth more into a wise man—than a hundred stripes into a fool.
- 11 An evil man seeketh only rebellion :⁸
Therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him.
- 12 Let ^m a bear robbed of her whelps⁹ meet a man,—rather than a fool in his folly.¹⁰
- 13 Whoso ⁿ rewardeth evil for good,—evil shall not depart from his house.
- 14 ^o The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water :
Therefore ^p leave off contention, before it be meddled with.¹¹
- 15 ^q He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just,
Even they both are abomination to the LORD.
- 16 Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wisdom, ^r Seeing he hath no heart to it ?¹²
- 17 ^s A friend loveth at all times,—^t and a brother is born for adversity.¹³
- 18 ^u A man void of understanding striketh hands,
And becometh surety in the presence of his friend.
- 19 He loveth transgression that loveth strife :¹⁴
And ^v he that exalteth his gate¹⁵ seeketh destruction.
- 20 ^w He that hath a froward heart findeth no good :
And he that hath ^x a perverse tongue falleth into mischief.
- 21 ^y He that begetteth a fool doeth it to his sorrow :
And the father of a fool hath no joy.
- 22 ^z A merry heart doeth good like a medicine :
^a But a broken spirit drieth the bones.¹⁶
- 23 A wicked man taketh a gift¹⁷ ^d out of the bosom
^e To pervert the ways of judgment.

1 'A house full of sacrifices,' means a house full of good provision. See note on ch. vii. 14.

2 Prudence and wisdom often gain the ascendancy over birth and station.

3 What men can do to silver and gold, Jehovah alone can do to the heart; i. e. test and refine it.

4 Who has placed him in poverty: see ch. xiv. 31.

5 Or, 'The lip of eminence;' i. e. the language of the eminent is not consistent with his character.

6 Or, 'him that receiveth it.'

7 That is, it wins the favour of the person to whom it is presented. There is an allusion to the sparkling of a cut jewel whichever way it is turned. It is the custom in the East never to approach a superior without a gift or present.

8 Or, 'A rebel seeketh only evil.'

9 Whose natural ferocity is aggravated by parental instinct.

10 An unreasonable wicked man when his passions are excited.

11 The rush of the water will soon widen the smallest breach; and so strife speedily extends its mischief beyond all control. See a similar sentiment illustrated by the spread of fire, ch. xxvi. 21.

12 The meaning is, that wisdom cannot be purchased at any price when the capacity for it is wanting.

13 Or, 'but he is born a brother for adversity;' i. e. a true friend becomes a brother (peculiarly kind) in adversity. But the design may be to enforce the peculiar claims of kindredship as greater than those of ordinary friendship, and to teach the duty of befriending relatives in distress.

14 Or, 'He who loves quarrels loves trouble.'

15 In the East, the gate being the only external part of a house on which decoration is bestowed, and even this being usually small, a lofty and handsome gate is a mark of pride and ostentation, which is likely both to provoke and to facilitate attacks.

16 See notes on ch. iii. 8; and ch. xiv. 30.

17 That is, a secret gift (see ch. xxi. 14), to bribe the judge or the witnesses. Money and other things of value were often carried in the folded bosom of the robe.

- 24 ^f Wisdom is before him that hath understanding;
But the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.¹
- 25 ^g A foolish son is a grief to his father,—and bitterness to her that bare him.
- 26 Also ^h to punish the just is not good,—ⁱ nor to strike princes for equity.²
- 27 ^k He that hath knowledge spareth his words:
And a man of understanding is of an excellent spirit.³
- 28 ^l Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise:
And he that shutteth his lips is esteemed a man of understanding.
- 18 ^m Through desire a man, having separated himself,
Seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom.⁴
- 2 ⁿ A fool hath no delight in understanding,
But that his heart may discover itself.⁵
- 3 When the wicked cometh, then cometh also contempt,
And with ignominy reproach.⁶
- 4 ^o The words of a man's mouth⁷ are as deep waters, ^p And the wellspring of wisdom as a flowing brook.
- 5 ^q It is not good to accept the person of the wicked, ^r To overthrow the righteous in judgment.
- 6 A fool's lips enter into contention,—and his mouth calleth for strokes.
- 7 ^s A fool's mouth is his destruction,—and his lips are the snare of his soul.
- 8 ^t The words of a talebearer are as wounds,⁸
And they go down into the innermost parts of the belly.
- 9 He also that is slothful in his work—is ^u brother to him that is a great waster.⁹
- 10 ^x The name of the LORD is a strong tower:
^y The righteous runneth into it, and is safe.
- 11 ^z The rich man's wealth is his strong city,¹⁰
And as an high wall in his own conceit.
- 12 ^a Before destruction the heart of man is haughty,—and before honour is humility.
- 13 ^b He that answereth a matter ^c before he heareth it,
It is folly and shame unto him.
- 14 ^d The spirit of a man will sustain his infirmity;¹¹
^e But a wounded spirit who can bear?
- 15 The heart of the prudent getteth knowledge;
And the ear of the wise seeketh knowledge.
- 16 ^f A man's gift maketh room¹² for him,—and bringeth him before great men.
- 17 ^g He that is first in his own cause¹³ seemeth just;
But his neighbour cometh and searcheth him.¹⁴
- 18 ^h The lot causeth contentions to cease,—and parteth between the mighty.
- 19 A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city:
And their contentions are like the bars of a castle.
- 20 ⁱ A man's belly shall be satisfied with the fruit of his mouth;
And with the increase of his lips shall he be filled.

ⁱ ch. 12. 14; 13. 2.

1 This may mean either, Wisdom is close at hand to the intelligent, but the fool seeks it in vain at the greatest distance (see ch. xiv. 6); or, Wisdom is in the countenance of the intelligent, whilst the eyes of a fool rove far and wide without any fixed object.

2 Rather, 'to strike princes on account of rectitude.' For the powerful to punish the righteous under their control, and for the people to rebel against a righteous prince, is equally wicked.

3 Rather, 'And he who is of a cool spirit (not easily excited) is a man of understanding.'

4 According to the translation in the text, the meaning of this difficult verse seems to be, He eagerly pursues all wisdom as the object of desire for which he separates himself. But it may be rendered, 'A man separating himself for his desire, seeks it; with all wisdom he quarrels:' i.e. the man who selfishly pursues his own desires and interests, acts at variance with true wisdom.

5 Or, 'But rather in his heart revealing itself.' Instead of seeking to acquire wisdom, his vanity leads him to self-display, by which he exhibits his own deficiencies.

6 That is, wickedness is followed by contempt, baseness by shame: see ch. xi. 2.

7 That is, of a wise man's mouth.

8 This may be rendered either, 'like dainties;' meaning that slanderous stories are dangerous, because they are eagerly listened to: or, 'like sports' (or jests); which appear harmless, but injure most deeply.

9 Sloth and waste are brothers; and both lead to ruin.

10 This verse derives additional force from contrast with the foregoing. The righteous man wisely makes God his refuge and trust: the rich man looks for safety to his wealth.

11 That is, of body. The best comment on this verse is that of Cowper:—

'No woes like those a wounded spirit feels,
No cure for such till God who makes them heals.'

12 See note on ch. xvii. 8, and Gen. xxxii. 20.

13 Rather, 'who pleads his cause first.'

14 That is, he examines his assertions and arguments.

- 21 ^a Death and life are in the power of the tongue :
And they that love it¹ shall eat the fruit thereof.
- 22 ⁱ Whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing,—and obtaineth favour of the Lord.²
- 23 The poor useth intreaties ;—but the rich answereth ^m roughly.
- 24 ⁿ A man that hath friends must show himself friendly :³
And ^o there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.
- 19 Better ^p is the poor that walketh in his integrity,
Than he that is perverse in his lips, and is a fool.
- 2 Also, ^q that the soul be without knowledge, it is not good ;⁴
^r And he that hasteth with his feet sinneth.
- 3 The foolishness of man perverteth his way :
^s And his heart fretteth against the Lord.⁵
- 4 ^t Wealth maketh many friends ;—^u but the poor is separated from his neighbour.
- 5 ^x A false witness shall not be unpunished,
And he that speaketh lies shall not escape.
- 6 ^y Many will intreat the favour of the prince :
And ^z every man is a friend to him that giveth gifts.
- 7 ^a All the brethren of the poor do hate him :
How much more do his friends go ^b far from him ?
He pursueth them with words, ^c yet they are wanting to him.⁶
- 8 He that getteth wisdom loveth his own soul :
He that keepeth understanding ^d shall find good.
- 9 ^e A false witness shall not be unpunished,—and he that speaketh lies shall perish.
- 10 Delight⁷ is not seemly for a fool ;

1 They who indulge and give it license.

2 In consequence of the difficulty of estimating the character of others, a man is especially dependent on Divine Providence in the choice of a wife. See ch. xix. 14.

3 Rather, 'A man of [many] associates will ruin himself ;' i. e. he will be often misplacing his confidence and involving himself in trouble. But there is a true and valuable friendship ; and its bonds are closer than those of the nearest relationship.

4 This may be rendered, 'Also in thoughtlessness of soul is no good, and the hasty of feet goeth astray ;' and be regarded as condemning rashness of feeling and action.

5 Men often murmur against God as the author of evils which their own folly has brought upon them.

6 Either, 'He follows their promises. They are gone !' Or, 'He who follows words, gets them, and nothing else.' The obscurity and irregularity in the form of this proverb, and the variations in the ancient versions suggest the possibility that there may be some omission in our present Hebrew text.

7 Or, 'luxury.' It is not seemly for a person to affect a mode of life proper to a station for which Providence has not fitted him.

8 In the despotisms of the East, slaves are often exalted to the highest rank.

9 This sentiment is beautifully enforced by our Lord in Matt. v. 38—44.

10 Rather 'But.' Fathers may bestow material comforts, but a prudent wife must be sought as the gift of God. See ch. xviii. 22.

11 Or, 'neglects ;' is reckless in his behaviour.

12 That is, Jehovah will repay him. God here condescendingly represents the interests of the poor as if they were his own. In a similar manner our Lord pledges himself to reward the smallest service rendered to the humblest of his disciples (Matt. x. 42).

13 Or, 'let not thy soul desire his death ;' i. e. do not cause his ruin by failing to inflict punishment : see ch. xxiii. 13, 14.

14 We must leave some men to learn self-control by the sufferings which their violent tempers bring upon them.

² Or, 'That which makes a man beloved is kindness.' But perhaps the best rendering is, 'That which a man desires is kindness; and a poor man' (who can only give kindness) 'is better than a man of deceit' (who fails to do what he professes).

³ More properly, 'The slothful man hideth his hand in the dish;' alluding to the Oriental manner of eating. See Matt. xxvi. 23. This is a sarcastic description of slothful habits.

⁵ Rather, 'A son who causeth shame and reproach, wasteth his father and chaseth away his mother.'

⁶ Beware of those who, while professing to instruct you, would draw you away from the plain principles of virtue.

⁷ Or, 'errs.' Wine not only leads to boisterous insolence, but has led even good men (such as Noah and Lot) into folly and sin. See Gen. ix. 21; xix. 33; also Dan. v. 4; Hos. vii. 5; Hab. ii. 5.

⁸ Rather, 'is quarrelsome.'

⁹ Literally, 'because of the winter;' which is the time for ploughing. The frost in Palestine is not severe enough to prevent ploughing.

¹⁰ Or, 'a purpose in a man's heart.' This may be difficult to discover; but a man of understanding will often succeed in doing so.

¹¹ A wise and upright king is here supposed.

¹² This humiliating inquiry has a response in Eccles. vii. 20, and 1 John i. 8—10.

¹³ Heb., 'A stone and a stone, an ephah and an ephah.' One set to sell with, and another to buy with, for the purpose of fraud.

¹⁴ The elements of character are discernible even in childhood, and indicate what the future life will be.

¹⁵ He can therefore hear and see all things, and takes account of our use of these faculties. See refs.

1 Or, according to the present Hebrew text, 'for strangers.' For a creditor to take the garment of a debtor was extremely severe ; but not too severe a treatment of one who was so inconsiderate, not to say dishonest, as to become surety for those of whom he knows nothing.

2 That is, what is unlawful, or is gained unlawfully.

3 Rather, 'Therefore associate not with him who is open of lips ;' i. e. a gossiping person.

4 Rather, 'shall help.' See Rom. xii. 19.

5 That is, without Divine guidance. See ch. iii. 5, 6.

6 Rather, 'who rashly utters holy words.' The proverb refers to solemn promises hastily made, and then slowly and reluctantly fulfilled.

7 Rather, 'A wise king winnoweth the wicked, and turneth on them the wheel' (of his threshing-wain). As in threshing the wheel separates the grain from the straw, so a wise king will distinguish between the righteous and the wicked.

8 As a lamp is intended to light the inmost chambers of a house, so the conscious soul of man is designed by God to enlighten his whole nature.

9 By securing the respect and love of the people ; and bringing down the blessing of God. 'Mercy and truth' are the characteristics of the King Messiah (Psa. xevii. 2).

10 Or, 'Strokes of a wound are a means of cleansing for the wicked ; and stripes, of the inward parts of the body.' Solomon is here arguing for the salutary effect of outward chastisements on the inward dispositions.

11 The complete control which God exercises even over men in the highest stations is illustrated by the mode of irrigating plantations by means of trenches or water-courses, into or from which the cultivator turns the water at his pleasure. See note on Deut. xi. 10.

12 Rather, as in the ancient versions, 'The light of the wicked (that in which they delight) is sin.'

13 Thoughtless haste is here opposed to steady industry.

14 Or, 'is as a breath chased away, [as] snares of death ;' i. e. such treasures quickly disappear, and ruin those who acquired them.

15 Or, 'A man of crooked way is guilty ; but pure is he whose work is straightforward.'

22 ^a A ^b good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, And loving favour ¹² rather than [or , favour is better than] silver and gold.	^c ch. 29. 13; 1 Cor. 12. 20, 21.
2 ^c The rich and poor meet together:— ^d the Lord is the maker of them all.	^d ch. 14. 31; Job 31. 15.
3 ^e A prudent man foreseeeth the evil, and hideth himself: But the simple pass on, and are punished.	^e ch. 14. 15, 16; 27. 12; Ex. 9. 20, 21; 1 Thes. 5. 2—6; Heb. 11. 7.

² Our translators have supplied the word 'man' in the first clause, and 'God' in the second; but both clauses refer to the same person, the 'righteous;' who is either 'the righteous God,' or 'an upright judge.'

³ Rather, 'The doing of justice is joy to the righteous; but it is destruction to the workers of iniquity.' Comp. Luke xxi. 28.

⁴ Rather, 'of the spirits of the departed.' See ch. ii. 18; ix. 18; Ps. lxxxviii. 10; Isa. xiv. 9.

⁵ Rather, 'There is precious treasure and oil in the dwelling of the wise.'

⁶ Rather, 'devours it;' uses it recklessly.

⁷ This may be rendered, 'As for the proud and haughty man, scoffer is his name; he acts with excess of presumption.'

⁸ This may refer to his desire of ease, which prevents his working; or it may mean, that his desires, his lusts, which he has not sufficient industry to gratify, torment him to death.

⁹ See note on ch. xv. 8. The next clause refers to an attempt to sanctify or to cover some wicked design by attention to ritual observances.

¹¹ Or, 'he shall establish his way;' i. e. shall obtain success. What the wicked hope to get by effrontery, uprightness secures by God's favour.

¹² That is, the good will of others. This is preferable to mere wealth, because the Creator of all has so mingled together rich and poor as to make all men dependent on each other's sympathy and friendship: see ver. 2.

- 4 ^f By humility¹ and the fear of the LORD are riches, honour, and life.
 5 ^g Thorns and snares are in the way of the froward :
 ^h He that doth keep his soul shall be far from them.
 6 ⁱ Train up a child in the way he should go :²
 And when he is old, he will not depart from it.
 7 ^k The rich ruleth over the poor,—and ^l the borrower is servant to the lender.³
 8 ^m He that soweth iniquity shall reap vanity :
 ⁿ And the rod of his anger⁴ shall fail.
 9 ^o He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed ;
 For he giveth of his bread to the poor.
 10 ^p Cast out the scorner, and contention shall go out ;
 Yea, strife and reproach shall cease.
 11 ^q He that loveth pureness of heart,
 For the grace of his lips⁵ the king shall be his friend.
 12 The eyes of the LORD preserve knowledge,
 And ^r he overthroweth the words of the transgressor.⁶
 13 ^s The slothful man saith, *There is a lion without,*⁷
 I shall be slain in the streets.
 14 ^t The mouth of strange women is a deep pit :
 ^u He that is abhorred⁸ of the LORD shall fall therein.
 15 Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child ;
 But ^x the rod of correction shall drive it far from him.

PART III.

Introductory exhortation; moral precepts and cautions.

- 17 BOW down thine ear, and hear THE WORDS OF THE WISE,⁹
 And apply thine heart unto my knowledge.
 18 ^z For it is a pleasant thing if thou keep them within thee;
 They shall withal be fitted in thy lips.¹⁰
 19 ^a That thy trust may be in the LORD,
 I have made known to thee this day, even to thee.
 20 Have not I written to thee ^b excellent things—in counsels and knowledge,¹¹
 21 ^c That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth;
 ^d That thou mightest answer the words of truth to them that send unto thee?¹²
 22 ^e Rob not the poor, because he is poor :¹³
 ^f Neither oppress the afflicted in the gate :¹⁴
 23 ^g For the LORD will plead their cause,
 And spoil the soul¹⁵ of those that spoiled them.
 24 Make no friendship with an angry man ;
 And with a furious man thou shalt not go :
 25 ^h Lest thou learn his ways,—and get a snare to thy soul.¹⁶

1 Rather, 'The reward of humility;' as in Ps. xix. 11.
 2 Or, 'Begin with a child according to his way' (i. e. his disposition). The right government and discipline of a child's disposition at the very first is essential to the formation of consistent and steadfast character.

3 He is obliged to consult his creditor's will and convenience. This is a warning against contracting debts.

4 That is, his violent and oppressive power.

5 Or, 'He that loveth pureness of heart [and] grace of his lips;' i. e. he who unites integrity with courtesy will be loved and trusted by his sovereign.

6 Or, 'of the treacherous.'

7 Imagining difficulties, and inventing ridiculous excuses for his negligence.

8 Or, 'with whom the Lord is angry.' Comp. Josh. xi. 20, and 1 Sam. ii. 25.

9 Vers. 17—21 form an introduction to the third division of this book, extending from ver. 22 to ch. xxiv. 34. The proverbs in this part are somewhat longer than in Part II. As the word 'wise' is in the plural, both here and in ch. xxiv. 23, it appears that the proverbs which follow were collected from different inspired sages, perhaps by Solomon himself.

10 Or, '[if] they be fitted together upon thy lips;' i. e. ready for use.

11 Or, 'Have not I written to thee heretofore, concerning counsel and knowledge?' perhaps referring to the former portion of this book.

12 Or, 'To teach thee truth, even words of faithfulness; that thou mayest bring back faithful words to those who send thee.'

13 This may mean either, Do not take advantage of his poverty: or, He is already destitute; do not increase his misery.

14 That is, in a court of law: see note on Gen. xxii. 17.

15 Or, 'and despoil those that spoil them of life.' Though the poor may be apparently friendless, they have God for their protector. Comp. ch. xxiii. 10, 11.

16 Or, 'and take to thyself a snare;' i. e. lest thou become like him, and so involve thyself in difficulties.

- 26 ^k Be not thou one of them that strike hands,
Or of them that are sureties for debts.
- 27 If thou hast nothing to pay—why should he take away thy bed¹ from under thee?
- 28 ^l Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set.
- 29 ^m Seest thou a man diligent in his business?
He shall stand before² kings;—he shall not stand before mean men.
- 23 When thou sittest to eat with a ruler,
Consider diligently what is before thee:³
- 2 ⁿ And put a knife to thy throat,—if thou be a man given to appetite.
- 3 ^o Be not desirous of his dainties:—for they are deceitful meat.
- 4 ^p Labour not to be rich:—^q cease from thine own wisdom.⁴
- 5 Wilt thou set thine eyes ^r upon that which is not?
^s For riches certainly make themselves wings;
They fly away, as an eagle toward heaven.
- 6 ^t Eat thou not the bread of him that hath ^u an evil eye,⁵ ^x Neither desire thou his dainty meats:
- 7 For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he:
Eat and drink, ^y saith he to thee;—but his heart is not with thee.
- 8 The morsel which thou hast eaten shalt thou vomit up,—and lose thy sweet words.
- 9 ^z Speak not in the ears of a fool:—for he will despise the wisdom of thy words.
- 10 ^a Remove not the old landmark;—and enter not into the fields of the fatherless:
- 11 ^b For their Redeemer⁶ is mighty;—he shall plead their cause with thee.
- 12 ^c Apply thine heart unto instruction,—and thine ears to the words of knowledge.
- 13 ^d Withhold not correction from the child:
For if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die.
- 14 Thou shalt beat him with the rod,—and ^e shalt deliver his soul from hell.
- 15 My son, ^f if thine heart be wise,—my heart shall rejoice, even mine.
- 16 Yea, my reins shall rejoice,—when thy lips speak right things.
- 17 ^g Let not thine heart envy sinners:
But ^h be thou in the fear of the LORD all the day long.
- 18 ⁱ For surely there is an end;⁷—and ^k thine expectation shall not be cut off.
- 19 Hear thou, my son, and be wise,—and ^l guide thine heart in the way.
- 20 ^m Be not among winebibbers;—among riotous⁸ eaters of flesh:
- 21 ⁿ For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty:
And ^o drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags.
- 22 ^p Harken unto thy father that begat thee,
And ^q despise not thy mother when she is old.
- 23 ^r Buy the truth, and ^s sell it not,⁹
Also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding.
- 24 ^t The father of the righteous shall greatly rejoice:
And he that begetteth a wise child shall have joy of him.
- 25 Thy father and thy mother shall be glad,—and she that bare thee shall rejoice.
- 26 My son, give me thine heart,—and ^u let thine eyes observe my ways.
- 27 ^x For a whore is a deep ditch;—and a strange woman is a narrow pit.
- 28 ^y She also lieth in wait as for a prey [or, as a robber], ^z And increaseth the transgressors¹⁰ among men.
- 29 ^a Who hath woe? who hath sorrow?
Who hath contentions? who hath babbling?¹¹

2 As their servant or minister. Steady and persevering industry is commonly more successful than brilliant and adventurous genius.

3 Or, 'who is before thee;' i. e. in whose presence thou art. This is probably intended as a warning against courting the friendship of the great, whose condescensions are often bribes, whilst they are apt to take offence at any inadvertency of behaviour (vers. 2, 3).

4 Do not believe the suggestions of worldly prudence, that wealth is a certain means of attaining happiness.

5 That is, a malignant, designing man. Such a man's civilities are only a cover to his wicked schemes.

6 Or, 'their avenging Kinsman:' see the note on Job

xix. 25. Compare also ch. xxii. 22, 23; Psal. lxxviii. 5.

7 Or, 'a hereafter.' The expectation of a blessed eternity may well reconcile us to any temporal self-denial for which the service of God may call.

8 Heb., 'consumers of flesh for themselves;' i. e. for their own gratification. The Orientals rarely taste flesh; but, when they do eat of it, they often indulge most intemperately.

9 Spare no pains or cost to obtain and to keep them.

10 Heb., 'the treacherous:' perhaps 'the seducers' (who 'deal deceitfully,' Exod. xxi. 8), in allusion to the notorious fact that they who have been led away by harlots become seducers in their turn.

11 Rather, 'anxiety.'

- Who hath wounds without cause? who ^b hath redness¹ of eyes?
- 30 ^c They that tarry long at the wine;—they that go to seek ^d mixed wine.
- 31 Look not thou upon the wine when it is red,
When it giveth his colour² in the cup, when it moveth itself aright.
- 32 ^e At the last ^f it biteth like a serpent,—and stingeth like an adder.
- 33 Thine eyes shall behold³ strange women,
And thine heart shall utter perverse things.
- 34 Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the sea,⁴
Or as he that lieth upon the top of a mast.
- 35 ^g They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not sick;
They have beaten me, and ^h I felt it not:
ⁱ When shall I awake? I will seek it yet again.
- 24 Be not thou ^k envious against evil men,—^l neither desire to be with them.
- 2 ^m For their heart studieth destruction,—and their lips talk of mischief.
- 3 ⁿ Through wisdom is an house builded;—and by understanding it is established:
- 4 And by knowledge shall the chambers be filled
With all precious and pleasant riches.
- 5 ^o A wise man is strong;—yea, a man of knowledge increaseth strength.⁵
- 6 ^p For by wise counsel thou shalt make thy war:

- 7 ^r Wisdom is too high for a fool:—^s he openeth not his mouth ^t in the gate.⁶
- 8 He that ^u deviseth to do evil shall be called a mischievous person.

- 11 ^y If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death,

- 12 If thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not;

- 13 My son, ^b eat thou honey, because it is good;

^g But the wicked shall fall into mischief.
- 17 ^h Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth,

^k ver. 1; ch. 23. 17;
Ps. 37. 1; 73. 3.

1 Or, 'dimness.' The vitiated blood of the drunkard causes wounds without external injury, and bloodshot eyes.

2 Or, 'when it sparkles in the cup, [and] goes down rightly,' i. e. smoothly and pleasantly.

3 Or, 'look upon.' Drunkenness leads to lust, as well as to filthy and foolish language.

4 The drunkard, giddy and reeling like a rolling vessel, and exposed to imminent danger, of which he is unconscious (ver. 34), yet reckons himself happy in his insensibility to shame, and determines again to drown all thought and feeling as soon as he awakes from his stupor (ver. 35). The whole passage terribly depicts the physical, mental, and moral evils of drunkenness.

5 Very similar is our maxim, 'Knowledge is power.' See Eccles. ix. 14—16.

6 The place of deliberation and judgment, where wisdom is most important.

7 Or, 'but the scorner.' Perhaps the meaning is, that the very purpose of evil is sinful in the sight of God; but the bold and insolent transgressor is not only offensive to God, but odious to man.

8 Or, 'straitened.' Alarm and despondency destroy the strength which is needed to bear adversity.

9 Literally, 'Deliver those who are dragged forth to death; and those who are staggering to the slaughter, oh, do thou keep back!' There is an obvious reference to the custom of making proclamations before a prisoner, when he was led forth to execution, that any person able to prove his innocence should come forward and do so. Comp. James iv. 17.

10 Rather, 'So learn thou wisdom for thy soul.' The latter part of the verse is the same as ch. xxiii. 18; on which see note.

11 This evidently refers to falling into trouble or suffering, in which the just man is always protected by God, who will leave the wicked in the mischief into which he has brought himself.

12 Comp. Job xxxi. 29. The hateful disposition here condemned is sure to turn God's judgments against him who cherishes it.

13 This is almost word for word the same as Ps. xxxvii. 1.

20 For ^lthere shall be no reward to the evil man;
^mThe candle of the wicked shall be put out.

21 My son, ⁿfear thou the LORD and the king:¹
 And meddle not with them that are given to change:²

22 ^oFor their calamity shall rise suddenly;
 And who knoweth the ruin of them both?³

31 And, lo, ^zit was all grown over with thorns,
 And nettles had covered the face thereof,
^aAnd the stone wall thereof was broken down.

32 Then I saw, and considered it well:

⁷ Do all things with due forethought, and in their proper order.

⁸ See note on ch. vi. 11.

⁹ That is, men appointed by king Hezekiah, who copied out the proverbs which follow, to the end of ch. xxix., probably selecting them from others with which they had been connected. Hezekiah, in addition to his other reforms, appears to have aimed to complete and preserve as much of God's word as had then been written (see 2 Chron. xxxi. 21), probably availing himself of the aid of the prophets of his time.

¹⁰ It is the prerogative of Him who is Supreme and Infinite to conceal the reasons of his conduct. An earthly king may have his state secrets (ver. 3); but his judicial decisions should be pronounced only after full and public inquiry.

¹¹ That is, they are all alike unsearchable.

¹³ Those who thrust themselves into places of honour will be publicly degraded. Comp. Luke xiv. 8—11.

- 8 ¹ Go not forth hastily to strive,
Lest thou know not what to do in the end thereof,²
When thy neighbour hath put thee to shame.
- 9 ^m Debate thy cause with thy neighbour himself;
And discover not a secret to another [or, discover not the secret of another]:
- 10 Lest he that heareth it put thee to shame,—and thine infamy turn not away.

¹ That is, to the gates, where the court was held.

² Or, 'Lest thou shouldest do something (i. e. something bad) at the end thereof.' Hasty litigation involves men in unexpected difficulties; and in the heat of contention they will sometimes betray confidence (ver. 9), which is sure to prejudice their cause with the cool and impartial (ver. 10).

³ Or, 'picture-work of silver;' referring probably to the fragrant and beautiful citron, presented in a silver filagree vase; a most agreeable offering, and therefore aptly representing 'a word spoken in [its] proper season.'

⁴ When these two meet together, such teaching and such hearing are beautiful and precious.

⁸ A heavy mace; a destructive weapon.

⁹ Rather, 'natron.' Such a combination causes effervescence, and the destruction of both ingredients.

escence, and the destruction of both ingredients.

¹⁰ Some suppose this to mean that the evil-doer will be overwhelmed with shame; but it more probably refers to the melting of metals by covering them with charcoal, and means that kindness will melt the hard heart. Comp. Matt. v. 43, 44; Rom. xii. 20.

¹¹ Or, 'As the north (i. e. north-west) wind brings rain, so does a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.'

¹³ The words 'is not' are supplied by our translators. Some render this, 'And searching after one's own glory is a burden;' meaning that honour, like honey, is good only when sought moderately. Others, 'But the pursuit of what is honourable to one is an honour.' Comforts should be sought moderately; but honourable pursuits (as that of wisdom) cannot be too zealously followed.

1 The ass, in the East, is often quite as spirited an animal as the horse.

2 Vers. 4, 5 may mean that a smart answer, though generally undesirable, may sometimes be useful. But it is more probable that the phrase 'according to' has a different meaning in the two clauses; signifying in the former similitude, so as to be like him, and in the latter fitness, so as to rebuke him.

3 He fails of his errand, and suffers injury.

4 Rather, 'are weak;' i. e. have no force or use.

5 This means either, he throws it away; or perhaps, he makes no better use of it than a slinger would of a stone bound or fastened to his sling.

6 Or, 'As a thorn-stick goes up in the hand of a drunken man;' i. e. is lifted up by him. This means, that it is used injuriously to himself and others.

7 This verse is very difficult: the best Hebrew critics render it thus—'As an archer who pierces every one, so is he who hires a fool, and he who hires wayfarers' (of whom he knows nothing); i. e. he is very mischievous.

3 Unsettled and exposed.
4 Or, 'Such is the pleasantness of one's friend arising from hearty counsel.'
5 Long-trying friendship is more to be trusted in a time of need than the closest relationship.
6 In the East, it is not uncommon to abuse a man by speaking ill of his relations: see 1 Sam. xx. 30, and note. The best answer to such abuse would be the upright conduct of his son.
7 His sincerity will be suspected, and his blessing regarded as no better than a curse.
8 Or, 'He who restrains her restrains the wind, and his right hand comes upon oil:' i. e. she is as subtle as wind, as slippery as oil.
9 Or, 'of another;' i. e. either he enlivens it by friendly intercourse, or he inflames anger already kindled. See Job xvi. 9.
10 This may refer either to the common sympathies which all men have as partakers of a common nature, so that self-knowledge and the knowledge of mankind are mutually connected; or to the correspondence which is generally found to exist between our disposition towards others, and theirs towards us.

11 Some render this, 'So [let] a man [be] to the mouth that praises him;' i. e. let him carefully test all the praise that he receives, that he may not be misled by flattery. Or the meaning may be, that praise tests character, as a fining-pot does silver.

12 Or, 'beat;' or, 'pound.' The severest punishments are often ineffectual to reclaim the wicked. Criminals have sometimes been pounded to death in the East; but we have no proof that this was ever done among the Hebrews.

13 Vers. 23—27 enjoin careful attention to worldly duties, in language having reference particularly to agricultural pursuits.

- 9 ^s He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, ^t Even his prayer shall be abomination.
- 10 ^u Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way,

^v But the upright shall have good things in possession.
- 11 ^w The rich man is wise in his own conceit ;

- 16 The prince that wanteth understanding is also a great oppressor :
^f But he that hateth covetousness shall prolong his days.
- 17 ^g A man that doeth violence to the blood of any person Shall flee to the pit ; let no man stay him.⁷
- 18 ^h Whoso walketh uprightly shall be saved :
 But ⁱ he that is perverse in his ways shall fall at once.
- 19 ^j He that tilleth his land shall have plenty of bread :
^k But he that followeth after ^l vain persons shall have poverty enough.
- 20 A ^m faithful man⁸ shall abound with blessings :
ⁿ But he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent [or, unpunished].
- 21 ^o To have respect of persons is not good :
 For ^p for a piece of bread that man will transgress.⁹
- 22 ^q He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, ^r And considereth not that poverty shall come upon him.
- 23 ^s He that rebuketh a man
 Afterwards shall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.
- 24 ^t Whoso robbeth his father or his mother, and saith, It is no transgression ;
 The same ^u is the companion of a destroyer.¹⁰
- 25 ^v He that is of a proud heart stirreth up strife :
^w But he that putteth his trust in the LORD ^x shall be made fat.
- 26 ^y He that trusteth in his own heart is ^z a fool :
 But whoso walketh wisely, he shall be delivered.
- 27 ^a He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack :
 But he that hideth his eyes¹¹ ^b shall have many a curse.

1 A man in authority is implied. In many Eastern countries, the offices of government are frequently sold to needy men, who use their power to reimburse themselves by oppressing others.

2 Their moral sense is deadened ; whilst that of the pious is alive to all that is right and good. Compare 1 John ii. 20.

3 Rather, 'is perverse in double dealing.'

4 Or, 'When the righteous triumph, there is much splendour ; but when the wicked rise, men disguise themselves ;' i. e. hide their wealth for fear of injustice.

5 No concealment can hide sin from Him who alone gives prosperity. Comp. Ps. xxxii. 3—5 ; 1 John i. 8, 9.

6 A sensitive, tender conscience is necessary to happiness and to safety. As penitent confession precedes (ver. 13), so godly fear always accompanies the enjoyment of pardon.

7 Let no one hinder the punishment of the murderer.

8 One who keeps his engagements ; which he who hastens to be rich often disregards. Comp. 1 Tim. vi. 10.

9 A man who takes bribes will come at last to violate his conscience for the most trifling advantage.

10 That is, the deliberate villain, who is prepared for any crime. Comp. Matt. xv. 4—6.

11 Who turns them away from the wants of others.

- 28 ^g When the wicked rise, ^h men hide ⁱ themselves :
^k But when they perish, the righteous increase.
- 29 ^l He that being often reprov'd ^m hardeneth his neck,¹ ⁿ Shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.
- 2 ^o When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice :
 But when the wicked beareth rule, ^p the people ^q mourn.
- 3 ^r Whoso loveth wisdom rejoiceth his father :
^s But he that keepeth company with harlots spendeth his ^t substance.
- 4 ^u The king by judgment establisheth the land :
 But he that receiveth gifts² overthroweth it.
- 5 ^v A man that flattereth his neighbour—spreadeth a net for his feet.
- 6 ^w In the transgression of an evil man there is a snare :
^x But the righteous doth sing and rejoice.
- 7 ^y The righteous considereth the cause of the poor :
^z But the wicked regardeth not to know ^a it.
- 8 ^b Scornful men bring a city into a snare :³—but wise men ^c turn away wrath.
- 9 ^d If a wise man contendeth with a foolish man, ^e Whether he rage⁴ or laugh, there is no rest.
- 10 ^f The bloodthirsty hate the upright :—^g but the just seek his soul.⁵
- 11 A ^h fool uttereth all his mind :—but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.⁶
- 12 If a ruler hearken to lies,—all his servants are wicked.⁷
- 13 The poor and the deceitful man⁸ ^k meet together .
^l The LORD lighteneth both their eyes.
- 14 ^m The king that ⁿ faithfully judgeth the poor,
 His throne shall be established for ^o ever.
- 15 ^p The rod and reproof give wisdom :
 But ^q a child left to himself bringeth his mother to shame.
- 16 ^r When the wicked are multiplied, transgression increaseth .
^s But the righteous shall see their ^t fall.
- 17 ^u Correct thy son, and he shall give thee rest ;
 Yea, he shall give delight unto thy soul.
- 18 ^v Where there is no vision, the people perish :⁹
 But ^w he that keepeth the law, happy is he.
- 19 A servant will not be corrected by words :¹⁰
 For though he understand he will not answer.
- 20 ^x Seest thou a man that is hasty in his words ?
^y There is more hope of a fool than of ^z him.
- 21 He that delicately bringeth up his servant from a child Shall have him become his son at the length.¹¹
- 22 ^a An angry man stirreth up strife,—^b and a furious man aboundeth in transgression.
- 23 ^c A man's pride shall bring him low :
^d But honour shall uphold the humble in spirit.¹²
- 24 ^e Whoso is partner with a thief ^f hateth his own soul :¹³
^g He heareth cursing, and bewrayeth it not.

1 Like a stubborn and refractory animal.
 2 That is, as bribes. Such a man causes discontent by his injustice, whilst his example is pernicious.
 3 Rather, 'Scoffers kindle a city into a flame;' i. e. excite discords.
 4 Rather, 'Whether he (the wise man) frown or laugh,' whether he treat him severely or pleasantly. From such controversies a man should altogether abstain.
 5 That is, they seek to preserve his life.
 6 Or, 'represseth it backwards;' i. e. keeps it in. But it may be rendered, 'sootheeth him at last.'
 7 Men are ever ready to follow a bad example.
 8 More properly, 'the oppressor.' Comp. ch. xxii. 2. However unlike these two may be in other respects, their life and their natural powers proceed from the same God.

 9 Or, 'become disorderly;' see note on Exod. xxxii. 25. 'Vision' means inspired vision or revelation. Without this, either in the living seer or in the written law, men run into every vice: but when Divine teaching is not only possessed, but rightly used, it is a blessing indeed.
 10 That is, by words only. Something more than mere words must be employed to secure the ready obedience of some servants.
 11 Too great indulgence is sure to be abused.
 12 Or, 'but the humble in spirit shall obtain honour.' See ch. xv. 33; Matt. xxiii. 12.
 13 Exposing himself to the curse pronounced on those who do not tell what they know of the crime: see Lev. v. 1.

- 26 "Many seek the ruler's favour;—but every man's judgment cometh from the LORD.¹ 27 "An unjust man is an abomination to the just:
 And he that is upright in the way is abomination to the wicked.

The words of Agur.

- 30 THE WORDS OF AGUR THE SON OF JAKEH, EVEN °THE PROPHECY:
 THE MAN SPAKE UNTO ITHIEL,—EVEN UNTO ITHIEL AND UCAL.²

- 2 ^p Surely I am more brutish than any man,³
 And have not the understanding of a man.
 3 I neither learned wisdom,—^q nor have the knowledge of ^r the holy.⁴
 4 ^s Who hath ascended up into heaven, or descended?
^t Who hath gathered the wind in his fists?
 Who hath bound the waters in a garment?
 Who hath established all the ends of the earth?
 What is his name, and what is his son's name, if thou canst tell?⁵
 5 "Every word of God is ^u pure:
^v He is a shield unto them that put their trust in him.
 6 ^x Add thou not unto his words,—lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.
 7 Two *things*⁶ have I required of thee;—deny me them not before I die:
 8 ^y Remove far from me vanity and lies:—give me neither poverty nor riches;
^z Feed me with food convenient⁷ for me:
 9 ^a Lest I be full, and deny thee,—and say, Who is the LORD?
^b Or lest I be poor, and steal,—^c and take the name of my God in vain.⁸
 10 ^d Accuse not a servant unto his master,
 Lest he curse thee, and thou be found guilty.⁹

 12 There is a generation ^e that are pure in their own eyes, ^f And yet is not washed from their ^g filthiness.
 13 ^h There is a generation, oh how ⁱ lofty are their eyes!
 And their eyelids are lifted up.
 14 There is a generation, whose teeth are as swords,—and their jaw teeth as knives,
^m To devour the poor from off the earth,—and the needy from among men.
 15 The¹¹ horseleach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give.

 Yea, four things say not, It is enough:
 16 ⁿ The grave; and the barren womb;—the earth that is not filled with water;
 And the fire that saith not, It is enough.

1 Real success depends more upon the favour of God than upon that of the ruler.

2 Nothing is known respecting the persons here named. The most probable supposition is, that Agur was a public teacher, and that Ithiel and Ucal were two of his disciples. A few commentators make slight changes in the Hebrew points, and render the verse thus: 'The words of Agur, the son of her who was obeyed in Massa. Thus spake the man: I have toiled for God (i. e. to comprehend God), I have toiled for God, and have ceased. For I am' (ver. 2), etc. As Massa is found connected with Dumah in Gen. xxv. 14 and 1 Chron. i. 30, and as, in the time of Hezekiah, this part of Arabia was colonized by Simeonites (1 Chron. iv. 41—43), Agur is, according to this rendering of the words, supposed to have been connected with them.

3 Agur speaks thus lowly of his own acquisitions, in contrast with the 'word of God' (ver. 5).

4 Either, 'the Most Holy;' or, 'holy things:' i. e. the deep things of God; his purposes and his providence.

5 He alone who has done these things can comprehend God. Can you point out such a man, or even one of his family? This is an emphatic negative. But there is One of whom it could be answered affirmatively. See John iii. 13, where our Lord refers to this passage.

6 These are inward purity and outward competence.

7 Literally, 'the bread of my portion,' as in Gen. xlvii. 22; or, 'my due,' Lev. x. 13, 14; i. e. what is sufficient for me.

8 Wealth often produces self-sufficiency, and thus leads to forgetfulness of God; while poverty frequently leads to dishonesty and murmuring against Him.

9 The curse which such false accusation would provoke would not be causeless, and would therefore take effect. Comp. ch. xxvi. 2.

10 Or, 'class of men.' Vers. 11—14 point out four hateful and sadly prevalent vices; filial ingratitude, hypocrisy, pride, and oppression or extortion.

11 Vers. 15, 16 may be an illustration of the insatiableness of the oppressors just mentioned. The progress from two to three, and then to four things, makes the comparison the more impressive.

12 By the law of Moses, an obstinately disobedient son was to be punished with death. It was a great aggravation of the punishment, if the body were left exposed to birds of prey.

13 Vers. 18—20 contain four things which it is hard to trace; three of which are meant to illustrate a fourth—secret criminal intercourse; and this again resembles a fifth—the treachery of the adulteress.

- The way of a ship in the midst of the sea ;—and the way of a man with a maid.
 20 Such is the ^s way of an adulterous woman ;
 She eateth, and wipeth her mouth,—and saith, I have done no wickedness.
 21 For ¹ three things the earth is disquieted,—and for four which it cannot bear :
 22 ' For a servant when he reigneth ;—and a fool when he is filled with meat ; ²
 23 For an odious woman ³ when she is married ;
 And an handmaid that is heir to her mistress. ⁴
 24 There be four things which are little upon the earth, ⁵
 But they are exceeding wise :
 25 " The ants are a people not strong,—yet they prepare their meat in the summer ;
 26 " The conies ⁶ are but a feeble folk,—yet make they their houses in the rock ;
 27 " The locusts have no king,—yet go they forth all of them by ² bands ;
 28 The spider ⁷ taketh hold with her hands,—and is in kings' palaces.
 29 There be three things which go well, ⁸—yea, four are comely in going :
 30 " A lion, which is strongest among beasts,—and turneth not away for any ;
 31 A greyhound ; ⁹ an he-goat ¹⁰ also ;—and a king, ^b against whom there is no rising up. ¹¹
 32 If thou hast done foolishly in lifting up thyself,—or if thou hast thought evil,
 " Lay thine hand upon thy mouth.
 33 Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter,
 And the wringing of the nose bringeth forth blood :
 " So the forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife. ¹²

Instructions to king Lemuel from his mother.

- 31 THE WORDS OF KING LEMUEL, ¹³
 " THE PROPHECY THAT ^f HIS MOTHER TAUGHT HIM.
 2 What, ¹⁴ my son?—and what, ^s the son of my womb?
 And what, ^h the son of my vows?
 3 " Give not thy strength unto women,
 Nor thy ways ^k to that ¹⁵ which destroyeth kings.
 4 " It is not for kings, O Lemuel,—it is not for kings to drink wine ;
 Nor for princes strong drink : ¹⁶
 5 " Lest they drink, and forget the law,
 And pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted.
 6 " Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish,
 And wine unto those that be of heavy hearts.
 7 Let him drink, and forget his poverty,—and remember his misery no more.
 8 " Open thy mouth for the dumb,
 " In the cause of all such as are appointed to destruction. ¹⁷
 9 Open thy mouth, " judge righteously,—and " plead the cause of the poor and needy.
The excellent wife described and commended.
 10 " WHO ¹⁸ can find a virtuous woman ? ¹⁹—for her price is far above rubies.
 11 The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her,
 So that he shall have no need of spoil. ²⁰

1 Vers. 21—23 contain four intolerable things.
 2 Prosperous, and therefore proud.
 3 That is, an ill-natured woman, who, after marriage, displays all those bad tempers which she formerly took pains to conceal.
 4 One who supplants her mistress in the affections of her husband. This is the most intolerable of all.
 5 These four creatures may be adduced to teach us not to judge by the outward appearance; for wisdom and industry can make up what is wanting in strength.
 6 Rather, 'wabbers.' See note on Lev. xi. 5.
 7 Or, 'the lizard;' perhaps the house lizard, which is very common in Palestine; and is tolerated in palaces, because it helps to clear them of insects.
 8 Or, 'which are stately in their step.'
 9 Literally, 'compressed of loins:' an epithet which some apply to the war-horse; others (particularly the ancient versions) to the cock; others to the greyhound; and others to a human warrior girt for fight.
 10 The large Oriental he-goats at the head of a flock march along with much stateliness.
 11 Or, perhaps, 'a king in the midst of his people.'
 12 Rather, 'For the pressing of milk brings forth cheese, and the pressing of the nose brings forth blood; so the pressing of anger brings forth strife.' Therefore (see preceding verse) do not open your mouth when you are angry, for otherwise strife will follow. See ch. xvii. 14.

13 Who Lemuel was is unknown. Some render the passage thus: 'Lemuel, king of Massa' (see note on ch. xxx. 1), and suppose him to be the brother of Agur.

14 That is, 'What shall I say unto thee?' These are the passionate exclamations of a mother addressed to a beloved son, for whom she had prayed and vowed (see 1 Sam. i. 11), and for whose future welfare she is most anxious. All her instructions tend to produce not only personal virtue, but especially kingly excellence.

15 The love of women, in which Eastern kings indulge.

16 Or, 'Nor for princes to desire strong drink.'

17 Or, 'For the cause of the sons of bereavement;' i. e. orphans.

18 This is a perfectly alphabetical poem, probably by a different writer, delineating the excellencies of a Hebrew matron. It is interesting also as exhibiting the domestic customs and economy of that age, and still more as showing the elevated social position of woman among the Hebrews, as compared with that which she held among other ancient nations, or with that which she enjoys among any Eastern people at present.

19 Heb., 'woman of strength.'

20 Or, 'And he is in no want of gain, or treasure.'

- 12 She will do him good and not evil all the days of her life.
 13 She seeketh wool, and flax,—and worketh willingly with her hands.¹
 14 She is like the merchants' ships;—she bringeth her food from afar.
 15 'She riseth also while it is yet night,²
 And "giveth meat to her household,—and a portion³ to her maidens.
 16 She considereth a field, and buyeth it:
 With the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard.⁴
 17 ^zShe girdeth her loins with strength,—and strengtheneth her arms.
 18 She perceiveth that her merchandise is good:—her candle goeth not out by night.
 19 ^yShe layeth her hands to the spindle,—and her hands hold the distaff.
 20 ^zShe stretcheth out her hand to the poor;
 Yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy.⁵
 21 She is not afraid of the snow for her household:
 For all her household are clothed with scarlet.⁶
 22 She maketh herself coverings⁷ of tapestry; her clothing is silk⁸ and purple.
 23 ^aHer husband is known in the gates,⁹
 When he sitteth among the elders of the land.
 24 She maketh fine linen, and selleth it;—and delivereth girdles¹⁰ unto the merchant.
 25 ^bStrength and honour are her clothing;¹¹—and she shall rejoice in time to come.
 26 She openeth her mouth with wisdom;—and in¹² her tongue is the law of kindness.
 27 She looketh well to the ways of her household,
 And eateth not the bread of idleness.
 28 ^cHer children arise up, and call her blessed;
 Her husband also, and he praiseth her.
 29 Many daughters have done virtuously,¹³—but thou excellest them all.
 30 ^dFavour¹⁴ is deceitful, and beauty is vain:
 'But a woman that feareth the LORD, she shall be praised.¹⁵
 31 Give her of the fruit of her hands;—and let her own works praise her in the gates.

¹ Women of rank among the Greeks and Romans, as well as among the Hebrews, were engaged in such manufactures; by which they not only supplied their own households with clothing, but also obtained other commodities (ver. 14).

² The Orientals retire to rest and arise very early; and the women commonly rise sooner than the men, often a long while before day.

³ This probably means that she allots to each of them the day's work.

⁴ Her industry and economy not only provide for the household, but even add to her husband's possessions.

⁵ Her energetic industry is combined with generosity to the poor. In the New Testament, the possession of the means of doing good is adduced as a motive to industry. See Eph. iv. 28.

⁶ She adds elegance to comfort.

⁷ Rather, 'coverlets for beds.' See ch. vii. 16.

⁸ Rather, 'muslin.' See Gen. xli. 42.

⁹ Her thrift gives him leisure for public duties.

¹⁰ Girdles, richly wrought by women, are of high price in the East.

¹¹ Her chief ornaments are her strong mind and good name, which enable her to look without anxiety to the future.

¹² Or, 'on.' Her activity is not made (as diligence too often is) an excuse for a harsh and bustling manner.

¹³ Or, 'Many women act well; but thou excellest them all.' These are probably her husband's praises.

¹⁴ Or, 'gracefulness,' i. e. of person. This often disappoints expectation.

¹⁵ Godliness is at once the source and the crowning grace of all her excellences. Thus this beautiful delineation of female virtue is connected with the main subject of the book; and the fear of the Lord is again shown to be 'the beginning' of all wisdom and goodness.

ECCLESIASTES; OR, THE PREACHER.

'ECCLESIASTES' is the word by which the translators of the Septuagint version have rendered into Greek the Hebrew title 'Coheloth,' signifying the 'Preacher.' It is the name which is given throughout this book to Solomon, 'the son of David,' who 'was king over Israel, in Jerusalem' (ch. i. 1, 12). This illustrious prince, though so richly endowed with knowledge and wisdom, turned away from God, and sought happiness in worldly and sinful pursuits (1 Kings xi. 1—13). Having seen much of the world; having possessed its wealth and luxuries, and enjoyed its pleasures to the full; having sought in every direction to obtain satisfaction from earthly things, with greater advantages probably than any other man ever had, he is here brought before us to describe his long and painful inquiry, with the various states of thought and feeling through which he had passed, and to announce the result of the whole. And this he does in these most emphatic words, which are the text of his whole discourse: 'Vanity of vanities, saith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.'

The subject of this book is the utter insufficiency of earthly objects of desire and pursuit to confer real happiness. It has not to do directly either with man's duty to God or man, or with his immortal nature and future destiny; and it is therefore not surprising that these should be referred to but seldom, and only when the main subject requires that they should be introduced. The question under discussion is not so much what is right, or what is most conducive to eternal happiness, as 'what profit a man hath of all his labour under the sun.'

And this subject is plainly not unworthy of the pen of inspiration. Diverted, as men generally are, from attention to the claims of God and to the realities of eternity by the specious attractions of worldly things, it was highly desirable that the hollowness and worthlessness of these objects of pursuit should be fully exposed; so that men might be freed from these illusions, and be prepared to learn the necessary lesson, that the service of God, not selfish gratification, is the great business of life; and that, all through its occupations and enjoyments, the great final results—the future judgment and eternal retribution—must be steadily kept in view (ch. xii. 13, 14).

The main argument of this book also gives occasion to the introduction of other topics of great importance. Divine Providence is placed before us in some of its most impressive aspects. It is represented as being absolute and universal in its control, unchangeable and inscrutable in its arrangements, and requiring the light of eternity for its perfect elucidation. Here also are found new illustrations of man's depravity, and his consequent dissatisfaction and unhappiness. On the other hand, valuable counsels are given, tending to lighten the pressure of earthly sorrow, and to increase the amount of earthly joys. Men are taught not to count too certainly upon their possessions, or to expect too much from them; and to unite forethought with contentment—the prudent anticipation of the future with the thankful enjoyment of the present.

But this book will not be viewed aright, unless it is regarded as being only a part of the great volume of Revelation. The office of the Royal Preacher is not to announce the gospel, but rather to show the need of it. Solomon does but express man's eager and boundless desires, and his bitter and constant disappointments: it is Jesus who bids the 'weary and heavy laden' to come to him, that they may 'find rest to their souls' (Matt. xi. 28—30). The Hebrew philosopher has maxims of prudence to mitigate our sufferings, and stern lessons of duty to fortify our souls; but the apostles of Christ learned for themselves, and taught others, to glory even in tribulations (Matt. v. 10—12; Rom. v. 3—5). Solomon points to a future judgment, which shall rectify all that appears now to be wrong; but Jesus is 'the Resurrection and the Life,' who has 'abolished death, and brought life and immortality [fully] to light' (John xi. 25; 2 Tim. 1. 10).

The manner in which these subjects are treated is characteristic of the author and his time, and yet adapted to convey conviction and instruction to men of every age. The form and structure of the book are peculiarly Oriental, whilst its reasoning is legitimately inductive, being founded upon an extensive accumulation and a careful scrutiny of facts. These facts, too, are interesting, because they are partly the experience of one individual whose character and position invest with peculiar importance all that befalls him; and partly that of many others whom he had the best opportunities of observing—persons of such various circumstances and pursuits, that every reader may feel a close sympathy with one or other of them. The book, however, is not an essay or treatise constructed according to the mode of moral or philosophical writing prevalent in Europe; but it is a reflective and discursive address, similar to those by which Eastern wise men have been in the habit of instructing their listening disciples (see ch. xii. 9, 10).

The experimental character of this discourse makes it not surprising that it should exhibit very different and often very improper views and feelings, just as they arose in the Preacher's mind amidst the various circumstances of his life, and before they had been corrected by mature reflection and by Divine teaching. Indeed, the too rapid generalizations and hasty inferences, the impetuous eagerness and repining discontent, which are here displayed, form of themselves one important class of facts, which help to prove most convincingly that 'all is vanity and vexation of spirit.'

Bearing in mind the nature of the book as the familiar discourse of a Teacher, we shall find less difficulty in accounting for another peculiarity. Its style varies from the most colloquial prose to the most finished apophthegmatic or descriptive poetry, according to the varying moods of the speaker's mind; a progressive elevation on the whole being observable up to ch. xii. 7, after which a simple practical conclusion completes the book.

The voice of antiquity unanimously pronounces Solomon to be the author of Ecclesiastes. This, however, has of late been disputed by many. The objections are chiefly three:—1. The way in which Solomon speaks of himself is said to indicate that the real author is only personating that prince, and does not even design entirely to conceal the fact. 2. The state of things referred to is alleged to be different from that which existed in the orderly, peaceful, and prosperous reign of Solomon; and the feelings expressed towards kings and governors are said to be rather those of a discontented subject than those of an arbitrary monarch. Both these objections, however, are allowed by their assertors to be capable of explanation, and to be only of weight when combined with the third. 3. A great diversity is observable in style and language between the books of Ecclesiastes and Proverbs. This difference, however, may in great measure be accounted for by the difference in the nature of the two books. The maxims in the book of Proverbs might well be in a more elevated poetic style than is suitable for a familiar colloquial discourse. Besides, the book of Ecclesiastes was probably composed many years after the Proverbs were written; so that the author's style might, during the interval, have changed considerably. The use of Chaldee words in this book only shows that the writer was accustomed to the Chaldee as well as the Hebrew dialect; and this would naturally be the case with one whose dominions comprised great part of Syria, whose extensive commercial enterprises brought him into frequent communication with his Eastern neighbours, and whose court became the resort of wise men from other lands: see note on 1 Kings ix. 18; x. 1—25. And some of the very words and phrases which are adduced as marks of a later age occur not only in Ecclesiastes and in the Song of Solomon, but also in such ancient books as Deuteronomy and Judges. These considerations remove the greater part of the difficulty; and any diversity still remaining to be accounted for may be supposed to result from the employment of one of the prophets of the day to put into a permanent form the oral teachings of the aged monarch.

Whilst the great lessons of this book are clearly brought out, it is by no means easy to trace the course of thought. The following analysis is given as perhaps, upon the whole, the best. After a general introduction stating his subject and design (ch. i. 1—11), the Preacher reviews his personal experience in his search after happiness, showing that neither luxurious pleasure nor even intellectual attainments can confer it (i. 12—ii. 23); and he concludes that it is best to fall in with the unalterable arrangements of Divine Providence (ii. 24—iii. 15). He then recounts his observations of the lives of others, especially in their social connections, and here also finds vanity (iii. 16—iv. 16); upon which he founds some striking practical remarks (v. 1—9). He renews his observations, chiefly regarding men as individuals, and exposing the disappointment of the selfish and avaricious (v. 10—vi. 12). He then adduces some maxims of practical wisdom to alleviate these inevitable ills—allowing, however, that they are not always successful (vii. 1—ix. 10); and adds some most striking and valuable instructions respecting the application of wisdom to various circumstances of life, so as to confer the greatest attainable happiness (ix. 11—xi. 6). This leads to its highest use in producing a thoughtful and serene expectation of and preparation for old age, death, and judgment (xi. 7—xii. 7); from which follows the conclusion, declaring as the result of all:—1, that earthly objects cannot possibly make men truly happy (xii. 8); 2, that Divine Wisdom alone can teach them to make the best of this imperfect state (xii. 9—12); and, 3, that this Divine Wisdom enjoins the cultivation of submissive and reverential piety (xii. 13), and the expectation of a future state of perfect adjustment and retribution as the best thing for man on earth (xii. 14).

1 Rather, 'at Jerusalem.'

2 A Hebraism for utter vanity. This is the great subject of the discourse: the utter insufficiency of all earthly things to make man happy. The fruitlessness of human efforts after happiness on earth is illustrated (vers. 3—11) by a reference to the changes in the natural world, where all things are mutable, subject to continual toil and change, constant in nothing but inconstancy, perpetually repeating themselves, producing nothing new, and leading to no rest. So man's most laborious and wearisome efforts in pursuit of happiness upon earth bring him no nearer to the attainment of his object.

3 In Judea and some other parts of the world, the winds are not so variable as they are with us; but are nearly if not altogether periodical. This seems to be what is meant by the 'circuits of the wind.'

4 By evaporation and rain the waters return to their fountains and streams.

5 Or, 'All [one's] words are wearisome, so that one cannot utter [them]; [one's] eye is not satisfied,' etc. Man's bodily powers and senses do but weary him by bringing him into connection with this restless change.

6 It would be some compensation for this incessant change, if some new sources of human happiness were discovered; but towards this there is no progress. This is still more strikingly illustrated in the present day, in which the wonderful discoveries of science and inventions of art have greatly multiplied human comforts, but still have failed to give true happiness.

7 It might be some comfort if a man could count upon his works remaining so as to assure him of posthumous fame. But when he sees how little is known of the past, he is deprived of even this poor consolation.

8 From general illustrations the Preacher proceeds to the particulars of his own experience, affirming that his royal rank (ver. 12), his wisdom and his earnestness in the investigation (13, 16—18), gave him the best opportunities for the discovery of satisfying earthly good, if there were any to be found.

9 This 'sore travail' is understood by some as applying to Solomon's own investigations; but as it is 'given to the sons of men to be exercised therewith,' it must be something more common than a course of philosophical inquiry, for which few have either ability or leisure. It probably means their restless pursuit of happiness, according to a divinely implanted impulse of their nature.

10 Some render this, 'and striving after wind.'

11 Comp. ch. vii. 13. Men seek happiness by trying to alter their circumstances to their likings, which cannot possibly be done.

12 What is deficient cannot be supplied.

13 Heb., 'over Jerusalem;' i. e. as rulers.

14 That is, to observe senseless and foolish conduct, in order to obtain a thorough discernment of the amount of difference between these things.

15 The wisdom and knowledge here spoken of must be understood as limited to the subject in hand; namely, those which men exercise in seeking earthly happiness. There is a wisdom and knowledge which is infinitely excellent, and is not a source of grief, but the fountain of pure and everlasting joy (John xvii. 3).

16 With the advantages just mentioned, Solomon seeks happiness in sensual pleasure, luxury, and splendour (vers. 1—11); still keeping his philosophical object in view (ver. 3), and he finds it is vanity and madness (vers. 1, 2).

wine], ^e yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom; and to lay hold on folly,¹ till I might see what was that good for the sons of men, which they should do under the heaven all the days of their life.

4, 5 ^f I made me great works; I builded me houses; I planted me vineyards: I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits:
6 I made me pools of water,² to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth
7 trees:³ I got me servants and maidens, and had servants born in my house. Also I had great possessions of great and small cattle above all that were in 8 Jerusalem before me. ^g I gathered me also silver and gold, and the peculiar treasure of kings⁴ and of the provinces. I gat me men singers and women singers, and the delights of the sons of men, as musical instruments, and that of 9 all sorts.⁵ So ^h I was great, and increased more than all that were before me in 10 Jerusalem: also my wisdom remained with me. And whatsoever mine eyes desired I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy; for my heart rejoiced in all my labour: and ⁱ this was my portion⁶ of all my labour.
11 Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and, behold, all was ^k vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun.

12 And I turned myself⁷ to behold wisdom, ^l and madness, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king?⁸ even that which hath been already 13 done. ^m Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness.
14 ⁿ The wise man's eyes are in his head;⁹ but the fool walketh in darkness: and I myself perceived also that ^o one event happeneth to them all.

15 Then said I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, so it happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wise? Then I said in my heart, that this also is 16 vanity. For there is no remembrance of the wise more than of the fool for ever;
^p seeing that which now is in the days to come shall all be forgotten.¹⁰ ^q And how¹¹ dieth the wise man as the fool!

17 Therefore ^r I hated life;¹² ^s because the work that is wrought under the sun is 18 is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of spirit. Yea, I hated all my labour which I had taken under the sun: because ^t I should leave it unto the 19 man that shall be after me.¹³ ^u And who knoweth whether he shall be a wise man or a fool? yet shall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have showed myself wise under the sun:—this is also vanity.
20 Therefore I went about ^v to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I
21 took under the sun. For there is a man whose labour is in wisdom, and in knowledge,¹⁴ and in equity; yet to a man that hath not laboured therein shall he
22 leave it for his portion. This also is vanity and a great evil. ^y For what hath man of all his labour, ^z and of the vexation of his heart, wherein he hath laboured 23 under the sun? For all his days are ^a sorrows, and his travail grief; yea, ^b his heart taketh not rest in the night. This is also vanity.

The necessity of submitting to the arrangements of Providence.

24 ^c THERE is nothing better¹⁵ for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul enjoy good in his labour. This also I saw, ^d that it was ^e vers. 1—12.

¹ That is, the wild intoxication of sensual pleasure.

² There still remain near Bethlehem three large pools, supplied with fine fresh water, which are attributed, with great probability, to Solomon.

³ Rather, 'the grove producing trees.' Comp. Isa. lxi. 11.

⁴ Such as are attainable only by kings.

⁵ Rather, 'a wife (or lady) and wives.' By the first we may understand the queen, Pharaoh's daughter.

⁶ That is, I had a sort of pleasure in my labour; but that was all, and it was soon over.

⁷ Solomon next turns to wisdom for satisfaction; but finds that the difference between it and folly, great as it may be, is not such as to exempt its possessor from the ills which all must suffer (vers. 12—16).

⁸ No one can put this great question to the proof with greater advantages than I have had; the utmost he can hope to do is to repeat my experiments; and, if he does, it will be with the same sad result.

⁹ That is, where they should be, in order that he may guard against danger, or foresee advantages. And yet, for all this, 'one event happeneth to them all.'

¹⁰ Or, 'Inasmuch as in the days to come all (i. e. both wise and fool) will have been long ago forgotten.'

¹¹ The word 'how' here is an interjection of grief and astonishment, as in Ps. lxxiii. 19. Compare ch. i. 11.

¹² Solomon represents himself as now driven almost to despair; especially when he remembers that whatever he might gain, with all his wearisome labours, must soon be transferred to a successor, who might abuse and squander away the whole (vers. 17—23).

¹³ This possibly alludes to the unpromising character of his son Rehoboam.

¹⁵ According to this rendering, the meaning may be that the unsatisfactoriness attending earthly toil should lead a man cheerfully to accept God's gifts, and enjoy them in a spirit of devout submission to all His unalterable arrangements (ver. 24—iii. 15), without the travail and care which cause the sinner vexation (ver. 26). Or, the passage may be translated literally, 'There is no good in (with respect to) the man who eats and drinks,' etc.: i. e. the comfortable enjoyment of earthly good is not the result of man's efforts, but the gift of God, who, by his providence, overrules all times and events so as to make all things good and seasonable to those who take them cheerfully and use them rightly, whilst to the sinner they are only vexation (ver. 24—iii. 15).

26 than I? ¹ For God giveth to a man that is good in his sight wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he giveth travail, to gather and to heap up, that ² he may give to him that is good before God. This also ² is vanity and vexation of spirit.

3 To every thing there is a season, ³

And a ⁴ time to every purpose under the heaven:

2 A time to be born,—and ⁵ a time to die;

A time to plant,—and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

3 ⁶ A time to kill, ⁷—and a time to heal;

A time to break down,—and a time to build up;

4 ⁸ A time to weep,—and ⁹ a time to laugh;

A time to mourn,—and a time ¹⁰ to dance; ⁵

5 A time to cast away ¹¹ stones,—and a time to gather stones together;

A time to embrace,—and ¹² a time to refrain from embracing;

6 A time to get,—and ¹³ a time to lose;

A time to keep,—and a time to cast away;

7 A time to rend, ¹⁴—and a time to sew;

¹⁵ A time to keep silence,—and ¹⁶ a time to speak;

8 A time to love,—and a time to ¹⁷ hate; ⁸

¹⁸ A time of war,—and ¹⁹ a time of peace. ⁹

9 ²⁰ What profit hath he that worketh in that wherein he laboureth? ¹⁰

10 ²¹ I have seen the travail, ¹¹ which God hath given to the sons of men to be 11 exercised in it. ²² He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: ¹² ²³ also he hath set the world in their heart, ¹³ so that ²⁴ no man can find out the work that 12 God maketh from the beginning to the end. ²⁵ I know that there is no good in 13 them, ¹⁴ but for a man to rejoice, ²⁶ and to do good in his life. And also ²⁷ that every man should eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the 14 gift of God. ²⁸ I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: ²⁹ nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: ³⁰ and God doeth it, that men should 15 fear before him. ³¹ That which hath been is now; and that which is to be hath already been; and God requireth that which is past.

Observations on human conduct in society.

16 AND moreover ¹⁶ ³² I saw under the sun the place of judgment, that wickedness 17 was there; ¹⁷ and the place of righteousness, that iniquity was there. I said in mine heart, ³³ God shall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is ³⁴ ³⁵ a time 18 there for every purpose and for every work. ¹⁸ I said ¹⁹ in mine heart concerning

1 That is, 'more than I have done' (see vers. 3—11);
'so that I am competent to give such an opinion.'

2 That is, for the sinner to get riches for those for whom he never designed them.

3 According to the view given in note on ch. ii. 24, the proverbial sayings in vers. 1—9 refer not to the purposes of man, but to the counsels and designs of God (see ver. 2), who allots to all men a season for all that he has appointed for them, which they cannot control or alter.

4 In ver. 2, natural death was spoken of: here, that which comes by violence or accident.

5 'Mourning' and 'dancing' may denote public expressions of grief and joy; as the former part of the verse may have reference to private pleasure and sorrow.

6 Or, 'to cast abroad.' Stones are thus thrown when land is to be made unfit for cultivation (see 2 Kings iii. 19, 25), as they are 'gathered,' or collected, when the land is to be restored to use.

7 A time of 'rending clothes' would be equivalent, in Oriental phraseology, to a time of affliction.

8 This probably refers to separations and reunions.

9 Times of peace and concord are succeeded by seasons of hatred and war.

10 Since things are thus ordered unalterably by God, of what use is this labour? Solomon in his disappointment seems to have carried this sentiment to the verge of fatalism; but it is true only of anxious strivings without respect to the will of God, not of earnest efforts to fulfil the duties to which he calls us. In these we are encouraged by these very considerations.

11 See note on ch. i. 13.

12 Whatever thus takes place by Divine appointment is right, however unable man may be to discern that it is so.

13 Some render this, 'He has put obscurity in their heart'; others, 'He has put intelligence in their heart, without which no man can find out,' etc. But it is most likely that the Hebrew word here rendered 'world,' like its Greek equivalent, means the constitution of things, which God 'has set in the midst of them' (i. e. of all these various arrangements) in such a manner that it is beyond men's power to understand his plans 'from the beginning to the end.' Therefore the best thing that a man can do is to acquiesce in them all cheerfully, as arranged by an all-wise Providence.

14 This may perhaps be rendered, 'I know that there is nothing better for them than to rejoice,' etc.

15 God's arrangements are unalterable; we can neither add to nor take from them; and all events are only new applications of the same immutable principles; for 'God seeks out [to repeat it], that which has, [in the course of events], been pushed forwards' into the past (ver. 15). Hence men should 'fear before him;' reverently confiding in his wisdom and goodness, instead of complaining of his doings.

16 From the narrative and results of his personal experience, Solomon goes on to relate his observations, beginning with social impediments to the enjoyment of happiness, arising from injustice (vers. 16, 17; ch. iv. 1—3), envy (4—6), want of companionship and help (7—12), and political misarrangements (13—16).

17 As the impartial administration of justice is one of the highest blessings that a country can enjoy, so its opposite is one of the heaviest curses; a source of numerous, extensive, and aggravated miseries.

18 And therefore for retribution, which must be an essential part of God's arrangements. See note on ver. 1. It would seem, from what follows, that Solomon expected this retribution to be made in the present world.

19 Disappointed of any adequate retribution here, he is tempted to think that man is altogether like the brutes the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them,¹ and that they might see that they themselves are beasts. "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence² above a beast: for all is vanity. "All go unto one place; "all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. "Who knoweth³ the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Wherefore I perceive that there is nothing better, than that a man should rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: 'for who shall bring him to see what shall be after him?

4 So I returned, and considered⁴ all the "oppressions that are done under the sun: and behold the tears of such as were oppressed, and they had no comforter; and on the side of their oppressors there was power; but they had no comforter.

2 "Wherefore I praised⁵ the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive. "Yea, better is he than both they, which hath not yet been,⁶ who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun.

4 Again, I considered all travail, and every right⁷ work, that for this a man is envied of his neighbour. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

5 "The fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh.⁸

6 "Better is an handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit.

7, 8 Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun. There is one alone, and there is not a second;⁹ yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet is there no end of all his labour; neither is his eye satisfied with riches; neither saith he, For whom do I labour, and bereave my soul of good? This is also vanity, yea, it is a sore travail.

9 "Two are better than one; because they have a good reward¹⁰ for their labour.

10 "For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up. Again, 'if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone? And if one prevail against him, two shall withstand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

13 "Better¹¹ is a poor and a wise child¹² than an old and foolish king, who will no more be admonished. For out of prison he cometh to reign; whereas also he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor.¹³ I considered¹⁴ all the living which walk under the sun, with 'the second child that shall stand up in his stead. There is no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them: they also that come after shall not rejoice in him. Surely this also is vanity and vexation of spirit.

Practical cautions.

5 KEEP¹⁵ m thy foot when thou goest to the house of God, and be more "ready (vers. 18—20), even questioning whether there is any difference in their ultimate destiny (21); and thus he nearly sinks into Epicurean self-indulgence (22).

1 Rather, that this state of prevailing injustice was 'for God to prove them, that they might see for themselves that they are beasts.' See the preceding note.

2 That is, in respect of death, which befalls them both.

3 Or, 'Who knoweth whether the spirit of man,' etc. This question implies that he had held the belief (though it was for the time sorely shaken) that there is a difference after death; and that, whilst a beast has no other than a lower earthly life, man has a life which, at death, 'goeth upward.'

4 That is, I contemplated again. A state of doubt (ch. iii. 21) cannot give satisfaction to a mind earnestly seeking after truth; and the inquirer will therefore review again and again the appearances which led to it.

5 That is, 'I called them happier.'

6 The dead have had to suffer; he has not, and therefore has the advantage.

7 Rather, 'every prosperous work,' as in ch. xi. 6. Whilst the poor are oppressed (v. 1), the prosperous are envied; so that both have their 'vexation.'

8 Though diligence exposes a man to envy (see ver. 4), it is folly to do nothing; for this reduces him to extreme poverty. So that contentment with moderate means is best (ver. 6), if it can be attained.

9 There is no one connected either by blood or by particular friendship to succeed him. The 'riches' are brought in to increase the force of the illustration.

10 Because they can often effect things in concert which singly they could not accomplish, whilst they enjoy their earnings better together than they could alone.

11 The preacher now turns to political changes as illustrating his position.

12 Rather, 'a young man,' as in 1 Kings xii. 8, 10. This remark may be illustrated by the case of Joseph (see Gen. xli. 40—45), and by that of Jeroboam (see 1 Kings xi. 26—40; xii. 1—20).

13 That is, the old and foolish hereditary king 'becomes poor' by his impolitic measures; whilst a captive or slave, out of the lowest rank, rises to the throne. Such elevations are not uncommon in Eastern despotisms.

14 Vers. 15, 16 should be rendered, 'I saw all the living who walk under the sun with (i. e. taking the side of) the young man, the second (i. e. successor) who stood up in his stead: there was no end of all the people, even of all before whom he was; nevertheless, they that come after shall not rejoice in him,' etc. Though he has been borne into power by the favour of the multitude, he shall soon find his popularity decline, and perhaps be thrust out by some new idol.

15 Having related his sad experience and observation, Solomon now interposes some practical cautions. The first of these relates to reverence of God, both as to our demeanour when engaged in his worship, and in making and keeping a vow (vers. 1—7); and it may have been intended as an admonition to any who, from seeing that earthly happiness is the gift of God (ch. ii. 24—26; iii. 13), should with inconsiderate eagerness and rash proto hear,¹ ° than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do 2 evil. ° Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: ° for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let 3 thy words ° be few: ° for a dream cometh through the multitude of business; and 4 ° a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.³ ° When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: ° pay that 5 which thou hast vowed. ° Better is it that thou shouldest not vow, than that 6 thou shouldest vow and not pay. ° Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh ° to sin; ° neither say thou before the angel,⁶ that it was an error: ° wherefore should 7 God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands? ° For in the multitude of dreams ° and many words ° there are also divers vanities: but ° fear thou God.

8 If thou ° seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and justice in a province, marvel not at the matter: ° for he that is higher than 9 the highest ° regardeth; and there be higher than they.¹⁰ Moreover the profit of the earth is for all; the king himself is served by the field.¹¹

Observations on the selfish and avaricious.

10 HE¹² that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth 11 abundance with increase. This is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and ° what good is there to the owners thereof, saving 12 the beholding of them with their eyes? The sleep of a labouring man is sweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

13 ° There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for 14 the owners thereof to their hurt. ° But those riches perish by evil travail: ° and 15 he begetteth a son, and there is nothing in his hand. ° As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked shall he return to go as he came, and shall take nothing 16 of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand. And this also is a sore evil, that in all points as he came, so shall he go: and ° what profit hath he that ° hath 17 laboured for the wind? ° All his days also ° he eateth in darkness, and he hath ° much sorrow and wrath with his sickness.¹⁵

18 Behold that which I have seen: ° it is good and comely for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the sun all the days of his life, which God giveth him: ° for it is his portion. ° Every man 19 also to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; ° this is the gift 20 of God.¹⁶ For he shall not much remember the days of his life; ° because God answereth him in the joy of his heart.

mises go to seek it from Him. The second is a warning against entertaining doubts about the superintendence and moral government of God (vers. 8, 9).

² Let the recollection of the majesty of Him whom you worship deter you from multiplying words without reflection in your addresses to him. See refs.

⁴ Those who make thoughtless rash vows, which they are unwilling to perform. As by the law a vow was voluntary, there was no sin in not making it; but there was heinous sin in breaking it when made.

⁵ That is, thyself, considered as frail in refusing the self-denial which the vow uttered by thy mouth required. Or the clause may be rendered, 'Let not thy mouth subject thy body to punishment;' i. e. through the breach of thy vow.

⁶ Or, 'messenger;' probably the priest; as in Mal. ii. 7.

⁷ 'A mistake;' I made the vow inconsiderately, and therefore have not kept it.

⁸ That is, frustrate the undertakings for the success of which thy vows were made.

⁹ Or, 'For in a multitude of dreams there are also vanities, and so is the multiplying of words.' See ver. 3.

¹⁰ Rather, 'for over the high there is a higher who regardeth; yea, the highest above them.' Perhaps the intermediate clause (the 'higher') may refer to superior earthly powers; but the last evidently refers to God.

¹¹ Or, 'on the produce of the soil.' Many renderings have been given of this verse; but that of our translation is perhaps the best. It is a consolation to think that oppression must have its limits, since without the cultivation of the ground the king could not get his revenue; so that in one view the king is more dependent on the ploughman than the ploughman on the king.

¹³ Rather, 'For these riches perish by some calamity:' either by improvidence and vice, or by ill-judged undertakings, or by the fraud and treachery of others, or by misfortune.

¹⁴ For that which is unsubstantial as the wind.

¹⁵ Rather, 'All his days he ate in darkness, and had much grief and sorrow and vexation.'

¹⁶ See note on ch. iii. 14.

¹⁷ Or, 'He thinks not much upon the days of his life;' i. e. he does not look at the past with regret, nor at the future with uneasiness (comp. vers 16, 17); but gratefully enjoys the blessings which God bestows in answer to his desires.

 2 among men: "a man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour," so that he wanteth nothing for his soul of all that he desireth,² yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a stranger eateth it. This is vanity, and it is an 8 "For what⁸ hath the wise more than the fool? what hath the poor, that knoweth 9 to walk before the living? "Better is the sight of the eyes than the wandering of the desire. This is also vanity and vexation of spirit.

 10 "That⁹ which hath been is named already, and it is known that it is man:
 11 "neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he. ¹⁰ Seeing there be 12 many things that increase vanity, what is man the better? For ¹¹ who knoweth what is good for man in this life, all the days of his vain life which he spendeth as ¹² a shadow? for ¹² who can tell a man what shall be after him under the sun?

The benefits of suffering, patience, and wisdom.

- 7 A ¹³ GOOD name¹⁰ is better than "precious ointment;
 And ¹⁴ the day of death than the day of one's birth.¹¹
 2 It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting:
¹⁵ For that is the end of all men;—and the living will lay it to his heart.¹²
 3 Sorrow is better than laughter:
¹⁶ For by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.¹³
 4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning;
 But the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.
 5 "It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise,
 Than for a man to hear the song of fools.
 6 "For as the crackling of thorns under a pot,¹⁴—so is the laughter of the fool.
 This also is vanity.
 7 Surely oppression¹⁵ maketh a wise man mad;—" and a gift destroyeth the heart.

¹ Solomon next shows the bitter disappointment of the man whose riches are violently taken from him by another (vers. 1—6); from which he infers that the wise man, though poor, who knows how to conduct himself aright, is the happiest man (7—9). He remarks that all these considerations bring us back to God's unalterable arrangements (see ch. ii. 24—iii. 15); and intimates that it is in vain to attempt a further solution (10—12).

² Rather, 'the good'; not enjoying his possessions.

⁴ That is, the untimely birth.

⁵ The untimely-born sees less, indeed nothing, of the troubles of life.

⁶ That is, he has enjoyed no good. If it be objected that he is better off than an untimely birth, because he has lived long, and life itself is a blessing, Solomon replies that a long life, without enjoyment, is protracted misery, and, after all, ends in death.

⁷ All that a man really needs is the food which sustains life; but this does not satisfy his desires.

⁹ Perhaps the best rendering of vers. 10, 11 is, 'Whatever is, long ago its name has been called (i. e. its nature and condition settled); and it is known (i. e. determined) what man himself is, and he cannot contend with Him that is mightier than he. Since it is so, that words greatly multiply vanity, what advantage is it to man? For who knoweth,' etc. See note on ver. 1.

¹⁰ Solomon now presents some practical considerations designed to alleviate human misery, suggesting that sorrow and even death are blessings (vers. 1—6), and that patience and wisdom will enable man not only to bear, but even to profit by inevitable misfortunes (7—14); that he who fears God may obtain wisdom to escape the perils which attend both uprightness and wickedness (15—20); that men's curses are often as harmless as they are causeless (21, 22); and that various and subtle as are the forms of temptation, they may, with God's help, be detected and escaped (25—29).

¹² Since affliction is the common lot of all men, it is better to frequent the place where we may learn how to endure and to improve it, than to associate continually with the gay and luxurious. None ever go to the house of mourning in a right state of mind without feeling the truth of these words.

¹³ The heart is made susceptible of instruction, and alive to serious impressions.

¹⁴ Making noise and smoke; but useless, because they give little heat, and soon go out.

¹⁵ This probably means the practice of oppression. Even wise men have been intoxicated by the possession of power; so that they have become tyrannical as rulers, or corrupt as judges. But even this must be endured patiently, and the 'end' must be awaited (ver. 8).

- 8 Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof:
And ^x the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.
- 9 ^y Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry:—for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.¹
- 10 Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these?²
 For thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this.
- 11 Wisdom is good with an inheritance:³
And by it there is profit ^z to them that see the sun:
- 12 For ^a wisdom is a defence, and ^b money is a defence:
^c But the excellency of knowledge is,
That wisdom giveth life to them that have it.
- 13 Consider the work of God:⁴
 For ^d who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?
- 14 ^e In the day of prosperity be joyful,—^f but in the day of adversity consider:
 God also hath set the one over against the other,
 To the end that man should find nothing after him.⁵
- 15 All things have I seen in the days of my vanity.⁶ ^g There is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, ^h and there is a wicked man that prolongeth 16 his life in his wickedness. ⁱ Be not righteous over much;⁷ ^k neither make 17 thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself? Be not over much wicked,⁸ neither be thou foolish: ^l why shouldest thou die before thy time?
 18 It is good that thou shouldest take hold of this;⁹ yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: ^m for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.¹⁰
- 19 ⁿ Wisdom¹¹ strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the 20 city.¹² ^o For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good and sinneth not.¹³
 21 Also take no heed unto all words that are spoken; lest thou hear thy servant
 22 curse thee: ^p for oftentimes also thine own heart knoweth that thou thyself likewise hast cursed others.¹⁴
- 23 All this have I proved by wisdom: ^q I said, I will be wise; but it was far 24 from me. ^r That which is far off, and ^s exceeding deep, who can find it out?¹⁵
 25 ^t I applied mine heart to know, and to search, and to seek out¹⁶ wisdom, and ^u the reason of things, and to know ^x the wickedness of folly, even of foolishness 26 and madness: ^y and I find more bitter than death the woman, whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands as bands: whoso pleaseth God shall escape from 27 her; but the sinner shall be taken by her.¹⁷ Behold, this have I found, saith 28 ^z the preacher, counting one by one, to find out the account: which yet my soul seeketh, but I find not:¹⁸ ^a one man among a thousand have I found; ^b but a 29 woman among all those have I not found. Lo, this only have I found, ^c that God hath made man upright; but ^d they have sought out many inventions.¹⁹

1 The ready admission and the long retention of anger are here described as characteristics of a fool.

2 Patience is here recommended in opposition to that querulous spirit which contrasts its present lot with the supposed advantages of former times.

3 Rather, 'Wisdom is good with (i. e. in comparison with) an inheritance: and it is a profit (i. e. better than an inheritance) to them that see the sun (i. e. the living).' The comparison and contrast are continued in ver. 12, where the reason of this superiority is given.

4 That is, what God does in the circumstances of man's life. This is a reason for patience, derived from the thoughts in ch. iii. 1—11.

5 This may be rendered, 'and in the day of adversity see that God hath also set the one over against the other, in order that man may not find anything after him;' i. e. that there may be no varieties of God's dealings which man does not know by personal experience. Or, according to the version in the text, the meaning may be, that God has so arranged the alternations of good and evil, and kept them so entirely under his control, that we can never predict the future with certainty.

6 That is, 'in this my unsatisfying life.'

7 Some suppose this to be the language of irony. If you wish to avoid the enmity of men, so as not to put your life in jeopardy, make no pretensions to superior piety and wisdom. But it is more probable that the word 'righteous' does not refer so much to real virtue, in which sense a man cannot be 'righteous over much,' as to an excessive scrupulousness in matters which in themselves are indifferent, and which the man who fears God will treat as such.

8 This will justly expose you to suspicion and hatred: and you will become amenable to the laws.

9 Rather, 'take hold of this; yea, from that withhold not thy hand; i. e. the two maxims in vers. 16, 17.

10 From both extremes, and their bad results.

11 This is the wisdom of him that is patient and fears God. It fortifies the soul, and elevates it above every other fear.

12 See notes on ch. ix. 13—18.

13 There is therefore no one who does not need wisdom, and the alleviation of earthly ills which it brings.

14 The consciousness of our own sins against others should keep us from being angry with their faults against us; whilst the remembrance of the feebleness of our own anger may encourage us not to fear theirs.

15 Though all these statements are the result of my own experience and observation, yet I am conscious that real wisdom is still far beyond me; for who can fathom what is so deep? (ver. 24).

16 These various terms 'to know, to search, and to seek out,' express intense and persevering application.

17 See note on Prov. xxii. 14. Solomon perhaps refers here to the cause of his own grievous fall. See 1 Kings xi. 1—4.

18 Rather, 'that which my soul seeks, but I find not [is this].' This was by no means wonderful in the case of Solomon; for nothing can be more unfavourable to the preservation of all that is good and beautiful in the character of woman than the system of the monarchical harems of the East.

19 Whoever carefully searches man's history may see

Other illustrations of the value of wisdom.

- 8 'WHO is as the wise man? ^f and who knoweth the interpretation¹ of a thing? ^g a man's wisdom maketh his face to shine, and ^h the boldness of his face shall be changed.²
- 2 'I counsel thee to keep the king's commandment, ^k and that in regard of the oath of God.³ 'Be not hasty to go out of his sight:⁴ ^m stand not in an evil thing; ⁿ for he doeth whatsoever pleaseth him. Where the word of a king is, ^o there is power: and ^p who may say unto him, What doest thou? Whoso keepeth the commandment shall feel no evil thing: and a wise man's heart discerneth both time and judgment.⁵ Because ^q to every purpose there is time and judgment, therefore the misery of man is great upon him.⁶ ^r For he knoweth not that which shall be: for who can tell him when [or, how] it shall be?
- 8 'There is no man that hath power ^s over the spirit to retain the spirit; 'neither hath he power in the day of death: and there is no discharge [or, casting off weapons] in that war; neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it.⁷
- 9 "All this have I seen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the sun: ^t there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.⁸ And so I saw the wicked⁹ buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and they were forgotten¹⁰ in the city where they had so done. This is also vanity.
- 11 'Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. ^u Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that ^v it shall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him: ^w but it shall not be well with the wicked, ^x neither shall he prolong his days, which are ^y as a shadow; because he feareth not before God.
- 14 There is a vanity which is done upon the earth; that there be just men, unto whom it ^z happeneth according to the work of the wicked; again, there be wicked men, to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous.¹¹ I said that this also is vanity. ^a Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life, which God giveth him under the sun.
- 16 'When I applied mine heart to know wisdom, and to see the business that is done upon the earth: (^b for also there is that neither day nor night seeth sleep with his eyes:) then I beheld all the work of God,¹² that ^c a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun: because though a man labour to seek it out, yet he shall not find it; yea farther; though a wise man think to know it, ^d yet shall he not be able to find it.
- 9 For all this I considered in my heart even to declare all this, 'that the righteous, and the wise, and their works, are in the hand of God: ^e no man knoweth traces of original uprightness which vindicate his Creator, with many proofs of depravity sufficient to condemn all the race; the one warns us against temptation from men, the other points us to the source of purity.

1 Or, 'explanation;' i. e. how to set it forth rightly. Another alleviation is suggested to the person who is wise enough to apply it (ver. 1); namely, that obedience to the laws of God and man will commonly be advantageous, as, on the other hand, wickedness has its punishment even when committed by a ruler (2—13), though this is not without exceptions (14, 15).

2 Or, 'and the harshness of his face is changed;' i. e. if his aspect was disconsolate and forbidding, wisdom makes it become serene and bright. This probably refers to the alleviations about to be mentioned.

3 Referring to the sanction which God had given to the kingly authority among the Jews.

4 Or, to depart from him; i. e. forsake him by rebellion.

5 The meaning may be, that he keeps in view the season of judgment and retribution; or rather, that he discerns the proper time and manner of performing every duty. See next note.

6 Rather, 'For to every undertaking there is a season and judgment, because the wickedness of man is great upon him.' In doing what is right, it is necessary to attend to opportuneness and propriety, because of the perversion to which the best actions we can perform are liable by the faults of others, as well as on account of circumstances which no human sagacity can foresee (ver. 7).

7 Some render the verse thus: '[As] there is no man who has power over the wind to restrain the wind, and there is [to man] no control over the day of death, and there is no [certain] rescue in war, so wickedness will not deliver a man.' In any case, the object evidently is to show that wickedness is unprofitable and dangerous.

8 Or, 'to his hurt.' Solomon now observes how soon the tyrant is removed and forgotten.

9 That is, the unjust ruler (ver. 9), whom death had now removed 'from the place of the holy;' i. e. the place where righteousness ought to have been exhibited.

10 They had expected perpetual fame; but men had no pleasure in remembering them: their name and memory were buried with them. So that, if wickedness appears for a time to be successful, it comes at last to vanity. This is further impressively illustrated in vers. 11—13.

11 These facts form an exception to the foregoing observations, which is candidly allowed, and is employed to enforce again the important truth, that we must not look for a complete adjustment in this world (ch. viii. 16—ix. 2), where death cuts off all alike in the midst of their hopes and plans and connections (vers. 3—6); so that the best we can do is thankfully to avail ourselves of that which God may give us (7—10).

12 That is, the method and reasons of his administration of the affairs of the world; why he often suffers the wicked to prosper, and the virtuous to be oppressed.

2 either love or hatred¹ by all that is before them. "All things come alike to all: there is one event to the righteous, and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good, so is the sinner; and he that sweareth,² as he that feareth an oath. This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all. Yea, also ^othe heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live, and after that they go to the dead. ^pFor to him that is joined³ to all the living there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion. ^qFor the living know that they shall die:⁴ but ^rthe dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward;⁵ for ^sthe memory of them is forgotten. Also their love, and their hatred, ^tand their envy, is now perished; ^uneither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the sun.

7 Go thy way, ^xeat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for⁶ God now accepteth thy works. ^yLet thy garments be always white;⁷ ^zand let thy head lack no ointment. ^aLive joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the sun, all the days of thy vanity: ^bfor that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takest under the sun. Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might;⁸ ^cfor there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

Further application of wisdom to the various circumstances of life.

11 ^dI RETURNED,⁹ ^eand saw under the sun, that the race is not to the swift,¹⁰ nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill;¹¹ ^fbut time and chance¹² happeneth to them all. For ^gman also knoweth not his time:¹³ as the fishes that are taken in an evil net, ^hand as the birds that are caught in the snare; so are the sons of men ⁱsnared in an evil time, when it falleth suddenly upon them.

13 This wisdom have I seen also under the sun, and it seemed great unto me:¹⁴ ^kThere was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king against it, and besieged it, and built great bulwarks against it. Now there was found in it a poor wise man, and he by his wisdom delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man. ^lThen said I, Wisdom is better than strength: nevertheless ^mthe poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard.

17 The words of wise men are heard in quiet More than the cry of him that ruleth among fools.¹⁵

18 ⁿWisdom is better than weapons of war:—but ^oone sinner destroyeth much good.¹⁶

10 Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary¹⁷ to send forth a stinking savour: So doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

^o Jos. 7. 1, 5, 11, 12; 22.

20; Heb. 12. 15.

² That is, who swears lightly and falsely; while 'he that feareth an oath' is one who takes it seriously and keeps it faithfully.

³ Rather, 'For who is there that is chosen out (i. e. excepted)? To all the living there is hope: a living dog is better than a dead lion.' However wretched a living man may be, he still has this advantage over the dead, that he can hope for a change for the better. A 'dog' is put (as is frequently done in Eastern phraseology) for the vilest, and a 'lion' for the noblest of beasts.

⁴ If they know nothing else, they know this; whereas the dead 'know not anything.'

⁵ Any further advantage.

⁶ The use of God's earthly bounties here recommended is not that of the worldling, but is connected with a present enjoyment of God's blessing.

⁷ White garments and perfumed oil were signs of festivity amongst the Hebrews.

⁸ Whatever appears to thee desirable or important to be done, do it promptly and earnestly, remembering that the period for doing it will soon have passed for ever.

⁹ Solomon, after acknowledging, as before, that there are exceptions to his statements (vers. 11, 12), gives new illustrations of the value of wisdom and the mischief of folly (ch. ix. 13—x. 20), and adds some counsels adapted to various parts of his previous remarks (ch. xi. 1—6).

¹⁰ Wisdom and energy often fail of success in temporal things.

¹¹ That is, the esteem and respect of mankind are not always gained by such men; sometimes neglect, envy, and contempt are their portion.

¹³ Calamity and death come upon him as if by chance (ver. 11); as unexpectedly as destruction by the arts of the angler or the fowler does upon fishes and birds.

¹⁴ Or, 'This also have I seen, [even] wisdom under the sun, and it seemed great unto me.' The 'wisdom' is that of the poor man in ver. 15; and the whole illustrates (ver. 16) both the value of wisdom, and the maxim of ver. 11, that 'favour' is not 'to men of skill.'

¹⁵ Rather, 'The words of wise men heard in quiet [are better] than the outcry of a ruler among fools,' i. e. a foolish ruler. The 'poor wise man' (ver. 15) seems to be still thought of.

¹⁷ Rather, 'the fragrant oil of the perfumer.' A small offensive matter which might not be noticed in other things would be very disagreeable in this: so a slight indiscretion which would pass without observation in

- 2 A wise man's heart is at his right hand;¹—but a fool's heart at his left.
- 3 Yea also, when he that is a fool walketh by the way,²
His wisdom faileth him,—³ and he saith to every one, that he is a fool.
- 4 If the spirit of the ruler rise up against thee, ⁴leave not thy place;³
For ⁵yielding pacifieth great offences.
- 5 There is an evil which I have seen under the sun, ⁶As an error⁴ which proceedeth from the ruler:
- 6 ⁷Folly is set in great dignity,—and the rich⁵ sit in low place.
- 7 I have seen servants ⁸upon horses,⁶
And princes walking as servants upon the earth.
- 8 ⁹He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it;
And whoso breaketh an hedge,⁷ a serpent shall bite him.
- 9 Whoso removeth stones shall be hurt therewith;
And he that cleaveth wood shall be endangered thereby.⁸
- 10 If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then must he put to more strength:
⁹But wisdom is profitable to direct.⁹
- 11 Surely the serpent will bite ¹⁰without enchantment;¹⁰—and a babbler is no better.
- 12 ¹¹The words of a wise man's mouth are gracious;¹¹
But ¹²the lips of a fool will swallow up himself:
- 13 The beginning of the words of his mouth is foolishness:
And the end of his talk is mischievous madness.
- 14 ¹³A fool also is full of words:
A man cannot tell what shall be;
And ¹⁴what shall be after him,¹² who can tell him?
- 15 ¹⁵The labour of the foolish wearieth every one of them,
Because he knoweth not how to go to the city.¹³
- 16 ¹⁶Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child,¹⁴
And thy princes eat in the morning!¹⁵
- 17 Blessed art thou, O land, when thy king is the son of nobles,¹⁶
And ¹⁷thy princes eat in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenness!
- 18 ¹⁸By much slothfulness the building decayeth;
And through idleness of the hands the house droppeth through.¹⁷
- 19 A feast is made for laughter, and ¹⁹wine maketh merry:
²⁰But money answereth all things.¹⁸

other men would be marked in a wise man. This maxim applies very forcibly to the Christian, whose profession should be without a blemish.

1 The right hand, being more used, is more quick and apt than the left. So a wise man can use his thoughts promptly and aptly; whilst a fool is confused and unable to act.

2 He exhibits his folly in his most ordinary actions.

3 See ch. viii. 3, and note.

4 Or, 'An error which proceedeth;' i. e. the promotion of unsuitable persons (ver. 6).

5 This may mean either the noble, i. e. in birth, accomplishments, or character; or those who were previously rich. Under the despotisms of the East, the sudden elevation of persons in a low condition, and the degradation of those who had held high rank with a view to the confiscation of their property, are very frequent.

6 Solomon first introduced among the Hebrews the use of horses, which are often mentioned afterwards as appendages of rank. See Esth. vi. 8, 9; Jer. xvii. 25; Ezek. xxiii. 12.

7 Rather, 'fence.' Vers. 8, 9 refer to various modes of injuring others (see Gen. xlix. 6; 2 Kings iii. 19, 25; Prov. xxvi. 27), which are here represented as recoiling upon the perpetrators. Wisdom teaches a man that what does harm to another will in the end be mischievous to himself.

8 Or, 'He that cleaveth trees shall be impoverished thereby.' Whole tribes have sometimes been reduced to poverty and famine in consequence of the destruction of their date-trees by a malignant invader.

9 Rather, 'to give success.' Science and skill often save hard labour, as well as much time and money.

10 Rather, 'If the serpent bite because he is not charmed, then there is no advantage to the master of the tongue' (i. e. the charmer). An enchanter must be quick in his art, or the serpent will bite before his song has lulled it. So a wise man will be prompt.

11 That is, they are conciliatory; whereas the fool's words are provoking, and lead on from folly to rage (ver. 13), which will end in mischief to himself and others.

12 Perhaps this should be, 'after that.' Although man knows not what is soon to happen, and still less what is to happen after that, the fool indulges in confident predictions respecting it.

13 That is, he cannot find out the broad and frequented highway, and therefore goes a long way round to get to his object.

14 That is, when he is deficient in wisdom, experience, and skill.

15 The morning repast of the Orientals is very light, consisting of fruit, milk, cheese, etc.: their principal meal being late in the afternoon. Therefore to eat, i. e. to feast, in the morning was regarded as luxurious and intemperate, and as wasting time which ought to be devoted to business.

16 And therefore educated in the knowledge of the duties of his high station.

17 That is, it lets in the water. The roofs of Oriental houses, being often made of straw and dried clay, need frequent repairs.

18 This appears to be a recommendation of diligence, which procures money; by which again other things are obtained.

And curse not the rich ^m in thy bedchamber :

And that which hath wings shall tell the matter.

And he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

¹ A strong proverbial expression, indicating the strange and unexpected way in which secrets often come out. Detraction even of those who seem most removed from us may reach their ears.

² The object of vers. 1—3 appears to be, not to recommend generosity on its own account, but to show its connection with wisdom, inasmuch as liberality to those who cannot repay, though it appears like casting bread upon the waters, is never lost. Some suppose that there is an allusion to the practice in Egypt of sowing the seed before the waters of the Nile, after overflowing the country, have entirely receded to their channel.

³ 'Seven' is a number of completeness ; and therefore this is a command to be most extensively liberal. The expression, 'Give a portion,' is perhaps borrowed from the practice of distributing food to the needy on festive occasions (Neh. viii. 10 ; Esth. ix. 22).

⁶ There is some difficulty in determining the meaning of these words in their connection, but most likely it is this : 'In whatever quarter thy bounty is dispersed, there thou shalt find it again.'

⁷ As the husbandman who refuses to sow or to reap, unless the weather be in all respects favourable, will not prosper ; so the man who waits for objects and seasons of beneficence precisely such as he would desire will be likely to live in vain.

⁸ The Preacher is still enforcing his exhortation to benevolence. Because we know so little of the future purposes of God respecting both ourselves and others, every present opportunity of doing good should be diligently improved.

¹⁰ Solomon having described the uses of wisdom in making the best of our earthly life, so as to make 'light sweet, and the beholding of the sun pleasant,' even though all be vanity, proceeds next (ch. xi. 7—xii. 7) to set forth the last and highest use of wisdom on earth, in giving due consideration to approaching infirmity, death, and judgment. From all of which he derives the important conclusion, that man's chief wisdom and life's chief solace are to be found in the fear of God. In this portion of the book the language becomes highly poetical, and the religious tone and teaching are more decided and full.

¹¹ That is, days of suffering and sorrow. The man who never anticipates trouble will be ill prepared to meet it when it comes. Happy is he who, in the midst of outward darkness, possesses the light and comfort of Divine wisdom.

¹² This may be the language of solemn irony : or it may be designed as a repetition of previous exhortations, reminding the young man that all the enjoyments of this life, of which his age is peculiarly susceptible, should be such as shall be consistent with the constant remembrance of his accountability to God.

¹³ 'Sorrow' is put for the cause of sorrow. Live not so as to bring sorrow upon thyself in the future.

¹⁴ Rather, 'Remember, I pray, thy Creator,' etc. : see note on Ps. cxvi. 14. Religion is the most effectual preservative of youth, and the best preparative for infirmity and age.

- 2 'While the sun, or the light, or the moon, or the stars, be not darkened,¹
Nor the clouds return after the rain :²
- 3 In the day when the keepers of the house³ shall tremble,
And the strong men shall bow themselves,
And the grinders cease because they are few,
And those that look out of the windows be darkened,
- 4 And the doors shall be shut in the streets,—when the sound of the grinding is low,
And he shall rise up at the voice of the bird,⁴
And all ^mthe daughters of music shall be brought low ;
- 5 Also when they shall be afraid of that which is high,
And fears shall be in the way,
And the almond tree shall flourish,⁵—and the grasshopper shall be a burden,
And desire shall fail : because man goeth ⁿto his long home,⁶
And ^othe mourners⁷ go about the streets :
- 6 Or ever the silver cord be loosed,⁸—or the golden bowl be broken,
Or the pitcher be broken at the fountain,—or the wheel broken at the cistern.
- 7 ^pThen shall the dust return to the earth as it was :
^qAnd the spirit shall return unto God ^rwho gave it.⁹

Practical conclusions from the whole.

- 8 ^sVANITY of vanities,¹⁰ saith the Preacher ; all is vanity.
- 9 And moreover, because the Preacher was wise, ^the still taught the people knowledge ; yea, he gave good heed, and sought out, and ^uset in order many proverbs. ^vThe Preacher sought to find out acceptable words : and that which
- 11 was written was upright, even words of truth.¹¹ The words of the wise are ^was goads,¹² and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies,¹³ which are given
- 12 from ^xone shepherd. And further, ^yby these,¹⁴ my son, be admonished : of making many books there is no end ; and ^zmuch study is a weariness of the flesh.
- 13 Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter : ^aFear God, and keep his
- 14 commandments : ^bfor this is the whole duty of man.¹⁵ For ^cGod shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

¹ All this (vers. 2—5) is a highly figurative and very beautiful description of the troubles and infirmities of old age. The images in the former part of this verse set forth the general gloom and insensibility to joy by which it is usually characterized.

² The cheerfulness of youth throws off one trouble long before another comes ; but the intervals are very short between the clouds which darken the wintry sky of old age.

³ The body is compared to a house which is falling to ruin. The arms which guard, and the legs which support it are palsied ; the teeth, the eyes, and the lips lose their power ; the voice is weak and unmusical (ver. 4) ; the steep hill and the thronged road are dreaded ; and nothing can stimulate or please the worn-out senses (ver. 5).

⁵ The white blossom of the almond-tree represents very significantly the hoary head of the old man. Or the words may be better rendered, 'The almond occasions loathing ;' i. e. this delicate fruit gives no pleasure to the old man ; whilst 'the locust,' which every one else can eat, is a 'burden,' a disgust to him.

⁶ Man occupies his grave longer than any house in which he lived.

⁷ Mourners were hired to bewail the deceased : see refs.

⁹ The inspired Preacher was no materialist. He did not consider the soul as of the same substance as the body ; but he knew that the body is only the organ of the indwelling spirit ; and that the soul, though acting by means of the body while connected with it, is yet capable of separate existence and activity.

¹² Urging men to wisdom and virtue.

¹³ Rather, 'and as nails driven in are the masters of assemblies [which] are given from one Shepherd' (or teacher). The teachings of such men make a deep and lasting impression ; and to them Solomon compares his instructions in this book, which he says have been suggested and inspired by one Teacher, i. e. by God himself.

¹⁵ Or, 'For this is [the duty of] every man.' Without true practical piety no man can be happy, whatever be his rank or advantages ; with it, he who has little earthly good may possess a pure and real blessedness. Such was the experience and teaching of this wisest of the ancients. The same truth is, in every variety of form, taught by Him who is 'greater than Solomon ;' and who not only illustrated and enforced all his precepts by his own perfect example, but himself opened for us the closed gates of paradise.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON.

THE name given to this book in the title (ch. i. 1) signifies 'the most excellent song;' and evidently represents it as being not a collection of separate poems or idyls, as some have thought, but a single composition. And a close acquaintance with its contents confirms this testimony to its excellence and its unity.

The title also agrees with all ancient writers on the subject in ascribing this poem to Solomon; and this too is corroborated by internal evidence. The allusions to David's tower (ch. iv. 4), to Solomon's couch, or palanquin (ch. iii. 7, 9), and to his vineyard in Baal-hamon (ch. viii. 11), indicate a writer familiar with that age. Rare and precious articles of luxury are also mentioned. Objects of interest to the naturalist are often referred to; not less than twenty different names of plants, and thirteen of animals, being found in these few pages. An intimate acquaintance is displayed with various parts of the land from Egypt to Damascus; whilst the beauties of Tirzah, Gilead, and Heshbon, and the grandeur of Lebanon and Hermon, are alluded to in language which shows that they are fully appreciated. All this is just what might naturally be expected if Solomon were the author. In addition to this, the reference to his mother, in ch. iii. 11, and a comparison of ch. vi. 8 with 1 Kings xi. 3, seem to connect the poem with the earlier part of his reign, when Bathsheba was still living, and when his harem was less extensive than it became in his later years of unbounded indulgence.

The burden of this Song is the mutual affection and endearments of the marriage relation. Solomon places himself before us as a bridegroom with his bride, in all the warmth and freshness of their newly-formed connection. Those who assign to the poem an historical origin suppose the bride to be either Pharaoh's daughter (1 Kings iii. 1), or a native of Palestine, of lower but still of noble rank. But there is so little in it that is distinctive of any individual, that it is difficult to believe it to have been composed either solely or chiefly with a view to any particular nuptial festivity. In part it resembles a pastoral, in part a drama, in part an epithalamium, or nuptial song; yet it is not properly either of these. The peculiarity of its construction, and the generality of its references, seem to intimate that it sprang from, and is intended to lead to, a contemplation of the subject apart from personal application, and in its highest and most important bearings.

Undoubtedly the Song of Songs may be viewed as a beautiful exhibition of the legitimate exercise of that merely human love which our Creator has implanted in our nature, and has recognised and sanctioned in the institution of marriage, which is declared to be 'honourable in all.' Yet, if this were the main object of the poem, it might well be expected that frequent reference would be made to those abuses of which Solomon himself affords so striking an example. We are therefore led to look for some other design.

On examining the word of God, we find numerous passages in which the marriage relation is used to represent the connection between Jehovah and his chosen people. Soon after he had graciously entered into covenant with the Israelites at Sinai, he speaks of the sin of forsaking his worship for that of false gods as unfaithfulness to the bonds of marriage (Exod. xxxiv. 15, 16; Lev. xvii. 7; xx. 5; Deut. xxxi. 16); and he continues to use the same figure in Judges and the later books. This metaphor reappears with great amplification, and often in more pleasing forms, in the prophetic writings (Isa. liv. 5; lxii. 5; Jer. iii. 20; xxxi. 32; Hos. ii. 2, 7). It was therefore evidently familiar to the minds of the Hebrews; so much so indeed, that the metaphorical language is often used without any intimation that it is not to be taken literally; and some of the words relating to the violation of the marriage covenant are employed even more frequently in a figurative sense than in their literal meaning. Hence it was not improbable that the love of Jehovah to his people should be represented in a longer allegorical poem, nor was it necessary that any explanation of such a purpose should be interwoven or appended. Accordingly, the Jews have always so understood the Song of Solomon. The ancient book Zohar, the Chaldee Targum, and later Jewish commentators, explain it in this way. Such an application, moreover, is in perfect harmony with another inspired poem, Psal. xlv.; and it is in accordance with the practice which has prevailed universally in the East, even to the present day, of expressing love to the Creator in the language of this human passion. And this mode of representation does not stop with the Old Testament. The relation of Jehovah to the Hebrew nation having been designed to foreshadow his connection with his spiritual church, it naturally supplies the writers of the New Testament with language most appropriate to exhibit the relation between our Lord and his people. Thus Jehovah was David's shepherd (Psal. xxiii.); Jesus is ours (John x. 11, 14). And thus also Christ is the bridegroom, and the church his bride (2 Cor. xi. 2; Eph. v. 23—27; Rev. xxi. 2). Accordingly, Christian commentators in every age have regarded this poem as aptly expressing the mutual love of the Saviour and his church, and as fitly representing the closeness and perpetuity of the union which subsists between them.

And when it is regarded in this light, it will appear to be a valuable portion of Divine truth; more suitable to the habits of thought and feeling of some persons than of others, but peculiarly adapted to enliven the religious emotions of no inconsiderable portion of the people of God.

Much caution, however, is needed in using this book; for its language and thoughts have been often misunderstood and misapplied by expositors. Some have greatly erred by adopting an arbitrary and fanciful method of explanation—attempting to give a mystical meaning to every minute circumstance in the allegory. But it must be borne in mind that in a figurative representation there is always much which is to be regarded as mere costume and ornament, added to complete the picture. We are not to expect to find in the spiritual objects represented a literal counterpart to every portion of the allegory; but we should rather unite all the single features into one general image, and then contemplate the sentiment or truth thus illustrated. And it should ever be remembered, that while we have the practice of the church in all ages, and the judgment of eminent expositors, in favour of the proper application of this Song to evangelical subjects, the true knowledge of Christ and of heavenly things is to be chiefly sought by us in the New Testament, where it is plainly and fully imparted. It must also not be forgotten, that although many have applied the metaphor here employed to the relation subsisting between Christ and the individual believer, on the principle that what is true of the whole body is in some measure true of every member, yet such an application of the figure is never found in the Scriptures.

Some portions of this book have been regarded as unnatural, and others have been objected to as wanting in delicacy. These objections, however, are owing partly to defects in the translation of particular passages, and partly to ignorance or forgetfulness of the great difference which exists between Oriental customs and Oriental poetry, and those of Europe. See notes on ch. iv. 1, 12; v. 11; vii. 2.

This poem is in the form of a dialogue; the chief speakers being Solomon and his bride, with the occasional interposition of female attendants, and perhaps of other spectators. But it is not easy to mark the divisions; the point of transition from one subject to another being not always very perceptible. Some find here twelve idyls, others eight songs. Others again divide it into seven days, corresponding to the days of a marriage feast. But perhaps it is best to divide it into four principal portions:—

Part I. The bride desires the society of her husband, whom she seeks and finds in his rural retreat: after mutual expressions of affection she falls asleep, and dreams of him (ch. i.—iii. 5). This portion of the poem was probably designed to exhibit the desire of the church for the coming of the Lord.

Part II. introduces a grand royal marriage procession to Jerusalem, followed by the private endearments of the bridegroom and the bride, who then return to the marriage feast (ch. iii. 6—v. 1). In this part the glory of Christ and of his church, and his delight in his people, seem to be the subject.

Part III. darkens the picture by introducing the indifference of the bride to her husband, followed by her repentance, her anxious search, her sufferings, and at last her restoration to the happy enjoyment of his society and affection, in the very place where she had found him before (ch. v. 2—viii. 4). This evidently displays in an affecting manner the declension of piety in the church, and its attendant sorrows, in contrast with the forgiving grace of the Redeemer, and the happiness of restoration to his favour.

Part IV. shows us the bride, notwithstanding the opposition of her family, finally separating herself from them, and devoting herself and all she has to her husband (ch. viii. 5—14). This seems to depict the entire separation of the church from the world, and its perfect consecration to the love and service of its Lord.

The bride's desire for and delight in the society of her husband.

1 In the first part of the poem (comprising ch. i.—iii. 5), the scene is laid in Solomon's gardens; and all the illustrations are derived from rural subjects and occupations. A company of virgins express their admiration of the king, and their desire to share in his love (vers. 2—4). The bride then speaks, excusing her rustic, dark complexion, and longing to know where she may find her bridegroom (5—7), to whom the virgins direct her (8). Having found her husband, she is heard interchanging with him expressions of mutual tenderness; until, overcome by her search and her emotions, she falls asleep (i. 9—ii. 7). She has varied dreams, in which she converses with him from the lattice of her pavilion (ii. 8—17); and then, missing him by night, seeks and finds him (iii. 1—5). The feelings here expressed are chiefly eager longings, as yet only partially gratified. This part of the poem may therefore be supposed to represent the ancient Jewish church anticipating the fuller display and enjoyment of Divine love when the promised Messiah should appear. See Matt. xiii. 16; Luke ii. 25, 38; x. 23, 24. Hence it may be appropriately used to express and to enliven the desires which the church now cherishes for the second coming of her Lord. Comp. 1 Thess. i. 10; 2 Thess. i. 10; 2 Pet. iii. 11—14; Rev. xxi. 2, 9; xxii. 20. And such a state of expectation is shown to admit of much present happiness in the delightful manifestations of the Saviour's love (ch. i. 9—ii. 6).

2 That is, delightful as the fragrance of perfumes just poured out. See John xii. 3.

3 Rather, 'They love thee rightly.'

4 See Gen. xxv. 13; Psa. cxx. 5. The Arabs still use dark-coloured tents, covered with a coarse canvass made from the hair of their black goats.

5 Royal personages in the East are accustomed to have the interior of their tents furnished with most costly and beautiful hangings.

6 The bride had been subjected by her step-brothers to coarse and rustic toil.

7 That is, my personal beauty. See ch. viii. 12.

8 During the heat of the day, the shepherds usually lead their flocks to repose in the shade. The bridegroom being spoken of as a shepherd, in accordance with the figures of the scene, the inquiry and reply naturally take this form.

9 That is, regarded as a harlot. See Gen. xxxviii. 14, 15. Some, however, prefer translating the word, 'as one that faints;' i. e. wearied in searching for my husband.

10 Rather, 'to my Pharaoh's chariot-horse.' The high value set upon the horse, and the costly trappings with which it was adorned, made it a fit subject for a highly complimentary comparison.

1 The words 'jewels' and 'gold' have been supplied by our translators. The 'rows' and 'chains' probably refer to the head-gear of the chariot-horse, which appears, from Egyptian and Assyrian monuments, to have been very splendid. So the bridegroom promises to adorn his bride with splendid gold and silver ornaments (ver. 11).

2 Or, 'rows,' as in ver. 10, perhaps 'chains.'

3 Literally, 'while the king is in his circle;' perhaps alluding to the divan or raised couch surrounding a room.

4 Or, 'It shall abide between my breasts;' an allusion to the custom of wearing some precious perfume suspended from the neck.

5 Heb., 'copher;' probably the henna shrub (lawsonia inermis), the flowers of which are both beautiful and fragrant. Its leaves also yield a deep orange dye, with which the Orientals tinge their nails, parts of their hands and feet, and sometimes their hair.

6 See note on 1 Sam. xxiv. 1. Engedi was, and still is, a very fertile spot.

7 Rather, 'thine eyes are doves;' i. e. loving, gentle.

8 Rather, 'our couch is green; the beams of our house are cedars, our rafters cypresses;' referring to the trees overhanging the grass.

9 Continuing the preceding figures, the bride compares herself to the flowers among the grass. The 'rose' is a bulbous plant—probably the narcissus tazetta, which grows abundantly in Palestine, and is highly valued.

10 From ch. v. 13, this appears to have been a bright red flower, probably the scarlet martagon, whose brilliant flowers attract the notice of travellers in Palestine, in the months of April and May.

11 This was probably either the quince, or the citron-tree, the fruit of which is much esteemed by the Orientals on account of its scent.

12 The bridegroom is still spoken of as a tree, whose shade, as well as its fruit, is delightfully refreshing.

13 As soldiers are led onward by the standard borne above them, so I was led on by love to my husband. The whole verse is figurative, representing the strong excitement and irresistible impulse of the bride's affection.

14 Or, 'gazelles.' These elegant creatures are mentioned here as emblems of female beauty.

15 Rather, 'till she please.' The verb is feminine.

16 Some suppose that this is the commencement of a new poem or scene: but see the Preface, and note on ch. i. 2. A dream, of course, begins abruptly.

17 Or, 'bounding over the hills;' like a hart (ver. 9).

18 See note on 2 Sam. i. 19.

19 Or, 'beyond our wall.'

20 Rather, 'through the windows.' The bride fancies herself to be in an arbour, or kiosk, built on the garden wall, through the lattice of which her bridegroom looks in and invites her to come with him.

21 Or, 'The fig tree is sweetening her green figs; the blossoming vine sends forth its fragrance.'

In the secret places of the stairs,¹
Let me see thy countenance,—^l let me hear thy voice ;
For sweet is thy voice,—^m and thy countenance is comely.

15 Take us ⁿ the foxes,² the little foxes, that spoil the vines :

16 ^o My beloved is mine, and I am his :—he feedeth³ among the lilies.

17 ^p Until the day break,—and the shadows flee away,⁴
Turn, my beloved,—and be thou ^q like a roe or a young hart
Upon the mountains of Bethel [or, of division⁵].

3 By ^r night on my bed—I sought ^s him whom my soul loveth :
^t I sought him, but I found him not.

2 ^u I will rise now,—and go about the city
In the streets, and in the broad ways—I will seek him whom my soul loveth :
^v I sought him, but I found him not.

3 ^y The watchmen that go about the city found me :
To whom I said, ^z Saw ye him⁶ whom my soul loveth ?

4 It was but a little that I passed from them,
^a But I found him whom my soul loveth :
^b I held him,—and would not let him go,
Until I had brought him—into my mother's house,
And into the chamber of her that conceived me.

5 ^c I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem,
By the roes, and by the hinds of the field,
That ye stir not up,—nor awake my love,—till he please.⁷

The marriage procession ; the delight of the bridegroom in his bride.

6 ^d WHO is this⁸ that cometh out of the wilderness⁹—like pillars of smoke,¹⁰
^e Perfumed with myrrh and frankincense,—with all powders¹¹ of the merchant ?

7 Behold ^f his bed,¹² which is Solomon's ;
Threescore valiant men are ^g about it,—of the valiant of Israel.

8 They all hold swords,¹³—being expert in war :
Every man hath his sword upon his thigh—^h because of fear in the night.

9 King Solomon made himself a chariot of the wood of Lebanon.

10 He made ⁱ the pillars thereof of silver,
The bottom thereof of gold,—the covering of it of purple,
The midst thereof being paved with love,—for the daughters of Jerusalem.¹⁴

11 Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion,—^k and behold king Solomon,
With the crown¹⁵ wherewith his mother crowned him,
In the day of his espousals,—and in ^l the day of the gladness of his heart.

4 Behold, ^m thou art fair, my love ; behold, thou art fair ;
Thou hast doves' eyes¹⁶ within thy locks :¹⁷
Thy hair is as a ⁿ flock of goats,¹⁸—that appear from mount Gilead.

1 Rather, 'the hiding-places of the precipices.' He complains that, like a dove on a high cliff, she is inaccessible to him.

2 This is an address from the bride to her husband. Foxes abound in Judea, and do much injury to vineyards and gardens.

3 This means, 'he feeds his flock.' See ch. i. 7.

4 Rather, 'Until the day breathes (i. e. is cool), and the shadows flee away' (i. e. stretch away or lengthen) ; meaning the evening. And so in ch. iv. 6.

5 'The mountains which separate us.' Or, perhaps, the same as Bithron, in 2 Sam. ii. 29.

6 In the warmth of her feeling, she forgets that others may not know who is the object of her affection.

7 Rather, 'till she please ;' as in ch. ii. 7, and ch. viii. 4.

8 The Hebrew words rendered 'this' and 'perfumed' are in the feminine gender, referring to the bride. This is the beginning of Part II., which brings before us a royal marriage procession, in a description by an eyewitness, of the king and his bride approaching Jerusalem (ch. iii. 6—11), followed by a private scene of mutual endearment (iv. 1—v. 1), ending abruptly in the return to the marriage feast (v. 1, last clause). This second division of the poem appears to be designed to celebrate the glory which the church expected to share with the Messiah when he should come to reign, and the delight which he would take in his people, as well as their happiness in him. Comp. Isa. lii. 1—12 ; liv. lx.—lxii. These are partially realized in the present privileges of the church ; but they await their complete fulfilment in its future glory and blessedness. Comp. John xiv. 1—4 ; xvii. 24 ; Rev. vii. 14—17.

9 Probably from the south-east, the direction in which the wilderness lay.

10 Alluding probably to the incense which was burnt before a marriage procession.

11 That is, costly aromatic powders.

12 Or, 'couch ;' probably a kind of litter or palanquin, borne upon men's shoulders.

13 Or, 'are strengthened with a sword ;' i. e. armed with swords.

14 Or, 'Its interior carpeted [by the work of] a lovely one of the daughters of Jerusalem.'

15 It was usual to place crowns or garlands on the heads of newly-married persons ; and it appears from this verse that this was done by one of the parents.

16 'Thine eyes are doves.' See ch. i. 15.

17 Or, 'behind thy veil.' And so in ver. 3.

18 In reading these descriptions, it must be remembered that the figures of Eastern poetry are peculiarly bold and luxuriant. Here the dark hair of the bride, hanging down in tresses over her shoulders, is compared to a flock of goats (which in Palestine are almost always black) spread over Mount Gilead.

1 This figure represents the whiteness and completeness of the teeth.

2 Rather, 'the place of speech;' i. e. thy mouth.

3 Or, 'cheeks.' Their ruddy hue is compared to the beautiful red colour which the pomegranate presents when divided.

4 This was probably a lofty and elegant tower, built of white lime-stone. It was customary on the outside of towers to hang shields (Ezek. xxvii. 10, 11). This allusion is suggested by the bride's necklace of jewels.

5 See note on ch. ii. 17.

6 Hills on which aromatic shrubs grew abundantly.

7 'Amana,' or 'Abana,' was probably the name of a part of Shenir or Hermon, from which the river of the same name flowed to Damascus. See Deut. iii. 9; 2 Kings v. 12. On these hills lions were formerly found, and the Syrian panther (or 'leopard') still roams.

8 In vers. 12—15, the personal charms of the bride are compared to a garden with its choicest productions, and to a spring with its refreshing streams, which were indispensable to a garden. These may be described as being 'enclosed' and 'sealed,' with reference either to the bride's modesty and chastity, or to the strict seclusion in which her husband would keep one whom he so much loved. In those parts of the East where this seclusion is practised, the ladies speak of it rather as a proof of the high estimation in which they are held, and a mark of affectionate care, than as an unkind restraint upon them.

9 Like one of those mountain streams which diffuse life, fertility, and beauty where they flow.

10 The bride replies to her husband's praises, desiring that he may have the fullest enjoyment of that which he so much admires.

11 The breezes diffuse the fragrance which hangs heavily about the plants.

12 Coming out of the bride's apartments to the guests at the marriage feast, the bridegroom bids them join him in festivity.

13 Part III. contains (perhaps in a dream) the bride's confession of her unkindness to her husband, and her complaint of her anxious and disappointing search for him, in which she was ill-treated by the night-guards of the city (ch. v. 2—8). She describes the object of her affection, and the place where she hopes to find him (v. 9—vi. 3). There she is welcomed again by him; and a scene of mutual endearment ensues, in which Solomon gives her a name derived from his own; and she again, overcome by her various emotions, falls asleep (vi. 4—viii. 4). This is, perhaps, the most affecting portion of the poem; representing the church as having lost its 'first love' (Rev. ii. 4), but as awaking to a sense of its guilt and loss, seeking the restoration of its holy joy, and received again into favour according to the promise of Divine mercy (Hos. xiv.) The church in its various branches, throughout the different periods of its existence, has afforded too many illustrations of this sin.

- ^b Open to me, my sister, my love,—^c my dove, ^d my undefiled:
^e For my head is filled with dew,—and my locks with the drops of the night.
- 3 ^f I have put off my coat;—how shall I put it on?
 I have washed my feet;—how shall I defile them?
- 4 ^g My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door,¹
 And my bowels were moved for him.
- 5 ^h I rose up to open to my beloved;—and my hands dropped with myrrh,²
 And my fingers with sweet smelling myrrh, upon the handles of the lock.
- 6 I opened to my beloved;—ⁱ but my beloved had withdrawn himself, and was gone:
^k My soul failed³ when he spake:
^l I sought him, but I could not find him;
^m I called him, but he gave me no answer.
- 7 ⁿ The watchmen that went about the city found me,
^o They smote me, they wounded me;⁴
 The keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.
- 8 ^p I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem,
^q If ye find my beloved,—that ye tell him, ^r that I am sick of love.
- 9 What is thy beloved more than another beloved,⁵
^s O thou fairest among women?
 What is thy beloved more than another beloved,—that thou dost so charge us?
- 10 'My beloved is white and ruddy,—^t the chiefest among ten thousand.
 11 ^u His head is as the most fine gold,⁶—his locks are bushy, and black as a raven.
 12 ^v His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, Washed with milk, and fitly set.⁷
- 13 His cheeks are as a bed of spices,—as sweet flowers:
^z His lips like lilies, dropping sweet smelling myrrh.
- 14 His hands are as gold rings set with the beryl:

- 15 His legs are as pillars of marble,—set upon sockets⁹ of fine gold:
^a His countenance¹⁰ is ^b as Lebanon,—excellent as the cedars.
- 16 ^c His mouth is most sweet:—yea, he is altogether lovely.
 This is ^d my beloved,—and this is my friend,—O daughters of Jerusalem.
- 6 Whither is thy beloved¹¹ gone,—^e O thou fairest among women?
 Whither is thy beloved turned aside?—^f that we may seek him with thee.
- 2 ^g My beloved ^h is gone down into his garden,
 To the beds of spices,—to feed in the gardens,—ⁱ and to gather lilies.
- 3 ^k I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine:—he feedeth among the lilies.
- 4 'Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah,¹²
^m Comely as Jerusalem, ⁿ terrible as *an army*¹³ with banners.
- 5 ^o Turn away thine eyes from me,—for they have overcome me:
 Thy hair is ^p as a flock of goats that appear from Gilead.
- 6 ^q Thy teeth are as a flock of sheep which go up from the washing,
 Whereof every one beareth twins,—and there is not one barren among them.
- 7 ^r As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples within thy locks.

1 Through which a person might thrust his arm to open the door. He naturally expected to be able to unfasten the door; but it appears to have been purposely secured by an additional fastening.

2 To her repentant feelings the dew (ver. 2) which her husband's hands had left on the door seemed like the choicest myrrh.

3 Probably this means, 'I was out of my senses when he spoke.' I acted foolishly in not admitting him.

4 They treated me as an abandoned woman. The same thing is intimated by the taking away of the veil, which is one of the greatest indignities that can be inflicted on a woman in Eastern countries.

5 This inquiry of the daughters of Jerusalem, suggested by the bride's passionate adjuration to them, is skilfully introduced by the poet, to lead to the description which immediately follows.

6 In the following descriptions, it must be remembered that, whilst those parts of the person which custom exposed to view are described, as to those parts which custom conceals it is only the dress which is referred to. In this verse the comparison is evidently incongruous if applied to the bare head; but its propriety becomes apparent when it is understood as alluding to the spangled turban or head-dress, below which the thick 'raven' locks hang clustering.

7 Rather, 'His eyes are doves by streams of water, washed with milk, dwelling in fulness.' This latter clause applies to the doves. The whole is meant to depict the soft, loving expression of the full, dark eyes.

8 Rather, 'His body is shining ivory, wrapped with sapphires;' referring to the white robe of royalty, and the bright-coloured girdle.

9 Or, 'pedestals;' denoting the richly ornamented sandals.

10 Rather, 'his aspect;' a bold and noble metaphor, to represent the manly dignity of his appearance.

11 This inquiry leads towards the scene of reconciliation.

12 See note on 1 Kings xiv. 17.

13 This figure, which is carried out in the next verse, represents the power of the bride's charms in captivating the hearts of those who beheld her. The praises which follow are the same as in ch. iv. 1–3.

- 8 ^s There are threescore queens,¹ and fourscore concubines,
And virgins without number.
- 9 ^t My dove, my undefiled is but ^u one;—she is the only one of her mother,
She is the choice one of her that bare her.
^x The daughters saw her, and blessed her;
Yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praised her.
- 10 ^y Who is she that looketh forth as the morning,
Fair ^z as the moon, ^a clear as the sun,—^b and terrible as an army with banners?
- 11 I went down into ^c the garden of nuts—^d to see the fruits of the valley,
And ^e to see whether the vine flourished,—and the pomegranates budded.
- 12 Or ever I was aware,—^f my soul made me like the chariots of Ammi-nadib.²
- 13 ^g Return, return,³ O Shulamite; ^h—return, return,
That we⁵ may look upon thee.
ⁱ What will ye see in the Shulamite?
As it were the company ^j of two armies.⁶
- 7 How beautiful are ^k thy feet with shoes,^{7—m} O prince's daughter!
The joints of thy thighs are like jewels,
The work of the hands of a cunning workman.
- 2 Thy navel is like a round goblet, which wanteth not liquor;⁸
Thy belly⁹ is like an heap of wheat set about with lilies.
- 3 ⁿ Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins.
- 4 ^o Thy neck is as a tower of ivory;
Thine eyes like the fishpools¹⁰ in Heshbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim:
Thy nose is as the tower of Lebanon which looketh toward Damascus.
- 5 Thine head upon thee is like Carmel,
And the hair of thine head like purple;^{11—p} the king is held in the galleries.¹²
- 6 ^q How fair and how pleasant art thou, O love, for delights!
- 7 ^r This thy stature is like to a palm tree,¹³—and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.¹⁴
- 8 ^s I said, I will go up to the palm tree,—I will take hold of the boughs thereof:
Now also thy breasts shall be as clusters of the vine,
And the smell of thy nose ^t like apples;
- 9 And ^u the roof of thy mouth¹⁵ like the best wine—
—For my beloved,¹⁶ that goeth down sweetly, Causing the lips of those that are ^x asleep to speak.
- 10 ^y I am my beloved's,—and ^z his desire is toward me.
- 11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field,—^a let us lodge in the villages.
- 12 Let us get up early to the vineyards;—let us ^b see if the vine flourish,
Whether the tender grape¹⁷ appear, and the pomegranates bud forth:
^c There will I give thee my loves.
- 13 The ^d mandrakes¹⁸ give a smell,
And at our gates ^e are all manner of pleasant fruits, new and old,
Which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved.
- 8 Oh that thou wert ^f as my brother,¹⁹—that sucked the breasts of my mother!

Yea, I should not be despised.

1 Not one of Solomon's numerous wives deserved the praise which is given to the espoused: even they unite in extolling her superior beauty (ver. 10). The bridegroom then justifies these praises by telling his own ardour of feeling when he saw her approach (11, 12).

2 Or, 'As the war chariots of my noble people.'

3 She is on the point of retiring, when he entreats her to come back.

4 Rather, 'Shulamith;' the female name corresponding with the name of Solomon (see note on ch. v. 2), and having the same signification—the 'peaceable' or 'peaceful' one. In giving the bride this name, which she immediately adopts and repeats, the bridegroom intimates that their union is still unbroken. See Isa. iv. 1. This incident beautifully illustrates the free and ready forgiveness and restoration of the backsliding but repentant church.

5 That is, 'I, and the daughters of Jerusalem,' supposed to be in attendance.

6 Rather, 'Why would ye look upon Shulamith as upon a troop of dancers?' i. e. Would you gaze upon me as men gaze upon dancing girls?

7 Or, 'sandals.' As in the former instance (ch. v. 11 —16), so here, it is the dress, and not the person, which is described.

8 Or, 'mixed wine.' The clasp of the under girdle appears to have consisted of a brilliant red jewel set in gold.

9 Or, 'body.' A sheaf bound with a garland of red lilies well represents the shape of the bride's dress when bound with a crimson embroidered shawl, such as ladies in the East tie round the waist.

10 That is, moist, dark, and sparkling.

11 This may refer to the glossy brightness of the hair, but most probably to the head-dress of purple.

12 Rather, 'The king is captivated by the flowing locks,' which hang from under the purple head-dress.

13 Upright, graceful, and stately.

14 Rather, 'of dates,' which are the fruit of the palm.

15 Or, 'And thy mouth is like,' etc.

16 The bride here abruptly interposes, and continues the discourse.

17 Rather, 'Whether the vine-blossom has opened.'

18 See Gen. xxx. 14, etc.

19 That is, as an infant child, whom she might caress in public as well as in private, without impropriety.

- 2 I would lead thee, ^h and bring thee into my mother's house,
Who would instruct me :
I would cause thee to drink of ⁱ spiced wine—of the juice of my pomegranate.¹
- 3 ^k His left hand should be under my head,—and his right hand should embrace me.
- 4 ^l I charge you, O daughters of Jerusalem,
That ye stir not up, nor awake my love, until he please.
- The bride's strong and unalterable love.*
- 5 ^m WHO is this² that cometh up from the wilderness,³ ⁿ Leaning upon her beloved ?
I raised thee up⁴ under the apple tree :
There thy mother brought thee forth :
There she brought thee forth that bare thee.
- 6 ^o Set me as a seal⁵ upon thine heart,—as a seal upon thine arm :
For ^p love is strong as death ;—^q jealousy⁶ is cruel as the grave :
The coals thereof are coals of fire,—which hath a most vehement flame.
- 7 ^r Many waters cannot quench love,—neither can the floods drown it :
^s If a man would give all the substance of his house for love,
It would utterly be contemned.
- 8 ^t We have a little sister,⁷—and she hath no breasts :⁸
^u What shall we do for our sister—in the day when she shall be spoken for ?⁹
- 9 If she be a wall,¹⁰—^x we will build upon her a palace of silver :
And if she be a door,¹¹—we will inclose her with boards of cedar.
- 10 I am a wall,¹²—and my breasts like towers :
^y Then was I in his eyes as one that found favour.
- 11 Solomon ^z had a vineyard at Baal-hamon ;—^a he let out the vineyard unto keepers ;
Every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thousand pieces of silver.¹³
- 12 ^b My vineyard, which is mine, is before me :¹⁴
^c Thou, O Solomon, *must have*¹⁵ a thousand,
^d And those that keep the fruit thereof two hundred.
- 13 ^e Thou that dwellest in the gardens,

ⁱ ch. 2. 17

1 Among the Orientals, the sherbet made with pomegranate juice is particularly esteemed for its agreeable and cooling acidity.

2 In the fourth and concluding part, the bride appears, expressing her deep, constant, unchangeable love to her husband (ch. viii. 5—7), which leads her to leave her unwilling family, and give herself wholly to him (8—14). It can hardly be doubted that this is adapted to set before us the church purified from sin, freed from worldliness, and entirely devoted to the love and service of its Lord.

3 See note on ch. iii. 6.

4 Addressed to the bridegroom. 'I excited thy love,' i. e. first inspired thee with affection for me. The apple or quince tree was anciently regarded as peculiarly the tree of conjugal love.

5 Denoting intimate and inviolable union.

6 It is evident, from the connection, that the word 'jealousy' is only used here to express strong and intense love. Love is strong as death, inasmuch as it conquers all ; and it is firm like the grave, which never relaxes its hold. Such a love the bride professes, and entreats her husband to cherish towards her.

7 The brothers of the bride (ch. i. 6), to whom the disposal of their sister belonged (see Gen. xxiv. 50), are now introduced, objecting to her marriage (vers. 8, 9) ; but she replies that she has arrived at maturity, and has pledged herself to Solomon (10—12). He then calls her ; and she responds, inviting him to take her to his home (13, 14). It is most likely that all this had taken place before, and is now related by the bride to show the determination and constancy of her affection.

8 She is not yet marriageable.

9 That is, when she shall be asked in marriage.

10 That is, if she be inaccessible—unwilling to receive suitors—we will ornament her in reward for her modesty.

11 That is, If she be disposed to give a ready reception to suitors, we will keep her in strict seclusion.

12 She replies to the brothers in their own style ; and asserts that the modesty and reserve which rendered her inaccessible to the addresses of others would the more surely win the favour of her accepted suitor.

13 From Isa. vii. 23, this appears to have been the profit of the most productive vineyards.

14 That is, I take charge of it.

15 Or, 'Be thine the thousand, O Solomon, and two hundred to the keepers of its fruit.' The vineyard of Solomon seems to be introduced by way of contrast to that which the maiden regarded as her own vineyard, namely, her personal attractions (comp. ch. i. 6). Solomon, she declares, is welcome to the profits of his vineyard. She yields to him her affection disinterestedly and in return for his love.

16 These closing aspirations of the ancient church are echoed by the last inspired writer of the New Testament : 'Even so, Lord Jesus, come quickly' (Rev. xxii. 20).

GENERAL REMARKS ON THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS.

THE words prophet and prophecy are usually restricted in common language to the prediction of future events not discernible by mere human sagacity. Their general use in Scripture, however, is not limited to this meaning. The proper meaning of the word 'prophet' is, one who speaks as God's messenger, inspired and commissioned to communicate His will to man. See Gen. xx. 7, where the word first occurs: see also Exod. vii. 1; iv. 16; Jer. xv. 19, etc. These revelations embraced the past and the present as well as the future, and comprehended those general moral principles which are of universal application, throughout all time. That the prophets were more than foretellers of things future is apparent from their history, as well as from their writings. Daniel proved himself to be a prophet by telling Nebuchadnezzar what his dream had been, as much as by interpreting it; and the woman of Samaria very properly called Jesus a prophet, because he 'told her all things that ever she did.'

Yet the predictions of the future are undoubtedly among the most impressive and the most important parts of these communications. They would naturally be sought for more eagerly by mankind in general, and be treated with more deference than any other inspired messages. They also afford, especially in their progressive fulfilment, the most convincing proofs of the Divine authority of those who utter them. But the Old Testament prophecies derive their chief importance from the peculiar nature of the Mosaic economy, with which they are intimately connected; for that economy, whilst it was itself a revelation of the highest moral and spiritual truth, was also throughout prospective, a preparation for better things to come.

In the entire system of revelation, the prophets stand between the Mosaic law and the gospel; and they have important relations to both. In reference to the law, their mission was first to enforce its moral teachings and commands (which men were apt to overlook whilst maintaining its external rites), and then to show its typical and introductory character. But the chief object of their ministry was to point forward to the gospel as the development of all that is spiritual, and the fulfilment of all that is typical in the ancient dispensation. Hence as the people of Israel sank more deeply into sin, the prophets not only placed the ritual of the law more and more in the background, and enforced the superior value of the moral commandment; but they announced more distinctly the abrogation of the older economy, and the establishment of the new kingdom of God on earth; dwelling with peculiar emphasis on the glory and blessedness of the true Israel. So that a remarkable difference is observable between the earlier prophets and their successors. For whereas Elijah and Elisha, and the other earlier prophets, directed their ministry chiefly to the reformation of their contemporaries, and left no written prophecies for future ages; we find that from the time of Jonah present reformation occupies a less prominent place, and is subordinated to preparation for the new economy; and that there are fresh and fuller revelations of the gospel interwoven with admonitions and encouragements. These are the prophecies which have been recorded and handed down to us; and they form one great chain, in the various parts of which the same ideas (sometimes represented by the same word: see, for example, Isa. xi. 1; Jer. xxxii. 5; Zech. iii. 8; vi. 12) reappear in new combinations; and of them it is emphatically true that to Jesus 'give all the prophets witness.' And this oneness of scope and design throughout supplies a clue to some prophecies which are obscure, whilst it sets others before us in a most interesting light.

And the typical character of the Mosaic economy gives a further peculiarity to the prophetic writings. Under the Israelitish constitution, Moses, Aaron, David, and the offices themselves of prophet, priest, and king, were types, that is, intended resemblances, of circumstances corresponding in the person, the work, and the people of the Messiah. Hence many descriptions occur in the prophetic parts of the Old Testament which are applicable to the persons who are their immediate subjects only in a partial and imperfect manner, but which find a complete and satisfactory correspondence to their full meaning in the Messiah, and the new dispensation of which he is the Head. In the application of this principle, the ancient Israelitish church is repeatedly declared in the New Testament to have been a designed representation of the Christian church (1 Cor. x. 6, 11; Heb. ix. 8, 9; x. 1; xii. 22).

It must also be remembered that, although prophecy contains many very circumstantial allusions to particular facts and individuals, yet these are referred to chiefly on account of their relation to those great general principles with which it has to do. Prophecy is God's voice, speaking to us respecting the issue of that great struggle which has been and is going on in this world between good and evil; and telling us that it shall be well at last, though the conflict be long and hard before the victory is complete. The 'seed of the woman' shall bruise the 'serpent's head;' but the serpent, notwithstanding, shall first bruise his heel (Gen. iii. 15). So completely does the earliest prophecy recorded in Scripture contain the germ of the whole, however diversified may be its particular forms.

So far as the ancient Israel answered truly to the character which they represented as the people of God, so far the blessings connected with that relation, in the language of prophecy, belonged to them. And so far as the Christian Israel now, with their greater privileges, correspond in character to this high and holy relation, so far are the great declarations of prophecy already fulfilled in their experience. In the case of neither, indeed, is this fulfilment complete; nor can it be, so far as man merely is concerned. But there is ONE whose perfect character makes Him the worthy subject of all prophecy for good; and in the resurrection and ascension, the kingdom and glory, of our Lord Jesus Christ we find its entire fulfilment.

This also suggests a reason for the introduction of prophecies relating to other nations: for these nations were allies, rivals, enemies, or oppressors of Israel; and formed in their character and destiny the temporary representatives of the world in its various aspects towards the church. The notes on the prophecies which refer to these foreign states will supply most of the information which will be needed. But it may be desirable to notice their relative position to the Jews and to each other, during the two or three centuries over which the prophetic books extend. With Moab, Edom, and the Philistines, Judah had repeated conflicts. They had been subdued by David; but, after the revolt of the Ten Tribes, they were constantly endeavouring to regain their independence; and, during the reigns of ungodly and feeble kings, their efforts were generally successful. At the beginning of this period the empire of Assyria had, by a rapid succession of conquests, acquired great magnitude and strength; and was arrayed in hostility against the rival kingdom of Egypt, which had subsequently to contend with Babylon, the successor of Nineveh. The mutual jealousy and emulation between these great powers naturally tended to make Palestine, which lay between them, a theatre of war; and both of them sought the alliance or attempted the conquest of Israel and Judah. The true and safe policy of the Jewish kingdoms was clearly to stand aloof from both; but the low and carnal views of the people generally induced them to court the friendship of these powerful neighbours, and to endeavour to provide for their own security by uniting sometimes with Egypt against Assyria, and sometimes with Assyria against Egypt. Against this policy the prophets, especially Isaiah and Jeremiah, were commissioned to remonstrate, as showing a distrust of God's protection, and violating the fundamental law of the theocracy. Babylon was, in Isaiah's days, an inferior kingdom, struggling with Assyria for independence; but it gradually rose to power, and in the time of Jeremiah became the successful enemy of Egypt and the scourge of Judah.

As Jehovah was King of Israel, the prophets often exercised an important influence upon the civil affairs of the nation. This they did, not by taking upon themselves any of the ordinary duties of the government, but by appearing in particular emergencies as God's representatives, whose authority could not be disputed by the civil ruler without abjuring the fundamental principle of the theocracy. And even the apostate kings of Israel often acknowledged the Divine legation and authority of the prophets of Jehovah.

It is probable that many of the prophets were selected from those who had been trained as religious teachers among the 'sons of the prophets,' who are frequently mentioned in the sacred history (see note on 2 Kings iv. 1). None were prophets, in the highest sense, who had not received a message from God by direct inspiration; but those who were thus distinguished might obtain, by previous training under wise and holy instructors, those qualifications for the work which depended upon proper culture. Hence we find that minstrelsy was taught and practised among them (1 Sam. x. 5, and note), and was used to prepare the mind for the Divine influence (2 Kings iii. 15). And the high cultivation of their natural powers is indicated by the form in which the prophecies are delivered and recorded. Few of them are in simple prose; many in a sort of measured recitative; whilst the greater part are distinctly poetical, often finished with the greatest care, and unequalled by any other writings in pathos, beauty, or sublimity. See remarks on Hebrew Poetry, p. 521.

The Divine communications were made to the prophets in 'divers manners.' God seems sometimes to have spoken to them in an audible voice, occasionally appearing in human form. At other times he employed the ministry of angels, or made known his purposes by dreams. But he most frequently revealed his truth to the prophets by producing that supernatural state of the sentient, intellectual, and moral faculties which the Scriptures call vision. In this state, things remote in time and place, or merely symbolical representations of these things, became to the prophet's mind present living realities, and are described as such. Hence prophetic announcements are often called 'visions,' i. e. things seen; and the prophets themselves are called 'seers' (2 Chron. xxiv. 1; Isa. i. 1; Obad. 1; Hab. ii. 2, 3, etc.)

The prophets were also directed to use various methods of conveying to others the revelations which had been made to them. Occasionally they employed symbolical actions, which they usually explained. More often they related in simple language their symbolical visions. The greater part of their prophecies were probably oral discourses; but many of these were afterwards digested and recorded under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Some portions appear to have been originally published in a written form. See Isa. xl.—lxvi.; Ezek. xl.—xlviii.

Although the visions which the prophet beheld and the predictions of the future which he announced were wholly communicated by the Divine Spirit, yet the form of the communication, the imagery in which it is clothed, the illustrations by which it is cleared up and impressed, the symbols employed to bring it the more graphically before the mind;—in short, all that may be considered as its garb and dress, depends upon the education, habits, associations, feelings, and the whole mental, intellectual, and spiritual character of the individual prophet. Hence the style of some is purer, more sententious, more ornate, or more sublime, than that of others. The same general idea is expressed by one prophet in language drawn from associations connected with his own age, and with his civil or religious condition; and by another in phraseology which is evidently the production of a different period, and of very different circumstances. The writings of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos, and Zechariah, supply abundant illustrations of this remark.

In the INTERPRETATION OF PROPHECY, a regard to the following rules will assist in ascertaining its meaning and application:—

1. A thorough and minute acquaintance with Old Testament history should be acquired. Not only are there many allusions to the events of the prophet's own times, and the condition and circumstances of the people to whom his messages were addressed, by a careful attention to which many apparent difficulties may be removed; but the facts of Hebrew history are often made the basis of prophetic announcements or illustrations. Thus, for example, the bitter hatred and jealousy which existed for many generations between Judah and Ephraim is used by Isaiah as the groundwork of a prediction of the cessation of all enmities, and the harmonious union and mutual love of Messiah's subjects (see Isa. xi. 13, and note). And the frequent and fierce wars which the Hebrew nation carried on with the Philistines, and other inveterate enemies, are employed in a graphic figure to represent the holy warfare which the followers of Christ will unitedly wage against sin and Satan, and all the enemies of their Divine Lord (Isa. xi. 14).

2. The nature of poetical language in general, and the style of each prophet, should be borne in mind. The prophecies are, for the most part, written in the highest style of poetry; and, according to the usual mode of conveying ideas in the East, they abound greatly in figurative language, which is drawn from various sources; sometimes from incidents in the prophet's own personal history; sometimes from familiar and impressive objects in nature; sometimes from the occupations of the people to whom they were addressed; and, above all, from the events of their own national history. From the typical character of the ancient dispensation, it was natural that the prophets should employ those great facts in the history of their ancestors on which the religious and patriotic memory loved to linger as illustrative of future spiritual blessings. Hence, the deliverance of the nation from Egyptian bondage; their miraculous passage through the Red Sea; their forty years' wanderings in the Arabian Desert under Divine guidance, and their settlement at last in the promised land; the victories of their judges; the triumphs of David; the magnificence of Solomon; and, in later times, the return of the exiles from Babylonian captivity, their happy re-establishment in their own land, and the overthrow of their implacable enemies,—all these became a storehouse whence they drew illustrations of greater and better things to come. And the most glowing and heart-stirring representations of the prophets are figurative delineations of future glory drawn from the brightest pages which record the triumphs of God's ancient people.

3. Different portions of the same prophet, or of different prophets, which refer to the same subject, should be compared together; their agreements or apparent disagreements carefully observed, and the interpretation of each applied to the mutual illustration of the whole.

4. The prophecies should be studied as nearly as possible in their chronological order (see Table, p. 723); and regard should be had to the times in which the prophet lived, and to his peculiar position and circumstances.

5. The manner in which the prophets speak of time should be borne in mind. They frequently contemplate the events presented to them in prophetic vision as a picture, in which all the parts are viewed in their relation to the great central object; and they therefore group these events, not according to their succession in time, but according to their bearing upon the subject of their message. So that occurrences which were really many ages apart are represented as if they were contemporary or continuous. In Jer. l. 41, for example, the first capture and the complete destruction of Babylon are connected, without any notice of the interval of nearly a thousand years which elapsed between them. So again in Isaiah, ch. x., xi., the deliverance of the Jews from the Assyrian yoke is connected with the salvation which was to be effected by the Messiah. Sometimes, indeed, the precise time was revealed to the prophet, and is recorded, as in Isa. xxix. 10. But more commonly the prophets were ignorant of it. See Zech. xiv. 7; 1 Pet. i. 10—12.

6. It is important to observe the principles of prophetic interpretation sanctioned by the New Testament, which gives by Divine authority the meaning of the Old, and, while fixing the sense of particular passages, suggests principles of interpretation applicable to all. We learn here that the great end and theme of prophecy is Christ, either in his person and office, or in the establishment of his kingdom. Under this twofold division most of the Old Testament predictions may be ranged. Some of them are already fulfilled; others are in the course of fulfilment; and others again are to be fulfilled in some future day. This fact is of the greatest importance. It proves the general scope of the ancient predictions, and limits them. It teaches us to seek Christ everywhere under both dispensations; and it makes plain the general meaning of those predictions themselves.

7. In studying the prophecies, we should remember that God gave them, 'not to gratify men's curiosity, by enabling them to foreknow things, but that, after they were fulfilled, they might be interpreted by the event; and his own providence, not the interpreter's, be then manifested thereby to the world.'—Sir Isaac Newton. And this is plainly taught by the apostle Peter (2 Pet. i. 19—21), when, exhorting Christian believers to pay a diligent attention to 'the word of prophecy,' he compares it, so long as it remains unfulfilled, to a lamp which gives a glimmering light in a dark place, a light extending but a little way. It is not till the day has dawned that distant objects can be seen. It is not till the providence of God has explained his decrees—till the event predicted has illuminated the prediction—that we can fix upon the precise nature, manner, and order of those occurrences which accomplish any prophecy. For the same inspired apostle further teaches, that even the prophets themselves were not able fully to interpret their own predictions; and that prophecy proceeded not from the will, invention, sagacity, or foresight of man, but holy men of God delivered, by speaking and writing, that which they were instructed by the Holy Spirit to declare.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET ISAIAH.

ISAIAH (whose name signifies Salvation of Jehovah) was called to the prophetic office about the end of the reign of Uzziah. Nothing is known of his parentage, except that he was 'the son of Amoz,' who has often been confounded with the prophet Amos, although the Hebrew names differ in the first and last letters. The Jews have a tradition that Isaiah belonged to the royal family of Judah, his father being brother of king Amaziah; and they say that he was father-in-law to Manasseh, and was put to death by him (see note on 2 Kings xxi. 16). His prophetic ministry extended at least from the last year of Uzziah (see ch. vi. 1) to the fourteenth of Hezekiah (ch. xxxvii. 8), a period of forty-seven years. If his later prophecies were written at the beginning of Manasseh's reign, fifteen years more must be added (see ch. xxxviii. 5); which would make the whole length of his public life at least sixty-two years, about equal to that of Hosea; with whom, as well as Amos and Micah, he was contemporary.

Isaiah was called to public duty during a very eventful period in the history of Judah. Uzziah and Jotham were, upon the whole, peaceful and prosperous monarchs; but luxury and sensual indulgence were increasing among the people, and true piety was rapidly declining. The reign of the next king, the wicked Ahaz, was most disastrous; for, in addition to internal disorders and sufferings, the country was invaded by the combined forces of Syria and Israel. Upon this occasion Isaiah came forward with a Divine message both of reproof and of encouragement to the panic-stricken king and people; but his warnings and his counsels were disregarded. Ahaz brought the kingdom into subjection to the Assyrian monarch, and left it on the very verge of ruin; and it was not restored to independence and prosperity till the latter part of Hezekiah's reign. This pious king abolished idolatry, re-opened the temple, which had been closed by his father, and restored the worship of Jehovah. He treated Isaiah with great respect, and sought his counsel during the agitating events of his reign.

Isaiah also witnessed the fall of the kingdom of Israel; which, after flourishing anew under Jeroboam II., the contemporary of Uzziah, became the prey of successive usurpers; till, in the sixth year of Hezekiah's reign in Judah, it was completely subjugated by the Assyrians, and many of its inhabitants were carried into captivity.

The writings of Isaiah are distinguished amongst the inspired poems by their elevation and variety. Always clear, fresh and vivid, they are also marked by great energy, sublimity, or tenderness, according to the nature of his subject. His descriptions are, for the most part, masterly outlines rather than elaborate pictures. A few words set before us the majesty of Jehovah, the absurdity of idol-worship, and the fall of heathen powers. If the prophet enlarges upon any subject, it is the humiliation, the work, and glory of the Messiah, and the blessed results of his salvation. Whatever be the primary topic, it always leads him to these; and these are unfolded with such distinctness, adorned with so much beauty, and dwelt upon with such delight, that the fuller disclosures of the New Testament have only taught believers to prize more highly the earlier revelations of 'the evangelical prophet.'

Some parts of the book of Isaiah, especially ch. xl.—lxvi., have been attributed by some modern critics to an unknown author or authors, who lived at a later period near the end of the captivity in Babylon. It has been alleged that these portions are distinguished by Chaldaisms, and other peculiarities of style, from the genuine writings of Isaiah. In vindication of the genuineness of these passages it may be observed:—

(1.) If there were many traces of Chaldee in the style, this would not be surprising, as it is evident that the public functionaries of Hezekiah's court were well acquainted with that language: see 2 Kings xviii. 26, and compare Pref. to Eccles. p. 700. But, in fact, only three Chaldaisms, or at most four, occur in the book; and all these are in the portions which are universally allowed to be Isaiah's. (2.) The alleged diversity of style is not greater than is often found to exist between the earlier and the later writings of the same author, or between those addressed at first to the ear and those intended only for the eye. On the other hand, a careful perusal of the whole will show that there is throughout an essential similarity in that energy and sublimity which have always been regarded as characteristic of Isaiah. In these respects the later chapters certainly are not inferior to the former. (3.) The book is referred to as one by our Lord and his apostles, who quote Isaiah more frequently than any other prophet, and expressly attribute to him passages from chapters i., vi., ix., x., xi., xxix., xl., xli., liii., lxi., lxv. These portions are included in the Septuagint version, which was made about 280 B.C. And it was 'the book of the prophet Isaiah' which was delivered to our Lord in the synagogue at Nazareth, when he opened it and read the passage which we find in ch. lxi. 1—3: see Luke iv. 17. The unity of the book is also indicated by the regular arrangement of the whole, as shown in the subjoined analysis. (4.) It is also to be remembered, that almost all those critics who give to these portions a later date, doubt or deny prophetic inspiration, of which these chapters contain the clearest evidence. No human sagacity could have foreseen in Isaiah's time the rise and fall of the Chaldean monarchy, or the nation and name of its future conqueror. Those, therefore, who refuse to believe in true prophetic inspiration are under the necessity of ascribing these writings to a later period. But the theories of the objectors are at variance with each other; and the investigations which they have occasioned have resulted in establishing more firmly the genuineness of the disputed passages, and consequently the Divine origin of the prophetic writings.

Various opinions have been held respecting the arrangement of Isaiah's prophecies. It appears most probable that Isaiah, like Jeremiah (see Pref. p. 807), revised and collected the whole book; which seems to fall naturally into the following divisions:—

I. CH. I.—VI. Early discourses, chiefly of the prosperous but luxurious times of Uzziah and Jotham; denouncing the sins of the people, with some intimations of Divine mercy. Ch. vi. is a kind of appendix, relating the prophet's call to more public work as the warrant for his threats and promises.

II. CH. VII.—XII. Prophecies connected with the invasion of Judah by the combined forces of Israel and Syria, and the subsequent invasions of the Assyrians; comprising warnings to Ahaz against courting their alliance, and predictions of their devastating inroads, and of the overthrow of their hosts; with cheering promises of a greater salvation.

III. CH. XIII.—XXIII. Woes denounced against various nations which were hostile to God and his people. In these even Jerusalem and a high officer of the royal palace are included (ch. xxii.); for they were deeply infected with the sins of the heathen.

IV. CH. XXIV.—XXVII. A general view of all these Divine dealings of judgment and mercy, showing their gracious purposes and results.

V. CH. XXVIII.—XXXV. Prophecies, chiefly of the time of Hezekiah, denouncing the sins of Israel and Judah, but promising mercy, and turning the burden of woe upon their oppressors.

VI. CH. XXXVI.—XXXIX. A narrative of Sennacherib's invasion and his overthrow, illustrating the foregoing prophecies; and another narrative of Hezekiah's vanity, and a consequent threatening of punishment, preparatory to the consolatory portion which follows.

VII. CH. XL.—LXVI. A lengthened disclosure of God's purposes of mercy to his true Israel. This is one continuous prophecy, but it may be divided into three parts. (1.) Chapters xl.—li. contain a vindication of the Deity of Jehovah, who is about to manifest himself as the righteous Saviour of his people. (2.) Chapters li.—lvi. 8 announce and describe this manifestation in the Messiah, and the glorious result of his work. (3.) Chapters lvi. 9—lxvi. exhibit more largely these results in the superiority of the church of Christ over the ancient national Israel in its character, privileges, and destinies.

This portion of Isaiah's prophecies was probably written after he had retired from public life. It appears to have been designed primarily to sustain the faith of God's people in the prospect of threatened chastisements, and during their long endurance. Its great subject, the Divine work of salvation by Christ, is always kept in view. It contains no circumstantial reference to the men and events of the prophet's days; and the predictions of the capture of Babylon, and the desolation of Edom, which occur in it, must be regarded as only temporary and partial illustrations of the working out of its great plan. Even the promises which it holds out to the Jewish nation of restoration and prosperity are always used to carry the mind forward to the Divine Messiah and his spiritual and everlasting kingdom. His coming is ever presented as the chief object of Israel's hope. For Him, as Jehovah, the way is prepared, by proofs of his creative and upholding power, his prescience and faithfulness, and his delivering grace. And though He comes in 'the form of a servant,' and as 'a man of sorrows,' yet his vicarious sufferings and expiatory death are to be the source of blessedness to the world and to the church; and they shall be abundantly recompensed by the honour and joy of his mediatorial reign.

^{ak} Ps. 66. 18 ; 1 Tim. 2. 8.

^{al} ch. 59. 2, 3 ; Mic. 3. 9—11.

1 The ministry of Isaiah and the other prophets had special reference to Judah and Jerusalem, which at that time represented the kingdom of God on earth ; and notice is taken of foreign nations only because of their relation to the people of God.

2 At what time this chapter was written is uncertain ; but its subject is so general as to make it suitable for an introduction to the book. The prophet charges Israel with ingratitude, stupidity, and obstinacy (vers. 2—4), as the causes of their present sufferings (5—9), declares that their sins made all their religious services distasteful to God (10—15), calls upon them to reform, with promises and threatenings (16—20), and specifies certain prominent crimes (21—23) which must be purged away before the Divine favour can be enjoyed (24—31).

3 See note on Ps. 1. 4.

4 The word 'they' is emphatic in Hebrew : even my children, whom I have reared, have rebelled.

5 This appellation is found almost exclusively in Isaiah, and combines the representation of God's perfect excellence (see ch. vi. 3) with his covenant relation to his people.

6 This may be rendered, 'Upon what ;' i. e. Upon what part of the body can ye be stricken? for it is all covered with the wounds and bruises of former punishments.

Either rendering leads to the inference that further correction seems almost useless.

7 Where the heart is not right with God, affliction often makes the sinner more obstinate and callous.

8 Compare Deut. xxviii. 35 ; Job ii. 7.

9 See notes on 2 Kings xix. 21, and Ps. xlv. 12.

10 A temporary hut erected for the accommodation of the fruit-watcher of the vineyard or melon ground. See note on Job xxvii. 18.

11 That is, we should have been totally and justly destroyed. This verse refers to the fate of these cities ; the next verse, to their character.

12 Rather, 'to trample,' i. e. insultingly ; your attendance upon these outward rites, whilst your hearts and lives are ungodly and impure, is an insult to me.

13 Rather, 'Incense is abomination to me ; [and so are] new moon, sabbath, calling of assembly : I cannot endure iniquity, and the solemn meeting ;' i. e. I cannot bear these services when coupled with iniquity.

14 The Hebrew term here used is appropriated in Scripture to the sabbath, the passover, the pentecost, the day of atonement, and the feast of tabernacles. Though these were appointed by God, yet when so kept they became hateful to him.

15 Heb., 'bloods ;' the form of the word which is used to signify bloodshed. See note on Ps. ix. 12.

- 16 ^a Wash you,¹ make you clean ;
^r Put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes :
 17 ^s Cease to do evil ; learn to do well ;—^t seek judgment, relieve the oppressed,
 Judge the fatherless, plead for the widow.
 18 Come now,² and ^u let us reason together, saith the LORD :
 Though your sins be as scarlet, ^x they shall be as white as snow,
 Though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool.
 19 ^y If ye be willing and obedient,—ye shall eat the good of the land :
 20 ^z But if ye refuse and rebel,—ye shall be devoured³ with the sword :
^a For the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.
 21 ^b How is the faithful city become an harlot!⁴
^c It was full of judgment ;—righteousness lodged in it ; but now murderers.
 22 ^d Thy silver is become dross,—thy wine mixed with water :
 23 ^e Thy princes are rebellious, and ^f companions of thieves :
^g Every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards :
 They ^h judge not the fatherless,
 Neither doth the cause of the widow come unto them.
 24 Therefore saith the Lord,—the LORD of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel,
 Ah, ⁱ I will ease me⁵ of mine adversaries,—and avenge me of mine enemies :
 25 And I will turn my hand upon thee,⁶
 And ^k purely purge away thy dross,—and take away all thy tin :
 26 And I will restore thy judges ^l as at the first,⁷
 And thy counsellors as at the beginning :
 Afterward ^m thou shalt be called,—The City of Righteousness, the Faithful City.
 27 Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts⁸ with righteousness.
 28 And the ⁿ destruction of the transgressors and of the sinners shall be together,⁹
 And ^o they that forsake the LORD shall be consumed.
 29 For they shall be ^p ashamed of ^q the oaks¹⁰ which ye have desired, ^r And ye¹¹ shall be confounded for the gardens that ye have chosen.
 30 ^s For ye shall be as an oak whose leaf fadeth,—and as a garden that hath no water.¹²
 31 ^t And the strong shall be ^u as tow,—and the maker of it¹³ as a spark,
 And ^x they shall both burn together,—and none shall quench them.

¹ This refers, not to the removal of guilt, but to personal reformation, which, though not the ground of forgiveness, is repeatedly commanded as being indispensable to it. See ch. lv. 7 ; Ezek. xviii. 30—32.

² See notes on Ps. cxvi. 14 ; Eccles. xii. 1.

³ Or, 'eaten,' antithetical to the preceding verse.

⁴ See note on Exod. xxxiv. 15, and Pref. to Sol. Song.

⁵ Or, 'relieve myself,' by getting rid of those who thus annoy me. This is spoken after the manner of men. See note on Gen. vi. 6.

⁶ Or, 'take thee in hand.'

⁷ As in the earlier and better times of the nation ; giving them such rulers as Moses and David. The last clause of the verse refers to ver. 21.

⁸ That is, those who return to God by true repentance. The effect of God's 'judgment' shall be to restore some by penitence, and to destroy the impenitent (vers. 28—31).

⁹ That is, at the same time as the redemption of Zion.

¹⁰ Or, 'terebinth-trees,' meaning groves of such trees. These were favourite places of idolatrous worship.

¹¹ Such a change of person is very common in Hebrew poetry. It is perhaps designed here to make the language more personal.

¹² In Palestine a constant supply of water is absolutely necessary for the cultivation of a garden. See Eccles. ii. 6 ; Sol. Song iv. 12, 15.

¹³ Rather, 'and his work ;' especially his idols. The works of the wicked are the cause of their destruction.

¹⁴ Chapters ii.—iv. form a single discourse, apparently designed to denounce the crimes then prevalent in Judah, which were fostered by the prosperity and luxury of the people. For this purpose the prophet quotes an ancient prediction (found also in Mic. iv. 1—3), which seems to have excited the hopes of the people ; and uses it as a reason for reformation (1—5). He mentions some of the sins which the people must put away before the promise is fulfilled (6—9) ; and threatens them, if they continue disobedient, with fearful punishments which should purge out the wicked (ii. 10—22 ; iii. ; iv. 1), and leave a remnant 'prepared for the Lord,' to whom this prediction might be accomplished (iv. 2—6). The description best accords with the state of the nation about the end of Uzziah's reign, when the people enjoyed great secular prosperity, but 'did corruptly.' See 2 Chron. xxvii. 2.

¹⁵ See Numb. xxiv. 14 ; Gen. xlix. 1. The phrase often signifies the last dispensation, the times of the Messiah.

¹⁶ Mount Moriah, on which the temple was built. It is here predicted that the true and spiritual worship of God shall prevail over all systems of false religion, and that all nations shall be gathered into the church, where, under the righteous government of Zion's Divine King, they shall renounce the arts of war, and shall learn and practise only those of peace. Christianity has already done much to mitigate the horrors of war, and to ameliorate, in various ways, the political and social state of mankind. That the accomplishment of this prediction has hitherto been but partial, is because the hearts and conduct of men have been brought as yet but to a very limited extent under the influence of Divine truth.

1 Shall come like a mighty river; i. e. in great numbers, and with great eagerness.

2 Rather, 'peoples;' or, nations.

3 It was at Jerusalem that the doctrines and precepts of the gospel were first preached, and thence they were diffused through the world. See John iv. 22; Luke xxiv. 47, 49.

4 Or, 'coulters,' as in 1 Sam. xiii. 20.

5 Rather, 'For.' In this declaration of God's displeasure the reason is given why the people must return to God (ver. 5), if they would have the foregoing prophecy fulfilled to them. Then follow the causes of this displeasure—their connection with foreigners and imitation of them in their superstitious practices (ver. 6), their reliance on pecuniary and martial resources (ver. 7), and their worship of idols (ver. 8). Chaldea was the cradle of the occult arts; and the Philistines were addicted to augury: see 1 Sam. vi. 2.

6 That is, with Eastern superstitions.

7 Or, 'strike hands with;' i. e. have intercourse with, or abound with.

8 Literally, 'nothing.' 'gods which are yet no gods' (Jer. ii. 11); idols which are 'nothing in the world' (1 Cor. viii. 4).

9 Or, 'And thou dost not forgive them:' a return to the statement in ver. 6.

10 That is, into the caves of the rock. The Jews had been accustomed to do this in times of hostile invasion. See Judg. vi. 2; 1 Sam. xiii. 6.

11 Rather, 'from the terror (i. e. the terrible manifestation) of Jehovah.' The results of this alarming display of Jehovah's glory are the putting down of all objects of admiration and confidence, the utter destruction of the idols, and the flight of their terrified worshippers (vers. 11—21).

12 The words used in ver. 9 are repeated, intimating that the people's voluntary humiliation in sin would insure a compulsory humiliation in punishment.

13 Rather, 'everything.' The enumeration follows.

14 Lowth remarks, that in Hebrew poetry certain images are regularly appropriated to particular subjects; e. g. 'cedars' and 'oaks' to kings and princes; 'mountains' to kingdoms; 'towers' to protectors. But it is more likely that the prophet intended in this passage to convey generally the idea of what is lofty and imposing, by selecting objects of this class most familiar to his readers.

15 See note on 1 Kings x. 22.

16 Upon all visible objects of desire; i. e. upon all that is beautiful to the sight. A somewhat similar expression is used more than once in summing up an enumeration of particulars in 2 Chron. xxxii. 27; Nahum ii. 9.

- 18 And the idols he shall utterly abolish [or, shall utterly pass way].
- 19 And they shall go into the ^s holes of the rocks,—and into the caves of the earth,
^h For fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty,
 When he ariseth ⁱ to shake terribly the earth.
- 20 ^k In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold,
 Which they made each one for himself to worship,—to the moles and to the bats;¹
- 21 ^l To go into the clefts of the rocks,—and into the tops of the ragged rocks,²
^m For fear of the LORD, and for the glory of his majesty,
 When he ariseth to shake terribly the earth.
- 22 ⁿ Cease ye from man,³ whose ^o breath is in his nostrils:
^p For wherein is he to be accounted of?
- 3 For, behold, the Lord, the LORD of hosts,
^q Doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah⁴
^r The stay⁵ and the staff,—the whole stay of bread, and the whole stay of water,
- 2 ^s The mighty man, and the man of war,
 The judge, and the prophet,—and the prudent, and ^t the ancient,⁶
- 3 ^u The captain of fifty, and the honourable man, and the counsellor,
 And the cunning artificer, and the eloquent orator.⁷
- 4 And I will give ^x children to be their princes,—and babes⁸ shall rule over them.
- 5 And ^y the people shall be oppressed, every one by another,
 And every one by his neighbour:
^z The child shall behave himself proudly against the ancient,
 And the base against the honourable.
- 6 When a man shall take hold of his brother,—of the house of his father,⁹ saying,
 Thou hast clothing,¹⁰ be thou our ruler,—and let this ruin be under thy hand:
- 7 In that day shall he swear, saying,—I will not be an healer;
 For in my house is neither bread nor clothing:
 Make me not a ruler of the people.
- 8 For ^a Jerusalem is ruined, and Judah is fallen:
^b Because their tongue and their doings¹¹ are against the LORD,
^c To provoke the eyes of his glory.
- 9 ^d The show of their countenance doth witness against them;¹²
 And they declare their sin as ^e Sodom, they hide it not.
^f Woe unto their soul!—for they have rewarded evil unto themselves.
- 10 Say ye to the righteous,¹³ ^g that it shall be well with him:
^h For they shall eat the fruit of their doings.
- 11 Woe unto the wicked! ⁱ it shall be ill with him:
^j For the reward of his hands shall be given him.
- 12 As for my people, ^k children are their oppressors,—and women rule over them.
 O my people, ^l they which lead thee cause thee to err,
 And destroy¹⁴ the way of thy paths.
- 13 The LORD standeth up ^m to plead,¹⁵—and standeth to judge the people.
- 14 The LORD will enter into judgment
 With the ancients of his people, and the princes thereof:
 For ye have eaten up ⁿ the vineyard;—the spoil of the poor is in your houses.

² Rather, 'into the fissures of the cliffs.'

³ That is, cease to trust in him. Confidence in man, as well as in idols, must be renounced (ch. iii. 1—15).

⁴ Not only from the capital, but from the whole kingdom.

⁵ Two genders of the same noun are used here, as in Eccles. ii. 8, Nahum ii. 13, according to a Hebrew idiom to represent all, i. e. every kind of support: first, support of food (ver. 1); then, of order and government (ver. 2, etc.).

⁶ Rather, 'elder.'

⁷ Heb., 'skilful of whispering;' i. e. 'the expert enchanter:' comp. ch. viii. 19; and see Eccles. x. 11; Jer. viii. 17, where the same word is used. God threatens to take away everything in which the people trusted, both bad and good, the charmers and the prophets.

⁸ That is, babes in ability, knowledge, and experience. This misgovernment is represented (ver. 5) as producing lawless and tyrannical anarchy, and a total disregard of all claims to deference and respect, till at last none can be found to take office (vers. 6, 7).

⁹ That is, in a private station.

¹⁰ As amongst the people of Palestine wealth consisted very much in numerous changes of garments (see Gen. xlv. 22; 2 Kings v. 5), this may mean, 'Thou art rich.' Or it may be a strong representation of universal poverty in the land, which is heightened by the reply (ver. 7).

¹² They make no attempt at concealment.

¹³ As Divine justice insures the well-being of the righteous, it insures also the punishment of these sinners.

¹⁴ Heb., 'swallow up;' i. e. they efface the traces of the way in which thou shouldst walk.

¹⁵ That is, 'to accuse.' He who accuses will also 'judge,' or condemn.

- 15 What mean ye that ye ^p beat my people to pieces,
And grind the faces¹ of the poor? saith the Lord God of hosts.
- 16 Moreover the LORD saith, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty,²
And walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes,
Walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling³ with their feet:
- 17 Therefore the LORD will smite with ^q a scab⁴
The crown of the head of the daughters of Zion,
And the LORD will ^r discover their secret parts.
- 18 In that day the LORD will take away

And their cauls, and their ^s round tires like the moon,
- 19 The chains, and ^t the bracelets, and the mufflers,
20 The bonnets, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands,

1 Against the ground by trampling on them. A figure for cruel oppression.

2 A striking exposure and reproof of female luxury. The specification in vers. 18–23 of the things to be taken away made the threatening more significant to those whom it concerned, whilst it shows the length to which extravagance was carried.

3 That is, with their ankle-rings.

4 Rather, ‘make bald.’ As a fine head of hair was an ornament, so baldness was dreaded as humiliating in itself, and as part of the disgrace of a captive.

5 With the increased knowledge now possessed of Eastern customs and dress, the following translation seems preferable: ‘In that day the Lord will remove the ornaments of the ankle-bands, the tasselled tresses, and the crescents, the ear-pendants, and the bracelets, and the small veils, the turbans, and the stepping chains, and the girdles, the perfume boxes and the amulets, the finger-rings and the nose-jewels, the dress vestments and the mantles, the cloaks and the purses, the mirrors and the fine linen vests, the ribands and the large veils’ A description of Egyptian ladies’ dress and ornaments, illustrating this passage, may be found in Lane’s Modern Egyptians, vol. i. ch. i., and App. A.; and one fulfilment of the prophecy in Layard’s Discoveries in Nineveh and Babylon, pp. 152, 153, where the sculptures commemorating Sennacherib’s invasion are described.

6 Rather, ‘a rope.’

7 Or, ‘flowing-robe.’

8 Perhaps the darkening of the skin from long exposure, or a ‘brand’ inflicted by the conquerors.

9 Sitting on the ground was a posture which denoted deep mourning and distress. Thus, in a medal of Vespasian, a woman is represented in a sitting posture, under a palm-tree, with the inscription, ‘Judæa Capta.’

10 That is, several; the number ‘seven’ being used indefinitely. Such would be the carnage of the war that there would be few men left.

11 That is, after the judgments just referred to. See note on ch. ii. 1.

12 This prophecy is clearly referred to by the later prophets Jeremiah (ch. xxiii. 5; xxxiii. 15) and Zechariah (ch. iii. 8; vi. 12), in a manner which shows that the word ‘Branch’ must be applied to a person who is a righteous judge, a king of the family of David, a servant of God. And this can be no other than the Messiah, who is justly called ‘beautiful, glorious, excellent, comely.’ As the ‘Fruit of the Earth’ is evidently the same person as ‘the Branch of the Lord,’ some suppose the Divine and human natures of the person of Christ to be here represented, as in Rom. i. 3, 4; but the other places in which the terms are used, as well as the general scope of the passage (which predicts a revival after almost complete destruction) favour the opinion that both terms refer to the raising up out of the nearly desolated nation, by special Divine power, of one who should be a restorer and deliverer.

13 ‘Shall be called’ is a frequent idiom for ‘shall be;’ i. e. the kingdom of the Messiah shall realize what the former theocracy symbolized—the moral purity of those whom God acknowledges as his people. This points out an essential difference, which is much insisted upon by the prophets, between the kingdom of Christ and the former economy.

14 A figure taken from the national census of the Israelites. Comp. Exod. xxxii. 32; Dan. xii. 1; Acts xiii. 48; Rev. xiii. 8.

15 That is, their moral defilement. This refers to the charges in ch. iii. 16, etc.; and the ‘blood,’ or ‘blood-guiltiness,’ to the previous accusations.

The parable of the vineyard ; and its application.

5 NOW³ will ^d I sing to ^e my wellbeloved⁴

A song of my beloved touching ^f his vineyard.

My wellbeloved hath a vineyard—in a very fruitful hill :⁵

2 And ^g he fenced⁶ it, and gathered out the stones thereof,

And ^h planted it with the choicest vine,⁷

And built a tower⁸ in the midst of it,—and also made a winepress therein :

ⁱ And he looked that it should bring forth grapes.

And it brought forth wild grapes.

3 And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, and men of Judah,

^k Judge, I pray you, betwixt me and my vineyard.

4 ^l What could have been done more to my vineyard,—that I have not done in it ?

Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes,

Brought it forth wild grapes ?

5 And now go to ; I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard :

^m I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up ;⁹

And break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down :

6 And ⁿ I will lay it waste :—it shall not be pruned, nor digged ;

But there shall come up briers and thorns :

^o I will also command the clouds—that they rain no rain¹⁰ upon it.

7 For ^p the vineyard of the LORD of hosts is the house of Israel,

And the men of Judah his pleasant plant :

And ^q he looked for judgment, but behold oppression ;

For righteousness, but behold a cry.

8 Woe unto them that join ^r house to house,—that lay field to field,

Till there be no place,—^s that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth !¹¹

9 ^t In mine ears said the LORD of hosts,

Of a truth many houses shall be desolate,—even great and fair, without inhabitant.

10 Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one ^u bath,

And the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.¹²

11 ^z Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink :

That continue until night, till wine inflame them !

12 And ^v the harp, and the viol, the tabret, and pipe, ^z and wine, are in their feasts :

But ^a they regard not the work of the LORD,

Neither consider the operation of his hands.¹³

1 The reformation and holiness of Zion is distinctly attributed to a Divine influence, convincing, correcting, and purifying like fire. Comp. ch. i. 25. That this is the work of the Holy Spirit we learn from John xvi. 8—15.

2 The pillar of cloud and of fire had been the glory and defence of ancient Israel ; and God's future church shall never want the honour and protection of his presence.

3 This chapter is a distinct poem, first describing in a parable the privileges, the ingratitude, and the punishment of Israel (vers. 1—7) ; then threatening the avaricious with the curse of sterile poverty, and the sensual with captivity, famine, and death ; by which God would humble them both, and desolate the land (8—17) ; and still more awfully denouncing various forms of presumptuous impiety and tyranny, which should be punished first by signal chastisements in their own country, and then by a merciless invasion, sweeping them all away, and leaving the land in total darkness (18—30).

4 Or 'My friend,' meaning Jehovah. This introduction is adapted to secure a ready hearing for the prophet's communication.

5 Literally, 'upon a horn, a son of oil,' i. e. a fertile peak. The sunny sides of rocky precipitous hills have always been selected for the cultivation of the vine.

6 Rather, 'digged it thoroughly.'

7 Literally, 'with Sorek,' the choicest kind of vine, bearing a small purple grape. It gave name to a valley between Ashkelon and Gaza. See also Jer. ii. 21.

8 Serving to protect the vineyard, to accommodate the owner and his labourers, and to contain the implements of cultivation and wine-making.

9 Literally, 'and it shall be for consuming,' i. e. for a pasture. Instead of being inclosed, it shall be thrown open for the pasturing and trampling of cattle.

10 This startling threat, which man could not enforce, prepares the way for the application of the parable in vers. 7—10.

11 Rather, 'land.'

12 The tenth part of a homer was called a bath in liquid and an ephah in dry measure, and contained about 7½ gallons. It is therefore threatened, that an acre of vineyard should yield less than a gallon, and that the produce of arable land should be only a tenth of the seed.

1 Heb., 'Sheol' (see note on Job xi. 8), represented here as a ravenous monster with an insatiable appetite.

2 In humbling the proud sinner, God is exalted (or 'sanctified') by the display of his attributes, especially his justice and holiness.

3 Or, 'Then shall the lambs feed as in their pasture;' i. e. the whole land, even the domains of the rich (see vers. 8, 9), shall become a mere pasture-ground for wandering shepherds.

4 That is, a strong rope. These men are represented not as being led away insensibly by sin, but as earnestly and perseveringly working at it with much labour. 'Vanity' may be understood in the sense either of falsehood or of sophistry. See 1 Tim. iv. 1.

5 Rather, 'and as the burning grass falleth.' All the images here employed forcibly represent the suddenness, ease, and completeness with which God would effect the destruction of these sinners.

6 Some suppose this to refer to the earthquake in the reign of Uzziah, mentioned in Amos i. 1; but it may be a figurative expression, as in Psa. xviii. 7. As these judgments had been insufficient to produce reformation, the prophet declares that others more severe were to follow; which he describes with an unusual variety of terrific imagery.

7 An expression taken from the Eastern mode of hiving bees: see ch. vii. 18. The rapidity of the enemy's approach is a reply to the profane taunt in ver. 19.

8 Rather, 'sharpened,' on purpose to destroy.

9 Rather, 'a lioness,' who is peculiarly savage.

1 In this chapter Isaiah describes a sublime vision of the invisible King of Israel enthroned in his palace (the temple), attended by his ministers, who proclaim his holiness (vers. 1—4). The prophet is overwhelmed with a sense of his sinfulness; but is reassured by one of the attendants of Jehovah, and in answer to the Divine call offers himself as a messenger to the people (5—8). The message is a terrible denunciation of impending judgments, coupled with an intimation of mercy to a remnant of the nation (9—13).

2 The Divine essence is declared to be invisible (John i. 18; Exod. xxxiii. 20), yet the phrase to see God is sometimes employed in Scripture to denote either an extraordinary display of his glory, or his appearance in a human form. See Exod. xxiv. 10. It is here evidently used in the latter sense. See the preceding note; and compare Ezek. i. 26; John xii. 41.

3 That is, the train of his royal robe.

4 'Seraphim' signifies burning ones. It is used in Numb. xxi. 6 for 'fiery serpents;' but is here applied to the attendants of Jehovah, to designate either their essence, their dazzling appearance, the ardour of their devotion, or more probably their terrible power as the ministers of God's holy wrath. Compare ver. 11, and Heb. xii. 29.

5 They sang responsively.

6 A repetition of this kind elsewhere indicates emphasis (see Jer. vii. 4; xxii. 29; Ezek. xxi. 27). Some suppose it to refer here to the nature of the Godhead.

7 Rather, the 'foundations of the thresholds.'

8 See Job xl. 5, and note. The lips are mentioned probably because Isaiah felt his unworthiness to join in God's praise.

9 Or, 'atoned for.' Fire represents purifying influence (Mal. iii. 2, 3), which is shown to be connected with pardon, by the fire being taken from the altar. Both are requisite to fit the prophet for God's work (ver. 9).

10 An idiom which probably means here, 'Go on hearing,' 'Go on seeing.' The people had heard and seen, but had neglected God's messages; yet He will send them another messenger, though this will only bring out more decidedly the callous obduracy of the people (ver. 10), and thus show how just He is in destroying them (11). See note on Exod. iv. 21.

11 That is, 'How long shall this blindness continue?' To which the answer in effect is, 'Until it ruins them, and causes them to be removed from the country.'

12 Or, 'And great is the vacancy in the midst,' etc.

13 Rather, 'Yet in it (the land) shall be a tenth (a remnant), and it (the tenth) shall again be consumed; but as a terebinth and an oak, in which, when felled, there is a stock (to send forth new shoots): so a holy seed is the stock of it (the land).' This is a declaration that even the remnant of the nation should be persecuted, yet should be indestructible; and it has been repeatedly fulfilled.

14 The series of prophecies in ch. vii.—xii. was occasioned by the invasion of Judah by the two kings of Israel and Syria, and by the alliance which Ahaz made for his protection with the king of Assyria. It predicts Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin¹ the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem to war against it, ^r but ² could not prevail against it. And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria is confederate with Ephraim. ^s And his heart was moved, and the heart of his ³ people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind.

Then said the LORD unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, ^t and Shear-jashub² ^u thy son, at the end of the ^x conduit of the upper pool³ in the highway ^y of the fuller's field; and say unto him, ^z Take heed, and be quiet; ^z fear not, neither be fainthearted for the two tails of these smoking firebrands,⁴ for the ⁵ fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah. Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, ⁶ Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for ⁷ us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal:⁵ thus saith the Lord God,

¹⁰ Moreover the LORD spake again unto Ahaz, saying,

¹¹ ^f Ask thee a sign⁹ of the LORD thy God; Ask it either in the depth, or in the height above.

¹² But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt¹⁰ the LORD.

But ^g will ye weary my God¹² also?

deliverance from the threatened confederacy, by the overthrow of Syria and Israel; the subjugation of Judah by its Assyrian allies; and severe judgments for heinous sins. In the more distant future it exhibits the restoration of the people, the destruction of their enemies, and the glories of Messiah and his happy reign. The latter subjects are sometimes so blended with the former as to make it difficult to trace the distinctions.

¹ See 2 Kings xvi. 5, 6; 2 Chron. xxviii. 5—8, and notes. The prophet's message seems to have been delivered at some time between the first successes of the allied enemies and their final retreat.

² This name means, 'A remnant shall return;' and is afterwards used (ch. x. 21), not as a name, but as a promise which the child's presence was designed to convey.

³ This pool, now called Birket-el-Mamilla, is a large tank at the head of the valley of Hinnom, about 700 yards north-west from the Jaffa gate. It is full in the rainy season; and its waters are then conducted by a 'conduit,' or aqueduct, to the pool of Hezekiah, within the walls. The 'highway,' or rather 'causeway,' probably ran along the stone wall which formed the lower end of the pool, and beside it the fullers—cleaners of woollen cloth—plied their trade. See ch. xxxvi. 2, 11, 12.

⁴ Once mischievous, but now powerless.

⁵ Nothing more is known of this person, who was probably a Syrian, as the name is Aramaic. Compare Ezra iv. 7.

⁶ Implying that it shall continue to be so, namely, without being enlarged by the conquest of Judah. But some render the passage, 'It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass; though the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin. And within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people, even [though] the head of Ephraim,' etc.

⁷ The period thus defined includes the three successive strokes by which the power of the kingdom of Israel was annihilated: namely, the two invasions of Tiglath-pileser and Shalmanezzer (2 Kings xv. 29; xvii. 6), and the introduction of foreign colonists by Esar-haddon (2 Kings xvii. 24). The last event occurred just sixty-five years after this prediction.

⁸ That is, Ahaz and his attendants, who probably showed signs of distrust, which led to this additional message, offering and giving a sign.

⁹ A 'sign' is a sensible pledge, not necessarily miraculous, of the truth of something else. Here it is a token of the truth of what the prophet had promised in God's name.

¹⁰ When Ahaz was expressly commanded to ask for a sign, it was mere hypocrisy to allege the prohibition in Deut. vi. 6 as a reason for refusing.

¹¹ Other princes of the royal family may have been in attendance upon the king. The appellation 'house of David' was perhaps designed to remind them of the degeneracy of the princely house.

¹² Will ye try his patience?

¹³ Numerous interpretations have been given of this passage, which may be reduced to three principal divisions: (1.) Some refer the sign exclusively to an event shortly to take place—the birth of a child either of the prophet, or of Ahaz, or of some other person then present. But this appears wholly inconsistent with the use of the passage as quoted in Matt. i. 22, 23, and with the terms of other parts of this prophecy (see ch. ix. 6, 7)—terms wholly inapplicable to any ordinary human child. (2.) Others apply the passage exclusively to the Messiah. It is difficult, however, to see how the birth of a child seven hundred years afterwards could be a sign of present deliverance; and the language of vers. 15, 16 points to such a deliverance within the infancy of the child. (3.) Others again give the passage a double reference: first to some birth speedily to take place in the ordinary course of nature; and, secondly, to the miraculous incarnation of our Lord, of which the terms selected are peculiarly descriptive: and this appears the more natural as the prophecy evidently points both to a speedy deliverance, and to one more remote, but more glorious. The birth of the first child was a pledge of the former, that of the Messiah a more wonderful pledge of the second and greater.

- 15 Butter and honey shall he eat,
That he may know¹ to refuse the evil, and choose the good.
- 16 ^m For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good,
The land that thou abhorrest² shall be forsaken of ⁿ both her kings.
- 17 ^o The LORD shall bring upon thee,
And upon thy people,—and upon thy father's house,
Days that have not come,³ from the day that ^p Ephraim departed from Judah;
Even the king of Assyria.
- 18 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That the LORD ^q shall hiss for the fly⁴
That is in the uttermost part of the rivers of Egypt,
And for the bee that is in the land of Assyria.
- 19 And they shall come, and shall rest all of them
In the desolate valleys, and in ^r the holes of the rocks,
And upon all thorns, and upon all bushes.
- 20 In the same day shall the LORD shave with a ^s razor that is hired,⁵ Namely, by them beyond the river, by the king of Assyria,
'The head, and the hair of the feet:—and it shall also consume the beard.
- 21 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep;
- 22 And it shall come to pass,
For the abundance of milk that they shall give he shall eat butter:
For butter and honey shall every one eat that is left in the land.⁶
- 23 And it shall come to pass in that day,—that every place shall be,
Where there were a thousand vines at a thousand silverlings,⁷ ^u It shall even be for briers and thorns.
- 24 With arrows and with bows⁸ shall men come thither;
Because all the land shall become briers and thorns.
- 25 And on all hills that shall be digged with the mattock,
There shall⁹ not come thither the fear of briers and thorns:
But it shall be for the sending forth of oxen,
And for the treading of lesser cattle.
- 8 Moreover the LORD said unto me, ^x Take thee a great roll, and ^y write in it 2 with a man's pen¹⁰ concerning Maher-shalal-hash-baz. And I took unto me faithful witnesses to record, ^z Uriah¹¹ the priest, and Zechariah the son of before the child shall have knowledge to cry, My father, and my mother, ^b the riches of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of Assyria.

- 5 The LORD spake also unto me again, saying,

1 Rather, 'until he know,' etc. As butter and honey are represented in ver. 22 as an abundant spontaneous production of the country, arising from sparseness of population and neglect of tillage, this must be understood as a prediction that the desolation of the land should be but temporary, or until the child should 'know how to refuse the evil,' etc.

2 Or, 'The land by whose two kings thou art distressed shall be forsaken,' i. e. by its inhabitants; given up to desolation.

3 The Assyrian invasion would both cause much personal suffering and national depression, and destroy the independence of the people, by reducing them to a state of vassalage (see notes on 2 Kings xviii. 7, 15): and ever since the days of Ahaz, with the exception of very brief periods, the Jews have been subject to foreign domination.

4 These figures well represent the numbers and destructiveness of their enemies. The fly is peculiarly appropriate to Egypt, where the moist heat produces it in abundance: see Exod. viii. 16, and note. Egypt and Assyria were the two rival powers whose contention caused such suffering to Judah. See note on 2 Kings xvii. 4.

5 Ahaz had hired the help of the king of Assyria with the treasures of God's house; and God would hire or allure him by the plunder and conquest of the land.

The head and feet, as the two extremities, represent the whole body, and the beard what was most valued and honoured.

6 The people, being too few and poor to till the land, should resume pastoral life.

7 Literally, 'pieces (probably shekels) of silver.' This was evidently the price of a valuable vineyard. Compare Sol. Song viii. 11.

8 Both for their own protection and for the chase.

9 Rather, 'Thou shalt not come thither for fear,' etc. This verse completes the description of the general desolation; thorns and briers being represented as growing on the terraced hills; and districts once carefully tilled being converted into dangerous solitudes, hunting grounds, and pastures.

10 That is, using common letters, instead of characters which were known only to a few. For the same purpose of legibility, the roll was to be large; and the letters, being few, would be large also. The name inscribed signifies 'Haste, spoil! quick, prey!'

11 Uriah was probably the high priest mentioned in 2 Kings xvi. 10—16, who joined with the king in profaning the temple. Zechariah might be the father-in-law of Ahaz (see 2 Kings xviii. 2). These men would be faithful (i. e. credible) witnesses, not on account of their probity, but because of their position, and their credit with the king and the people.

- 6 Forasmuch as this people¹ refuseth the waters of ^cShiloah that go softly,

1 This may mean either the people of Judah, in which case the next clause should be, 'and rejoice because of Rezin,' etc. (i. e. because of their withdrawal); or the people of both kingdoms (see ver. 14). If the latter be the meaning, then the next clause refers to the people of the ten tribes who are censured for trusting in their murderous usurper and his Syrian ally; and this clause to the people of Judah, who undervalued the protection and government of God. These blessings are represented by the 'waters of Shiloah,' which flowed from a perennial source under the temple on the eastern side of Jerusalem.

2 That is, the Euphrates, which aptly symbolized the Assyrian monarchy, because it overspreads its banks and inundates the surrounding country.

3 Rather, it.

4 That is, 'the land belonging to thee.' This brief apostrophe to Immanuel, the Messiah, suggests a future deliverance, and leads on to an ironical invitation to all the enemies of Israel to do their worst, of the failure of which the name Immanuel—'God with us'—was a standing pledge (ver. 10).

5 That is, by a strong prophetic impulse: see Ezek. iii. 14.

6 This may refer to the alliance between Syria and Israel, which was causing so much alarm to Judah, or to the alliance which Ahaz was making with Assyria for his protection. Instead of looking to man with fear or hope, let Jehovah's perfections and will be duly revered (ver. 13), and he will be to you 'a sanctuary,' an asylum from danger, such as the Assyrian monarch cannot afford you; whilst He will be a destroyer, worse than Rezin or Pekah, to those who distrust and disobey him (14, 15). This involves a general principle, and is therefore applied to Christ and the Gospel. See refs., and comp. 2 Cor. ii. 16.

7 Vers. 16–20 seem to be a parenthesis, designed to encourage the faithful Israelites in patiently believing God's 'testimony' (his promise), and keeping God's 'law,' thus being witnesses to the people of his truth, in opposition to those who vainly sought light ('the dawn' of hope), by forbidden arts. Isaiah here (like David in Psa. xvi., xxii., xl.) personifies the great Teacher of the church, who thus instructs and cheers his 'disciples,' his 'children.' See Heb. ii. 12, 13.

8 That is, 'chirp' like small fowl. So also in ch. x. 14. This feeble sound was supposed to be made by the spirits with whom the wizards professed to deal.

9 That is, Should they resort, in behalf of the living, to the dead?

10 Rather, 'they are they to whom is no morning;' i. e. they shall have no relief, no prosperity. Compare ch. lviii. 8; Job xi. 17.

- 21 And they shall pass through it,¹ ^o hardly bestead² and hungry :

1 That is, through the land. The prophet here resumes the description of the unbelieving. The whole imagery is strongly expressive of intense anguish and desperation; the just consequence of rejecting Divine truth, and resorting to sinful inventions and practices.

2 That is, distressed.

3 It is perhaps best to regard this line as beginning a new sentence, and to render the passage thus: 'The dimness of anguish and darkness is dispelled; for dimness shall not be (i. e. shall not continue) for her who has anguish (who is now suffering). As the former time degraded the land of Zebulun, and the land of Naphtali; so the latter time honours the way of the sea, beyond (or beside) Jordan, Galilee of the nations.' The northern district of Palestine, which is here designated, first by the tribes which occupied it, and then by its position, was peculiarly exposed both to the debasing influence of Gentile superstitions, and to the attacks of foreign enemies, who usually entered Canaan from the north (see 2 Kings xv. 29). But it was here that He first appeared who was to be a light to the nations, as well as the glory of Israel. See Matt. iv. 15, 16. The blessings of this restoration and the Divine agent who accomplishes it are celebrated in vers. 2—7.

4 Rather, 'Thou hast increased its joy.'

5 The staff with which the shoulder is smitten.

6 Rather, 'For all the armour of the armed men in the tumult, and the garment rolled in blood, shall be for burning and fuel of fire:' i. e. all warlike equipments shall be utterly destroyed, and war itself shall cease.

7 This magnificent prophecy cannot, without extravagance, be applied to any other sovereign than Immanuel already predicted. The ancient Jews were unanimous in referring it to the Messiah; and, although these exact words are not quoted in the New Testament, the phraseology is evidently referred to in the annunciation of the birth of our Lord (Luke i. 28—33).

8 Referring probably to the badge of office, which was worn on the shoulder. In some cases this was a key. See ch. xxii. 22.

9 Literally, 'Wonder.' He is so in all respects, in his person, sufferings, and works.

10 That is, Prophet, or authoritative teacher of the truth.

11 Literally, 'Father of Eternity:' eternal in his own existence, and the Giver of eternal life to others. The combination of this with his birth as a child is a very clear declaration of the union of God and man in the person of Christ.

12 This is a regular poem of four stanzas (ch. ix. 8—x. 4), forcibly describing the crimes and punishment of the ten tribes. The first stanza refers to their proud self-sufficiency, which shall be humbled by invasion (ix. 8—12); the second, to their alienation from Jehovah, for which those who lead astray and those who are led astray shall perish together (13—17); the third, to prevalent vice, which produces civil discord as its natural punishment (18—21); and the fourth, to the perversion of justice, which is to be requited by desolating tyranny (x. 1—4). Each stanza closes with an awful intimation that the threatened punishment would neither soften the sinner's heart nor expiate his guilt.

13 Light and worthless timber.

- 11 Therefore the LORD ^y shall set up the adversaries of Rezin¹ against him,
And join² his enemies together;
- 12 The Syrians before, and ^z the Philistines behind;
And they shall devour Israel with open mouth.
^a For all this his anger is not turned away,—but his hand is stretched out still.
- 13 For ^b the people turneth not unto him that smiteth them,
^c Neither do they seek the LORD of hosts.
- 14 ^d Therefore the LORD will cut off from Israel
Head and tail, branch³ and rush, ^e in one day.
- 15 ^f The ancient⁴ and honourable, he is the head;
And the prophet that teacheth lies, he is the tail.
- 16 For ^g the leaders of this people cause them to err;
And they that are led of them are destroyed.
- 17 Therefore the LORD ^h shall have no joy in their young men,
Neither shall have mercy on their fatherless and widows:
ⁱ For every one is an hypocrite and an evildoer,—and every mouth speaketh folly.
^k For all this his anger is not turned away,—but his hand is stretched out still.
- 18 For wickedness ^l burneth as the fire:—^m it shall devour the briers⁵ and thorns, ⁿ And shall kindle in the thickets of the forest,
And they shall mount up like the lifting up of smoke.
- 19 Through the wrath of the LORD of hosts ^o the land darkened,⁶
And the people shall be as the fuel of the fire:—^p no man shall spare his brother.
- 20 And he⁷ shall snatch on the right hand, and be hungry;
And he shall eat on the left hand, ^q and they shall not be satisfied:
^r They shall eat every man the flesh of his own arm:
- 21 Manasseh, Ephraim; and Ephraim, Manasseh:
And they together shall be against Judah.
^s For all this his anger is not turned away,—but his hand is stretched out still.
- 10 Woe unto them that ^t decree unrighteous decrees,
And that write grievousness which they have prescribed;
- 2 ^u To turn aside the needy from judgment,
And to take away the right from the poor of my people, ^x That widows may be their prey,—and that they may rob the fatherless!
- 3 And ^y what will ye do in ^z the day of visitation,
And ^a in the desolation which shall come from far?
To whom will ye flee for help?—and ^b where will ye leave your glory?
- 4 ^c Without me they shall bow down under the prisoners,
And they shall fall under the slain.⁸
^d For all this his anger is not turned away,—but his hand is stretched out still.

1 The Assyrians, by whom, under Tiglath-pileser, Rezin was slain, would invade Israel also; and the Syrians and Philistines would join the conqueror, and rush into and pillage the country. See 2 Kings xvii. 6.

2 Or, 'instigate,' 'excite.'

3 Properly, the palm-branch; which grows at the summit of the tree, and is therefore very appropriately contrasted with the rush.

4 Rather, 'the elder;' that is, ruler. The false prophets are called 'the tail,' because of their base servility to these wicked rulers.

5 The wicked are often compared to thorns and briers, fit only to be burned up. See ch. xxxiii. 12.

6 Or, 'burnt;' or, 'consumed.'

7 That is, the people. These fearful horrors of civil war were doubtless realized in the unsettled period described in 2 Kings xv.; on which see the notes.

8 Or, perhaps, 'Without me (forsaken by me) he bends down a prisoner, and down they shall fall slain.'

9 The following prophecy refers to the invasion of Judah by Sennacherib. It was probably of later date than the preceding, being delivered after the destruction of Samaria (see ver. 11); but if it were so, it was evidently necessary to complete this series. Great as is the power and pride of the Assyrians, they are but God's instruments (vers. 5—11); and he will punish them when they have done his work (12—19), and will deliver the remnant of Israel, as of old he had saved them from Midian and Egypt (20—27). Their approach to Jerusalem will be rapid, near, and terrible; but their destruction shall be sudden and complete (28—34).

10 That is, in the hand of the Assyrians. They who smote the Israelites with their rod were themselves only a rod in God's hand.

11 Rather, polluted. See Job viii. 13.

12 Whilst wicked men form and pursue their plans, God is making them subservient to his purposes. Comp. ver. 12, and note on 1 Kings xii. 15.

- But it is ^h in his heart to destroy—and cut off nations not a few.
 8 ⁱ For he saith, *Are not my princes altogether kings?*¹
 9 Is not ^m Calno as ⁿ Carchemish?—is not ^o Hamath as Arpad?
Is not Samaria ^p as Damascus?²
 10 As my hand hath found³ ^q the kingdoms of the idols,
 And whose graven images did excel⁴ them of Jerusalem and of Samaria;
 11 Shall I not, ^r as I have done unto Samaria and her idols,
 So do to Jerusalem and her idols?
 12 Wherefore it shall come to pass,
That ^s when the Lord hath performed his whole work
^t Upon mount Zion and on Jerusalem,
^u I will punish ^v the fruit of the stout heart of the king of Assyria,
 And the glory of his ^w high looks.
 13 ^z For he saith, By the strength of my hand I have done it,
 And by my wisdom; for I am prudent:
 And I have removed the bounds of the people,—and have robbed their treasures,
 And I have put down the inhabitants like a valiant man:
 14 And ^a my hand hath found as a nest the riches of the people:
 And as one gathereth eggs that are left,—have I gathered all the earth;
 And there was none that moved the wing,—or opened the mouth, or ^b peeped.
 15 Shall ^c the ax boast itself against him that heweth therewith?
Or shall the saw magnify itself against him that shaketh it?
 As if the rod should shake itself against them that lift it up,
Or as if the staff should lift up itself, as if it were no wood.⁵
 16 ^d Therefore shall the Lord, the Lord of hosts, send among his ^e fat ones leanness;
^f And under his glory he shall kindle a burning like the burning of a fire.
 17 And ^g the light of Israel shall be for a fire,—and his Holy One ^h for a flame:
ⁱ And it shall burn and devour—his thorns and his briers in one day;
 18 And shall consume⁶ the glory of his forests, and of ^j his fruitful field,
 Both soul and body:
 And they shall be as when a standardbearer⁷ fainteth.
 19 And the rest of the trees of his forest shall be few,—that a child may write them.
 20 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That ^k the remnant of Israel, and such as are escaped of the house of Jacob,
^l Shall no more again stay upon him that smote them;
^m But shall stay upon the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, in truth.
 21 ⁿ The remnant shall return,⁸ even the remnant of Jacob, unto the mighty God.
 22 ^o For though thy people Israel be as the sand of the sea,
^p Yet a remnant of them shall return:
^q The consumption decreed shall overflow with [or, in] righteousness.
 23 ^r For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined,
 In the midst of all the land.
 24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God of hosts,
^s O my people that dwellest in Zion,—^t be not afraid of the Assyrian:
 He shall smite thee with a rod,
 And shall lift up his staff against thee, after the manner of ^u Egypt.
 25 ^v For yet a very little while, ^w and the indignation shall cease;
 And mine anger in their destruction.
 26 And the Lord of hosts shall stir up ^x a scourge for him,
 According to the slaughter of ^y Midian at the rock of Oreb:
 And ^z as his rod was upon the sea, so shall he lift it up after the manner of Egypt.⁹

² That is, 'Have they not been equally subdued by me?' All these towns were on the line of march from Nineveh to Jerusalem.

³ As a man finds and easily takes a nest: compare ver. 14.

⁴ As though Jehovah were a mere tutelary deity of a particular land. Comp. 2 Kings xviii., xix., and notes.

⁶ Compare with this the vaunts of the Assyrian messengers in ch. xxxvii. 24. 'Forest' and 'fruitful field' together represent the whole of a fertile land.

⁷ Rather, 'And it shall be like the wasting away of a sick man.'

⁸ Alluding to the name of the prophet's son: see ch. vii. 3. The return predicted evidently includes a return to God by true repentance (see Rom. ix. 27, 28); and both are the result of the 'righteousness' (or combined justice and mercy) with which the decreed 'consumption' (or destruction) should overflow.

¹ Literally, 'from the face of oil;' a phrase very difficult of explanation. Some suppose it to mean, 'because of the unction,' i. e. of the Holy Spirit: see note on ver. 21. Some, following the Targum, take it to mean 'because of the anointed,' i. e. the royal successors of David, especially the Messiah. Others render it, 'The yoke (of Israel) is broken from fatness;' the figure being taken from a fat ox, which breaks and casts off the yoke: comp. Deut. xxxii. 15; Hos. iv. 16.

² The prophet here describes, in the vivid language of an eye-witness, the march of Sennacherib towards Jerusalem. The places mentioned belonged to the kingdom of Judah, and lay near the city. See refs.

³ Rather, baggage. Michmash was a strong post commanding a 'passage,' or defile (ver. 29; 1 Sam. xiii. 23), well fitted for a military dépôt.

⁵ Or, 'to-day,' resting there one day, within sight of the city which he threatens with assault on the morrow. But there he shall suddenly fall like a haughty (or lofty) tree felled by the axe (vers. 33, 34). Comp. Ezek. xxxi.

⁶ In the last portion (ch. xi., xii.) of this series of prophecies, temporal deliverances are left behind, and the eye of the seer is fixed exclusively upon the Messiah, whom he had before announced (ch. vii. 14; ix. 6, 7). See Rom. xv. 12. He is now exhibited as springing from the royal house of Judah when reduced to its ancient obscurity (ver. 1), and as enriched with abundant measures of Divine influence, so as to rule righteously and prosperously (2—5). His reign, therefore, is one of perfect peace (6—9), under which Gentiles and Israelites shall be united (10—13), triumphing over all enemies and obstacles (14—16), and singing (as formerly at the Red Sea) the praises of Jehovah the Saviour (ch. xii.)

⁹ This beautiful representation of universal peace evidently includes a radical change in the inward dispositions of those who will thus be brought to live in outward harmony. These happy transformations have been realized in every age in proportion as the influence of genuine Christianity has been felt.

And the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den.

- 9 ° They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain :
For ^p the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD,

^s Which shall stand for an ensign of the people ;
To it shall the ' Gentiles seek :—and ^u his rest shall be glorious.

- 12 ^a And he shall set up an ensign for the nations,

^b And shall assemble the outcasts of Israel,
And gather together ^c the dispersed⁵ of Judah—from the four corners of the earth.

- 13 ^d The envy also of Ephraim⁶ shall depart,

And the adversaries of Judah shall be cut off :
Ephraim shall not envy Judah,—and Judah shall not vex Ephraim.

- 14 But they shall fly⁷ upon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the west :

They shall spoil them of the east together ;
^e They shall lay their hand upon Edom and Moab ;
And the children of Ammon ^f shall obey them.

- 15 And the LORD ^g shall utterly destroy the tongue⁸ of the Egyptian sea ;

And with his mighty wind shall he ^h shake his hand over the river,
And shall smite it in the seven streams,⁹—ⁱ and make men go over dryshod.

- 16 And ^k there shall be an highway for the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria ;

^l Like as it was to Israel in the day that he came up out of the land of Egypt.

- 12 And ^m in that day thou shalt say,

ⁿ O LORD, I will praise thee :—^o though thou wast angry with me, Thine anger is turned away, and thou comfortedst me.

- 2 Behold, ^p God is my salvation ;—I will trust, and not be afraid :
For the LORD ^q JEHOVAH is my ^r strength and my song ;¹¹
He also is become my salvation.

- 3 Therefore with joy shall ye draw ^s water out of the wells of salvation.¹²

- 4 And in that day shall ye say,

^t Praise the LORD,—call upon his name [or, proclaim his name],
^u Declare his doings among the people,
Make mention that his ^x name is exalted.

- 5 ^y Sing unto the LORD ; for he hath done excellent things :
This is known in all the earth.

1 That is, completely filling its bed.

2 Rather, 'And in that day the root of Jesse which is standing shall be for a banner of the peoples ; to it the nations shall seek, and his dwelling-place shall be glory' (or glorious). The 'dwelling-place' is Zion (ch. xii. 6), as the representative of the church of Christ.

3 This restoration is called the 'second,' in reference to the deliverance of God's ancient people, either from Egypt, or, more probably, from Babylon ; so that the complete fulfilment of the prophecy is only to be expected when 'all Israel shall be saved.' See Rom. ch. xi. The countries specified after Assyria, the enemy then threatening Judah, are named in geographical order as surrounding Palestine, and are therefore to be taken for the whole earth (ver. 12). See Gen. x. ; Numb. xii. 1, and note ; and the map at p. 521.

4 Or, 'the coast-land of the sea ;' i. e. the Mediterranean Sea : meaning such parts of Europe as were then known.

5 The word 'outcasts' is masculine, the word 'dispersed' feminine ; thus including all.

6 See notes on Judg. viii. 1 ; 1 Kings xi. 28 ; and on title of Ps. lxxviii.

7 That is, 'They shall pounce upon' them like birds of prey. The tribes, instead of attacking one another, shall unite, as in David's days, against their common enemies. 'The children of the East' are Edom, Moab, and Ammon, the exalters of the great confederacies against Israel mentioned in 2 Sam. viii., x. These evidently include all the enemies of the chosen people.

8 The narrow Gulf of Suez, through which a dry passage was made for the Israelites (Exod. xiv.)

9 Rather, 'into seven streams.' The 'river' is the Euphrates, which shall not be a greater obstacle to the return than the Jordan had been to the entrance into their land (Josh. iii.) Thus all past triumphs and miraculous deliverances are to be surpassed in this glorious restoration. Many understand this as referring to an actual return of the Jews to Canaan ; and there is no necessity for excluding that supposition : but it is important to regard the whole as symbolical of spiritual deliverance, peace, and triumph.

10 This psalm of the church of united Jews and Gentiles is a counterpart to Miriam's song in Exod. xv. Only one passage, however, is borrowed from it. Comp. ver. 2, and Exod. xv. 2.

11 That is, 'the source of my protection and the subject of my praise.'

12 There may be an allusion here to the miraculous supply of water to the Israelites in the wilderness ; which was afterwards celebrated with great pomp on the last day of the feast of tabernacles. See note on Lev. xxiii. 34. The blessings of salvation are often compared to water. See ch. lv. 1 ; John iv. 10 ; Rev. xxii. 1, 17.

6 ^z Cry out and shout, thou inhabitant of Zion :
For great is ^a the Holy One of Israel ^b in the midst of thee.

Prophecy against Babylon.

13 THE¹ ^c BURDEN² OF ^d BABYLON, WHICH ISAIAH THE SON OF AMOZ DID SEE.

2 ^e Lift ye up a banner ^f upon the high³ mountain,
Exalt the voice unto them, ^g shake the hand,

^h That they may go into the gates of the nobles.⁴

3 ⁱ I have commanded my sanctified⁵ ones,
I have also called ^h my mighty ones for mine anger,
Even them that ^j rejoice in my highness.⁶

4 The noise of a multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people ;
A tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together :

^m The LORD of hosts mustereth the host of the battle.

5 They come ⁿ from a far country, from the end of heaven,⁷
Even the LORD, ^o and the weapons of his indignation,—to destroy the whole land.

6 Howl ye ; ^p for the day of the LORD is at hand ;
^q It shall come as a destruction⁸ from the Almighty.

7 Therefore shall all hands be faint [or, fall down^r],
And every man's heart shall ^s melt :

8 And they shall be afraid : ' pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them ;
They shall be in pain as a woman that travaileth :
They shall be amazed one at another ;—their faces shall be as flames.⁹

9 Behold, ^u the day of the LORD cometh,
Cruel¹⁰ both with wrath and fierce anger,—to lay the land desolate :
And he shall destroy ^x the sinners thereof out of it.

10 For ^y the stars of heaven and the constellations¹¹ thereof shall not give their light :
The sun shall be ^z darkened in his going forth,
And the moon shall not cause her light to shine.

11 And I will punish the world¹² for their evil,—and the wicked for their iniquity ;
^a And I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease,
And will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible.

12 I will make ^b a man more precious than fine gold ;
Even a man than the golden wedge¹³ of Ophir.

13 ^c Therefore I will shake the heavens,—and the earth shall remove out of her place,
In the wrath of the LORD of hosts,—and in ^d the day of his fierce anger.

14 And it shall be as¹⁴ the chased roe,—and as a sheep that no man taketh up :
^e They shall every man turn to his own people,
And flee every one into his own land.

15 ^f Every one that is found shall be thrust through ;
And every one that is joined unto them shall fall by the sword.

16 Their children also shall be ^g dashed to pieces before their eyes ;
Their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished.

17 ^h Behold, I will stir up the Medes¹⁵ against them, ⁱ Which shall not regard silver ;—and as for gold, they shall not delight in it.

¹ The third section of Isaiah's prophecies, including chapters xiii.—xxiii., is directed against foreign enemies. The first of these is Babylon (ch. xiii., xiv.), which was not, at this time, very powerful, and had not come into collision with the Hebrew monarchy. The prophet hears Jehovah's summons, and the noise of many nations gathering to his standard against Babylon (vers. 2—5) ; depicts the alarm of the Chaldeans (6—8) ; the terrible convulsions, carnage, and destruction attending the invasion of the pitiless Medes (9—18) ; and the subsequent desolation of the city and country (19—22). He then shows that all this was to be done for the deliverance of the Jews (ch. xiv. 1, 2), for whose use he prepares a song of triumph (3—23) ; and he connects with it the total and permanent downfall of Assyrian domination (24—27).

² This word is most commonly applied to threatenings.

³ Rather, 'bare.'

⁴ That is, of Babylon. See note on Job xxi. 28.

⁵ That is, 'consecrated ones;' my chosen and appointed instruments. The leaders and armies are spoken of as mustering under the command of Jehovah.

⁶ Or, 'my proud exulters;' probably alluding to the character of the Persians.

⁷ Where the heaven meets the earth ; that is, the horizon. The 'mountains' (ver. 4) are those of Media and Persia.

⁸ Literally, 'as might from the Almighty.' As if the prophet had said, 'His destroying might shall be to you the proof that he is 'the Almighty.''

⁹ That is, flushed by intense inward agitation.

¹⁰ That is, in which no mercy can be shown. Compare Jer. vi. 23 ; l. 42.

¹¹ Heb., 'its Chesilim' (see note on Job ix. 9) ; i. e. its most brilliant constellations. The extinction of the very sources of light represents complete and irreparable destruction. See refs.

¹² The extensive empire of Babylon is here called 'the world,' as the Roman was afterwards (Luke ii. 1).

¹³ Rather, simply 'gold of Ophir.' The terrible slaughter should make men rarer than gold. Comp. ch. iv. 1.

¹⁴ Or, 'And it shall be that, as,' etc.

¹⁵ The Medes are mentioned, according to frequent usage, as being at first more numerous and powerful than their allies, the Persians. Their disregard of wealth, which usually attracts invaders, their skillful archery, and their savage cruelty, are particularly noticed by the historians Herodotus, Xenophon,

- 18 Their bows also ^k shall dash the young men to pieces ;
And they shall have no pity on the fruit of the womb ;
Their eye shall not spare children.
- 19 ^l And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms,—the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, Shall be as when God overthrew ^m Sodom and Gomorrah.
- 20 ⁿ It shall never be inhabited,
Neither shall it be dwelt in, from generation to generation :
Neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there ;
Neither shall the shepherds make their fold there. ¹
- 21 ^o But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there ;
And their houses shall be full of doleful creatures ;
And owls shall dwell there,—and satyrs shall dance there.
- 22 And the wild beasts of the islands shall cry in their desolate houses [or, palaces],
And dragons in their pleasant palaces : ²
^p And her time is near to come,—and her days shall not be prolonged.
- 14 For the LORD ^q will have mercy on Jacob,—and ^r will yet choose Israel,
^s And set ³ them in their own land :—^t and the strangers shall be joined with them,
And they shall cleave to the house of Jacob.
- 2 And the people shall take them, ^u and bring them to their place :
^x And the house of Israel shall possess them in the land of the LORD,
For servants and handmaids :
And they shall take them captives, whose captives they were ;
^y And they shall rule over their oppressors.
- 3 And it shall come to pass ^z in the day that the LORD shall give thee rest from thy sorrow, and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast
- 4 made to serve, that thou ^a shalt take up this proverb ⁴ against the king of How hath the oppressor ceased !—the ^b golden city [or, exactress of gold] ceased !

- 5 The LORD hath broken ^c the staff of the wicked,—and the sceptre of the rulers.

Diodorus Siculus, and Ammianus Marcellinus. At the time when this prophecy was delivered, the Medes, like the Babylonians, were subject to the Assyrians; but they threw off the yoke soon after Sennacherib's disaster. See Chron. Table (p. 518), B. C. 713, 709; and Herod. i. 95, et seq.

¹ So exactly has this prophecy been accomplished, that recent travellers have found the Arabs of the neighbourhood superstitiously afraid of passing a single night upon the site of Babylon.

² Rather, 'And their houses shall be full of howlings, and ostriches shall dwell there, and shaggy [goats] shall gambol there, and jackals shall cry in their palaces, and monsters in their halls of pleasure,' etc. The wildest of animals shall be at home in the palaces, and the voice of joy shall be exchanged for howling. For the exact fulfilment of the prophecy, see Newton on the Prophecies, Diss. 15; and Keith's Evidence of Prophecy.

⁴ Or, 'ode.' This triumphal song celebrates the overthrow of the Chaldean tyranny (vers. 4–6), which causes the whole earth to rejoice (7, 8), and arouses even the regions of the dead, where the departed kings receive the fallen monarch with astonishment and exultation (9–11). It forcibly contrasts his former pride of power with his terrible fall, and describes his want even of burial, the destruction of his race, and the desolation of his land (12–23). It closes with a sign of the certainty of its accomplishment derived from the speedy overthrow of the Assyrian power (24–27).

⁵ Rather, 'with a tyranny without restraint;' corresponding to the preceding clause, 'with a stroke without cessation.'

⁶ For similar personifications of inanimate nature, see refs.

⁷ Here put for music in general (see ch. v. 12), i. e. mirth and revelry.

⁸ The morning-star. A star is a symbol of royalty (Numb. xxiv. 17); and the brilliant morning-star is an emblem of peculiar glory (Rev. ii. 28; xxii. 16). It therefore well represents the imperial grandeur of the king of Babylon.

⁹ Rather, 'who didst lord it over the nations.'

- 13 For ^m thou hast said in thine heart,
ⁿ I will ascend into heaven,—^o I will exalt my throne above the stars of God :
 I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, ^p in the sides of the north :¹
 14 ^q I will ascend above the heights of the clouds ;—^r I will be like the Most High.
 15 Yet thou ^s shalt be brought down to hell,—^t to the sides of the pit.
 16 They that see thee shall narrowly look upon thee,—and consider thee, saying, ^u Is this the man that made the earth to tremble,—that did shake kingdoms ;
 17 That made the world as a wilderness,—and destroyed the cities thereof ;
That opened not the house of his prisoners ?
 18 ^x All the kings of the nations, even all of them,
 Lie in glory, every one ^y in his own house.
 19 ^z But thou art cast out of thy grave²—like an abominable branch,
*And as the raiment*³ of those that are slain, thrust through with a sword,
 That go down to the stones of the pit ;—as a carcase trodden under feet.
 20 Thou shalt not be joined with them in burial,
 Because thou hast destroyed thy land,—and slain thy people :
^a The seed of evil doers shall never be renowned.
 21 Prepare⁴ slaughter for his children,—^b for the iniquity of their fathers ;
 That they do not rise, nor possess the land,—nor fill the face of the world with cities.
 22 For I will rise up against them,—saith the LORD of hosts,
 And cut off from Babylon ^c the name, and ^d remnant,
^e And son, and nephew, saith the LORD.
 23 ^f I will also make it a possession for the bittern,⁵ and pools of water :
 And I will sweep it with the besom of destruction,—saith the LORD of hosts.⁶
 24 The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying,
^g Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass ;
 And as I have purposed, so shall it stand :
 25 That ^h I will break the Assyrian in my land,
 And upon my mountains tread him under foot :
 Then shall ⁱ his yoke depart from off them,
 And his burden depart from off their shoulders.
 26 This⁷ is the purpose that is purposed upon the whole earth :
 And this is the hand that is stretched out upon all the nations.
 27 For the LORD of hosts hath ^k purposed, and who shall disannul it ?
 And his hand is stretched out, and who shall turn it back ?

² On the importance attached to burial in the royal sepulchres, see 2 Chron. xxi. 20 ; xxiv. 16 ; Jer. xxii. 19.

³ Rather, 'clothed,' or 'clad with the slain, the thrust-through,' etc. ; i. e. lying in a confused heap of the slain, and covered by them.

⁴ Let the whole race be destroyed. Comp. 2 Kings x. 11, 14, 17. None of the ancient royal family of Babylon ever regained the throne ; and the Babylonian empire never rose again.

⁵ Heb., 'the kippod,' which, from Zeph. ii. 14, appears to be a bird. The bittern is found among the ruins on the Euphrates.

⁶ The manner in which the preceding prophecy received its accomplishment will be seen from the following summary of the more remarkable vicissitudes which Babylon has undergone. It attained its highest splendour under Nebuchadnezzar, about 600 years B. C., soon after the fall of the Assyrian empire and its capital Nineveh. About 538 B. C., agreeably to the prophecies of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Daniel, the city was taken by the Medo-Persian army under Cyrus. In consequence of a rebellion of the inhabitants about the year 517 B. C.,

Darius Hystaspis ordered its gates to be taken away, and its walls to be lowered. In the year 477 B. C., Xerxes plundered and destroyed the temple of Belus. After its conquest by Seleucus Nicator, B. C. 312, it fell still further into decay, especially in consequence of the erection of Seleucia on the Tigris, which that king made his residence ; it was then made a royal park for wild beasts, and was gradually reduced to its present desolate state.

⁷ The overthrow of Assyria and the fall of Babylon, however remote from each other, were both partial executions of one general decree against all powers which should oppose the people and kingdom of God.

⁸ The new title and specification of time here given show that this is a distinct prophecy.

⁹ The Philistines, whose district is here called 'Palestina,' are spoken of above (ch. ix. 11 ; xi. 14), and throughout the historical books of the Old Testament, as the hereditary enemies of Israel. They were subdued by David (2 Sam. v. 17—25 ; xxi. 15), and paid tribute to Jehoshaphat (2 Chron. xvii. 11) ; but rebelled against Jehoram (2 Chron. xxi. 16, 17), were chastised and subdued by Uzziah (2 Chron. xxvi. 6), and again revolted from Ahaz (2 Chron. xxviii. 18), and plundered the country of Judah. They are now threatened with severer afflictions, first by a king of David's house (comp. vers. 29, 30, and 2 Kings xviii. 8), and then by a host from the north (Assyria) which should crush them ; whilst Zion, trusting in Jehovah, should be delivered (vers. 31, 32 ; 2 Kings xviii. 13, etc.)

For out of the serpent's root shall come forth a cockatrice,

^a And his fruit shall be a fiery flying serpent.

30 And the firstborn of ^p the poor¹ shall feed,—and the needy shall lie down in safety :
And ^q I will kill thy root with famine,—and he shall slay thy remnant.

31 Howl, O gate ; cry, O city ;—thou, whole Palestina, art dissolved :

For there shall come from the north a smoke,²

And none shall be alone in his appointed times³ [or, assemblies].

32 What shall one then answer the messengers of the nation ?⁴

That ^r the LORD hath founded Zion, and ^s the poor of his people shall trust in it.

15 THE⁵ 'BURDEN' OF MOAB.

Because ^t in the night ^u Ar of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence ;

Because in the night ^v Kir of Moab is laid waste, and brought to silence.

2 ^w He⁶ is gone up to Bajith,⁷ and to Dibon, the high places, to weep :

Moab ^b shall howl over ^c Nebo, and over ^d Medeba :

^e On all their heads shall be baldness,—and every beard cut off.

3 In their streets ^f they shall gird themselves with sackcloth :

^g On the tops of their houses, and in their streets, every one shall howl,

Weeping abundantly [or, coming down with weeping].

4 And ^h Heshbon shall cry, and Elealeh :

Therefore the armed soldiers of Moab shall cry out ;

His life⁸ shall be grievous unto him.

5 ^k My heart shall cry out for Moab ;

His fugitives shall flee unto ^m Zoar, an ⁿ heifer of three years old :⁹

For ^o by the mounting up of Luhith with weeping shall they go it up ;

For in the way of Horonaim they shall raise up a cry of destruction.

6 For the waters ^p of Nimrim shall be desolate :

For the hay is withered away, ^r the grass faileth,—there is no green thing.

7 Therefore ^s the abundance they have gotten, and that which they have laid up,
Shall they¹⁰ carry away to the brook of the willows.

8 For the cry is gone round about the borders of Moab ;

The howling thereof unto Eglaim,—and the howling thereof unto Beer-elim.¹¹

9 For the waters of Dimon shall be full of blood :

For I will bring more¹² upon Dimon,¹³

^t Lions¹⁴ upon him that escapeth of Moab,—and upon the remnant of the land.

16 'Send ye the lamb¹⁵ to the ruler of the land

3 Rather, 'There is no straggler in his hosts.'

4 Of any nation which should send ambassadors to Judea. Whatever revolutions may occur, God is the protector of his people, and his enemies have no cause to rejoice.

5 Chapters xv., xvi. contain one connected prophecy against the Moabites ; who, after the death of Solomon, had transferred their allegiance from the crown of Judah to that of Israel. Soon after the death of Ahab, they refused their annual tribute (see 2 Kings iii. 5) ; and they appear not only to have maintained their independence, but also to have gained possession of some of the towns of Israel (compare Josh. xiii. 24—27), until the time of the Chaldean invasion, when, probably, this prophecy was fulfilled. The sudden capture of Ar, their capital, and Kir, their chief fortress (see note on 2 Kings iii. 25), spreads terror through the other cities, and causes the people to flee to the mountains and the deserts (xv. 1—9). The Moabites are therefore exhorted to renew their submission to the king of Judah, entreating his protection (xvi. 1—5) ; but this they are too proud to do (6), and must undergo sufferings so dreadful, that the very thought of them makes the prophet weep (7—12). An appendix, probably added at a later period, announces the near approach of the catastrophe (13, 14).

6 That is, the people.

7 Either 'the house,' i. e. the temple (compare ch. xvi. 12 ; Numb. xxii. 41) ; or, perhaps, the same as 'Beth-diblathaim' (Jer. xlviii. 22).

8 Or, 'His soul is distressed for himself.'

9 Like such a heifer, either for the vigour of its flight, or for the loudness of its voice. But the words may be the name of a town, 'Eglath-shalisha.'

10 That is, the Moabites. The brook is probably Wady-el-Achsa, the boundary between Moab and Idumea.

11 Perhaps, 'the well of the mighty ones,' Num. xxi. 18.

12 Heb., 'additions ;' i. e. more evils.

13 Probably the same as Dibon, ver. 2 ; the prophet returning to the point where he had begun.

14 Heb., 'a lion ;' a symbol of a mighty and cruel foe. Or the wild beasts themselves may be meant, as in Lev. xxvi. 22 ; 2 Kings xvii. 25.

15 That is, the tribute-lamb. See 2 Kings iii. 4, 5. By acknowledging the sovereignty of the race of David, the Moabites might put themselves under the protection of the Divine King of Israel.

16 Or, 'Petra' (see note on 2 Kings xiv. 7). 'Sela' and 'the desert' are probably put for the Moabite frontiers furthest from Palestine, and therefore include the whole land.

17 This is either a further advice to the Moabites wisely to prepare for the day of calamity by affording the Israelites an asylum ; or, more probably, the entreaty of the fugitive Moabites at the frontier, on the river Arnon, that the Hebrews would give them counsel and protection.

- ^v Make thy shadow as the night in the midst of the noonday;
Hide the outcasts;—bewray not him that wandereth.
- 4 ^z Let mine outcasts dwell with thee, Moab;¹
Be thou a covert to them from the face of the spoiler:
^a For the extortioner is at an end,—the spoiler ceaseth,
The oppressors are consumed out of the land.
- 5 And in mercy ^b shall the throne be established:
And he² shall sit upon it in truth, ^c in the tabernacle of David,
^d Judging, and seeking judgment,—and hasting righteousness.
- 6 We have heard of the ^e pride of Moab; he is very proud:
Even of his haughtiness, and his pride, and his wrath:
^f But his lies shall not be so.³
- 7 Therefore shall Moab ^g howl for Moab,—every one⁴ shall howl:
For the foundations⁵ ^h of Kir-hareseth shall ye mourn;—surely they are stricken.
- 8 For ⁱ the fields of Heshbon languish, and ^k the vine of Sibmah:
The lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof,
They⁶ are come even unto ^l Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness:
Her branches are stretched out,—they are gone over the sea.
- 9 Therefore ^m I will bewail with the weeping of Jazer the vine of Sibmah:
I will water thee with my tears, ⁿ O Heshbon, and Elealeh:
For the shouting for⁷ thy summer fruits and for thy harvest is fallen.
- 10 And ^o gladness is taken away, and joy out of the plentiful field;
And in the vineyards there shall be no singing, neither shall there be shouting:
The treaders shall tread out no wine in their presses;
I have made their vintage shouting to cease.
- 11 Wherefore ^p my bowels shall sound like an harp for Moab,
And mine inward parts for ^q Kir-haresh.
- 12 And it shall come to pass, when it is seen⁸
That Moab is weary on ^r the high place,
That he shall come to ^s his sanctuary to pray;—^t but he shall not prevail.
- 13 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning Moab since that time.⁹
- 14 But now the LORD hath spoken, saying,
Within three years, ^u as the years of an hireling,¹⁰
And ^x the glory of Moab shall be contemned,
With all that great multitude;—^y and the remnant shall be very small and feeble.

Prophecy against Syria and Ephraim, and the Assyrians.

- 17 ^z THE BURDEN OF ^a DAMASCUS.¹¹
Behold, ^b Damascus is taken away from being a city,
And it shall be a ruinous heap.
- 2 The cities of ^c Aroer¹² are forsaken:

1 Rather, 'Let the outcasts of Moab dwell with thee [O Judah]:' see the preceding note. This appeal is enforced by the considerations that the favour would not be needed long, and that the exercise of mercy towards Moab would tend to maintain and perpetuate the throne of the family of David (ver. 5).

2 Or, 'One shall sit.'

3 Rather, 'False are his pretensions.' This verse seems to give the reason for rejecting the petition of the Moabites.

4 Rather, 'all of it' (i. e. of Moab) 'shall howl.'

5 Or, 'the raisin-cakes,' as in Hos. iii. 1. See next verse.

6 Rather, 'They (the vines) reached to Jazer, they strayed to the desert; its branches were stretched out, they passed over to the sea.' 'The vine,' one of the chief products of the land, is here used to represent its wealth and glory. Comp. Ps. lxxx. 8—11.

7 Or, 'alarm is fallen upon thy summer fruits,' etc.

8 Rather, 'When Moab has appeared (i. e. before his gods), when he has wearied himself on the high-place, and has gone to his sanctuary to pray, yet he shall not prevail.' Comp. ch. xv. 2.

9 Or, 'of old.'

10 That is, years exactly computed. That the Moabites were sufferers from the repeated Assyrian inroads into the district there can be little doubt. But ver. 13 seems to intimate that this was an addition at a later time, when God had revealed to some later prophet the speedy fulfilment of the foregoing predictions.

11 Although this prophecy (vers. 1—11) is nominally against Damascus only, it includes the allied kingdom of Samaria. Of both these powers it is foretold, that their cities and fortresses should be destroyed (vers. 1—3), and that a remnant only of the population should be left (4, 5), although their overthrow would not be entire and remediless (6). This chastisement should lead the people to turn from idolatry to Jehovah (7, 8); but their repeated forgetfulness of God would bring upon them repeated judgments (9—11). The prophet then turns to the Assyrians, the instruments of God's judgments, and describes the onset of their hosts, and their sudden destruction (12—14); information of which is to be given to the messengers of Egypt and Cush, that they may acknowledge God's power (ch. xviii). The former parts of this prophecy were fulfilled by the invasions of Tiglath-pileser (2 Kings xv. 29; xvi. 9) and Shalmanezar (2 Kings xvii.)

12 This is probably not the Aroer on the river Arnon (Josh. xiii. 16), but another 'before Rabbah' (Josh. xiii. 25), not far from Ramoth-gilead. Whilst the Moabites had taken advantage of the weakness of the kingdom of Israel to seize some of the southern towns on the east of the Jordan, the Syrians had gained possession of those of Gilead and Bashan. See 1 Kings xxii. 3; 2 Kings x. 32, 33. The 'cities of Aroer' may be its dependent towns.

1 See ver. 4. The allied nations shall fare alike.

2 See note on Josh. xv. 8.

3 Rather, 'gleanings shall be left in it, as the beating of an olive tree.' Olives being gathered (as walnuts are with us) by beating the tree with a stick, a few at the top would frequently remain unobserved. See Deut. xxiv. 20.

4 See notes on Judg. ii. 13; iii. 7. The 'images' are 'pillars of the sun' connected with the worship of Baal. See 2 Chron. xiv. 5; xxxiv. 4.

5 Rather, 'from before.' A few cities shall be left for the small remnant in the land.

6 These 'plants' and 'strange slips' probably refer to foreign idols, and the sinful gratifications connected with their worship.

7 Rather, 'Ho! the noise of many people,' etc.; 'and the rushing of nations,' etc.

8 Threshing-floors were commonly on hills. See 2 Sam. xxiv. 18, and note.

9 Rather, 'Ho!'—a call to attention. The great variety of interpretations given of vers. 1, 2 indicates their obscurity, which has not yet been removed. They appear to be a call to Egypt, which at the time when this prophecy was fulfilled was under the dominion of Tirhakah, a powerful Cushite (or Ethiopian) king, to send messengers to see what God is doing to the mighty hosts of the Assyrians in order to deliver his people. This would be an impressive lesson both to the Egyptians and to the Jews. See ch. xxx. 2.

10 Rather, 'of papyrus,' of which the Egyptians appear to have made light boats (as the modern Abyssinians still do) resembling the coracles of the ancient Britons.

11 Though the message was to be sent especially to Egypt, all the nations are summoned to attend.

- 4 For so the LORD said unto me,
I will take my rest,¹ and I will consider in my dwellingplace ^d Like a clear heat upon herbs,—and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest.
- 5 ^e For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect,
And the sour grape is ripening in the flower,
He shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks,
And take away and cut down the branches.
- 6 ^f They shall be left together
Unto the fowls of the mountains,—and to the beasts of the earth :
And the fowls shall summer upon them,
And all the beasts of the earth shall winter² upon them.
- 7 In that time ^g shall the present³ be brought unto the LORD of hosts
Of a people scattered and peeled,
And from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto ;
A nation meted out and trodden under foot,—whose land the rivers have spoiled, ^h To the place of the name of the LORD of hosts,—the mount Zion.

And ⁿ the heart of Egypt shall melt in the midst of it.
- 2 And I will ^o set the Egyptians against the Egyptians :

- 3 And ^p the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof ;

- 5 ^t And the waters shall fail from the sea,⁶
And the river shall be wasted and dried up.
- 6 And they shall turn the rivers far away ;⁷
And the brooks ^u of defence shall be emptied and dried up :
^v The reeds and flags shall wither.
- 7 The paper reeds⁸ by the brooks, by the mouth of the brooks
And every thing sown by the brooks,

¹ Jehovah will not at first interfere with the Assyrians, but will even favour their success to a certain point, as dew and sunshine promote the growth of plants ; but before their plans are executed, he will interpose and destroy them. Comp. Ps. 1. 21.

² 'Summer' and 'winter' include the whole year.

³ This may refer to offerings sent from Egypt to Jehovah : see 2 Chron. xxxii. 23.

⁴ From Judah's enemies the prophet turns to its chief ally, on which the Israelites too often trusted, and threatens Egypt with anarchy and tyranny (vers. 1—4) ; the failure of all its resources, both material (5—10) and intellectual (11—14), leaving it incapable and defenceless (15—17). After this, he promises deliverance to the Egyptians, consequent upon the introduction of the worship of God (18—22), in which Israel, Egypt, and Assyria are to be united and to be blessed together (23—25). It is probable that the threatenings refer, not to one particular catastrophe, but to the frequent invasions and oppressions to which the land of Egypt has been subject through successive ages to this day ; and that the promises, though partly fulfilled by the settlement of the Jews in the country, and the subsequent planting of Christianity there, yet await their full accomplishment.

⁵ The Egyptians have been in all ages, and still are, much addicted to the arts of divination.

⁶ That is, the Nile ; which, during its annual inundation, has all the appearance of a sea, and is still called by the people of Egypt by that name.

⁷ Rather, 'And the streams shall become putrid, the canals of Egypt shall be emptied and dried up : ' alluding to the offensive miasma exhaled by the half-dried canals.

⁸ Rather, 'The meadows along the river, at the brink of the river, shall wither,' etc. These would naturally be the last to suffer from a drought.

⁹ The Nile has always been celebrated for the quantity, variety, and excellence of its fish.

¹⁰ Both flax and cotton abounded in Egypt, and their culture and manufacture afforded support to many of its inhabitants.

¹¹ Rather, 'And her pillars are broken down, all labourers for hire are grieved at heart.' The distress affects all classes, both the nobles (or 'pillars') and the poor.

- 11 Surely ^b the princes of ^c Zoan¹ are fools,
The counsel of the wise counsellors of Pharaoh is become brutish :
How say ye unto Pharaoh,—I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings ?
- 12 ^d Where are they ? where are thy wise men ?
And ^e let them tell thee now, and let them know
What the LORD of hosts hath purposed upon Egypt.
- 13 The princes of Zoan are become fools,—^f the princes of Noph² are deceived ;
They have also seduced³ Egypt,—even they that are the stay of the tribes thereof.
- 14 The LORD hath mingled ^g a perverse spirit in the midst thereof :
And they have caused Egypt to err in every work thereof,
As a drunken man staggereth in his vomit.
- 15 ^h Neither shall there be any work for Egypt,
Which ⁱ the head or tail, branch or rush, may do.
- 16 In that day shall Egypt ^k be like unto women :—and it shall be afraid and fear
Because of the shaking of the hand of the LORD of hosts, ^l Which he shaketh over it.
- 17 And the land of Judah shall be a terror unto Egypt,⁴
Every one that maketh mention thereof shall be afraid in himself,
^m Because of the counsel of the LORD of hosts,
Which he hath determined against it.
- 18 In that day ⁿ shall five cities in the land of Egypt
^o Speak the language of Canaan,⁵—^p and swear to the LORD of hosts ;
One shall be called, The city of destruction [or, Heres, or, the sun].
- 19 In that day ^q shall there be an altar to the LORD
In the midst of the land of Egypt,
And a pillar⁶ at the border thereof to the LORD.
- 20 And ^r it shall be for a sign and for a witness unto the LORD of hosts in the land of Egypt :
For they shall cry unto the LORD ^s because of the oppressors,
And he shall send them a saviour,⁷ and a great one,—and he shall deliver them.
- 21 And the LORD shall be known to Egypt,
And the Egyptians shall know the LORD in that day,
And ^t shall do sacrifice and oblation ;
Yea, they shall vow a vow unto the LORD, and perform it.
- 22 And the LORD shall smite Egypt : ^u he shall smite and heal it :
And ^x they shall return even to the LORD,
And he shall be intreated of them, and shall heal them.
- 23 In that day ^y shall there be a highway⁸ out of Egypt to Assyria,
And the Assyrian shall come into Egypt,—and the Egyptian into Assyria,
And the Egyptians shall serve⁹ with the Assyrians.
- 24 In that day shall Israel be the third¹⁰ with Egypt and with Assyria, Even ^z a blessing in the midst of the land :
- 25 Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying,—Blessed be Egypt my people,
And Assyria ^a the work of my hands,—and ^b Israel mine inheritance.¹¹

² In Egyptian Men-nophri, and in modern Coptic Men-nouf. Hence it was called by the Hebrews Noph or Moph (Hos. ix. 6), and by the Greeks Memphis. It was situated not far from the modern Cairo, but on the west of the Nile ; and was the capital first of Lower Egypt, and then of the whole country, until superseded by Alexandria. Little now remains but vast mounds ; much of the materials having been used to build other cities.

³ Or, 'caused to err ;' as in the next verse.

⁴ This verse indicates the transition from suffering to repentance. The fulfilment of Jehovah's threatening against the Egyptians is to lead to a reverent regard both to his people (once despised) and to himself. 'In that day,' or when this is the case, many of the Egyptians shall embrace the customs and worship of the people of God (ver. 18).

⁵ The reception of a language implies the adoption of the customs of a people. Some interpret the numbers in this verse definitely, but apply them to different cities ; others regard 'five' as put for an indefinite number ; whilst a few suppose that 'five' will embrace true religion, for 'one' which will reject it and be devoted to 'destruction.' But most commentators prefer the marginal rendering of this last word, and apply the passage to Heliopolis, where a temple was erected, B. C. 149, after the model of that at Jerusalem. See sketch of the history of the Jews during the period between the Old and New Testaments, at the end of the Prophetical Books.

⁶ The honours which they once paid to their idols shall now be paid to Jehovah.

⁷ 'A deliverer.' He will do to them as he did to his people of old. Comp. Judg. iii. 9, where almost these very words are used.

⁸ Free communication and intimate union.

⁹ That is, shall serve God.

¹⁰ That is, the three nations shall be united as one people. The prophecy must be considered as referring rather to the spread of the true religion and the worship of the true God, than to a political or civil alliance.

¹¹ The three appellations here bestowed upon the three united nations indicate God's special choice and favour towards them. Comp. Exod. iii. 7, 10 ; v. 1 : Isa. xlv. 11 ; lx. 21 ; Eph. ii. 10 : Deut. xxxii. 9 ; Psa. xxviii. 9 ; xxxiii. 12. Egypt and Assyria having been enemies of God's people, the prophecy seems to intimate, not the destruction, but the conversion of those who had opposed his church, and their admission to the full enjoyment of gospel blessings.

Symbolical prophecy of the defeat and captivity of the Egyptians and Ethiopians.

20 IN¹ the year that ^cTartan came unto ^dAshdod,² (when Sargon³ the king of Assyria sent him,) and fought against Ashdod, and took it; at the same time spake the LORD by Isaiah the son of Amoz, saying, Go and loose ^ethe sackcloth from off thy loins, and put off thy shoe from thy foot. And he did so, ^fwalking naked⁴ and barefoot. And the LORD said, Like as my servant Isaiah hath walked naked and barefoot ^gthree years⁵ ^hfor a sign and wonder upon Egypt and upon Ethiopia; ⁱso shall the king of Assyria lead away the Egyptians prisoners, and the Ethiopians captives, young and old, naked and barefoot, ^keven with their buttocks uncovered, to the shame of Egypt. ^lAnd they⁶ shall be afraid and ashamed of Ethiopia their expectation, and of Egypt their glory. ^mAnd the inhabitant of this isle⁷ [or, country^m] shall say in that day, ⁿBehold, such is our expectation, whither we flee for help to be delivered from the king of Assyria: and how shall we escape?

² Ashdod, now Esdud, one of the five cities of the Philistines (see Josh. xv. 46, 47; 1 Sam. v. 1), was the key to Egypt on the side of Palestine; it was therefore strongly fortified, and was frequently attacked in the wars between Egypt and Assyria. Herodotus says that it sustained a siege of twenty-nine years by Psammethichus, king of Egypt.

⁴ That is, without the mantle of 'sackcloth' which prophets usually wore. See 1 Sam. xix. 23, 24, and note.

⁵ That is, either at intervals during that time; or (connecting the words, as in the Hebrew text, with what follows rather than with what precedes), for a three years' sign and wonder. The prediction which follows is supposed to have been fulfilled in the conquest of No-Ammon or Thebes, which is mentioned in Nah. iii. 8 as a recent event.

⁶ Those Jews who expected help from Egypt and Ethiopia.

⁷ Rather, 'coast;' referring to Palestine, which lay along the coast, here called 'this coast,' to distinguish it from Egypt, mentioned just before.

⁸ That the prophecy in vers. 1—10 relates to Babylon is evident from ver. 9. Its destruction by the Medes and Persians is again foretold; the events attending the siege being for the most part presented as though seen by an eye-witness. Respecting the scope of the two brief prophecies which follow, see notes on vers. 11, 13, 16.

⁹ The great Arabian Desert, stretching eastwards from Palestine towards Babylon and the Persian Gulf (or 'sea'). The whirlwinds which sweep over it from the immense expanse on the south are peculiarly 'terrible,' and might well represent the Medo-Persian invasion of Babylon.

¹⁰ The sighing which its tyranny had caused.

¹¹ Herodotus tells us that Babylon was captured on a night of revelling and festivity.

¹² Provide for security as well as festivity.

¹⁴ Or, 'And should he see cavalry, pairs of horsemen, ass-riders, camel-riders, then shall he hearken with the utmost attention.' The Persians used both camels and asses in their armies, the former partly for the purpose of frightening the horses of the enemy. Xenophon represents the Persian cavalry as advancing two by two.

¹⁵ Rather, 'He cried as a lion.' See Rev. x. 3.

¹⁶ That is, spake again. The word 'answer' is often used, both in Hebrew and Greek, for the resumption of discourse by the same speaker.

And all the glory of ^p Kedar shall fail :
17 And the residue of the number of archers,
The mighty men of the children of Kedar,⁸ shall be diminished :

1 That is, 'O my oppressed and afflicted people,' language of tenderness addressed to the Jews.

2 'Dumah' was an Arabian town and district lying south of Edom, and the name is perhaps here used for Edom, as the voice is represented as coming from 'Seir.' This prophecy is obscure from its brevity ; but its position here, as connected with the preceding one respecting Babylon, is illustrated by Psa. cxxxvii. 7.

3 'Night' commonly represents calamity, as day-break does deliverance. The question here therefore imports, How much of this calamity has passed over, and what prospect is there of relief?

4 Most interpreters apply 'the morning' to the return of prosperity to the Jews ; and 'the night' to future calamities of the Idumeans, who are directed, if they would know more, to make inquiry at another time.

5 The Dedanites (see Gen. x. 7) were probably a Cushite tribe on the east of Arabia. They were a mercantile people, trading with Tyre in ivory, ebony, etc. (see Ezek. xxvii. 15, 20 ; xxxviii. 13). The interruption of their caravans is alluded to as a proof of the disturbed state of the country.

6 A tribe of Ishmaelites (see Gen. xxv. 15), who dwelt in the neighbourhood of Edom, near the present caravan route from Damascus to Mecca. These words are an address to them : 'O inhabitants of the land of Tema, bring water,' etc. They are called upon to go out to help the travellers, who dare not take the usual route.

7 See note on ch. xvi. 14.

8 'Kedar' (see Gen. xxv. 13) is here put for Arabia in general.

9 That is, Jerusalem ; called a 'valley' because, though seated on hills, it was surrounded by hills still higher, with valleys between them ; and 'of vision,' as the place where God's presence was manifested. The prophecy relates to some period when the city was besieged, probably to that described in 2 Chron. xxxii. 2—6 ; and denounces the confidence placed in material defences, combined with impenitence, sensuality, and neglect of dependence on God.

10 A lively and accurate picture of an Oriental city in commotion.

11 Full of reckless self-indulgence. See ver. 13.

12 That is, the mortality was of another kind, most probably from famine and plague : comp. Lam. iv. 9. See also 2 Chron. xxxii. 11.

13 Who as light-armed troops pursued the fugitives. The verse seems to allude to the vain endeavours which were made, as they were also at the time of the Chaldean invasion (see 2 Kings xxv. 4), to escape by flight from the privations and dangers of the siege.

14 Their cry reaches the surrounding hills, which re-echo it.

15 The Persians (celebrated as archers) and Medes were still subject to Assyria. See 2 Kings xviii. 11.

16 Rather, 'uncovered ;' either he opened their eyes to see their danger, or took the fortresses which 'covered' or protected the country. See 2 Kings xviii. 13.

¹ See note on 1 Kings vii. 2. This palace was intended for, or converted into, an arsenal.

² Compare 2 Chron. xxxii. 3, 4.

³ Probably to ascertain how many of them could be spared for the repair of the wall.

⁴ Rather, 'a reservoir.' See 2 Kings xx. 20. Hezekiah seems to have built a second outer wall to inclose the waters of Gihon.

⁵ God, who long ago designed, and now brings upon you the impending calamity. Failing to recognise his hand, you do not hear his call to humiliation (ver. 12), but persist in reckless dissipation (13), which will ensure the doom you are determined to forget (14).

⁷ The prophet may be supposed to have addressed Shebna while superintending the excavation of his superb tomb ; and then to have pointed to it, saying, 'He is hewing out,' etc. The language used, and the peculiarity of his name, have led some to conclude that Shebna was a foreigner ; but he is most likely thus addressed because a man of his character had no right to claim citizenship or honour in the city of God.

⁸ The Chaldee adds, 'with confusion.'

⁹ Or, 'O [thou] shame!'

¹⁰ That is, he shall enjoy high political authority. Keys of large size, and curved like a sickle, so as to be hung round the neck, are still used in some countries. Our Lord appropriates these words to himself (Rev. iii. 7), to intimate his power in the church.

¹² Or, 'seat.' His father's house, and all of his own family, shall be supported by him.

¹³ All who belonged to Eliakim, whatever might be their stations or employments, would be benefited by his elevation.

¹⁴ That is, 'now fastened,' meaning Shebna. The execution of this Divine decree is nowhere recorded ; but we afterwards find Eliakim occupying the position here announced to him : ch. xxxvi. 3, 22.

Be removed, and be cut down, and fall:

And 'the burden that was upon it shall be cut off:—for the LORD hath spoken it.

The fall of Tyre; and its subsequent restoration.

23 THE ^dBURDEN ^eOF TYRE.¹

Howl, ^fye ships of Tarshish;²—for it is laid waste,

So that there is no house, no entering in:

^gFrom the land of Chittim³ it is revealed to them.

2 Be still [Heb. silent], ye inhabitants of ^hthe isle;

Thou whom ⁱthe merchants of Zidon, that pass over the sea, have replenished.

3 And by great waters the seed of ^kSihor,⁴

The harvest of the river, ^lis her revenue;—and ^lshe is a mart of nations.

4 Be thou ashamed, O Zidon: for the sea hath spoken,

Even the strength⁵ of the sea,—saying, I travail not, nor bring forth children,

Neither do I nourish up young men, nor bring up virgins.

5 ^mAs at the report concerning Egypt,⁶ ⁿSo shall they be sorely pained at the report of Tyre.

6 ^oPass ye over to Tarshish;⁷—howl, ye inhabitants of the isle.

7 Is this your ^pjoyous city,—^qwhose antiquity is of ancient days?

Her own feet shall carry her afar off to sojourn.

8 ^rWho hath taken this counsel against Tyre, ^sthe crowning city,⁸

Whose merchants are princes,—whose traffickers are the honourable of the earth?

9 The LORD of hosts hath purposed it,—^tto stain the pride of all glory,

And ^uto bring into contempt all the honourable of the earth.

10 Pass through thy land as a river,

O daughter of Tarshish, there is no more strength.⁹

11 ^xHe stretched out his hand over the sea,—he shook the kingdoms:

The LORD hath given a commandment against the merchant city,¹⁰

12 To destroy the strong holds thereof.—And he said,

^yThou shalt no more rejoice,—O thou oppressed virgin, daughter of Zidon:¹¹

Arise, ^zpass over to Chittim;—there also shalt thou have no rest.

13 Behold ^athe land of the Chaldeans;—this people was not,

Till ^bthe Assyrian founded it for ^cthem that dwell in the wilderness:

They set up the towers thereof,—they raised up the palaces thereof;¹²

^d*And* he brought it to ruin.

14 ^eHowl, ye ships of Tarshish:—for your strength is laid waste.

15 And it shall come to pass in that day,

That Tyre shall be forgotten seventy years,—according to the days of one king:¹³

After the end of seventy years shall Tyre sing as an harlot.¹⁴

1 The subject of ch. xxiii. is the overthrow of Tyre (vers. 1—14); its depression for a period of seventy years, and its subsequent restoration to its former prosperity and wealth, which should be consecrated to God's service (15—18). The punishment is to be inflicted by the Chaldeans (ver. 13); who, under Nebuchadnezzar, besieged the city and probably took it. Compare Ezek. xxvii., xxviii., xxix. 17—21, and notes. Tyre, an ancient city of the Phœnicians (ver. 7), and a colony of Zidon, was situated on the north coast of Palestine, and was built partly on the main land and partly on an island near the shore. It was for ages the great centre of the world's commerce; and planted its colonies (among which was the powerful city of Carthage) along the coasts of Asia Minor, Greece, Cyprus, Libya, and Spain. The Tyrians had been in friendly connection with God's people in the time of David, but they had retained their gross idolatry, and Jezebel had introduced it into Israel.

2 See note on 1 Kings x. 22.

3 See note on Numb. xxiv. 24. 'Chittim,' perhaps, here means particularly the island of Cyprus.

4 'Sihor' (the black or muddy) is a name of the Nile, here also called 'the river.' Egypt, fertilized by the mud of the overflowing Nile, produced a great abundance of grain, which was exported by the Tyrian merchants.

5 Or, 'fortress of the sea;' i. e. Tyre (see Ezek. xxvi. 17). Tyre complains of being left desolate and solitary, like a widow who has never had children.

6 Referring probably to the terror which seized the Canaanites, when they heard of the destruction of the Egyptians at the Red Sea: see refs.

7 Take refuge in your distant colonies. The flight of the Tyrians with their wealth accounts for the poor reward which the Chaldeans obtained for their long and hard labour (see Ezek. xxix. 18). The same thing was done when Alexander besieged Tyre.

8 That is, dispenser of crowns; many of her colonies being governed by kings under the mother state.

9 Heb., 'no more girdle;' probably meaning no more restraint. The colonies would now be free from the rigorous rule of the central state, which had sought its own aggrandisement rather than theirs.

10 Literally, 'against Canaan;' the Phœnicians being Canaanites.

11 The 'daughter of Zidon' (or the Zidonians) here means the Phœnicians generally. They may escape to the shores of the Mediterranean, but there they will find no rest.

12 Or, 'They (i. e. the Chaldeans) have erected their towers; they have demolished her (i. e. Tyre's) palaces.' The Chaldeans, a rude race of mountaineers, brought from their wilderness by the Assyrians to Babylon, would become more formidable to Tyre than the Assyrians themselves. See note on Gen. xi. 28.

13 That is, probably one kingdom or dynasty; meaning that of Nebuchadnezzar. See Jer. xxv. 11. On the overthrow of the Babylonian monarchy by the Persians, Tyre regained her commercial importance, though not her independence.

14 Or, 'it shall be unto Tyre as the song of a harlot.' Tyre shall make use of every means by which to bring herself into notice. See the next note.

- 16 Take an harp, go about the city,—thou harlot that hast been forgotten;
Make sweet melody, sing many songs,—that thou mayest be remembered.
- 17 And it shall come to pass after the end of seventy years,
That the LORD will visit Tyre,—and she shall turn to her hire,
And ^fshall commit fornication¹ with all the kingdoms of the world
Upon the face of the earth.
- 18 And ^gher merchandise and her hire ^hshall be holiness to the LORD:
It shall not be treasured nor laid up;
For her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the LORD,
To eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing.²

Predictions of the chastisements of the Jews, and their happy effect; promises of future deliverance and restoration; and of the destruction of their enemies; songs of praise for God's mercy.

- 24 BEHOLD,³ the LORD ⁱmaketh the earth⁴ empty, and maketh it waste,
And turneth it upside down, and ^kscattereth abroad⁵ the inhabitants thereof.
- 2 And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest;
^lAs with the servant, so with his master;—as with the maid, so with her mistress;
^mAs with the buyer, so with the seller;—as with the lender, so with the borrower;
As with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him.⁶
- 3 ⁿThe land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled:
For the LORD hath spoken this word.
- 4 The earth ^omourneth and fadeth away,—the world languisheth and fadeth away,
The haughty people⁷ of the earth do languish.
- 5 ^pThe earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof;
Because they have transgressed the laws,—changed the ordinance,
Broken the everlasting covenant.⁸
- 6 Therefore hath ^qthe curse devoured the earth,
And they that dwell therein are desolate:⁹
Therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned,—^rand few men left.
- 7 ^sThe new wine mourneth,—the vine languisheth,—all the merry-hearted do sigh.
- 8 The mirth ^tof tabrets ceaseth,
The noise of them that rejoice endeth,—the joy of the harp¹⁰ ceaseth.
- 9 They shall not drink wine with a song;
Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it.
- 10 ^uThe city of confusion¹¹ is broken down:
Every house is shut up, that no man may come in.
- 11 There is a crying for wine in the streets;
All joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone.
- 12 ^xIn the city is left desolation,—and the gate is smitten with destruction.¹²
- 13 When¹³ thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people,
^y*There shall be* as the shaking of an olive tree,
And as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.
- 14 They¹⁴ shall lift up their voice, they shall sing,
For the majesty of the LORD they shall cry aloud from the sea.

1 This term, suggested by the word 'harlot' in vers. 15, 16, is used metaphorically, and denotes the commercial intercourse of Tyre with foreign nations, the gains of her commerce being similarly expressed by the word 'hire.'

2 The wealth of Tyre shall be made to benefit the servants of Jehovah.

3 Chapters xxiv.—xxvii. form one prophecy, consisting of a description of calamities (ch. xxiv.); a song of praise for deliverance from them, and for the spread of the true religion which would ensue (ch. xxv.); another song of praise celebrating the triumphs of this religion (ch. xxvi.); and a prediction of the happy effects of these events on the character of the people of God (ch. xxvii.) The language is so general, as to have led to great diversity of opinion among commentators as to the application of this prophecy. And this favours the supposition that it does not refer exclusively to any one period or event, but is rather intended to show the extreme measures to which God would resort in order to purify his people and to convert the world, as well as the beneficial results of his judgments. It would thus, in all the calamities which befel the Hebrew nation, point to their Author and design, and supply to the sufferers consolation and hope.

4 Or, 'land;' denoting the land of Israel, and so much of the surrounding countries as had their political interests implicated with it. The term 'world' (ver. 4) is synonymous with 'earth;' and is applied in ch. xiii. 11 to the Babylonian empire.

5 The image here used is that of a vessel which not only has its contents poured out, but is completely drained by being turned upside down.

6 That is, all ranks and classes shall fare alike.

7 That is, the nobility. See 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 16.

8 God's unalterable law.

9 Or, 'are punished.'

10 Music is the accompaniment of mirth.

11 Or, 'emptiness;' i. e. the city which is doomed to desolation.

12 So that the city is left defenceless.

13 Rather, 'For so it shall be in the midst of the earth among the nations, like the beating of an olive-tree,' etc. Comp. ch. xvii. 5, 6.

14 The few dispersed survivors of these judgments shall adore Jehovah, both for the greatness of his judgments, and for his goodness in so mercifully preserving them. The 'sea' may mean the coasts of the Mediterranean, or the West generally.

- 15 Wherefore ^a glorify ye the LORD in the fires¹ [or, valleys], Even ^a the name of the LORD God of Israel in the isles of the sea.
- 16 From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs,
Even glory to the righteous.²
 But I said, My leanness,³ my leanness, woe unto me!
^b The treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously;
 Yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.
- 17 ^c Fear,⁴ and the pit, and the snare,—are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.
- 18 And it shall come to pass,
That he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit;
 And he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare:
 For ^d the windows from on high are open,⁵
 And ^e the foundations of the earth do shake.
- 19 ^f The earth is utterly broken down,
 The earth is clean dissolved,—the earth is moved exceedingly.
- 20 The earth shall ^g reel to and fro like a drunkard,
 And shall ^h be removed like a cottage;⁶
 And the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it;
 And it shall fall, and not rise again.
- 21 And it shall come to pass ⁱ in that day,
That the LORD ^h shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high,
^j And the kings of the earth upon the earth.⁷
- 22 And ^m they shall be gathered together,—as prisoners are gathered in the pit,
 And shall be shut up in the prison,—and after many days shall they be visited.
- 23 Then the ⁿ moon shall be confounded,⁸ and the sun ashamed,
 When⁹ the LORD of hosts shall ^o reign
 In ^p mount Zion, and in Jerusalem,—and before his ancients¹⁰ gloriously.
- 25 O LORD,¹¹ thou art my God;—^q I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name;
^r For thou hast done wonderful things;
^s Thy counsels¹² of old are faithfulness and truth.
- 2 For thou hast made ^t of a city a heap;¹³—of a defenced city a ruin:
 A palace of strangers to be no city;—it shall never be built.
- 3 Therefore shall the strong people¹⁴ ^u glorify thee,
 The city of the terrible nations shall fear thee.
- 4 For ^x thou hast been a strength to the poor,
 A strength to the needy in his distress,
^y A refuge from the storm, a shadow from the heat,
^z When the blast of the terrible ones is as a storm against the wall.
- 5 ^a Thou shalt bring down the noise of strangers,—as the heat in a dry place;
Even the heat with the shadow of a cloud:¹⁵
 The branch¹⁶ of the terrible ones shall be brought low.
- 6 And in ^b this mountain¹⁷ shall ^c the LORD of hosts make unto ^d all people

¹ Some translate this, 'in the [land of] light,' i. e. in the East; as contrasted with 'the coasts of the sea,' i. e. the West. Comp. ch. xiv. 6; lix. 19. Or ver. 15 may perhaps be regarded as part of the song of praise of the dispersed remnant, thus: 'Wherefore for the Urim praise ye Jehovah,' etc. (see Exod. xxviii. 30).

² 'Glory to the righteous!' This is the burden of the song.

³ Literally, 'Consumption (i. e. ruin) to me! consumption to me,' etc. The praises of Jehovah's majesty and faithfulness that come from the exiles in distant regions only force more painfully upon the prophet's mind the state of the land of Israel; which he describes in powerful language, ver. 17, etc.

⁴ This word probably means some object used to frighten beasts, and drive them to a pitfall, or an enclosure where they would be ensnared. These devices of the hunter represent complicated dangers from which there is no possibility of escape.

⁵ As they were at the deluge. See Gen. vii. 11.

⁶ Rather, 'Shall be shaken like a lodging-place:' referring to a frail hut of branches, which would be shaken by a gale, and, if the wind came 'heavily' upon it, would fall.

⁷ 'The high ones on high,' and those 'upon the earth,' may be governors of different degrees of dignity, or, perhaps, civil and ecclesiastical rulers. But some suppose that the prophet's mind is carried forward to the final judgment of angels and men, and the establishment of God's kingdom in such glory as to eclipse all that has preceded. See ver. 23.

⁸ Rather, 'The [white] moon shall blush;' a bold and beautiful figure, perhaps suggested by the red appearance of the moon when eclipsed.

⁹ Rather, 'for,' marking the cause as well as the time.

¹⁰ 'Elders,' rulers of the tribes. Deut. xxxi. 28.

¹¹ Upon the promise at the close of ch. xxiv. the prophet founds a song of praise to Jehovah the Saviour of Israel (vers. 1—5), an anticipation of spiritual blessings for the whole world (6—9), and a prediction of ruin to the foes of Israel, here personified by Moab (10—12).

¹² Thy purposes revealed long ago are shown to be faithful and true.

¹³ The remains of the ancient cities of Mesopotamia and Assyria now present the appearance of mounds.

¹⁴ The overthrow of Babylon and the deliverance of the Jews would strike the boldest nations with awe, and lead them to acknowledge the hand of God.

¹⁵ That is, Thou wilt relieve the sufferings of thy oppressed people, as a cloud mitigates the heat of the sun.

¹⁶ Rather, 'song;' i. e. their song of triumph.

¹⁷ That is, in Mount Zion. See ch. xxiv. 23. Jerusalem under Jehovah's glorious reign shall be the centre of attraction, and the source of light, life, and joy to the whole world. This beautifully predicts the blessings and glories of the kingdom of Christ.

- A feast of fat things, ^e a feast of wines on the lees,
Of fat things full of marrow,—of wines on the lees¹ well refined.
- 7 And he will destroy in this mountain—the face of the covering cast over all people,
And ^f the vail² that is spread over all nations.
- 8 He will ^g swallow up death in victory;
And the Lord God will ^h wipe away tears from off all faces;
ⁱ And the rebuke³ of his people shall he take away from off all the earth:
^k For the LORD hath spoken it.
- 9 And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God;
^l We have waited for him, and he will save us:
This is the LORD;—we have waited for him,
^m We will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.
- 10 " For in this mountain shall the hand of the LORD rest, ^r And he shall bring down their pride—together with the spoils of their hands.

- 12 And the ^s fortress of the high fort of thy walls
Shall he bring down, lay low,—and bring to the ground, even to the dust.
- 26 IN 'that day⁷ shall this song be sung in the land of Judah;
We have a strong city;—^t salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks.⁸
- 2 ^u Open ye the gates,
That ^v the righteous nation which keepeth the truth⁹ may enter in.
- 3 ^z Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is ^a stayed on thee:¹⁰

- 4 ^c Trust ye in the LORD for ever;

- 9 ⁿ With my soul have I desired thee in the night;
Yea, with my spirit within me ^o will I seek thee early:
For ^p when thy judgments are in the earth,
The inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness.
- 10 ^q Let favour be showed to the wicked,—yet will he not learn righteousness:

And will not behold the majesty of the LORD.
- 11 LORD, ^s when thy hand is lifted up, 'they will not see:

¹ Wines which have been left 'on the lees,' and are then filtered off, are said to possess a superior colour and flavour; but, as the word literally means 'preserves,' some apply it to a sort of grape-cake.

² God, by his gospel, will remove the universal ignorance of and insensibility to Divine truth.

³ That is, the reproach cast upon them. The predictions of this verse are applied in the New Testament to the consummated glories of the redeemed in heaven. See 1 Cor. xv. 54; Rev. vii. 17; xxi. 4.

⁴ Or, 'in his place;' i. e. in his own land.

⁵ Literally, 'water of the dunghill;' straw trodden down, and left to rot in the pool. This represents degradation, as well as destruction.

⁶ Rather, 'of it;' i. e. the pool, ver. 10. Moab may strive to extricate himself; but all the devices (not 'spoils') of his hands will be useless.

⁷ The time of deliverance just promised. In this song the people rejoice in their restoration (vers. 1, 2); express their peaceful trust in God (3, 4), who has destroyed the oppressor (5, 6), and given prosperity to the just who look to him; which the wicked do not, and therefore must be punished (7—11). They anticipate a continuance of God's favour, shown in the destruction of their tyrants (12—15); which they vainly struggled for, but which God accomplished by his power (16—19), put forth as terribly as formerly in their deliverance from Egypt (20, 21; xxvii. 1).

⁸ God's help is his people's safeguard.

⁹ The Jews were by their exile cured of their propensity to worship false gods; and thus became better representatives of God's righteous people, who worship him 'in spirit and in truth.' John iv. 22—24.

¹⁰ Or, '[The man of] fixed purpose thou wilt keep in perfect peace.' Decision for God and confidence in him ensure true peace.

¹¹ Or, 'an everlasting rock,' or protector. That Jehovah is able to protect his people is shown by the ruin of their oppressors. Comp. ver. 5, and ch. xxv. 12.

¹² Rather, 'The way for the just is right; thou, most upright, dost make level the course of the just;' i. e. God makes a straightforward and prosperous course for the righteous. The remembrance of this truth has kept God's people waiting for and desiring his interposition (vers. 8, 9), by which alone the wicked will learn righteousness (10, 11).

¹ Rather, 'But they shall see and be ashamed. Zeal for [thy] people, yea, fire [against] thine enemies shall devour them.' The 'zeal' and 'fire' intended are those of Jehovah. Ps. lxxix. 5.

² Rather, 'for us.' The great works which thou hast wrought for us assure us that thou wilt give us peace.

³ This may refer to the foreign kings who had enslaved them, or to the idols whom they had worshipped.

⁴ Rather, 'For that purpose.'

⁵ Rather, 'Thou hast extended far all the borders of the land:' a poetical description of the future increase and prosperity of the nation.

⁶ Or, 'whisper.' See 1 Sam. i. 13, 14.

⁷ This is a common metaphor for disappointment. When, instead of casting ourselves submissively upon thy mercy, we struggled to deliver ourselves, we only aggravated our sufferings.

⁸ We have not been able to subdue them.

⁹ Rather, 'Thy dead [O Israel] shall live; my corpse (i.e. the body of my people) shall arise.' Though all the people's efforts to restore their national life have proved utterly futile (ver. 18), God's power, which can raise the dead, shall restore life to the nation, just as the dew restores freshness to the herbs. The resurrection of the body is used as a well-known truth to illustrate the exercise of Divine power in resuscitating the Hebrew nation. Comp. Eph. i. 20—23; ii. 1—5.

¹⁰ As when God sent overwhelming punishments upon their Egyptian oppressors (Exod. xii. 22, 23).

¹¹ That is, bloodshed; as in ch. i. 15. See note on Ps. ix. 12; and comp. Gen. iv. 10; also Job xvi. 18. The many unjust deaths which had been occasioned by wars or oppression should now be reckoned for and avenged.

¹² These threatenings against Babylon, and Israel's other foes, are expressed in figures which refer to the judgments on Egypt, alluded to just before. See Ps. lxxiv. 13, 14, and note; Ezek. xxix. 3; xxxii. 2.

¹⁴ Or, 'There is no fury in me; yet would that I had the briers and thorns in battle! I would advance against them,' etc. I will no more be angry with my vineyard, my people; but I will destroy the briers which have molested them, unless they make peace with me (ver. 5).

¹⁵ Rather, 'In coming days Jacob shall take root.'

¹⁶ Rather, 'his slain;' i.e. probably those slain on his account. 'Has God smitten Israel as severely as he has punished their oppressors? [No, for] in moderation, by driving her away, thou dost contend with her. He removes her by his violent blast in the time of the east wind' (ver. 8). Israel's was but a temporary though severe chastisement, like the sudden carrying away of anything by a gust in a windy season; whereas Babylon, and Israel's other enemies, shall be utterly destroyed.

1 That is, 'By this [chastisement] therefore shall the iniquity of Jacob be expiated; and this is all the fruit (i. e. effect of it), to take away his sin: [this will appear] when he makes all the stones of the altar (i. e. of his idols) like broken chalk-stones; [so that] the images of Ashtoreth and the sun-pillars shall stand no more.' On 'the groves,' see note on Judg. iii. 7.

2 Some regard this as a further description of God's chastisements in the desolation of Jerusalem. But it is perhaps more likely that it refers to the ruin of Babylon, as ver. 7 would naturally be followed by a description of God's severer dealing with his people's foes in contrast with his discipline of Israel.

3 The branches of the trees growing among its ruins.

4 That is, make fires with them. The gathering of fuel in the East is done by females.

5 That is, 'shall beat off his fruit; shall gather it in. See ch. xvii. 6. The 'river' is the Euphrates. As a husbandman gathers in his olives from his trees, so God shall gather in his people from Babylon (by 'the river' Euphrates) and from Egypt (by 'the stream,' the Nile).

6 Verses 1—14 contain a denunciation against the kingdom of Israel; from which the prophet turns to Judah, representing its safety and glory under Hezekiah (vers. 5, 6), its speedy moral deterioration (7—10), and the terrible judgments which should follow (11—22). These are then vindicated by a striking parable, showing that God was acting on the very principles on which he had taught the husbandman to act (23—29). In the midst of all, the Messiah is announced as the only sure foundation of hope and confidence (ver. 16).

7 Or, 'the proud crown of the drunkards,' etc.; i. e. the haughty capital of the sensualized people of the ten tribes. This refers to Samaria, which crowns the summit of a fine round swelling hill encircled by 'fat (or rich) vallies.' See note on 1 Kings xvi. 24.

8 Intemperance seems to have been a prevailing sin among the Israelites. See Hos. vii. 5; Amos vi. 1, 2.

9 Probably the king of Assyria; comp. ch. vii. 17—20; viii. 7.

10 The early (not 'hasty') fig is eagerly plucked and eaten as a rarity: so the Assyrians would eagerly seize and completely destroy Samaria.

11 To the people of Judah; to whom Jehovah would be a more glorious ornament and defence than the proud city of Samaria had been to the kingdom of Israel, giving them the two great essentials of national prosperity—justice and strength (ver. 6).

- 7 But they also¹ have erred through wine,
And through strong drink are out of the way;
² The priest and the prophet have erred through strong drink,
They are swallowed up of wine, they are out of the way through strong drink;
They err in vision, they stumble in judgment.
- 8 For all tables are full of vomit and filthiness,—so that there is no place clean.
- 9 ³ Whom² shall he teach knowledge?
And whom shall he make to understand doctrine?
Them that are weaned from the milk,—and drawn from the breasts.
- 10 For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept;
Line upon line, line upon line;—here a little, and there a little.
- 11 For with ⁴ stammering lips and another tongue will he speak to this people;³
- 12 To whom he said, 'This is the rest⁴ wherewith ye may cause the weary to rest;
And this is the refreshing:—yet they would not hear.
- 13 But the word of the LORD was unto them,
Precept upon precept, precept upon precept;
Line upon line, line upon line;—here a little, and there a little;
"That they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken.
- 14 Wherefore hear the word of the LORD,
Ye scornful men, that rule this people which is in Jerusalem.
- 15 Because ye have said,⁵
We have made a covenant with death,—and with hell are we at agreement;
When the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us:
⁶ For we have made lies our refuge,—and under falsehood have we hid ourselves:
- 16 Therefore thus saith the Lord God,—Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation,
⁷ A stone,⁶ a tried stone, a precious corner stone, a sure foundation:
He that believeth shall not make haste.⁷
- 17 Judgment also will I lay to the line,—and righteousness to the plummet:⁸
⁸ And the hail shall sweep away ^a the refuge of lies,
And the waters shall overflow the hiding place.
- 18 And your covenant with death shall be disannulled,
And your agreement with hell shall not stand;
⁹ When the overflowing scourge shall pass through,
Then ye shall be trodden down by it.
- 19 From the time that it goeth forth it shall take you:
For morning by morning shall it pass over,—by day and by night:
^c And it shall be a vexation only to understand the report.
- 20 ^d For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it:
And the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it.⁹
- 21 For the LORD shall rise up as in mount ^e Perazim,
He shall be wroth as in the valley of ^f Gibeon,¹⁰
That he may do his work, ^g his strange work;
And bring to pass his act, his strange act.
- 22 Now therefore be ye not mockers,—lest your hands¹¹ be made strong:
For I have heard from the Lord God of hosts ^h a consumption,
Even determined upon the whole earth.

1 The sins which had caused the ruin of Ephraim had deeply infected Judah also.

2 That is, 'Whom, say they, shall he teach,' etc. These are the questions of the demoralized priests and judges (ver. 7), who repel with scorn the idea that they should require the plain and reiterated teachings of the prophets, which they regard as fit only for children.

3 This is a response to the preceding taunting language. Since the people refused to hearken to Jehovah's messages, which they regarded as adapted only to children, he would teach them in a manner much more humiliating, namely, by the barbarous accents of foreigners.

4 In the plain instructions which God gave them, he pointed out the only way to real peace and safety. But 'they would not hear;' therefore (ver. 13) these instructions have become to them a curse, and not a blessing. Comp. 2 Cor. ii. 15, 16.

5 In thought, if not in word. This was the natural interpretation of their impious disregard of God's threatenings and judgments. The language may have a reference to the treaty which Ahaz made with the king of Assyria (2 Kings xvi. 7—9).

6 Before announcing the terrible destruction of these presumptuous sinners and their 'refuge of lies,' the prophet points to Zion, and reminds God's people of that ancient promise to the family of David, on which, as on the chosen, costly foundation-stone of their royal fortress, amidst all God's judgments, they were to build their peace and security. This passage, therefore, like many others, directed them to look forward for comfort to our Lord's coming. That it refers to Him alone is evident from the explicit applications of the language to Him in the New Testament. See Rom. ix. 33; x. 11; 1 Pet. ii. 6.

7 That is, shall have no cause to flee; no reason for shame or fear.

8 God would make strict justice the rule of his proceedings, as the builder regulates his work by the line and plummet.

9 This is probably a proverbial description of a perplexed and comfortless condition.

10 God will treat his rebellious people as he formerly treated their heathen enemies. See Josh. x. 10, 11; 2 Sam. v. 17—25; 1 Chron. xiv. 8—17.

11 'Bonds' often represent penal suffering.

- 23 Give ye ear, and hear my voice;—hearken, and hear my speech.¹
 24 Doth the plowman plow all day to sow?
 Doth he open and break the clods of his ground?
 25 When he hath made plain the face thereof,
 Doth he not cast abroad the fitches, and scatter the cummin,
 And cast in the principal wheat,
 And the appointed barley and the rye in their place?²
 26 For his God doth instruct him to discretion,—and doth teach him.
 27 For the fitches are not threshed with a threshing instrument,
 Neither is a cart wheel turned about upon the cummin;
 But the fitches are beaten out with a staff,—and the cummin with a rod.
 28 Bread corn is bruised;—because he will not ever be threshing it,
 Nor break it with the wheel of his cart,—nor bruise it with his horsemen.³
 29 This also cometh forth from the LORD of hosts, ⁱ Which is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working Repeated threatenings against Judah; with warnings, and promises of great mercies.
 29 WOE⁴ ^k to Ariel,⁵ to Ariel,—the city ^l where David dwelt!
^m Add ye year to year;—let them kill sacrifices.⁶
 2 Yet ⁿ I will distress Ariel,—and there shall be heaviness and sorrow:

 3 And I will camp against thee round about,

 4 And thou shalt be brought down, and shalt speak out of the ground,

1 The following parable appears to be designed to vindicate God's severe and 'strange' chastisements. As the farmer varies his operations according to the soil, the season, and the nature of the crop; so does God change his treatment of his people according to their religious condition.

2 Rather, 'When he has levelled its surface, does he not cast abroad dill, and sow cummin broad-cast, and plant wheat in rows, and barley marked out (perhaps drilled), and spelt in his border?' The two modes of sowing are clearly distinguished.

3 Four modes of threshing are here described. Dill and cummin are threshed with a flail, bread-corn with a sledge armed with sharp stones or iron teeth, other corn with the wheels of the wagon, and the trampling of horses.

4 In ch. xxix. 1—8, God threatens Jerusalem with a siege which shall overwhelm it with terror (vers. 1—4); and promises the sudden destruction of the besiegers (5—8). The events here predicted are related in 2 Kings xix., on which see notes.

5 This name, as applied to Zion or Jerusalem, may denote either lion of God, i. e. a city of heroes; or, fire-place (i. e. altar) of God, as in Ezek. xliii. 15, 16; under which idea we find Jerusalem described in ch. xxxi. 9.

6 Rather, 'Let the festivals go round,' i. e. year by year. Though they have done so through a long period, yet the city shall not escape God's chastisements (ver. 2).

7 That is, it shall correspond to its name; it shall be a place of sacrifice and slaughter.

8 See note on ch. viii. 19. Jerusalem would be greatly weakened and humbled, and would speak as one in fear.

9 Or, 'But the multitude of thy strangers (i. e. the foreign besiegers) shall be,' etc. See ch. xvii. 13. Though much distressed, the city should not now be taken.

10 This appears to be addressed to the invading host (ver. 5), which is to be suddenly dispersed by a tremendous visitation, so as to lose the prey which it was on the point of seizing (7, 8).

11 In ch. xxix. 9—24, God denounces the wilful blindness (vers. 9—14) and deep hypocrisy (15, 16) of the Jewish people; who shall be deprived of their advantages (17—21), but shall be ultimately admitted to share them with the Gentiles (22—24).

12 Rather, 'Stupify yourselves and be stupid; blind yourselves and be blind;' addressed to Jerusalem, whose spiritual sottishness and blindness are depicted, vers. 10—

12. Comp. ch. vi. 10.

- And hath ^cclosed your eyes, the prophets;
 And your rulers [Heb. heads], ^dthe seers hath he covered.
- 11 And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book ^ethat is sealed,
 Which men deliver to one that is learned,—saying, Read this, I pray thee:
^fAnd he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed:
- 12 And the book is delivered to him that is not learned,—saying, Read this, I pray thee:
 And he saith, I am not learned.¹
- 13 Wherefore the Lord said,
^gForasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth,
 And with their lips do honour me,—but have removed their heart far from me,
 And their fear toward me is taught by ^hthe precept of men:²
- 14 ⁱTherefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvellous work among this people,
Even a marvellous work and a wonder:
^kFor the wisdom of their wise men shall perish,
 And the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.
- 15 ^lWoe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the LORD,
 And their works are in the dark,
 And ^mthey say, Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?³
- 16 Surely your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay:⁴
 For shall the ⁿwork say of him that made it, He made me not?
 Or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?
- 17 ^oIs it not yet a very little while,
 And ^pLebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field,
 And the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?⁵
- 18 And ^qin that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book,⁶

1 Rather, 'I know not writing;' i. e. I cannot read. Every one has his own excuse for not attending to God's word, though all profess to honour him (ver. 13).

2 That is, is regulated by human authority.

3 That is, they cover their secret sins under a plausible exterior. This verse is a striking portraiture of the hypocrisy of the Pharisees in the time of our Lord, who applies to them the preceding description in ver. 13. See Matt. xv. 8, 9.

4 Rather, 'Oh, your perverseness! Shall the potter be esteemed as the clay?' Is he not superior to it? Does he not know all about it? Surely, then, God sees through the hearts of his creatures.

5 A proverbial phrase, meaning that the wild and the cultivated shall change places (see ch. xxxii. 15). It refers, probably, to the casting off of the Jews, and the admission of the Gentiles to the privileges of God's people. Comp. Matt. xxi. 43; Rom. xi. 7—24.

6 An allusion, probably, to the figure in vers. 11, 12. The Gentiles, who had been in real, not pretended, darkness, shall hear and see the words of life.

7 The proud, scornful, and ungodly among the Jews. Comp. Matt. xxiii. 13, etc.

8 Or, 'Who condemn a man in his cause, and lay a trap for him who disputes in the gate' (i. e. before the judge).

9 The venerable ancestor of the nation is poetically supposed to be looking on his children. Instead of observing with shame and sorrow, as in times past, their sins and sufferings, he rejoices, both in the accession of a new spiritual progeny, the special workmanship of God (ver. 23; Eph. ii. 10), and in the restoration to saving wisdom of his own natural descendants (ver. 24; Rom. xi. 11—15; 31, 32).

10 This Divine message (ch. xxx.) denounces the proneness of the Hebrews to rely on Egypt for aid against the Assyrians, and declares that their help shall be vain (vers. 1—7); it connects this sin with their general rebelliousness, and threatens them with severe chastisements (8—17); but promises that, when these have had their effect, God himself will appear to save and bless them (18—26); and will in token of this himself destroy the Assyrian (27—33). It is probably of about the same date as the preceding prophecy.

11 Rather, 'who pour out a libation;' i. e. who make a covenant or treaty; religious offerings being used to ratify contracts (see Gen. xxxi. 45—54).

12 Contrary to the warnings of my prophets.

^c Speak unto us smooth things,—prophecy deceits:
- 11 Get you out of the way,—turn aside out of the path,⁵
Cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us.
- 12 Wherefore thus saith the Holy One of Israel,—Because ye despise this word,⁶
And trust in oppression and perverseness,—and stay thereon:
- 13 Therefore this iniquity shall be to you ^d as a breach ready to fall,
Swelling out in a high wall, whose breaking ^e cometh suddenly at an instant.
- 14 And ^f he shall break it as the breaking of the potters' vessel

- ^h So that there shall not be found in the bursting of it a sherd,⁸
To take fire from the hearth,—or to take water withal out of the pit.

ⁱ In returning and rest⁹ shall ye be saved;
In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength.—^k And ye would not.

And therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you:
^q For the LORD is a God of judgment:—^r blessed are all they that wait for him.
- 19 For the people ^s shall dwell in Zion at Jerusalem:—^t thou shalt weep no more:

¹ See note on 'Zoan,' Psa. lxxviii. 12. 'Hanes' is probably 'Hnés,' or 'Ehnés,' in Middle Egypt, on the west side of the Nile; called by the Greeks Heracleopolis. But some identify it with Tahpanhes (Jer. xliii. 7, 9).

² The prophet sees the Jewish messengers going down to Egypt with their treasures, and exclaims, 'The burden (or load) of the beasts of the south; the asses' and camels' carrying the presents through the dreary and dangerous desert.

³ The best critics render this, 'Therefore I have named her Rahab that sitteth still.' The name 'Rahab' is used poetically for Egypt (see Psa. lxxxvii. 4; lxxxix. 10; Isa. li. 9); and it also means 'pride,' Job ix. 13; xxvi. 12. It is probably here designed to suggest that, notwithstanding all their pretensions, the Egyptians would not profit those who trusted in them.

^mTo sift the nations with the sieve of vanity :⁸
 And there shall be ⁿa bridle in the jaws of the people, ^ocausing them to err :
 29 Ye shall have a song, as in the night ^pwhen a holy solemnity⁹ is kept ;
 And gladness of heart, as when one goeth with a pipe
 To come into ^qthe mountain of the LORD,¹⁰ to the mighty One of Israel.
 30 ^rAnd the LORD shall cause his glorious voice to be heard,
 And shall show ^sthe lighting down of his arm,
 With the indignation of his anger, and with the flame of a devouring fire,
 With scattering, and tempest, ^tand hailstones.
 31 For ^uthrough the voice of the LORD shall the Assyrian be beaten down, ^xWhich smote with a rod.¹¹
 32 And in every place where the grounded staff shall pass,
 Which the LORD shall lay upon him,—^yit shall be with tabrets and harps :
 And in battles of ^zshaking will he fight with it.
 33 ^aFor Tophet¹² is ^bordained of old ;—yea, for ^cthe king it is prepared ;
 He hath made it deep and large :—the pile thereof is fire and much wood ;
^dThe breath of the LORD, like a stream of brimstone, doth kindle it.
 31 WOE¹³ to them ^ethat go down to Egypt for help ;—and ^fstay on horses,
 And trust in chariots, because they are many ;
 And in horsemen because they are very strong ;¹⁴
 But they look not unto the Holy One of Israel,—^gneither seek the LORD !
 2 ^hYet he also is wise, ⁱand will bring evil,¹⁵—and ^kwill not call back his words :

¹ Though God might still afflict them outwardly, he would not deprive them of their religious privileges ; but whenever they were tempted to go astray, he would follow them with admonitions to return (ver. 21).

² That is, 'You shall regard them as polluted and abominable.' The images of idols were usually made of wood or clay 'covered' or plated with gold or silver.

³ Or, 'plough.' See note on Gen. xlv. 6.

⁴ Or, 'salted,' i. e. mixed provender.

⁵ The slaughter of the army of the Assyrians. By the 'towers' some understand the Assyrian chiefs.

⁶ 'Light' often represents knowledge, purity, and prosperity ; it here denotes the blessings of religion, especially under the superior illumination of the gospel.

⁷ Rather, 'Burning is his anger, and the flame grievous.'

⁸ That is, so as to sift them to nothing. The three metaphors of a flood (see ch. viii. 8), a sieve, and a bridle, describe the punishment of Assyria and its allies, which shall finally ruin them.

⁹ The passover, which was celebrated at night (see Exod. xii. 42 ; Deut. xvi. 1—6), and at which hymns were sung. See Matt. xxvi. 30, and note on Ps. cxiii. 1.

¹⁰ This probably refers to the companies who came up to the annual festivals at Jerusalem.

¹¹ Or, 'He (Jehovah) shall smite [him] with a rod. And every stroke of the ordained rod, which Jehovah will lay upon him, shall be with tabrets and harps ;' i. e. with rejoicings on the part of those whom Assyria had oppressed (ver. 32).

¹² See note on 2 Kings xxiii. 10.

¹³ The prophecy in ch. xxxi. is probably of about the same date as the preceding. It teaches that reliance upon Egypt is distrust of Jehovah ; who will punish both those who seek and those who give such aid (vers. 1—3), but will defend his people, if they turn from their sins, and will utterly destroy their foes (4—9).

¹⁴ See notes on Dent. xvii. 16 ; 1 Kings x. 29.

¹⁵ That is, 'calamity ;' the punishment which 'his words' had threatened against 'the house of evil-doers,' the race of wicked, unbelieving Jews ; and against Egypt, whom they regarded as their 'help.'

- But will arise against the house of the evildoers,
And against the help of them that work iniquity.
- 3 Now the Egyptians are 'men, and not God;
And ^m their horses flesh, and not spirit.
When the LORD shall stretch out his hand,
Both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down,
And they all shall fail together.
- 4 For thus hath the LORD spoken unto me,
ⁿ Like as the lion and the young lion roaring on his prey,
When a multitude of shepherds is called forth against him,
He will not be afraid of their voice,—nor abase himself for the noise of them;
^o So shall the LORD of hosts come down
To fight for mount Zion,¹ and for the hill thereof.
- 5 ^p As birds flying,—so will the LORD of hosts defend Jerusalem;
^q Defending also he will deliver it;—and ^r passing over he will preserve it.
- 6 ^s Turn ye unto him from whom the children of Israel have 'deeply revolted.²
- 7 For in that day every man shall ^t cast away his idols of silver, and his idols of gold,
Which your own hands have made unto you for ^u a sin.
- 8 Then shall the Assyrian ^v fall with the sword, not of a mighty man;
And the sword, not of a mean man, shall devour him:³
But he shall flee from the sword,—and his young men shall be discomfited.
- 9 And ^z he shall pass over to his strong hold for fear,
And his princes shall be afraid of ^a the ensign,⁴
Saith the LORD, ^b whose fire⁵ is in Zion,—and his furnace in Jerusalem.
- 32 BEHOLD,⁶ ^c a king shall reign in righteousness,
And princes shall rule in judgment.
- 2 And ^d a man⁷ shall be as an hiding place from the wind,
And ^e a covert from the tempest;—^f as rivers of water in a dry place,
As the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.
- 3 And ^g the eyes of them that see shall not be dim,
And the ears of them that hear shall hearken.
- 4 ^h The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge,
And the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly.
- 5 ⁱ The vile person shall be no more called liberal,
Nor the churl said to be bountiful.⁸
- 6 ^k For the vile person will speak villany,⁹—and his heart will work iniquity,
To practise hypocrisy, and to utter error against the LORD,
To make empty the soul of the hungry,
And he will cause the drink of the thirsty to fail.
- 7 ^l The instruments¹⁰ also of the churl are evil:—he ^m deviseth wicked devices,
To destroy the poor with lying words,—even when the needy speaketh right.
- 8 But ⁿ the liberal deviseth liberal things;—and by liberal things shall he stand.¹¹
- 9 RISE up,¹² ^p ye women that are at ease;
Hear my voice, ye careless daughters;—give ear unto my speech.
- 10 ^q Many days and years shall ye be troubled, ye careless women:
For the vintage shall fail, the gathering shall not come.

1 Rather, 'over Mount Zion, and over its hill.' As a lion standing over his prey guards it most determinately, and as a bird fluttering over her nest protects her brood most solicitously; so will Jehovah defend his confiding people.

2 The promises of Divine interposition are here used to enforce repentance.

3 The Assyrian army shall be destroyed by God's immediate interposition.

4 Or, 'And his rock (i. e. strength—his host) through fear shall pass away, and his princes shall flee from the standard;' representing the remnant of his army, even his generals, as fleeing panic-stricken from their ensigns.

5 See note on 'Ariel,' ch. xxix. 1.

6 From the destruction of the impious power of the Assyrians, the prophet, as is common with him, makes a transition to the great objects of hope to the believing Israelite; promising a righteous King, who shall protect and comfort his happy subjects, and so enlighten them, that all flattery and false morality shall be put down (vers. 1—8). Comp. Ps. lxxii. ; Jer. xxiii. 5, 6.

7 That is, the King spoken of in ver. 1. To a traveller in the East, shelter from the winds of the desert with their suffocating clouds of dust, water to quench thirst, and shade from the scorching sun, would be blessings of the highest value.

8 That is, there will be a due discrimination of character; and persons and things will be called by their right names.

9 Or, 'The vile person will be he who speaks villany;' i. e. names expressive of contempt will be applied only to those who deserve them by their base and wicked conduct. Comp. Matt. xii. 33, where to 'make' is used for to 'suppose,' or to 'call.'

10 The means which he uses to increase his wealth.

11 Or, 'and to liberal things he will stand;' i. e. he will persevere in them.

12 Before the promises just given can be fulfilled, the sinful luxury of the people, in which the females took the lead, must be corrected by suffering, and renounced (vers. 9—14); and then shall righteousness and peace be enjoyed by Israel (15—20).

- 11 Tremble, ye women that are at ease ; be troubled, ye careless ones :
Strip you, and make you bare,—and ^rgird sackcloth upon your loins.
- 12 ^sThey shall lament for the teats,¹—for the pleasant fields,—for the fruitful vine.
- 13 ^tUpon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers ;
Yea, upon all the houses of joy in ^uthe joyous city.
- 14 ^zBecause the palaces shall be forsaken ;—the multitude of the city shall be left ;
The forts and towers² shall be ^yfor dens for ever,
A joy of wild asses, a pasture of flocks.
- 15 Until ^zthe spirit be poured upon us from on high,
And ^athe wilderness be a fruitful field,
And the fruitful field be counted for a forest.³
- 16 Then judgment shall dwell in the wilderness,
And righteousness remain in the fruitful field.⁴
- 17 ^bAnd the work of righteousness shall be peace ;⁵
And the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever.
- 18 And ^cmy people shall dwell in a peaceable habitation,
And in sure dwellings, and in quiet resting places ;
- 19 ^dWhen it shall hail, coming down ^eon the forest ;⁶
And the city shall be low in a low place.

^oAt the lifting up of thyself the nations were scattered.

^fLebanon is ashamed and hewn down [or, withered away] :
Sharon is like a wilderness ;—and Bashan and Carmel shake off their fruits.¹⁵

1 This may be a figure for fruitful fields, producing nourishment ; or it may be rendered, 'They are smiting on the breasts,' a frequent token of grief.

2 Rather, 'Ophel and the watch-tower.' See note on 2 Chron. xxvii. 3.

3 See note on ch. xxix. 17. Here the exchange is to be between Israel restored and his foes destroyed (ver. 19).

4 The 'wilderness' and the 'fruitful field' together make the whole land.

5 As the effusion of the Spirit produces righteousness, so the prevalence of righteousness causes universal peace amongst men. See note on Ps. lxxii. 3.

6 Rather, 'And it shall hail at the downfall of the forest.' For the safety of God's people, all their enemies shall be brought low.

7 An agricultural figure, probably designed to encourage those who expected the fulfilment of these glorious promises, to patient obedience in the dark and difficult times that must intervene.

8 The sufferings which the Assyrian monarch, hitherto unchecked in his career of oppression, had inflicted upon others, shall recoil upon himself (ver. 1) ; for God will arise, in answer to his servants' prayers, and destroy the sinners in Zion and her enemies together, that he may help his people (2—24).

9 That is, thy people's, who 'have waited for thee.'

10 Or, 'multitude.' Comp. Dan. x. 6 ; Rev. i. 10, 15.

11 Addressing the Assyrians, whose collected spoils the Jews would clear off as locusts strip the fields.

12 Or, 'And he shall be the security of thy times, a treasure of salvation, wisdom, and knowledge: the fear of Jehovah is his treasure.' God shall glorify himself by manifesting his righteousness and wisdom in the deliverance, security, and prosperity of those who fear him.

13 Not 'shall cry,' but 'cry,' for the distress is supposed to be present, and to occasion the immediate Divine interposition, Now will I arise (ver. 10).

14 The presence of Sennacherib's army had stopped all peaceful intercourse through the country : see refs.

15 The richest districts are now desolate. The plain of Sharon lay along the sea-coast between Carmel and Joppa, and was proverbial for fertility and beauty.

- 10 ^g Now will I rise, saith the LORD ;
Now will I be exalted ;—now will I ^h lift up myself.
- 11 ⁱ Ye shall conceive chaff, ye shall bring forth stubble :
Your breath, ¹ as fire, shall devour you.
- 12 And the people shall be as the burnings of lime :
^k As thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire.
- 13 Hear ^l ye that are far off, what I have done ;
And, ye that are near, acknowledge my might.
- 14 The sinners in Zion are afraid ;—fearfulness hath surprised the hypocrites. ²
Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire ?
Who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings ?
- 15 He that ^m walketh righteously,—and speaketh uprightly ;
He that despiseth the gain of oppressions,
ⁿ That shaketh his hands from holding of bribes,
^o That stoppeth his ears from hearing of blood, ³
And ^p shutteth his eyes from seeing evil ; ⁴
- 16 ^q He shall dwell on high :—his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks :
^r Bread shall be given him ;—his waters shall be sure. ⁵
- 17 ^s Thine eyes shall see the king ⁶ in his beauty :
They shall behold the land that is very far off.
- 18 Thine heart shall meditate terror : ⁷—^t Where is the scribe ? where is the receiver ?
^u Where is he that counted the towers ?
- 19 ^x Thou shalt not see a fierce people,
^y A people of deeper speech than thou canst perceive ;
Of a stammering tongue, that thou canst not understand. ⁸
- 20 ^z Look upon Zion, ^a the city of our solemnities :
Thine eyes shall see ^b Jerusalem a quiet habitation,
A tabernacle that shall not be taken down ;
^c Not one of ^d the stakes thereof shall ever be removed,
Neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.
- 21 But there ^e the glorious LORD will be unto us
A place of broad rivers and streams ; ⁹
Wherein shall go no galley with oars,—neither shall gallant ship pass thereby.
- 22 For the LORD is our judge,—the LORD is our ^f lawgiver, ^g The LORD is our king ;—^h he will save us.
- 23 Thy tacklings ¹⁰ are loosed ;

ⁱ Then is the prey of a great spoil divided ;—the lame take the prey.
- 24 And ^k the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick : ¹¹
^l The people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.
- 34 ^m COME ¹² near, ye nations, to hear ;—and hearken, ye people :
ⁿ Let the earth hear, and all that is therein ;

1 That is, your proud and angry spirit shall cause your destruction, O Assyrians.

2 Rather, 'the impious : ' see Job viii. 13. Such awful punishments of other sinners might well alarm the wicked in Jerusalem ; and lead them to ask, If the fire of God's wrath is so terrible here, how can we endure its 'everlasting burnings ?'

3 Heb., 'bloods ;' i. e. plots of bloodshed.

4 The judgments which terrify sinners, not only shall not harm the upright (vers. 15, 16), but shall restore to them the glory of better days (17), by the removal of their enemies (18, 19) ; so that Zion shall enjoy peace and prosperity under Jehovah's care (20—24).

5 Secure as in a castle, and supplied with all he wants.

6 Probably meaning, Thou shalt see the kingdom restored to its former glory, and extent. The fulfilment of this under Hezekiah was but partial. See note on ver. 24.

7 That is, Thou shalt thankfully look back upon thy recent terror from the Assyrian officers, who are now gone. The three mentioned are probably an accountant, a tax-collector, and a military surveyor.

8 See note on ch. xxviii. 11.

9 A source of fertility and wealth, with security from all danger from enemies. The 'galley with oars,' and the 'gallant ship,' signify ships of war.

10 This is a sudden apostrophe to the enemy. The prophet had just said that no vessel should approach the holy city. The proud ship of Assyria has dared to attempt this ; but it is wrecked, dismantled, and left a prey to the feeblest plunderer.

11 Suffering shall cease when sin, which is its cause, ceases : see Ps. ciii. 3. The words are only applicable in their fullest sense to a state of things still future, either in heaven or on earth.

12 Ch. xxxiv. is filled with threatenings against the enemies of the church ; especially the Edomites, who insulted the Jews in their distress, and joined with their invaders against them. In punishment for this, Edom, with other neighbouring countries, was ravaged and laid waste by Nebuchadnezzar (see Ps. cxxxvii. 7 ; Jer. xxv. 15—26 ; Ezek. xxv. 12 ; xxxv. 15 ; Amos i. 11 ; Mal. i. 3, 4) ; and to this devastation there may be a reference in the present chapter. But the Edomites here, like other nations in other passages, stand for the enemies of God's church ; and therefore the prophecy admits of more extended application.

- And his fury upon all their armies:
 He hath utterly destroyed¹ them,—he hath delivered them to the slaughter.
 3 Their slain also shall be cast out,
 And ^p their stink shall come up out of their carcases,
 And ^q the mountains shall be melted² with ^r their blood.
 4 And ^s all the host of heaven shall be dissolved,³
 And the heavens shall be ^t rolled together as a scroll:⁴
^u And all their host shall fall down,
 As the leaf falleth off from the vine,—and as a ^x falling fig from the fig tree.
 5 For ^y my sword shall be bathed in heaven:⁵
 Behold, it ^z shall come down upon Idumea,
 And upon the people of my curse, to judgment.
 6 The sword of the LORD is ^a filled with blood,—it is made fat with fatness,
 And with the blood of lambs and goats,—with the fat of the kidneys of rams:⁶
 For ^b the LORD hath a sacrifice in Bozrah,⁷
 And a great slaughter in the land of Idumea.
 7 And the unicorns shall come down⁸ with them,—and ^c the bullocks with the bulls;
 And their land shall be soaked with blood,—and their dust made fat with fatness.
 8 ^d For it is the day of the LORD's vengeance,
 And the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion.
 9 ^e And the streams thereof⁹ shall be turned into pitch,
 And the dust thereof into brimstone,
 And the land thereof shall become burning pitch.
 10 ^f It shall not be quenched night nor day;—^g the smoke thereof shall go up for ever:
^h From generation to generation it shall lie waste;
 None shall pass through it for ever and ever.¹⁰
 11 ⁱ But the cormorant [or, pelican] and the bittern shall possess it;
 The owl¹¹ also and the raven shall dwell in it:
 And ^k he shall stretch out upon it the line of confusion,
 And the stones¹² of emptiness.
 12 They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom,
 But none shall be there,—and all her princes shall be nothing.
 13 And ^l thorns shall come up in her palaces,
 Nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof.
 And ^m it shall be an habitation of dragons,—and a court for owls.
 14 The wild beasts of the desert shall also meet with the wild beasts of the island,
 And the satyr shall cry to his fellow;
 The screech owl [or, night-monster] also shall rest there,
 And find for herself a place of rest.
 15 There shall the great owl¹³ make her nest, and lay,
 And hatch, and gather under her shadow:
 There shall the vultures also be gathered,—every one with her mate.
 16 ⁿ Seek ye out of ^o the book of the Lord, and read:¹⁴
 No one of these shall fail,—none shall want her mate:
^p For my mouth it hath commanded,—and his spirit it hath gathered them.¹⁵

1 Or, 'He has devoted them to destruction.'

2 As if dissolved by it.

3 These convulsions of nature represent the awful political and social revolutions by which national sins are punished.

4 Like an ancient volume or book-roll, which used to be rolled round a stick, as maps often are now.

5 That is, saturated (filled) with Divine wrath, which it is to execute upon Edom. Compare this prophecy with ch. lxiii. 1—6; Jer. xlix. 7—22; and Obad. 1—21.

6 Sacrifice being connected with slaughter as an expression of God's anger against sin, it furnished a significant representation of the infliction of deserved punishment. Comp. Ezek. xxxix. 17—20.

7 This seems to be not the Moabite city in the Haurân, called by the Greeks and Romans Bostra, and now Buzra; but another town south-east of the Dead Sea, probably represented by the modern village El-busairch.

8 That is, shall come down to the slaughter. On 'the unicorn,' see note on Numb. xxiii. 22.

9 That is, the streams of Edom. The figure is derived from the destruction of the neighbouring cities Sodom and Gomorrah. See Gen. xix. 24, 28; and comp. Jer. xlix. 18.

10 It shall no longer be a thoroughfare for travellers, being shunned as difficult and dangerous. The remarkable manner in which this prophecy has been accomplished is attested even by infidel writers. Volney says that, on the south-east of the Dead Sea, within three days' journey, there are upwards of thirty ruined towns absolutely deserted.

11 Probably the night-heron. These wild animals shall be the sole occupants of the land. See note on ch. xiii. 21. It is not easy to say what animals are meant by some of the Hebrew words used in these descriptions. The corrections given in the notes are those of eminent naturalists. Here, again, there is a remarkable coincidence between these predictions and the statements of modern travellers. Captains Irby and Mangles, while at Petra, remarked the screaming of eagles, hawks, and owls when any one approached their lonely habitation.

12 That is, the plummet-stones. Comp. 2 Kings xxi. 13.

13 Perhaps 'the arrow-snake;' so called from the suddenness with which it springs on its prey. It abounds in Arabia, and its wound is deadly.

14 The prophet calls upon all who should live after the devastation of Idumea to compare these predictions in 'the book of the Lord' with the event.

15 That is, the wild animals previously spoken of.

- 17 And ^ahe hath cast the lot for them,
^rAnd his hand hath divided it unto them by line :¹
 They shall possess it for ever,
 From generation to generation shall they dwell therein.
- 35 THE ²wilderness and the solitary place ^rshall be glad for them ;³
^uAnd the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose.⁴
 2 It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice—even with joy and singing :
^xThe glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it,
 The excellency of Carmel and Sharon,
^yThey shall see the glory of the LORD,—and the excellency of our God.
 3 ^zStrengthen ye the weak hands,—and confirm the feeble knees.
 4 Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not :
^aBehold, your God will come—with vengeance, even God with a recompence ;
 He will come and save you.
- 5 Then the ^beyes of the blind shall be opened,
 And ^cthe ears of the deaf shall be unstopped.⁵
 6 Then shall the ^dlame man leap as an hart,—and the ^etongue of the dumb sing :
 For in the wilderness shall ^fwaters break out,—and streams in the desert.
 7 And ^gthe parched ground⁶ shall become a pool,
 And the thirsty land springs of water :
 In ^hthe habitation of dragons, where each lay,—shall be grass with reeds and rushes.
 8 And ⁱan highway shall be there, and a way,
 And it shall be called ^kThe way of holiness ;
^lThe unclean shall not pass over it ;—but it shall be for those :⁷
^mThe wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein.
 9 ⁿNo lion shall be there,—nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon,⁸
 It shall not be found there ;—but ^othe redeemed shall walk there :
 10 And the ^pransomed of the LORD shall return, ^qAnd come to Zion with songs—and everlasting joy upon their heads :⁹
 They shall obtain joy and gladness,—and ^rsorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Judah invaded by Sennacherib ; Hezekiah's prayer, and its answer through Isaiah ; the Assyrian army destroyed.

² Ch. xxxv. closes this series of prophecies, carrying the mind forward to that great work of redemption which is far more glorious than any national deliverance. To encourage God's people, alarmed by the terrible judgments that were coming, it is declared that they shall ultimately result in the removal of the curse from nature (see Rom. viii. 22) and from man, and in the opening of a way for his secure and joyful return to the full blessedness of God's favour and service. The prophecy seems to unite in one beautiful picture—the restoration of the Jews from Babylon, the calling of the Gentiles into the church, the glory of the Christian dispensation, the safety and happiness of individual believers, and the blessedness of heaven.

³ On account of the great blessings foretold in this chapter.

⁷ That is, for 'the redeemed' afterwards mentioned. The main idea here is, that the way of access to these blessings should be free and plain to all. But some render this, 'But He [God] shall be to (or with) them walking in the way, and [thus even] fools shall not err,' having His guidance.

⁸ The people of God shall enjoy their blessedness, secure from every enemy and danger.

⁹ This may perhaps refer to festive chaplets or anointings.

¹⁰ On this and the three next chapters, see the notes on the parallel passage in 2 Kings xviii.—xx., to which those which follow are merely supplementary.

¹¹ If the monumental inscriptions recently discovered at Kouyunjik (the probable site of Nineveh) have been read correctly, they record Sennacherib's campaigns against Judah. They have indeed been only partially deciphered, and there is not a perfect agreement among learned men as to their meaning ; but they appear to accord remarkably with the scriptural account. 'Hezekiah king of Judah,' says the Assyrian king, 'who had not submitted to my authority, forty-six of his principal cities and fortresses, and villages depending upon them, of which I took no account, I captured, and carried away their spoil. I shut up himself within Jerusalem his capital city,' etc. He says further, that he added a tribute, and also took from Hezekiah the treasure he had collected in Jerusalem, 30 talents of gold, and 800 talents of silver, the treasures of his palace, besides his sons and his daughters, and his male and female servants, or slaves, and brought them to Nineveh (2 Kings xviii. 14—16). One chamber of the palace contains a sculptured representation of the king, and above his head this inscription : 'Sennacherib, the mighty king, king of the country of Assyria, sitting on the throne of judgment, before (or at the entrance of) the city of Lachish' (see ver. 2). 'I give permission for its slaughter.' And on

- 2 'And the king of Assyria sent Rabshakeh from "Lachish to Jerusalem unto king Hezekiah with a great army. And he stood by the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field.¹ Then came forth unto him "Eliakim, Hilkiah's son, which was over the house, and "Shebna the scribe, and Joah, Asaph's son, the recorder.
- 4 "And Rabshakeh said unto them, Say ye now to Hezekiah, Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, "What confidence is this wherein thou trustest? 5 I say, sayest thou, (but they are but vain words) I have counsel and strength for 6 war: now on whom dost ^b thou trust, that thou rebellest against me? Lo, thou trustest in the ^c staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him. But if thou say to me, We trust in the LORD our God: is it not he, whose ^d high places and whose altars Hezekiah ^e hath taken away, and said to 8 Judah and to Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar? Now therefore give pledges [or, hostages], I pray thee, to my master the king of Assyria, and I will give thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon 9 them. How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on ^f Egypt for chariots and for horsemen? 10 And am I now come up without the LORD against this land to destroy it? ^g The LORD said unto me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.
- 11 Then said Eliakim and Shebna and Joah unto Rabshakeh, Speak, I pray thee, unto thy servants in the Syrian language; for we understand it: and speak not 12 to us in the Jews' language, in the ears of the people that are on the wall. But Rabshakeh said, Hath my master sent me to thy master and to thee to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their own piss with you?
- 13 Then Rabshakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, 14 and said, Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of Assyria. Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you: for he shall not be able to deliver you. 15 "Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us: this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria. 16 Hearken not to Hezekiah: for thus saith the king of Assyria, Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me: ⁱ and eat ye every one of his vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his own 17 cistern: ^h until I come and take you away to a land like your own land, a land 18 of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards. Beware lest Hezekiah persuade you, saying, The LORD will deliver us. Hath any of ⁱ the gods of the nations 19 delivered his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria? Where are the gods of Hamath and Arphad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim? and ^m have they 20 delivered Samaria out of my hand? "Who are they among all the gods of these lands, that have delivered their land out of my hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of my hand?
- 21 But they held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, ^o Answer him not.
- 22 Then came Eliakim, the son of Hilkiah, that was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah, the son of Asaph, the recorder, to Hezekiah with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rabshakeh.
- 37 And ^p it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that ^q he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and ^r went into the house of the LORD.
- 2 "And he sent Eliakim, who was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests ^s covered with sackcloth, unto Isaiah the prophet the 3 son of Amoz. And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a "day of trouble, and of ^t rebuke, and of blasphemy: for the children are come to the 4 birth, and there is not strength to bring forth. It may be the LORD thy God ^u will hear the words of Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent ^v to reproach the living God, and will reprove the words which the LORD thy God hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for ^w the remnant that is left.
- 5, 6 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah. And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say unto your master, Thus saith the LORD, ^x Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard, wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria have 7 blasphemed me. Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

- 8 ^c So Rabshakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against 9 ^d Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from ^e Lachish. And he heard say concerning Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, He is come forth to make war with 10 thee. And when he heard it, he sent messengers to Hezekiah, saying, Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God, in whom thou trustest, deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of 11 the king of Assyria. Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands ^f by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?
 12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed, as ^g Gozan, and ^h Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of ⁱ Eden which were in 13 Telassar?¹ Where is the king of ^k Hamath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah?
 14 And Hezekiah received the letter from the hand of the messengers, and read it:
^l and Hezekiah went up unto the house of the LORD, and spread it before the 15 LORD. And Hezekiah prayed unto the LORD, saying, O LORD of hosts, God of 16 Israel, that dwellest ^m between the cherubim, ⁿ thou art the God, even thou ^o alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth: thou hast made heaven and earth.
 17 ^p Incline thine ear, O LORD, and hear; ^q open thine eyes, O LORD, and see: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent to reproach the living God.
 18 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations, and their 19 countries, and have cast their gods into the fire: for they were no gods, ^r but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.
 20 Now therefore, O LORD our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that ^s thou art the LORD, even thou only.
 21 ^t Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^u Whereas thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of 22 Assyria: this is the word which the LORD hath spoken concerning him;

The virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee,—and laughed thee to scorn;
 The daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

- 23 Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed?
 And against whom hast thou exalted thy voice,
 And lifted up thine eyes on high?—even against the Holy One of Israel.
 24 By thy servants hast thou reproached the Lord, and hast said,²
 By the multitude of my chariots am I come up
 To the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon;
 And I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and the choice fir trees thereof:
 And I will enter into the height of his border, and the forest of his Carmel.
 25 I have digged, and drunk water;
 And with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of the besieged places.
 26 Hast thou not heard long ago, how I have done it;
 And of ancient times, that I have formed it?—x now have I brought it to pass,
 That thou shouldest be to lay waste defenced cities into ruinous heaps.
 27 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power,
 They were dismayed and confounded:
 They were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb,
^y As the grass on the housetops,—and as corn blasted before it be grown up.
 28 But I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in,
 And thy rage against me.
 29 Because thy rage against me, and thy tumult, is come up into mine ears,
 Therefore ^z will I put my hook in thy nose,—and my bridle in thy lips,
 And I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.
 30 And this shall be a sign unto thee,
 Ye shall eat this year such as groweth of itself;
 And the second year that which springeth of the same:
 And in the third year sow ye, and reap,
 And plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof.
 31 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah
 Shall again take root downward,—and bear fruit upward:³
 32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant,
 And they that escape out of mount Zion:
 The ^a zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

2 A specimen is given of the vaunting language which Sennacherib had dared to employ. No obstacle had hitherto impeded him in his progress.

3 Like an olive: which, when cut down, sends up fresh and fertile shoots.

- 33 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria,
He shall not come into this city,—nor shoot an arrow there,
Nor come before it with shields,—nor cast a bank against it.
- 34 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return,
And shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.
- 35 For I will ^b defend this city to save it
For mine own sake, and ^c for my servant David's sake.
- 36 Then the ^d angel of the LORD went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the 37 morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.¹ So Sennacherib king of Assyria 38 departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh. And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of ^e Armenia: and Esar-haddon his son reigned in his stead.

Hezekiah's sickness, and miraculous recovery; and his thanksgiving psalm.

- 38 IN ^f those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And Isaiah the prophet the son of Amoz came unto him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ^g Set thine
2 house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live. Then Hezekiah turned his face
3 toward the wall,² and prayed unto the LORD, and said, ^h Remember now, O LORD,
I beseech thee, how I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart,³ and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore.
- 4 Then came the word of the LORD to Isaiah, saying, Go, and say to Hezekiah,
5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, I 6 have seen thy tears: behold, I will add unto thy days fifteen years. And I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria: and ⁱ I will 7 defend this city. And this shall be ^k a sign unto thee from the LORD, that the 8 LORD will do this thing that he hath spoken; Behold, I will bring again the shadow of the degrees, which is gone down in the sun dial of Ahaz,⁴ ten degrees backward. So the sun returned ten degrees, by which degrees it was gone down.
- 9 THE WRITING OF HEZEKIAH⁵ KING OF JUDAH, WHEN HE HAD BEEN SICK, AND WAS RECOVERED OF HIS SICKNESS:
- 10 I said in the cutting off⁶ of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave:
I am deprived of the residue of my years.⁷
- 11 I said, I shall not see the LORD,—even the LORD, ^l in the land of the living;
I shall behold man no more—with the inhabitants of the world.
- 12 ^m Mine age is departed, and is removed from me—ⁿ as a shepherd's tent:⁸
^o I have cut off like a weaver my life:
^p He will cut me off with pining sickness;⁹
From day even to night¹⁰ wilt thou make an end of me.
- 13 I reckoned till morning, that, as a lion, so will he break all my bones:¹¹
From day even to night wilt thou make an end of me.
- 14 ^q Like a crane or a swallow, so did I chatter;¹²—^r I did mourn as a dove:
^s Mine eyes fail with looking upward:—O LORD, I am oppressed; undertake for me.
- 15 'What shall I say?—he hath both spoken unto me, and himself hath done it:¹³
I shall ^u go softly¹⁴ all my years—^x in the bitterness of my soul.
- 16 O Lord, ^y by these *things*¹⁵ men live,
And in all these things is the life of my spirit:
So wilt thou recover me, and make me to live.

1 Where the Assyrian army was on this night, is not ascertained. The inscriptions at Nineveh take no notice of Sennacherib's unsuccessful attempt upon Jerusalem, or of the overthrow of his army.

2 As one who would be undisturbed in his devotion.

3 See note on Job i. 1. Hezekiah probably refers here especially to his public conduct, and his efforts to establish and maintain the worship of Jehovah.

4 See note on 2 Kings xx. 11. Herodotus states that the Greeks obtained the knowledge of the pole and the dial, and the division of the day into twelve parts, from the Babylonians. It is not at all unlikely that Ahaz, who appears to have been fond of foreign objects of art (see 2 Kings xvi. 10), obtained a dial amongst them.

5 This beautiful plaintive psalm records the pious king's feelings in the prospect of death. His extreme dejection may be in part accounted for by the unsettled and dangerous state of the nation (see note on 2 Kings xx. 1), and perhaps by the circumstance that he had not yet an heir to the throne. Comp. 2 Kings xx. 6, with xxi. 1.

6 Or, 'in the middle of my days.'

7 That is, of those which are usually allotted to man.

8 That is, quickly, as a shepherd's tent is removed.

9 Rather, 'from the thrum;' i. e. the ends of the threads by which the web is fastened to the loom. This image expresses the same idea as the preceding.

10 Or, 'within the space of a day.'

11 Or, 'I composed [myself] until morning; [and] like a lion did he crush all my bones.' Or, 'I set (or regarded him) until morning as a lion.'

12 Or, 'twitter;' uttering the feeble, broken sounds of one in pain.

13 He himself hath restored me, when no one else could have done it.

14 That is, solemnly and humbly, as one who remembers his own dependence and God's great mercy towards him. See next verse.

15 Or, 'upon these;' i. e. upon thy merciful care.

17 Behold, for peace I had great bitterness :¹

But ²thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption :
For thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back.²

18 For ^athe grave cannot praise thee,—death can not celebrate thee :

^bThey that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth.³

19 ^cThe living, the living, he shall praise thee, as I do this day :

^dThe father to the children shall make known thy truth.

20 The LORD was ready to save me :

^eTherefore we⁴ will sing my songs^f to the stringed instruments
All the days of our life, in the house of the LORD.

21 For ^gIsaiah had said, Let them take a lump of figs, and lay it for a plaister 22 upon the boil,⁵ and he shall recover. ^hHezekiah also had said, What is the sign that I shall go up to the house of the LORD?

The Babylonian embassy.

39 AT ⁱthat time Merodach-baladan,⁶ the son of Baladan king of Babylon, sent letters and a present to Hezekiah: for he had heard that he had been sick, and 2 was recovered. ^kAnd Hezekiah was glad of them, and showed them the house of his precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his armour [or, jewels], and all that was found in his treasures: there was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

3 Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, 4 They are come from a far country unto me, even from Babylon. Then said he,
What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, All that is in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.

5, 6 Then said Isaiah to Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD of hosts: Behold, the days come, ^lthat all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store until this day, shall be carried to Babylon: nothing shall be 7 left, saith the LORD. And of thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and ^mthey shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

8 Then said Hezekiah to Isaiah, ⁿGood is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. He said moreover, For there shall be peace and truth in my days.⁷

¹ Rather, 'Behold! my great bitterness [is turned] into peace, and thou,' etc. These words describe Hezekiah's restoration to health, not his affliction.

² To cast a person or thing 'behind the back' is an Oriental phrase expressing entire oblivion. In reference to crimes, it means to forgive.

³ See notes on ver. 9, and on Ps. vi. 5.

⁴ That is, 'my family and nation.' This song of Hezekiah, like other psalms, was designed not merely as a personal record, but to be used in celebrating the praises of God, and probably in the public service of the temple.

⁵ This word means an inflamed ulcer; perhaps the eruption produced by the plague, which threatened immediate death.

⁶ See notes on 2 Kings xx. 12—17.

by the assurance that Jehovah will soon appear to end their humiliation (vers. 1, 2). He hears already the forerunner's voice (3—5); for, though all things human fade, God's promise cannot fail (6—8); and summons the heralds to announce the advent of the mighty but gentle Saviour-King (9—11). The New Testament authorizes the application of the prophecy to the advent of our Divine Saviour (see Matt. iii. 1—3, etc), and this alone fully meets the requirements of the language: but other great interpositions of God on behalf of his people may be included.

⁹ Jerusalem is here put for the chosen people, whose metropolis it was.

¹⁰ Perhaps, 'appointed time;' or, 'hardship,' suffering. See note on Job vii. 1.

¹¹ 'Double' probably means ample or abundant. See note on Job xi. 6. The punishment has not been more than was deserved, but enough to answer its design.

² This should be rendered 'wind,' referring to the sultry and withering winds from the Eastern desert.

⁶ These exquisitely beautiful figures, borrowed from pastoral life, express the benignant and tender care of the 'Good Shepherd,' who provides for all his sheep, but shows peculiar compassion to the weak. Comp. John x.

⁷ In vindicating Jehovah's claims as the only true God, the prophet speaks of Him first as the Creator, celebrating his infinite wisdom and self-sufficiency (12—17), utterly unlike man's senseless and helpless idols (18—20) ; and declaring that the power which sustains and can destroy, as it created, all things (21—26), shall never fail to uphold all who trust in Him (27—31).

⁸ This applies to all his arrangements ; but especially to the gospel and its application to men, to which it is referred in Rom. xi. 34.

⁹ If God is so much greater than all his works, how foolish and wicked must it be to regard a piece of metal, or a block of wood, fashioned 'by art and man's device,' as being in any way a representation of Him.

1 Rather, 'Scarcely were they planted, scarcely were they sown, scarcely was their stock rooted in the ground ; and he also blew upon them, and they withered,' etc. As quickly and easily as the hot wind blasts young and tender plants, so can God destroy his most powerful enemies. See ch. xli. 2.

2 The stars are represented as a vast army, mustered and disposed by God.

3 Such being the power and resources of Jehovah, his people ought cheerfully to trust in him, though the fulfilment of his promise appears to be delayed. Neglect or forgetfulness of the astonishing displays of Divine power which surround us, robs us of the comfort which they might supply, when we particularly need his gracious interposition.

4 Therefore he knows all your wants, though you cannot comprehend all his doings.

5 Rather, 'choice youths,' the strongest men. What had been denied, in ver. 28, respecting God, is here affirmed of man in his greatest vigour ; yet, when that vigour is utterly exhausted, God can restore it.

6 The eagle is celebrated for the vigour and length of its flight. 'Those who wait for Jehovah' (i.e. confidently expect his promised presence) 'shall be sustained by his power, through all that may intervene before the fulfilment of their cherished hopes.

7 Jehovah summons the nations to a decision of the question of his sole Deity (ver. 1) ; declaring his design of raising up a mighty one to destroy his foes (2—4), and alarm idolaters (5—7) ; whilst his own people are encouraged (8—10) and delivered (11—13), and their weakness is turned to strength (14—16), and their wretchedness to prosperity (17—20). He calls for proofs, derived either from prophecy or miracle, that the idols are gods ; and, as they produce none, he pronounces them 'no-things' (21—24). Finally, he repeats his prediction of a warlike deliverer of his people (25—29) ; and then of his Chosen Servant, mightier, but more gentle, who shall bless the whole world (xlii. 1—7), as a conclusive proof of his sole Deity (8, 9). Upon this, all nations are called to praise Him (10—12) ; and fresh revelations are made of his designs of grace (13—16) and justice (17).

8 This may allude to the promise in the preceding verse. Jehovah will renew strength to those who confide in him : and idolaters are challenged to get what strength they can from their gods, so as to meet Him in the great controversy. Comp. 1 Kings xviii.

9 Heb., 'who raised up righteousness ;' meaning the instrument of righteousness. The deliverances which God achieves for his people are called 'his righteousness.' See ch. xlv. 8 ; xlv. 13 ; Rom. iii. 21, 22. Cyrus might be thus described as God's agent for punishing idolaters and for delivering Israel. See ch. xlv. 27, 28 ; xlv. 1—7. But the connection (see ch. xlii. 1—7) forbids us to restrict the application to him.

10 That is, to march after Him. See Judg. iv. 10.

11 Rather, 'he goes not a path with his feet : ' probably meaning, he goes so swiftly as hardly to tread the ground. See Dan. viii. 5.

12 That is, calling them into existence. Part of the language here appropriated to the only true God is applied to our Lord, in Rev. i. 17 ; ii. 8 ; xxii. 13.

- Saying, It¹ is ready for the soldering :
And he fastened it with nails, ²that it should not be moved.
- 8 But thou, Israel, art my servant,²
Jacob whom I have ⁴chosen, —the seed of Abraham my ⁴friend ;
- 9 Thou ^mwhom I have taken from the ends of the earth,
ⁿAnd called thee from the chief men thereof,
And said unto thee, Thou art my servant ;
^oI have chosen thee, and not cast thee away ,
- 10 ^pFear thou not ; ^qfor I am with thee :—be not dismayed ; for I am thy God :
^rI will strengthen thee ; yea, I will help thee ;
Yea, I will ^suphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.
- 11 Behold, all they that were incensed against thee
Shall be ^tashamed and confounded :
They shall be as nothing ;—and they that strive with thee shall perish.
- 12 ^uThou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them,
Even them that contended with thee :
They that war against thee—shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought.
- 13 For I the LORD thy God ^xwill hold thy right hand, Saying unto thee, ^yFear not ; I will help thee.
- 14 Fear not, ^zthou worm³ Jacob, and ye men of Israel ;
I will help thee, saith the LORD,—and thy redeemer,⁴ the Holy One of Israel.
- 15 Behold, ^aI will make thee⁵ a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth :
^bThou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small,
And shalt make the hills as chaff.
- 16 Thou shalt ^cfan them, and the wind shall carry them away,
And the whirlwind shall scatter them :
And thou shalt rejoice in the LORD,—and ^dshalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.
- 17 When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none,
And their tongue faileth for thirst,⁶ ^eI the LORD will hear them,—^fI the God of Israel will not forsake them.
- 18 I will open ^grivers in high places,—and fountains in the midst of the valleys :
I will make the ^hwilderness a pool of water,
And the dry land springs of water.
- 19 ⁱI will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah tree,⁷
And the myrtle, and the oil tree ;
I will set in the desert the fir tree,—and the pine, and the box tree together :
- 20 ^kThat they may see, and know,—and consider, and understand together,
That the hand of the LORD hath done this,
And the Holy One of Israel hath created it.
- 21 Produce your cause, saith the LORD ;
Bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.
- 22 ^lLet them bring them forth, and show us what shall happen :
Let them show the former things, what they be,
That we may consider them, and know the latter end of them ;⁸
Or declare us things for to come.
- 23 ^mShow the things that are to come hereafter,—that we may know that ye are gods :
Yea, ⁿdo good, or do evil,⁹—that we may be dismayed, and behold it together.
- 24 Behold, ^oye are of nothing,—and your work of nought :
^pAn abomination is he that chooseth you.
- 25 ^qI have raised up one from the north,¹⁰ and he shall come :
From the rising of the sun ^rshall he call upon my name :
^sAnd he shall come upon princes as upon mortar,—and as the potter treadeth clay.
- 26 ^tWho hath declared from the beginning, that we may know ?
And beforetime, that we may say, He is righteous ?¹¹

¹ Rather, 'Saying of the soldering, It is good.' The different craftsmen are sarcastically represented as encouraging themselves, on the approach of the foe, to trust in the idols which their own hands had made.

² Rather, 'But thou, Israel, my servant,' etc. Vers. 8, 9 contain appellations of Israel, giving the reason why he should not fear (ver. 10) as the heathen do.

³ A striking figure for extreme weakness.

⁴ See note on Job xix. 25 ; and Lev. xxv. 24, 25.

⁵ That is, 'I will make thee to be,' etc. See note on ch. xxviii. 28. 'Weak as thou art, by my power thou shalt destroy thy mightiest enemies.'

⁶ An impressive representation of extreme suffering.

⁷ See note on Exod. xxv. 5. The word rendered 'box' probably refers to some straight tall tree of the fir kind.

⁸ Or, 'their issue ;' i. e. their fulfilment. The idols are challenged to adduce, in support of their claims, predictions already verified by the event, or prophecies yet to be accomplished.

⁹ Let them utter promises and threatenings, and accomplish them, as Jehovah had done.

¹⁰ This prophecy refers to the Medo-Persian empire, which would rapidly extend itself over all the region north and east of Babylon.

¹¹ Rather, 'that we may say, It is right ;' i. e. It is true.

- Yea, there is none that sheweth,—yea, there is none that declareth,

1 There is no one who has heard such a prediction among you.

2 Rather, ‘I am the first [to say] to Zion,’ etc. What Jehovah denies of the heathen deities, he here claims for himself. He first announced by his prophet the coming of the Conqueror.

3 No one who by his sagacity could anticipate what would happen.

4 The pretensions of their oracles are false, and the whole system of idolatry mere imposture.

5 This passage is quoted in Matt. xii. 18—21, with direct application to our Lord ; and it appears also to be alluded to in the words uttered from heaven at his baptism and transfiguration (Matt. iii. 17 ; xvii. 5).

6 The true religion, God’s laws and institutions.

7 This verse describes the noiseless and gentle extension of the Messiah’s benignant sway, in contrast to the ‘confused noise,’ the down-treading of the poor, and the sufferings which attend the progress of an earthly conqueror.

8 That is, He shall fully vindicate his cause. The meaning is given in Matt. xii. 20, though not the literal rendering.

9 The words just applied to the wick and the reed are here emphatically repeated ; ‘He shall not be dimmed nor be bruised.’ Gentle as he is, he is not feeble.

10 That is, distant nations.

11 To accomplish my righteous purposes.

12 The ‘covenant’ is here put for the person who fulfils the covenant ; as ‘light’ is put in the next clause for the dispenser of light. The benefits of this covenant were to be extended throughout the world, to other nations besides the one by which God had already been known and served. And its spiritual blessings are spoken of, in analogy with the word ‘light,’ as a deliverance from blindness, and from the darkness of a prison.

13 Rather, ‘I am Jehovah ;’ see note on Exod. iii. 14.

14 See note on Ps. xevi. 1.

15 See note on ch. xxi. 17. By ‘villages’ may be meant nomadic encampments.

16 Or, perhaps, ‘of Sela,’ the stronghold of Edom. See note on 2 Kings xiv. 7.

17 Rather, ‘like a warrior he will rouse his zeal.’ Ancient warriors did this by shouting or ‘roaring.’

18 Or, ‘I will pant and gasp at once.’ This verse forcibly expresses Jehovah’s earnestness in the accomplishment of his purposes.

- 15 'I will make waste mountains¹ and hills,—and "dry up all their herbs;
And I will make the rivers islands,—and I will dry up the pools.
- 16 "And I will bring the blind by a way that they knew not;
I will lead them in paths that they have not known:
I will make darkness light before them,—and °crooked things straight.
These things will I do unto them, "and not forsake them.
- 17 They shall be "turned back, they shall be greatly ashamed,
That trust in graven images,
"That say to the molten images,—Ye are our gods.
Jehovah's sole Deity further vindicated in the chastening and purifying of his people, and the punishment of his enemies.
- 18 *HEAR,² ye deaf;—and look, ye blind, that ye may see.
- 19 'Who is blind, but my servant?—or deaf, as my messenger that I sent?
Who is blind as he that is perfect,³—and blind as the LORD's servant?
- 20 Seeing many things, "but thou observest not;
"Opening the ears, but he heareth not.
- 21 The LORD is well pleased for his righteousness' sake;⁴
"He will magnify the law, and make it honourable.
- 22 But⁵ this is "a people robbed and spoiled;
They are all of them snared in holes,—^aand they are hid in prison houses:
They are for a prey, and none delivereth;—for a spoil, and none saith, Restore.
- 23 Who among you will give ear to this?
Who will hearken and hear for the time to come?⁶
- 24 ^bWho gave Jacob for a spoil,—and Israel to the robbers?
Did not the LORD, he against whom we have sinned?
For they would not walk in his ways,—neither were they obedient unto his law.
- 25 ^cTherefore he hath poured upon him the fury of his anger,
And the strength of battle:
^dAnd it hath set him on fire round about, ^eyet he knew not;
And it burned him, yet he ^flaid it not to heart.
- 43 But now thus saith the LORD ^gthat created thee, O Jacob, ^hAnd he that formed thee, O Israel,—Fear not: ⁱfor I have redeemed thee, ^kI have called thee by thy name;⁷ ^l'thou art mine.
- 2 ^mWhen thou passest through the waters, "I will be with thee;
And through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee:
When thou ^owalkest through the fire,⁸ thou shalt not be burned;
Neither shall the flame kindle upon thee.
- 3 For I am the LORD thy God,—the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour:
^pI gave Egypt for thy ransom,⁹—Ethiopia and Seba for thee.
- 4 Since thou wast ^qprecious in my sight,—thou hast been honourable,¹⁰
And ^rI have loved thee:—therefore will I give men for thee,
And people for thy life.
- 5 ^sFear not: for I am with thee:
^t'I will bring thy seed from the east,—and gather thee from the west;
6 I will say to the north, Give up;—and to the south, Keep not back:

1 The promised interposition of Jehovah shall produce the most astonishing changes (ver. 15); which shall all be conducive to the final salvation of his people (16), and to the confusion of idolaters (17).

2 A new aspect of the subject is here presented. Israel's blindness and sin (vers. 18—20) are adduced, to show that God's great work of salvation is altogether undeserved, and intended to display his righteousness and to honour his word (21). This he will do, both by chastising (22—25) and then delivering his people (xliv. 1—7), by which he will prove his presence and his power (8—13); and also by humbling present and future as he had humbled former enemies, thus opening a way to safety for Israel (14—21). Reverting to the people's unfaithfulness (22—28), God promises his restoring grace, to be followed by Israel's increase (xlv. 1—5). He challenges idolaters to produce anything to be compared with this wonderful display of his perfections (6—8); and shows their extreme folly, by describing the process of idol-making (9—20).

3 The sin of the people is aggravated by the fact that God has made them 'perfect,' i. e. set them apart to be his 'servants,' or messengers, to convey his truth to the world; instead of which, they have been more deaf to it than even the heathen.

4 Jehovah's favour to Israel is not on account of their righteousness (for their blindness deserves only punishment); but to magnify his own 'righteousness.' See note on ch. xli. 2.

5 Or, 'and.' The subject is continued.

6 The design of chastisement is the future good of the sufferer; which, however, will not be attained if He who inflicts it is not remembered (ver. 24).

7 This probably refers both to the ancient covenant represented in the name 'Israel,' and also to the recent reconciliation. See note on Sol. Song vi. 13.

8 'Water' and 'fire' are emblems of troubles and dangers, amidst which Israel shall enjoy perfect security.

9 Referring probably to the deliverance of the Hebrews in former days by the destruction of the Egyptians and their dependents; which was not only a proof of the greatness of Jehovah's love to his people, but also an indication of what he was prepared to do again (see ver. 4). The connection between Egypt (or Mizraim), Ethiopia (or Cush), and Seba, is seen in Gen. x. 6.

10 Rather, 'honoured,' i. e. by my love to thee.

- "Bring my sons from far,—and my daughters from the ends of the earth;¹
 7 Even every one that is ^x called by my name:
 For ^y I have created him for my glory,
^z I have formed him;—yea, I have made him.
- 8 ^aBring² forth the blind people that have eyes,—and the deaf that have ears.
 9 ^bLet all the nations be gathered together,—and let the people be assembled:
^cWho among them can declare this,—and show us former things?
 Let them bring forth their witnesses, ^dthat they may be justified:
 Or let them hear, and say, It is truth.
- 10 ^eYe are my witnesses, saith the LORD,—^fand my servant whom I have chosen:
^gThat ye may know and believe me,—and understand that I am he:
^hBefore me there was no God formed,³—neither shall there be after me,
 11 I, even I, ⁱ*am* the LORD;—and beside me there is no saviour.
 12 I have declared, and have saved,⁴ and I have showed,
 When there was no ^kstrange god among you:
^lTherefore ye are my witnesses, saith the LORD,—that I am God.
- 13 ^mYea, before the day was I am he;
 And there is ⁿnone that can deliver out of my hand:
 I will work, and who shall ^olet it?
- 14 Thus saith the LORD,—your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel;
 For your sake ^pI have sent to Babylon,⁵—and have brought down all their nobles,
 And the Chaldeans, whose cry ^q*is* in the ships.
- 15 I am the LORD, your Holy One,—^rthe Creator of Israel, your King.
 16 Thus saith the LORD,
 Which ^smaketh a way in the sea,—and a ^tpath in the mighty waters;
 17 Which ^ubringeth forth the chariot and horse,—the army and the power;
 They shall lie down together, they shall not rise:
 They are extinct, they are quenched as tow.
- 18 ^vRemember ye not the former things,—neither consider the things of old.
 19 Behold, I will do a ^wnew thing;—now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it?
^xI will even make a way in the wilderness,—and rivers in the desert
 20 ^yThe beast of the field shall honour me,—the dragons and the owls:⁷
 Because ^zI give waters in the wilderness,—and rivers in the desert,
 To give drink to my people, ^amy chosen.
- 21 ^bThis people have I formed for myself;—they shall show forth my praise.
- 22 But ^cthou hast not called upon me, O Jacob;
 But thou ^dhast been weary of me, O Israel.
- 23 ^eThou hast not brought me the small cattle of thy burnt offerings;
 Neither hast thou honoured me with thy sacrifices.
 I have not caused thee to serve⁹ with an offering,—nor wearied thee with incense.
- 24 Thou hast bought me no ^fsweet cane¹⁰ with money,
 Neither hast thou filled me with ^gthe fat of thy sacrifices:
 But thou hast made me to serve with thy sins,
 Thou hast ^hwearied me with thine iniquities.
- 25 I, even I, am he that ⁱblotteth out thy transgressions ^jfor mine own sake, ^kAnd will not remember thy sins.
- 26 ^lPut me in remembrance: let us plead together:
 Declare thou, that thou mayest be justified.
- 27 Thy first father¹¹ hath sinned,—^mand thy teachers have transgressed against me.

¹ That is, 'I will gather my scattered people from all parts of the world.' The restoration of the exiled Jews to their own land supplies the language in which the prophet represents a greater and more glorious gathering of all God's people into his church.

² Or, 'He hath brought,' etc.; 'all the nations are assembled,' etc. God's own people (comp. ch. xlii. 18, 19) and the heathen are still regarded as assembled at the great controversy; and are appealed to again (as in ch. xli. 21, 22) upon the foregoing facts and promises, which make Israel the witness of Jehovah's Deity.

³ All other gods were 'formed;' but Jehovah was self-existent before anything was made.

⁴ Prescience and power are here combined.

⁵ Babylon, like Egypt (vers. 3, 16, 17), is to be devoted to destruction for Israel's deliverance.

⁶ Or, 'shout;' perhaps 'their exultation' or 'pride.' The Euphrates, and the great canal which joined it to the Tigris, afforded the Chaldeans in Babylon many commercial advantages, of which, as we learn from ancient history, they largely availed themselves.

⁷ This seems designed to show the greatness and the blessedness of the change. Comp. ch. lv. 12; Luke xix. 40. On 'dragons' and 'owls,' see note on ch. xlii. 21.

⁸ The design of vers. 22—28 is to show the Jews that they were indebted to the Divine goodness alone for their deliverance. See note on ch. xlii. 18.

⁹ That is, 'I have not exacted of thee anything unreasonable.' See ver. 24.

¹⁰ Sweet cane was an ingredient in the holy oil (Exod. xxx. 23), and was an article of commerce often brought from a distance (Jer. vi. 20).

¹¹ This may refer to the descent of the people from a sinful progenitor (as Adam or Abraham); thus representing their depravity as inveterate and universal. But the parallel clause, and the use of the term 'father'

- 28 Therefore ^p I have profaned the princes of the sanctuary, ^q And have given Jacob to the curse,—and Israel to reproaches.
- 44 Yet now hear, ^r O Jacob my servant;—and Israel, whom I have chosen :
 2 Thus saith the LORD that made thee,
^s And formed thee from the womb, which will help thee ;
^t Fear not, O Jacob, my servant;—and thou, ^u Jesurun,¹ whom I have chosen.
- 3 For I will ^x pour water upon him that is thirsty,

^z I will pour my spirit upon thy seed,—and my blessing upon thine offspring :
 4 And ^a they shall spring up as among the grass,—as willows by the water courses.³

- 7 And ^g who, as I, shall call,—and shall declare it,⁵ and set it in order for me,

 Or molten a graven image ^r that is profitable for nothing ?
- 11 Behold, all his fellows⁷ shall be ^s ashamed :—and the workmen, they are of men :
 Let them all be gathered together, let them stand up ;
 Yet they shall fear, and they shall be ashamed together.

- 13 The carpenter stretcheth out his rule ;—he marketh it out with a line ;

- 14 He heweth him down ^u cedars,—and taketh the cypress and the oak,
 Which he strengtheneth for himself among the trees of the forest :
 He planteth an ash, and the rain doth nourish it.
- 15 Then¹⁰ shall it be for a man to burn :—for he will take thereof, and warm himself ;
 Yea, he kindleth it, and baketh bread ;
 Yea, he maketh a god, and worshippeth it ;
 He maketh it a graven image, and falleth down thereto.
- 16 He burneth part thereof in the fire ;
 With part thereof he eateth flesh ;—he roasteth roast, and is satisfied :
 Yea, he warmeth himself, and saith,—Aha, I am warm, I have seen the fire :
- 17 And the residue thereof he maketh a god, even his graven image :
 He falleth down unto it, and worshippeth it,
 And prayeth unto it, and saith,—^x Deliver me ; for thou art my god.

elsewhere (see note on 1 Sam. x. 12), rather lead to the supposition that it refers to the religious head of the nation, the first or high priest. From that source, which should have communicated good, and from the inferior 'teachers,' evil had flowed to the whole people.

¹ This term is applied to Israel also in Deut. xxxii. 15 ; xxxiii. 5, 26 ; and probably means 'the upright one,' referring to the object for which Israel was 'created' a nation.

² The 'water' and 'floods' here, as elsewhere, denote the influences of the Holy 'Spirit,' which are the source of all 'blessing.'

³ The rapid and luxuriant growth of the willow, when planted by a watercourse, aptly represents spiritual advancement and vigour.

⁴ The Gentiles shall enrol themselves among the people of Jehovah.

⁵ That is, the future event.

⁶ Some apply this to the Hebrews ; but it probably refers (as in Ezek. xxvi. 20) to the earliest inhabitants of the world ; so that the meaning will be, from the most ancient times.

⁸ Suggesting the thought, How can that which is made by one who suffers from hunger and thirst be compared with the self-sufficient Jehovah !

⁹ Rather, 'he marketh it with a pointer ; he formeth it with gravers.'

¹⁰ Vers. 15—19 show the absurdity of worshipping an idol made from the very material which is applied to the lowest domestic uses.

2 That is, he looks for life and support to that which is worthless and disappointing.

3 'Is not this, about which I am busied, and upon which I am spending my strength and resting my hope, a deception ?'

4 Jehovah brings forward circumstantial proof of his sole Deity, by declaring the forgiveness and redemption of Israel (vers. 21—23), and announcing by name their deliverer, Cyrus, with many minute particulars of his conquests, all designed for God's glory and his people's good (24—28 ; xlv. 1—8). He threatens those who vainly resist his purposes (9—13), and declares that the heathen shall either honour his servants or perish (14—16). He then declares his designs of mercy (17—19) ; and calls on idolaters not only to see the helplessness of their idols (20, 21), but also to seek and find salvation in him (22—25).

5 That is, impostors, or false prophets. Their 'tokens' are their pretended proofs of Divine influence.

6 He shows them to be fools.

7 This probably means Isaiah, as one of God's prophets.

8 This is generally supposed to refer to the stratagem by which Cyrus took Babylon, diverting the Euphrates from its course through the city, and effecting an entrance for his soldiers along the empty channel. But as it is Jehovah who is said to do this, and as in ch. xliii. 16 the drying up of the Red Sea is distinctly adverted to, it seems better to regard this passage as asserting God's power and determination to do the same again if needed.

9 Kings are often called 'shepherds ;' but the name may be specially given to Cyrus as the gatherer and restorer of Israel, 'the sheep of God's pasture.' The future deliverer of the Jews from Babylon, who had been already referred to (ch. xli. 25), is here first mentioned by name, nearly 150 years before his birth. The name 'Cyrus' means 'the sun.'

10 Cyrus is called the anointed of the Lord, because God had solemnly set him apart to perform an important public service in his cause.

11 See notes on Ezra i. 2.

12 As the girding of the loins was necessary to active exercise, so the 'loosening' or ungirding them represents lassitude or weakness. God says that he will weaken the enemies of Cyrus.

13 By a remarkable providence, the gates within the city of Babylon, leading from the river to the streets, had been left open on the night when Cyrus attacked it, and the palace gates were also incautiously opened during the tumult.

- 2 I will go before thee,—^dand make the crooked places straight :
^eI will break in pieces the gates of brass,—and cut in sunder the bars of iron :
 3 And ^fI will give thee the treasures of darkness,¹
 And hidden riches of secret places,
^gThat thou mayest know² that I, the LORD,
 Which ^hcall thee by thy name,—am the God of Israel.
 4 For ⁱJacob my servant's sake,—and Israel mine elect,

 16 ^s'They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them :
 They shall go to confusion together that are ^tmakers of idols.
 17 ^u"But Israel shall be saved in the LORD—with an everlasting salvation :
^vYe shall not be ashamed nor confounded—world without end.

1 Hidden in vaults and 'secret places.' The countries which Cyrus conquered were among the richest in the world. The wealth of Cræsus, king of Lydia, was proverbial, and that of Babylon could hardly be less.

2 See notes on Ezra i. 2.

3 See note on 'loose,' ver. 1.

4 Some suppose that this alludes to the religious system of the Persians ; according to which there were two co-eternal beings, who divided the government of the world between them. One of these, called Ormuzd, was regarded as the principle of light, the source of all good ; while the other, Ahriman, was thought to be the principle of darkness, and the fountain of all evil. Jehovah is the only God independent and sovereign.

5 Such being the power and wisdom of God, the impiety which resists or questions his doings will surely bring destruction.

6 Or, 'commit them to me : ' that is, instead of arrogantly doubting my proceedings, inquire humbly respecting my designs, and leave the care of them to me. But some read this as a question, 'Will ye ask me of things to come concerning my children, and will ye command me?' etc. : i. e. Do ye impiously interfere with my plans ?

7 That is, Cyrus ; who will be led to these beneficent acts not by any prospect of remuneration, but by a regard to the command of God. See Ezra i. 2.

8 See note on ch. xliii. 3. The extraordinary stature of the Sabeans is mentioned by Herodotus, b. 3, c. 20. It seems to be introduced here to enhance the glory of Israel's superiority.

9 This appears to be addressed to Jerusalem, as the city of God. Respecting the fulfilment of this and similar prophecies, see note on ch. xix. 1.

10 The prophet utters his feelings of admiring awe at the view granted to him of God's great plan of purifying, delivering, and honouring Israel, by their exile in Babylon and restoration by Cyrus. And he is led forward in the rest of the chapter, to contemplate God's further displays of his glory and the 'everlasting salvation' of his people. The last subject calls forth from the apostle Paul a similar exclamation in Rom. xi. 33—36.

- ^z He created it not in vain,—he formed it to be inhabited :¹
^a I am the LORD; and there is none else.
 19 I have not spoken in ^b secret,² in a dark place of the earth :
 I said not unto the seed of Jacob, Seek ye me in vain :
^c I the LORD speak righteousness,—I declare things that are right.
 20 ^d Assemble yourselves and come ;
 Draw near together, ^e ye that are escaped of the nations :³
^f They have no knowledge that set up⁴ the wood of their graven image,
 And pray unto a god that cannot save.
 21 ^g Tell ye, ^h and bring them near ;—yea, let them take counsel together :
ⁱ Who hath declared this⁵ from ancient time ?—who hath told it from that time ?
Have not I the LORD ? ^h and there is no God else beside me ;
 A just God and a Saviour ;—there is none beside me.
 22 ^j Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth :⁶
 For I am God, and there is none else.
 23 ^m I have sworn by myself,⁷ ⁿ The word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return,
 That unto me every ^o knee shall bow,—^p every tongue shall swear.
 24 Surely, shall one say, In the LORD have I ^q righteousness and ^r strength :
^s Even ^t to him shall men come ;
 And ^u all that are incensed against him⁸—shall be ashamed.
 25 ^v In the LORD shall all the seed of Israel⁹ be justified,—and ^x shall glory.

Jehovah's Deity displayed in the overthrow of the idols and idolaters of Babylon.

- 46 BEL¹⁰ ^y boweth down, Nebo stoopeth,
 Their idols were upon the beasts, and upon the cattle :
 Your carriages¹¹ were heavy loaden ;—^z they are a burden to the weary beast.
 2 They stoop, they bow down together ;—they could not deliver the burden,
^a But themselves are gone into captivity.
 3 Harken unto me, O house of Jacob,—and all the remnant of the house of Israel,
^b Which are borne by me from the belly,—which are carried from the womb :
 4 And even to your old age ^c I am he ;—and even to hoar hairs ^d will I carry you :
 I have made, and I will bear ;—even I will carry, and will deliver you.
 5 ^e To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal,
 And compare me, that we may be like ?

¹ As God intended the earth to be inhabited, his chosen land should be re-peopled, and again become the happy abode of the exiles.

² Not like the dark and doubtful responses of heathen oracles, to which men resorted in vain ; but in plain, exact, circumstantial language, which should always be verified by the event.

³ Surviving the desolating judgments upon the idolaters. These are invited to come and observe the uselessness of trusting in idol gods.

⁴ Rather, 'that carry ;' a sarcastic reference to the fugitives carrying their helpless gods.

⁵ The events now predicted ; in all of which Divine justice and saving mercy are wonderfully united.

⁶ 'The ends of the earth' includes all nations. See Psa. lxxii. 8 ; xlviii. 3. Had Jehovah been only 'a just God,' the Gentile world would have had nothing to expect but perdition (see ver. 16). But he is also 'a Saviour ;' and therefore he invites them to choose between destruction and submission ; showing that the purpose of the preceding argument was not to drive them to despair, but to awaken them to feel the necessity of seeking safety in the favour of the one true God, whose exclusive Deity is made the ground of the exhortation.

⁷ Vers. 23, 24 contain a fuller statement of the truth intimated in ver. 22, that the benefits of salvation shall be extended to the whole world. It is the expression of God's solemn determination, that all nations shall certainly be brought to acknowledge Him, and partake of the benefits of the true religion. That there is here a primary and direct reference to the Messiah is evident from Rom. xiv. 11 ; Phil. ii. 10, 11. He is thus presented to view as one to whom universal religious homage and submission are due ; as the source of righteousness and strength to his people ; and as triumphing over all his enemies.

⁸ Resisting his government under the gracious reign of the Messiah.

⁹ That is, all the true children of God.

¹⁰ Before God's saving righteousness (promised in ch. xlv. 22—25) can be displayed to the world, two things must be done : Babylon, God's enemy and Israel's oppressor, must be punished (xlv. xlvii.) ; and Israel must be humbled, purified, and then delivered (xlviii.) In dealing with Babylon, God first humbles its idols, which are helpless burdens, instead of being powerful supporters, as he is (xlv. 1—7), and rebukes and threatens their worshippers (8—13). He then turns to the city, which he will degrade (xlvii. 1—4) for its cruelty, self-confidence, luxury, and superstitious arts (5—15). 'Bel' (another form of Baal) was the principal god of the Babylonians, representing either the sun or the planet Jupiter. There was in Babylon a splendid temple erected to him, the ruins of which are still visible. The high veneration in which this supposed god was held appears from the frequent use of his name in the compound proper names of the country ; such as Belshazzar, Belteshazzar. 'Nebo,' the other idol specified, is supposed to have been the symbol of the planet Mercury ; corresponding to Hermes among the Greeks, and Anubis among the Egyptians. This name is likewise found in many of the compound names of the Chaldeans ; e. g. Neboassar, Nebuchadnezzar.

¹¹ The word 'carriages' is always used, in the Bible, in the old English sense of things carried, or burdens. 'Your burdens are packed, a load to the weary [beast].' It was customary for conquerors to carry away the gods of the vanquished people, both for the sake of their ornaments and to make the triumph complete. Comp. Jer. xlviii. 7.

- 6 ^f They lavish¹ gold out of the bag,—and weigh silver in the balance,
And hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god:
They fall down, yea, they worship.
- 7 ^g They bear him upon the shoulder,—they carry him,
And set him in his place, and he standeth;—from his place shall he not remove:
Yea, ^h one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer,
Nor save him out of his trouble.
- 8 Remember this, and show yourselves men:²
ⁱ Bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.
- 9 ^k Remember the former things of old:
For ^l I am God, and ^m there is none else;—I am God, and there is none like me,
- 10 ⁿ Declaring the end from the beginning,
And from ancient times the things that are not yet done,
Saying, ^o My counsel shall stand,—and I will do all my pleasure:
- 11 ^p Calling a ravenous bird³ ^q from the east,
The man^r that executeth my counsel from a far country:
Yea, ^s I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass;
I have purposed it, I will also do it.
- 12 Harken unto me, ye ^t stouthearted,—^u that are far from righteousness:
- 13 ^x I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off,
And my salvation^y shall not tarry:
And I will place ^z salvation in Zion, for ^a Israel my glory.
- 47 Come ^b down, and ^c sit in the dust,⁴ ^d O virgin ^e daughter of Babylon,
Sit on the ground:—^f there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans:
For thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.
- 2 ^g Take the millstones,⁵ and grind meal:
Uncover thy locks,⁶ make bare the leg,—uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.
- 3 ^h Thy nakedness shall be uncovered,—yea, thy shame shall be seen:
ⁱ I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.⁷
- 4 As for ^k our redeemer,⁸ the Lord of hosts is his name,—the Holy One of Israel.
- 5 Sit thou ^l silent, and get thee into darkness,⁹ O daughter of the Chaldeans:
^m For thou shalt no more be called, The lady¹⁰ of kingdoms.
- 6 ⁿ I was wroth with my people,¹¹—^o I have polluted mine inheritance,
And given them into thine hand:—thou didst show them no mercy;
^p Upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.
- 7 And thou saidst, I shall be ^q a lady for ever:
So that thou didst not ^r lay these things to thy heart, ^s Neither didst remember the latter end of it.
- 8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art given to pleasures,¹²
That dwellest carelessly,¹³
That sayest in thine heart,—^t I am, and none else beside me;
^u I shall not sit as a widow,¹⁴—neither shall I know the loss of children:
- 9 But ^x these two things shall come to thee—^y in a moment in one day,
The loss of children, and widowhood:
^z They shall come upon thee in their perfection—^a for the multitude of thy sorceries,
And for the great abundance of thine enchantments.¹⁵
- 10 For thou ^b hast trusted in thy wickedness:—^c thou hast said, None seeth me.

¹ This expression is appropriately applied to the idols of Babylon, many of which appear to have been very costly. See Dan. iii. 1.

² That is, 'Act rationally; put away your idolatrous follies.'

⁴ Babylon is represented here as a queen, reduced from the luxury and elegance of a palace to servitude and shame.

⁵ See note on Exod. xi. 5.

⁶ Rather, 'Raise thy veil (see Sol. Song v. 7); lift up the skirt.' She who had so jealously concealed her person, must now submit to the exposure endured by the lowest class of slaves in doing their work.

⁷ Some render this, 'I will suffer no man to intercede.' But the most probable meaning is, 'I will make peace with no man.'

⁸ This short parenthesis brings vividly before the mind the Author and the design of Babylon's degradation.

⁹ 'Silence' and 'darkness' are emblems of sorrow.

¹⁰ Or, 'mistress of kingdoms,' ruling over kingdoms which she had conquered, and made tributary.

¹¹ Although Babylon had been employed to chastise Israel's sins, yet she is to be dealt with according to her own purposes of cruel ambition. See notes on ch. x. 7, and 1 Kings xii. 15.

¹² Babylon is said by ancient historians to have been a most dissipated and licentious city.

¹³ The Babylonians trusted in their defences and provisions, and mocked Cyrus when he besieged their city.

¹⁴ The metaphor of a virgin is exchanged for that of a childless widow, to heighten the idea of desolateness.

¹⁵ The value which the Chaldeans set upon soothsaying appears from Dan. i. 20; ii. 2, 10; iv. 7; v. 11, etc.

¹⁶ The Chaldeans were celebrated for their astronomical science and recondite philosophy.

- ^e And thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else beside me.
 11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee;
^f Thou shalt not know from whence it riseth :¹
 And mischief shall fall upon thee ;—thou shalt not be able to put it off :
 And ^g desolation shall come upon thee suddenly,—which thou shalt not know.
 12 Stand now with thine enchantments,—and with the multitude of thy sorceries,
 Wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth ;
 If so be thou shalt be able to profit,—if so be thou mayest prevail.
 13 ^h Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels.
 Let now ⁱ the astrologers, the stargazers,—the monthly prognosticators,²
 Stand up, and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.
 14 Behold, they shall be ^k as stubble ;—the fire shall burn them ;
^l They shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame :
^m There shall not be a coal to warm at,—nor fire to sit before it.³
 15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured,
Even ⁿ thy merchants, from thy youth :
^o They shall wander every one to his quarter ;—none shall save thee.

Remonstrances, exhortations, and promises to Israel.

- 48 HEAR⁴ ye this, O house of Jacob,—^p which are called by the name of Israel,
 And ^q are come forth out of the waters⁵ of Judah,
^r Which swear by the name of the LORD,—and make mention of the God of Israel,
^s But not in truth, nor in righteousness.⁶
 2 ^t For they call themselves ^u of the holy city,⁷
 And ^v stay themselves upon the God of Israel ;—the LORD of hosts is his name.
 3 ^x I have declared the former things from the beginning ;
 And they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them ;
 I did them suddenly, ^y and they came to pass.
 4 Because ^z I knew that thou art obstinate,
 And ^a thy neck is an iron sinew,—and thy brow brass ;⁸
 5 ^b I have even from the beginning declared it to thee ;
 Before it came to pass I showed it thee :
 Lest thou shouldst say, Mine idol hath done them,
 And my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.
 6 Thou hast heard, see all this ;—and will not ye declare it ?⁹
^c I have showed thee new things from this time,
 Even hidden things, and thou didst not know them.
 7 They are created now, and not from the beginning ;
 Even before the day when thou heardest them not ;
 Lest thou shouldst say, Behold, I knew them.
 8 Yea, thou heardest not ; yea, ^d thou knewest not ;
 Yea, from that time¹⁰ that thine ear was not opened :
 For ^e I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously,
 And wast called ^f a transgressor from the womb.
 9 ^g For my name's sake ^h will I defer mine anger,
 And for my praise will I refrain for thee,—that I cut thee not off.

11 ; 1 Pet. 1. 7 ; 4. 12.

1 Rather, 'Thou shalt not know a dawn thereof ;' no morning shall succeed thy night of ruin ; nor shall any expiation be able to avert thy sudden calamity. This is a terrible contrast to God's temporary chastisement of his people for their good. See Ps. xxx. 5.

2 The astrologers professed to make their calculations of the future by 'dividing the heavens' into houses, watching the stars in their conjunctions and oppositions, and 'studying the new moons' as to their times, etc.

3 This may refer to the entire consumption of what is to be burned. Or it may mean, 'It shall not be a coal to warm at,' etc., but a fire intolerably hot and destructive. See Heb. xii. 29.

4 See note on ch. xlv. 1. In ch. xlviii., Israel is reminded of his rejection of God's teachings and commands, though they were sustained by the best proofs (1—8) ; that he may feel his deliverance to be owing entirely to Divine mercy (9—15), and may learn to regard Him who connects his favours with obedience to his righteous will (16—22). This is an address to the Jews, regarded as in Babylon ; reminding them of their origin and privileges as the descendants of Jacob, and of the unworthy use which they made of them.

5 See notes on Ps. lxviii. 26. Judah is mentioned probably because, having been preserved as the royal tribe of the Messiah, it was to give its name to the whole nation.

6 That is, not sincerely.

7 That is, of Jerusalem, as the earthly residence of God, and the metropolis of the theocracy. Its modern name, El-kuds, is derived from the appellation of the Holy City.

8 Intractable and insensible.

9 That is, 'Thou hast heard [the prediction] ; behold it all [fulfilled]. And will ye not declare ?' (i. e. utter some prophecy). Nay, you cannot ; for, till I predicted them, 'thou didst not know them ;' and 'before this day thou hast not heard them' (ver. 7).

10 Or, 'From of old thine ear was not opened ;' i. e. thou wouldest not attend to my communications.

11 Perhaps this means, that dross (rather than silver) is the result of the process. I have long tried thee with afflictions, but have not found thee pure ; so that thy deliverance is for my glory, not for thy merit.

I have chosen thee ^k in the furnace of affliction.

- 11 ^l For mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it :
For ^m how should my name be polluted ?
And ⁿ I will not give my glory unto another.

- 12 Harken unto me, O Jacob—and Israel, my called ;
^o I am he ; I am the ^p first, I also am the last.

- 13 ^q Mine hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth,
^r And my right hand hath spanned the heavens :
^s When ^t I call unto them, they stand up together. ¹

- 14 ^u All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear ;
Which among them hath declared these things ?
^v The LORD hath loved him : ² ^x he will do his pleasure on Babylon,
And his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

- 15 I, even I, have spoken ; yea, ^y I have called him :
I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

- 16 Come ye near unto me, hear ye this ;
^z I have not spoken in secret from the beginning ;
^a From the time that it was, there am I :
And now ^b the Lord God, and his Spirit, ³ hath sent me.

- 17 Thus saith ^c the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel ;
I am the LORD thy God ^d which teacheth thee to profit, ^e Which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go.

- 18 ^f Oh that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments !
^g Then had thy peace been as a river,
And thy righteousness as the waves of the sea : ⁴

- 19 ^h Thy seed also had been as the sand,
And the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof ;
His name should not have been cut off—nor destroyed from before me.

- 20 ⁱ Go ye forth of Babylon,—flee ye from the Chaldeans,
With a voice of singing declare ye, tell this,—utter it even to the end of the earth ;
Say ye, The LORD hath ^k redeemed his servant Jacob.

- 21 And they ^l thirsted not when he led them through the deserts : ⁵
He ^m caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them :
He clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out.

- 22 ⁿ There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked. ⁶

- 49 Listen, ⁷ ^o O isles, unto me ; ⁸—and hearken, ye people, from far ;

^p The LORD hath called me from the womb ;
From the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name. ⁹

- 2 And he hath made ^q my mouth ¹⁰ like a sharp sword ;
^r In the shadow of his hand hath he hid me,
And made me ^s a polished shaft ;—in his quiver hath he hid me ;

- 3 And said unto me, 'Thou art my servant,
^u O Israel, ¹¹ ^x in whom I will be glorified.

² Most commentators apply this to Cyrus, and regard it as referring not to moral complacency, but to approval of his execution of Jehovah's purpose, in liberating the Jews from Babylonian oppression. But it may be applied to Israel, for whose sake Jehovah 'will do his pleasure on Babylon,' etc.

³ Or, 'And now the Lord God hath sent me and his Spirit.' Many commentators suppose this verse to be spoken by the Second Person in the Godhead, as receiving a special commission to interpose for the deliverance of the captive people ; which the Holy Spirit was likewise sent to reveal through the prophets. But Calvin and others regard the whole clause as a parenthesis, in which the prophet emphatically asserts that he was commissioned by Jehovah, and inspired by the Holy Spirit, to make this communication.

⁴ Thou shouldest have enjoyed constantly and abundantly the highest religious prosperity.

⁵ The same Divine power which supplied their fathers when they came out of Egypt shall take care of them.

⁷ The restoration of Israel might seem to be disappointing, (1.) Because all Israel was not gathered. But as Messiah's days approach, it is more fully revealed that 'Israel after the flesh' forms but a small part of God's people, who shall be gathered from every land : ch. xlix. 1—13. (2.) Because these blessings are so long delayed. But God has not forgotten : he will yet glorify Zion ; and make all nations aid her triumphs, or else perish by his wrath (14—26). And, indeed, the delay is occasioned not by God's unfaithfulness, but by Israel's sins, which God thus punishes (ch. l. 1—3) ; for he has prepared and qualified his servant (4—9) ; and those who humbly wait for him shall yet be saved ; whilst those who impatiently look for aid elsewhere shall be ruined by their false hopes (10, 11).

⁸ It is generally agreed that this is the language of the Messiah as the spiritual Deliverer both of Jews and Gentiles.

⁹ If this refers to the name 'Jesus' (Luke ii. 21), it is doubtless because this name indicated the nature of his office, and his appointment to it by his Father : see Matt. i. 21, and Heb. v. 5.

¹⁰ That is, 'my speech,' or teaching. See refs.

¹¹ The name 'Israel' is here given to the Messiah, because he, as the leader and pattern of all God's people,

- 4 ^y Then I said, I have laboured in vain,
I have spent my strength for nought, and in vain :
^z Yet surely my judgment is with the LORD,
And my work [or, my reward ^a] with my God.
- 5 And now, saith the LORD—^b that formed me from the womb to be his servant,
^c To bring Jacob again to him,—Though Israel ^d be not gathered,
^e Yet shall I be glorious in the eyes of the LORD,
And my God shall be my strength.
- 6 And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant,
To raise up the tribes of Jacob,—and to restore the preserved of Israel :
I will also give thee for a ^f light to the Gentiles,
^g That thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.
- 7 Thus saith the LORD,—the Redeemer of Israel, and his Holy One ;
^h To him whom man despiseth, to him whom the nation ⁱ abhorreth,
^j To a servant of rulers ; ^k Kings shall see and arise,—princes also shall worship,
Because of the LORD that is faithful,
And the Holy One of Israel, ^l and he shall choose thee.
- 8 Thus saith the LORD,—^m In an acceptable ⁿ time have I heard thee,
And in a day of salvation ^o have I helped thee :
And I will preserve thee, ^p and give thee for a covenant of the people,
To establish the earth, ^q to cause to inherit the desolate heritages ;
- 9 That thou mayest say ^r to the prisoners, Go forth ;
^s To them that are in darkness, Show yourselves.
^t They shall feed ^u in the ways,—and their pastures shall be in all ^v high places.
- 10 They shall not ^w hunger nor thirst ;—^x neither shall the heat nor sun smite them :
For he that hath mercy on them ^y shall lead them,
Even by the springs of water shall he guide them.
- 11 ^z And I will make all my mountains a way,—and my highways shall be exalted.
- 12 Behold, ^a these shall come from far :
And, lo, these from the north and from the west ;
And these from the land of Sinim. ^b
- 13 ^c Sing, O heavens ; and be joyful, O earth ;
And break forth into singing, O mountains :
For ^d the LORD hath comforted his people,—and will have mercy upon his afflicted.
- 14 ^e But Zion said, ^f The LORD hath forsaken me,
And my Lord hath forgotten me.
- 15 ^g Can a woman forget her sucking child,
That she should not have compassion on the son of her womb ?
^h Yea, they may forget,—ⁱ yet will I not forget thee.
- 16 Behold, ^j I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands ; ^k ^l Thy walls are continually before me.
- 17 ^m Thy children shall make haste ; ⁿ
^o Thy destroyers and they that made thee waste shall go forth of thee.
- 18 ^p Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold :
^q All these gather themselves together, and come to thee.—As I live, saith the LORD,
Thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, ^r as with an ornament,
And bind them on thee, as a bride doeth.

most fully possessed both the character and the privileges which the name implied ; and he it is who bestows these upon all others who enjoy them. Comp. Gen. xxxii. 28 ; John xi. 42 ; Heb. vii. 25 ; and see note on title of Psa. xvi.

¹ That is, the Jewish people ; to whose feelings in regard to Jesus as the Messiah the description is still most fully applicable.

² He who once subjected himself to the power of unjust rulers shall receive the homage of kings.

³ Or, 'a time of grace.' This passage is applied by the apostle Paul to the times of the Messiah ; whom it represents as pleading successfully for the extension of gospel blessings to all who seek to be 'reconciled to God' through Him. See 2 Cor. v. 18—vi. 2.

⁴ This language appears to be borrowed from the restoration of the cities and inhabitants of Palestine ; but it refers to the restoration of man by the gospel from his ruined and enslaved condition. See ch. xlii. 7.

⁵ The people delivered by the Messiah shall be also supplied and protected by Him as their shepherd. The expressive language of ver. 10 is applied in Rev. vii. 16 to the consummated blessedness of the redeemed.

⁶ Converts shall flock into the church from the most distant quarters. 'Sinim' has been variously interpreted ; but the prevailing opinion is that it denotes China, which was known to the ancients under the name of 'Sina' or 'Sinim.' The whole verse contains probably the customary division of the world, at that time, into four quarters.

⁹ That is, shall hasten to come to thee, whilst thy enemies depart. By a beautiful figure, the sons, or inhabitants, of Zion are described, in ver. 18, as her bridal dress and jewels, her ornament and glory.

- 19 For thy waste and thy desolate places, and the land of thy destruction,
^p Shall even now be too narrow by reason of the inhabitants,
 And ^q they that swallowed thee up shall be far away.
- 20 ^r The children which thou shalt have, ^s after thou hast lost the other,
 Shall say again in thine ears,
 'The place is too strait for me:—give place to me that I may dwell.
- 21 Then shalt thou say in thine heart,
 "Who hath begotten me these,—seeing I have lost my children,
 And am desolate,—a captive, and removing to and fro?¹
 And who hath brought up these?—Behold, I was left alone;
 These, where had they been?
- 22 ^t Thus saith the Lord God,—Behold, I will lift up mine hand to the Gentiles,
 And set up my standard to the people:
 And they shall bring thy sons in their arms,
 And thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders.²
- 23 ^u And kings shall be thy ^v nursing fathers,—and their queens thy nursing mothers:
^w They shall bow down to thee with their face toward the earth,
 And ^x lick up the dust of thy feet;³—and thou shalt know that I am the LORD:
 For ^y they shall not be ashamed that wait for me.
- 24 ^z Shall the prey be taken from the mighty,⁴—or the lawful captive delivered?
- 25 But thus saith the LORD,—^a Even the captives of the mighty shall be taken away,
 And the prey of the terrible shall be delivered:
^b For I will contend with him that contendeth with thee,
 And ^c I will save thy children.
- 26 And I will ^d feed them that oppress thee with their own flesh;
 And they shall be drunken with their own ^e blood, as with sweet [or, new] wine:
 And all flesh ^f shall know that I the LORD am thy Saviour,
 And thy Redeemer,—the mighty One of Jacob.
- 50 Thus saith the LORD,
 Where is ^g the bill of your mother's divorcement,—whom I have put away?
 Or which of my ^h creditors is it to whom I have sold you?⁵
 Behold, for your iniquities ⁱ have ye sold yourselves,
 And for your transgressions is your mother put away.
- 2 Wherefore, when I came, was there no man?
^j When I called was there none to answer?⁶
^k Is my hand shortened at all, that it cannot redeem?
 Or have I no power to deliver?
 Behold, ^l at my rebuke I ^m dry up the sea,—I make the ⁿ rivers a wilderness:
 'Their fish stinketh, because there is no water,—and dieth for thirst.
- 3 "I clothe the heavens with blackness,—^o and I make sackcloth their covering.
- 4 ^p The⁷ Lord God hath given me the tongue of the learned,
 That I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is ^q weary ^r He wakeneth morning by morning,
 He wakeneth mine ear—to hear as the learned.⁸
- 5 ^s The Lord God hath opened mine ear,
 And I was not ^t rebellious,—neither turned away back.
- 6 ^u I gave my back to the smiters,
 And ^v my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair:⁹
 I hid not my face from shame and spitting.
- 7 For ^w the Lord God will help me;—therefore shall I not be confounded:
 Therefore have ^x I set my face like a flint.¹⁰

1 Rather, 'removed;' i. e. banished, outcast.

2 In Western Asia and in Egypt young children are seldom carried in the arms, but they often sit astride on the left shoulder of the parent, whose head they grasp to maintain their position.

3 A figurative expression, meaning, 'they shall be completely subject to thee.' See Ps. lxxii. 9.

4 The question implies that such deliverance appears impossible. But God will effect it, driving the oppressor to desperate rage.

5 Two metaphors are here employed; the one of a divorce, the other of a sale into bondage. The questions intimate that, if documents and witnesses be adduced, that is, if the matter be inquired into, Jehovah will be found to have acted neither capriciously nor unjustly in chastising his people; for they have caused their sufferings by their sins.

6 Why did you disobey and disbelieve me? I have always shown myself able to do what I threaten.

7 The servant of Jehovah is qualified to instruct and comfort his people (ver. 4); is obedient and meek (5), yet confiding in God (6), and therefore fearless and successful (7, 8). All this doubtless refers chiefly to our Lord.

8 Or, 'the taught.' He will arouse my attention as a teacher arouses his pupils.

9 Plucking the beard and spitting in the face are, in the East, regarded as the greatest insults. The reference in this verse to our Lord's sufferings will appear from Matt. xxvi. 67; xxvii. 26, 30; John xviii. 22.

10 I can go unflinchingly through all my sufferings; for God will vindicate me (ver. 8) by delivering me from them. See Luke ix. 51; John xvii. 1–5; Rom. i. 4. Ver. 8 seems to be referred to in Rom. viii. 33, 34, and to be applied to the believer, who is justified through Christ.

And I know that I shall not be ashamed.

8 ^h He is near that justifieth me;

Who will contend with me?—ⁱ let us stand together:

Who is mine adversary?—let him come near to me.

9 Behold, the Lord God will help me;—who is he that shall condemn me?

^k Lo, they all¹ shall wax old as a garment;—^l the moth shall eat them up.

10 ^m Who is among you that feareth the LORD,

That obeyeth the voice of ⁿ his servant,

That ^o walketh in darkness, and hath no light?

^p Let him trust in the name of the LORD,—and stay upon his God.

11 Behold, ^q all ye that kindle a fire,—that compass yourselves about with sparks:

^r Walk in the light of your fire,—and in the sparks that ye have kindled.

^s This shall ye have of mine hand;—ye shall lie down ^t in sorrow.

Introduction to the prophecy of the Messiah; calls to attention; and addresses to Jehovah and to the church.

51 ^u HEARKEN² to me, ^x ye that follow after righteousness,

Ye that seek the LORD:—^y look unto the rock whence ye are hewn,

And to the hole of the pit³ whence ye are digged.

2 ^z Look unto Abraham your father,—and unto Sarah that bare you:

^a For I called him alone,⁴—and ^b blessed him, and increased him.

3 For the LORD ^c shall comfort Zion:—^d he will comfort all her waste places;

And he will make ^e her wilderness like Eden,

And her desert ^f like the garden of the LORD;

Joy and gladness shall be found therein,—thanksgiving, and the voice of melody.

4 Hearken unto me, my people;—and give ear unto me, ^g O my nation:

^h For a law shall proceed from me,

And I will make my judgment to rest⁵ ⁱ for a light of the people.

5 ^k My righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth,

^l And mine arms shall judge the people;

^m The isles shall wait upon me,—and ⁿ on mine arm shall they trust.

6 ^o Lift up your eyes to the heavens,—and look upon the earth beneath:

For ^p the heavens shall vanish away like smoke,

^q And the earth shall wax old like a garment,

And they that dwell therein shall die in like manner:

But ^r my salvation shall be for ever,—and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

7 ^s Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness,

The people ^t in whose heart is my law;

^u Fear ye not the reproach of men,—neither be ye afraid of their revilings.

8 For ^x the moth shall eat them up like a garment,

And the worm shall eat them like wool:

^y But my righteousness shall be for ever,

And my salvation from generation to generation.

9 ^z AWAKE!⁶ awake! ^a put on strength, ^b O arm of the LORD;

Awake! ^c as in the ancient days, in the generations of old.

^d Art thou not it that hath cut ^e Rahab,⁷—and wounded the ^f dragon?

10 Art thou not it which hath ^g dried the sea,—the waters of the great deep;

That hath made the depths of the sea a way for the ransomed to pass over?

1 That is, my enemies.

2 Chapters li.—lvi. 8 contain the great central portion of these prophecies. Ch. li. lii. 1—12 form the introduction, which begins with a threefold call to hear the glorious news of salvation, addressed to God's patiently expectant people (ch. 1. 10), cheering them by referring to the humble origin of their national greatness; bidding them to believe that their present depression shall be exchanged for glory and joy (1—3); declaring that God's everlasting righteousness is now to be displayed for the salvation of all people (4—6); and animating them amidst the taunts of those who thought that God's unchangeable purposes had failed (7, 8).

3 The quarry from which were brought the stones composing your national edifice; i. e. your progenitors Abraham and Sarah.

4 As a single individual.

5 That is, I will establish it. The 'law' and 'judgment' are evidently God's new revelation of truth in the gospel.

6 The prophet adds another threefold call, which, like the preceding, has a verbal agreement in the first and third parts, and a slight variation in the middle portion. Invoking Jehovah to put forth again the omnipotence which had crushed Egypt and freed Israel, he receives an immediate response of promise and comfort (9—16). Awaking Zion from her abject misery and death-like despair, he applies to her the consolation which he has just received (17—23). Arousing her to put on her royal robes, and claim again her queenly rank, he promises her purity, freedom, peace, and glory; points out the herald who announces the Saviour's advent; and bids her sons march with him in triumph to take possession of their promised inheritance (lii. 1—12). The language is derived partly from the deliverance from Egypt, partly from the return from Babylon; but the coming manifestation of the Divine Redeemer is evidently the great subject, which, towards the close, as He is seen approaching, kindles the prophet's feelings to the most impassioned warmth.

7 See notes on ch. xxx. 7, and on Ps. lxxiv. 13.

- 11 Therefore ^a the redeemed of the LORD shall return,
And come with singing unto Zion;—and everlasting joy shall be upon their head:
They shall obtain gladness and joy;—and sorrow and mourning shall flee away.
- 12 I, even I, ¹ am he ¹ that comforteth you:
Who art thou, that thou shouldst be afraid ^h of a man that shall die,
And of the son of man which shall be made ¹ as grass;
- 13 ^m And forgettest the LORD thy Maker,
ⁿ That hath stretched forth the heavens,—and laid the foundations of the earth;
And hast feared continually every day—because of the fury of the oppressor,
As if he were ready to destroy?—^o and where is the fury of the oppressor?
- 14 ^p The captive exile hasteneth that he may be loosed, ^q And that he should not die in the pit,—nor that his bread should fail.²
- 15 But I am the LORD thy God,—that ^r divided the sea, whose waves roared:
The LORD of hosts is his name.
- 16 And ^s I have put my words in thy mouth,³
And ^t I have covered thee in the shadow of mine hand,
^u That I may plant the heavens, and ^x lay the foundations of the earth,
And say unto Zion, ^y Thou art my people.
- 17 ^z Awake! awake! stand up, O Jerusalem,
Which ^a hast drunk ⁴ at the hand of the LORD the cup of his fury;
^b Thou hast drunken the dregs of the cup of trembling,—and wrung them out.
- 18 There is none to guide her among all the sons whom she hath brought forth;
Neither is there any that taketh her by the hand
Of all the sons that she hath brought up.
- 19 ^c These two *things*⁵ are come unto thee;—^d who shall be sorry for thee?
Desolation, and destruction, and the famine, and the sword:
^e By whom shall I comfort thee?
- 20 ^f Thy sons have fainted, they lie at the head of all the streets,
As a wild bull in a net:
^g They are full of the fury of the LORD,—the rebuke of thy God.
- 21 Therefore hear now this, thou afflicted,—and drunken, ^h but not with wine:
- 22 Thus saith thy Lord the LORD,
And thy God ⁱ that pleadeth the cause of his people,
Behold, I have taken out of thine hand the cup of trembling,
Even the dregs of the cup of my fury;—thou shalt no more drink it again:
- 23 But ^k I will put it into the hand of them that afflict thee;
^l Which have said to thy soul, Bow down,⁶ that we may go over:
And thou hast laid thy body as the ground,
And as the street, to them that went over.
- 52 Awake! ^m awake! ⁿ put on thy strength, O Zion;
Put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem, ^o the holy city:
For ^p henceforth there shall no more come into thee the uncircumcised ^q and the unclean.⁷
- 2 ^r Shake thyself from the dust; arise, and sit down,⁸ O Jerusalem:
^s Loose thyself from the bands of thy neck,—O captive daughter of Zion.
- 3 For thus saith the LORD,
^t 'Ye have sold yourselves⁹ for nought;—and ye shall be redeemed without money.
- 4 For thus saith the Lord God,
My people went down aforetime into ^u Egypt to sojourn there;
And ^x the Assyrian¹⁰ oppressed them without cause.
- 5 Now therefore, what have I here,¹¹ saith the LORD,

1 This emphatic reduplication implies that Jehovah alone is all-sufficient to deliver from the mightiest oppressor (ver. 13).

2 Rather, 'The bending prisoner hasteneth to be loosed, and he shall not die in the pit; his bread shall not fail. And (or, For) I am,' etc. God's salvation shall reach even him who, bent under heavy chains in the lowest dungeon, is perishing with hunger. It shall therefore relieve the most extreme and hopeless suffering.

3 Jehovah seems here to address him who is to bring salvation, the Messiah, the author of the new creation. See ch. lxxv. 17, 18; lxxvi. 22; 2 Cor. v. 17.

4 This figure forcibly represents a state of helpless misery under Jehovah's anger: see refs.

5 The two things may be desolation and destruction for the city, famine and sword for its people; or desolation by famine, and destruction by sword.

6 See Josh. x. 24, and note.

7 The freedom of the church from the contamination of the ungodly is essential to its prosperity and honour. Comp. Rev. xxi. 26, 27.

8 Rather, 'sit;' i. e. arise and take possession of thy throne.

9 Rather, 'ye were sold.' As Israel's oppressors gave nothing for him, so they can claim nothing when he is 'redeemed,' or delivered from them.

10 Pharaoh and Sennacherib were mighty, yet Jehovah freed Israel from their tyranny; and surely he can save him from other enemies. See next verse.

11 Or, 'what is there to me in this case;' i. e. what is there in this case to keep me from interfering? Nay, rather, I must interpose; for 'they that oppress them howl (like wild beasts over their prey), and my name is blasphemed continually,' as if I could not deliver.

- That my people is taken away for nought?
They that rule over them make them to howl, saith the LORD;
And my name continually every day is ^y blasphemed.
- 6 Therefore ^z my people shall know my name:
Therefore they shall know in that day
That I am he that doth speak: behold it is I.
- 7 ^a How beautiful¹ upon the mountains
Are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace;
That bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation;
That saith unto Zion,—^b Thy God reigneth!
- 8 Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice;—with the voice together shall they sing:
For ^c they shall see eye to eye,—when the LORD shall bring again Zion.
- 9 Break forth into joy, sing together,—^d ye waste places of Jerusalem:
^e For the LORD hath comforted his people,—^f he hath redeemed Jerusalem.
- 10 ^g The LORD hath made bare his holy arm²—in the eyes of all the nations;
And ^h all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God.
- 11 ⁱ Depart³ ye! depart ye! go ye out from thence,—^k touch no unclean thing;
Go ye out of the midst of her;—^l be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the LORD.
- 12 For ^m ye shall not go out with haste,—nor go by flight:
ⁿ For the LORD will go before you;—^o and the God of Israel will be your rereward.

Prophecy of the Messiah; his appearance, sufferings, and reward.

- 13 BEHOLD, ^p my servant shall deal prudently [or, prosper], ^r He shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high.
- 14 As many were astonished⁵ at thee;
(His ^s visage was so marred more than any man,
And his form more than the sons of men:)
- 15 'So shall he sprinkle⁶ many nations;
^t The kings shall shut their mouths⁷ at him:
For that ^u which had not been told them shall they see;
And that which they had not heard shall they consider.
- 53 Who ^v hath believed our report?⁸
And to whom is ^z the arm of the LORD revealed?
- 2 For ^a he shall grow up ^b before him as a tender plant,⁹
And as a root out of a dry ground:
^c He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him,
There is no beauty that we should desire him.
- 3 ^d He is despised and rejected of men;
A man of sorrows, and ^e acquainted with grief:
And we hid as it were our faces from him;¹⁰
He was despised, and ^f we esteemed him not.
- 4 Surely ^g he hath borne our griefs,—and carried our sorrows:¹¹
Yet we did esteem him stricken,¹²—smitten of God, and afflicted.
- 5 But he was ^h wounded for our transgressions,¹³—he was ⁱ bruised for our iniquities:

1 The expected herald now appears; the watchmen of Zion all announce his rapid approach; he comes close, so that the people see him face to face.

2 Like a warrior, throwing back the loose sleeve of his robe to have his arm free. This prepares us for an unusual exercise of Divine power.

3 Comp. Exod. xiii. 21, 22; xiv. 19, 20; Ezra viii. 22, 23, 28, 31. All are to march now the Divine Leader is at hand; but their exodus is not to be a flight (Exod. xii. 11), but a march of triumph.

4 The Divine Redeemer now appears (ch. lii. 13—liii. 12); but how different from other deliverers, and from all that carnal men expected! Honoured by Jehovah with promises of success and of universal reverence (13—15), he is yet disbelieved, despised, and rejected by men because of his humiliating sorrows (liii. 1—3). But his sufferings and death relieve men's woes and procure their peace with God (4—6); they are borne by the holy sufferer with unrepining submission to Jehovah's will (7—10); and they accomplish the purposes of Divine mercy in the salvation of sinners, which is to him an illustrious and satisfying reward (10—12).

5 Or, 'shocked,' at the mean and suffering appearance of the expected deliverer.

6 Comp. Lev. xiv. 7. Lowly as was his appearance, he was nevertheless ordained by God to purify men of all nations from the guilt and pollution of sin.

7 In admiration. Receiving abundant blessings from so unexpected a source, they shall gain fresh knowledge of God's perfections, and of his wonderful plans and purposes. Comp. 1 Cor. i. 18—25.

8 The prophet mourns over the people's unbelief, occasioned by the humiliation which he is about to describe. The 'arm' of the Lord is the emblem of his power; which, when disguised in our Saviour's lowly state, men did not recognise.

9 A weakly shoot from a decayed trunk, giving no promise of beauty or value. See note on ch. xi. 1.

10 With disgust and contempt.

11 The quotation of these words in Matt. viii. 17, with reference to some of the effects of sin, seems intended to point to Christ's work in the removal of all.

12 That is, by Divine judgment. The word is applied especially to the infliction of such diseases as the plague or the leprosy. See note on Lev. xiii. 2; and Luke xiii. 1, John ix. 2.

13 These sufferings are to be vicarious, 'for our transgressions'; and propitiatory, for they will be for 'our peace.' The 'chastisement of our peace' means the chastisement by which our peace was effected.

- When thou shalt make his soul ^x an offering for sin,
^y He shall see his seed, ^z he shall prolong his days,
 And ^a the pleasure of the LORD shall prosper in his hand.
- 11 ^b He shall see of the travail of his soul,⁶ and shall be satisfied :
^c By his knowledge⁷ shall ^d my righteous ^e servant ^f justify many ;
^g For he shall bear their iniquities.
- 12 ^h Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great,⁸ ⁱ And he shall divide the spoil with the strong ;
 Because he hath ^j poured out his soul unto death :
 And he was ^k numbered with the transgressors ;—and he bare the sin of many.
 And ^l made intercession⁹ for the transgressors.

Prophecy of the Messiah continued ; the enlargement of his church through his work.

- 54 SING,¹⁰ ^m O barren, thou that didst not bear ;
 Break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child :
 For ⁿ more are the children of the desolate
 Than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD.
- 2 ^o Enlarge the place of thy tent,
 And let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations :
 Spare not, lengthen thy cords,—and strengthen thy stakes ;¹¹
- 3 ^p For thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left ;
^q And thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles,
^r And make the desolate cities to be inhabited.
- 4 Fear not ; for thou shalt not be ashamed :
 Neither be thou confounded ; for thou shalt not be put to shame :
 For thou shalt forget the shame of ^s thy youth,
 And shalt not remember the reproach of ^t thy widowhood any more.
- 5 ^u For thy Maker is thine husband ;¹²—the ^x LORD of hosts is his name ;
 And thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel ;
^y The God of the whole earth shall he be called.

¹ That is, astray from God ; an image expressive of the folly, waywardness, and danger of sinners ; the diversity of whose transgressions is represented in the next clause.

² Or, 'from confinement.' This probably means that, after some form of trial, the sufferings which the Redeemer shall undergo as our substitute will be terminated by a violent death.

³ This may mean either, Who can tell the wickedness of the men of his age ? or, Who will identify himself with his family ? or, more probably, Who can express his posterity—the number of his descendants ? See ver. 10.

⁵ Whatever hand men might have in the death of the Redeemer, it was nevertheless the result of the gracious purpose of God. See Acts ii. 23.

⁶ That is, 'He shall see the fruit of his sufferings, and shall be satisfied.' He shall see so much good resulting from his great sorrows, that he shall be abundantly compensated for all that he endured.

⁷ That is, 'by the knowledge of him ;' such a knowledge as leads to faith in him, and thus saves the soul.

⁸ That is, 'among the great ;' such as the great are accustomed to receive. As the conquerors of this world gather spoil, so shall the Messiah obtain his portion, the people whom he hath redeemed.

⁹ Rather, 'shall interpose ;' applying to them all the blessings which flow from his atoning death.

¹⁰ The first glorious result of Messiah's coming and work is the joyful increase of the church, which has long been desolate and dishonoured (vers. 1—4), but is now to be recognised and claimed by Jehovah her 'husband' and 'kinsman-redeemer,' whose just displeasure is entirely and for ever appeased (5—10). Thus she shall be made attractive, enlightened, peaceful, secure, and victorious (11—17).

¹¹ This beautiful metaphor is taken from the pastoral life of the East. As more room is needed by a growing family, the whole tent must be enlarged, the cords extended, and the pegs strengthened.

¹² Rather, 'thy husband is thy Maker,' etc. ; i. e. God will appear as thy husband and thy Redeemer, avowing the tenderest interest in thy welfare, and taking thee under his special protection. This is connected with the extension of the church through 'the whole earth.'

- 6 For the LORD ^z hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit,
And a wife of youth,¹ when thou wast refused,—saith thy God.
- 7 ^a For a small moment have I forsaken thee;
But with great mercies ^b will I gather thee.
- 8 In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment;
^c But with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee,
Saith the LORD thy Redeemer.
- 9 For this is as the waters of ^d Noah unto me:
For as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth;
So have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee.²
- 10 For ^e the mountains shall depart,—and the hills be removed;
^f But my kindness shall not depart from thee,
Neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed,
Saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee.
- 11 O thou ^g afflicted, tossed with tempest, and ^h not comforted,
Behold, I will lay thy stones with ⁱ fair colours,³
And lay thy foundations with sapphires.
- 12 And I will make thy windows of agates,—and thy gates of carbuncles,
And all thy borders of pleasant stones.
- 13 And all thy children shall be ^k taught of the LORD;⁴
And ^l great shall be the peace of thy children.
- 14 ^m In righteousness shalt thou be established:
ⁿ Thou shalt be far from oppression—^o for thou shalt not fear:
And from terror—for it shall not come near thee.
- 15 ^p Behold, they shall surely gather together, but not by me:
Whosoever shall gather together against thee shall fall ^q for thy sake.⁵
- 16 Behold, I have created the smith that bloweth the coals in the fire,
And that bringeth forth an instrument for his work;
And I have created the waster to destroy.⁶
- 17 ^r No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper;
And ^s every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn.
^t This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD,
^u And their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD.

- 55 HO,⁷ ^x every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters,⁸
And he that hath no money; ^y come ye, buy, and eat;
Yea, come, buy wine and milk—^z without money and without price.
- 2 Wherefore do ye ^a spend money for that which is not bread?
And your labour for that which satisfieth not?
^b Harken diligently unto me, and ^c eat ye that which is good,
And let your soul delight itself in fatness.
- 3 Incline your ear, and ^d come unto me:—^e hear, and your soul shall live;
^f And I will make an everlasting covenant with you,
Even the ^g sure mercies of David.⁹

¹ One to whom there was early and constant love, which had not been destroyed even by her sins.

² Whatever may be the troubles of the church, it shall never be swept away and perish.

³ Rather, 'in stibium;' a paint formed from antimony, with which the Hebrew women tinged their eye-lashes. This seems designed to suggest the costliness and beauty of the building.

⁴ Our Lord quotes this prediction in proof of the necessity of that Divine teaching by which the Holy Spirit both enlightens the mind and influences the heart (John vi. 45).

⁵ Or, 'shall fall (i. e. come over) to thee.' The enemies of the church shall find that God opposes their unholy alliance against her, and shall join themselves to her.

⁶ Your interests are safe in my hands; for I am the Creator and Controller both of him who makes and of him who uses the weapons of destruction.

⁷ The gracious work of Messiah opens the blessings of the church to the whole world. All the spiritually needy, fruitlessly seeking the supply of their souls' wants, are invited to obtain it (vers. 1—3) from Him whom God has appointed (4, 5). There is now abundant pardon for the worst of sinners (6, 7); for God's thoughts and plans of mercy are infinitely above man's (8, 9); his beneficent promise is infallibly sure (10, 11); and he has connected his honour with the salvation and happiness of the sinner (12, 13).

⁸ The adaptation, richness, and freeness of gospel blessings are contrasted with the costly and unsatisfying attempts of men to obtain happiness from other sources.

¹⁰ This refers to the Messiah, who is to 'the people' (i. e. to all nations) a 'witness' bearing testimony to God's truth, both condemnatory and saving (John xviii. 37; Mal. iii. 5; Rev. i. 5); and a 'leader and commander' (Dan. ix. 25; Heb. ii. 10), ruling his followers and leading them on to victory. Thus He will be to the whole world what the Israelite expected Him to be to his own people; and will 'call' to the participation of these privileges those who had not been 'known' or acknowledged as his, but who shall 'run' eagerly to accept the offered blessings. Comp. Acts xiii. 42—48.

- ⁱ A leader and commander to the people.
- 5 ^k Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not,
^l And nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee
 Because of the LORD thy God,
 And for the Holy One of Israel; ^m for he hath glorified thee.
- 6 ⁿ Seek ye the LORD while he may be found,—call ye upon him ^o while he is near:
- 7 ^p Let the wicked forsake his way,—and the unrighteous man ^q his thoughts:
 And let him ^r return unto the LORD,—^s and he will have mercy upon him;
 And to our God,—for ^t he will abundantly pardon.
- 8 ^u For my thoughts are not your thoughts,
 Neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD.
- 9 ^v For as the heavens are higher than the earth,
 So are my ways higher than your ways,—and my thoughts than your thoughts. ¹
- 10 For ^w as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven,
 And returneth not thither, but watereth the earth,
 And maketh it bring forth and bud,
^z That it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater:
- 11 ^a So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth:
^b It shall not return unto me void,—but it shall accomplish that which I please,
 And it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.
- 12 ^c For ye shall go out with joy, ^d—and be led forth with peace:
 The mountains and the hills shall ^e break forth before you into singing,
 And ^f all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.
- 13 ^g Instead of ^h the thorn shall come up the fir tree,
 And instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree:
 And it shall be to the LORD ⁱ for a name,
 For an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off. ³

Prophecy of the Messiah continued: concluding exhortations.

- 56 ^j THUS ^k saith the LORD,—Keep ye judgment, and do justice:
^l For my salvation is near to come,—and my righteousness to be revealed.
- 2 Blessed is the man that doeth this,—and the son of man that layeth hold on it;
^m That keepeth the sabbath ⁿ from polluting it,
 And ^o keepeth his hand from doing any evil.
- 3 Neither let ^p the son of the stranger, that hath joined himself to the LORD, speak,
 Saying, The LORD hath utterly separated me from his people:
 Neither let the eunuch ^q say,—Behold, I am a dry tree.
- 4 For thus saith the LORD unto the eunuchs that keep my sabbaths,
 And choose the things that please me,—and take hold of my covenant; ⁷
- 5 Even unto them will I give in ^r mine house and within my walls
 A place ^s and a name better than of sons and of daughters:
 I will give them an everlasting name, ^t—that shall not be cut off.
- 6 Also the sons of the stranger, that join themselves to the LORD, to serve him,
 And to love the name of the LORD, to be his servants,
 Every one that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it,
 And taketh hold of my covenant:
- 7 Even them will I ^u bring to my holy mountain, ^v
 And make them joyful in my house of prayer:

¹ Man's forgiveness is arbitrary, partial, imperfect, and often reluctant; but God 'delighteth in mercy,' and is ever ready to forgive all sin, according to his own plan of salvation, which is altogether above human conception.

² The form of this promise was probably suggested by the deliverances from Egypt and Babylon; but its substance is the joyful salvation of those who trust God's 'word' of grace, to whose happiness everything ministers. And this joy is accompanied with a moral change, which converts the wilderness into 'the garden of the Lord.' Comp. Ps. xvi. 11; ch. xxxv. 1, 2.

³ God receives fresh and everlasting glory from his work of salvation. See Rev. v. 13; vii. 10–12.

⁴ Ch. lvi. 1–8 may be regarded as a practical supplement to the preceding prophecies, bidding the sinner to do works meet for repentance (Matt. iii. 2–8), because God's salvation is at hand (1, 2); and encouraging those who had been regarded as outcasts with the promise of admission to gospel privileges (3–8).

⁵ The observance of the sabbath appears to be particularly mentioned, partly because it could be maintained by the Jews even during their exile, and partly because of its great and permanent importance to the maintenance of religion among men.

⁶ These two classes had been expressly excluded by the law from the congregation of the Hebrews. See Deut. xxiii. 1–8. The gospel has removed all external barriers to religious privileges.

⁷ The covenant mentioned in ch. lv. 3.

⁹ As these privileges are to be enjoyed long after the temple, with its ritual observances, has passed away, this language must be a figurative description of a free admission to all the blessedness of God's people. In these 'the stranger' shall 'be gathered with the outcasts of Israel' (ver. 8). See John x. 16; Eph. ii. 12, 13.

- ⁷ Their burnt offerings and their sacrifices shall be accepted upon mine altar ;
For ^r mine house shall be called an house of prayer ^s for all people.
- 8 The Lord God—^t which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, ^u Yet will I gather others to him,—beside those that are gathered unto him.
- Ancient Israel ; its sins and chastisements, with promises of mercy to the penitent.*
- 9 ^x ALL¹ ye beasts of the field,² come to devour,—yea, all ye beasts in the forest.
- 10 His watchmen are ^y blind : they are all ignorant, ^z They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark ;
Sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber.
- 11 Yea, they are ^a greedy dogs which ^b can never have enough,
And they are shepherds that cannot understand :
^c They all look to their own way,—every one for his gain, from his quarter.
- 12 Come ye, say they, ^d I will fetch wine,
And we will fill ourselves with strong drink ;
^e And to-morrow shall be as this day,—and much more abundant.
- 57 The³ righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart :⁴
And ^f merciful men are taken away, ^g none considering
That the righteous is taken away from the evil to come.
- 2 ^h He shall enter into ⁱ peace :

- 4 Against whom do ye sport yourselves ?
Against whom ^m make ye a wide mouth, and ⁿ draw out the tongue ?
Are ye not children of transgression, a seed of falsehood,
- 5 ^o Enflaming yourselves with idols ^p under every green tree, ^q Slaying the children⁷ in the valleys—under the cliffs of the rocks ?
- 6 Among ^r the smooth stones⁸ of the stream is thy portion ;—they, they are thy lot :
Even ^s to them hast thou poured a drink offering,—thou hast offered a meat offering.
Should I receive comfort in these ?⁹
- 7 ^t Upon a lofty and high mountain hast thou set ^u thy bed :¹⁰
Even thither wentest thou up to offer sacrifice.
- 8 ^x Behind the doors also and the posts hast thou set up thy remembrance :
^y For thou hast discovered thyself to another than me,—and art gone up ;
Thou hast enlarged thy bed,—and made thee a covenant with them ;
^z Thou lovedst their bed where thou sawest it.

1 The prospect of a glorious spiritual state leads to the contemplation of the difference between this and the present corrupt condition of the church, and the necessity of severe judgments to prepare the way of the Lord. From ch. lvi. 9 to lix. 21, therefore, the prophet is chiefly occupied with denouncing the sins and threatening the chastisement of Israel ; not, however, without cheering intimations of Divine mercy. He first calls for punishment upon the slothfulness (ver. 10), greediness (11), and intemperate self-indulgence (12) of Israel's leaders, as chief causes of the national crimes which provoked Divine indignation.

2 God's people being regarded as his flock, their leaders and teachers are called 'watchmen' and 'watch-dogs ;' whilst the agents of Divine correction and punishment are appropriately spoken of as 'wild beasts,' who are here abruptly summoned to their savage work.

3 In such times of severe chastening the removal of the righteous is for their own happiness (vers. 1, 2), but it is ominous of evil to the scornful and obstinate idolater (3—13). Whilst these are punished, God regards the contrite, and will deliver them from correction, giving them that peace (13—19) which is unattainable by the wicked (20, 21).

4 The prayers, example, and influence of the pious are among the world's richest blessings. Their removal is a public calamity : and those men show great thoughtlessness who can witness it with indifference. But wicked men hate the secret rebuke of a holy life, and are glad to be free from such a restraint on their own evil practices.

5 That is, each one 'who walks.' This peaceful rest is the end of all who live uprightly.

6 The faithless people are summoned to hear God's charges against them, and remonstrated with for their impiety ; which is represented as a carrying out of their fathers' sins in violating God's covenant. Compare Matt. xvi. 4.

7 See notes on Lev. xx. 2 ; 2 Kings xvi. 3.

8 If the word 'stones' is properly supplied in our translation, the reference is probably to anointed stones, such as were set up by the patriarchs for memorials (see Gen. xxviii. 18 ; xxxv. 14), and by the heathen as objects of worship. Arnobius says that, before his conversion to Christianity, he never saw an oiled stone without addressing it and praying to it. Such idols were the chosen 'portion' and 'lot' of the idolatrous Jews.

9 Or, 'Shall I be comforted (i. e. satisfied by taking vengeance) for these ?' See ch. i. 24.

10 Vers. 7, 8 show the extent, publicity, and grossness of Jewish idolatry. They had filled their houses with the memorials of it ; and felt no shame on account of their sins.

11 Some understand by 'the king' the foreign monarchs with whom the Israelites were seeking forbidden alliances (see ch. xxx. 2 ; Hos. v. 13 ; xii. 1). Others think that some idol, particularly Moloch, is intended. The Jews, eager for such unhallowed and degrading connections, are represented as an immodest woman, who uses precious unguents and perfumes in order to ingratiate herself with her paramours.

12 That is, to the lowest degree of debasement.

- 10 Thou art ^b wearied in the greatness of thy way ;
^c Yet saidst thou not, There is no hope :
 Thou hast found the life of thine hand ; ¹—^d therefore thou wast not grieved.
- 11 And ^e of whom hast thou been afraid or feared, ²—^f that thou hast lied, ^g And hast not remembered me, nor laid it to thy heart ?
^h Have not I held my peace even of old,—and thou fearest me not ?
- 12 ⁱ I will declare thy righteousness, and thy works ;—for they shall not profit thee.
- 13 When thou criest, let thy companies ³ deliver thee ;
 But the wind shall carry them all away ; vanity shall take them.
^k But he that putteth his trust in me shall possess the land,
 And shall inherit ^l my holy mountain ;
- 14 And shall say, ^m Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way,
ⁿ Take up the stumblingblock out of the way of my people.
- 15 For ⁵ thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity,
^o Whose name is Holy ;—^p I dwell in the high and holy place,
^q With him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit,
^r To revive the spirit of the humble,—and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.
- 16 ^s For I will not contend for ever,—neither will I be always wroth :
 For the spirit should fail before me,—and the souls ^t which I have made. ⁶
- 17 For the iniquity of ^u his covetousness ⁷ was I wroth, and smote him :
^v I hid me, and was wroth,—^w and he went on frowardly in the way of his heart.
- 18 ^x I have seen his ways, ⁸ and ^y will heal him :
^z I will lead him also, and restore comforts unto him and to ^a his mourners.
- 19 I create ^d the fruit of the lips ; ⁹—Peace, peace ^c to him that is far off,
 And to him that is near,—saith the LORD ;—and I will heal him.
- 20 ^f But the wicked are like the troubled sea,—when it cannot rest, ¹⁰
 Whose waters cast up mire and dirt.
- 21 ^g There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked.
- 58 CRY ¹¹ aloud, spare not,—lift up thy voice ^h like a trumpet,
 And show my people their transgression,—and the house of Jacob their sins.
- 2 Yet ⁱ they seek me daily,—and delight ¹² to know my ways,
 As a nation that did righteousness,—and forsook not the ordinance of their God :
^k They ask of me the ordinances of justice :
 They take delight in approaching to God.
- 3 ^l Wherefore have we fasted, say they, and thou seest not ?
 Wherefore have we ^m afflicted our soul, ¹³ and thou takest no knowledge ?
 Behold, in the day of your fast ye find pleasure,—and exact all your labours.
- 4 ⁿ Behold, ye fast for strife and debate,—and to smite with the fist of wickedness :
 Ye shall not fast as ye do this day,—to make your voice to be heard on high. ¹⁴
- 5 Is it ^o such a fast that I have chosen ?—^p a day for a man to afflict his soul ?
 Is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, ¹⁵

¹ That is, 'thou hast found vitality,' 'strength.' Notwithstanding all the trouble and disappointments which the Jews experienced in their idol worship, they still clung to it tenaciously.

² Why have you revered other gods whilst you falsely professed to be my people, encouraging yourselves in your hypocrisy by my forbearance? I will show what your professed righteousness is by your works, and they shall not avail you (ver. 12).

³ Or, 'gatherings;' either of idols or of allies, or of both, on which the Israelites relied.

⁴ Or, 'And one shall say,' etc. Every obstacle shall be removed from the path of those who put their trust in God. See note on ch. xl. 3.

⁵ This sublime description of the condescension of God assigns a reason why they might trust the foregoing promise, notwithstanding their own unworthiness, and the infinite disparity between Him and them.

⁶ The frailty of man is adduced as a reason for the exercise of Divine mercy. Comp. Ps. ciii. 14.

⁷ This was one of the prevailing sins of the Jewish people, which drew down upon them Divine vengeance.

⁸ Either the people's ways of sin, or their ways of repentance: probably the latter, the 'mourners' being 'the contrite' (ver. 15).

⁹ 'The fruit of the lips' is used in Heb. xiii. 15 in the sense of thanksgiving. God is the author of praise by bestowing as the theme of it 'peace to him that is far off, and to him that is near,' etc.

¹¹ The prophet is commanded to rebuke Israel unsparingly (ver. 1) for the hypocritical observances with which they covered their sins, specifying particularly their attendance on the daily service, and their fasting (2—7); and to promise Divine favour and true honour to those who enter into the spirit of these duties (8—12), and who rightly observe the sabbath (13, 14).

¹² They showed much zeal for the ceremonies of religion, and even took a certain pleasure in the punctual observance of them; while they had no delight in spiritual religion, or even practical morality. Such were those who would not enter the hall of Pilate lest they should disqualify themselves for eating the passover, while they were meditating the death of the Just One. And many still show a great interest in the externals and appendages of religion, who have no real love to God.

¹³ That is, by fasting. Where professed austerities are a cloak for selfishness, they are most displeasing to God. See 1 Kings xxi. 9—13.

¹⁴ Even while fasting, men's passions may remain unsubdued, and display themselves in violent language and conduct.

¹⁵ These water-plants, which grow luxuriantly, but have no solid strength, easily bend, and are thus an appropriate emblem of a man bowed down with grief.

- And ^q to spread sackcloth and ashes under him?
 Wilt thou call this a fast,—and an acceptable day to the LORD?
 6 *Is not this the fast that I have chosen?*¹
 To loose the bands of wickedness,—^r to undo the heavy burdens,
 And ^s to let the oppressed go free,—and that ye break every yoke?
 7 Is it not ^t to deal thy bread to the hungry,
 And that thou bring the poor that are cast out to thy house?
^u When thou seest the naked, that thou cover him;
 And that thou hide not thyself from ^v thine own flesh?²
 8 ^y Then shall thy light break forth as the morning,
 And ^z thine health shall spring forth speedily:
 And ^a thy righteousness shall go before thee;
^b The glory of the LORD shall be thy rereward.³
 9 ^c Then shalt thou call, and the LORD shall answer;
 Thou shalt cry, and he shall say, Here I am.
 If thou take away from the midst of thee ^d the yoke,
^e The putting forth of the finger, and ^f speaking vanity;⁴
 10 And ^g if thou draw out thy soul to the hungry,—and satisfy the afflicted soul;
^h Then shall thy light rise in obscurity,—and thy darkness be as the noon day:
 11 And ⁱ the LORD shall guide thee continually,
 And ^j satisfy thy soul in drought,—and make fat thy bones:⁵
 And thou shalt be like a ^k watered garden,
 And like a spring of water, whose waters fail not.
 12 And they that shall be of thee ^l shall build the old ^m waste places:
 Thou shalt raise up the foundations of many generations;⁶
 And thou shalt be called, The repairer of the breach,
 The restorer of paths to dwell in.
 13 If ⁿ thou turn away thy foot⁷ from the sabbath,
 From doing thy pleasure on my holy day;
^o And call the sabbath a delight,—the holy of the LORD, honourable;
 And shalt honour him,—not doing thine own ways,
 Nor finding thine own pleasure,—nor speaking thine own words:
 14 ^p Then shalt thou delight thyself in the LORD;
 And I will cause thee to ^q ride upon the high places of the earth,⁸
 And ^r feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father:
^s For the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it.
 59 BEHOLD,⁹ the LORD's hand is not ^t shortened, that it cannot save;
 Neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:
 2 But ^u your iniquities have separated between you and your God,
 And your sins ^v have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.¹⁰
 3 For ^y your hands are defiled with blood,—and your fingers with iniquity;
^z Your lips have spoken lies,—your tongue hath muttered perverseness.
 4 ^a None calleth for justice,—nor any pleadeth for truth:
^b They trust in vanity, and speak lies;
^c They conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity.
 5 They hatch cockatrice' eggs,¹¹—and weave the spider's web:
 He that eateth of their eggs dieth,
 And that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper
 6 ^d Their webs shall not become garments,
^e Neither shall they cover themselves with their works:

¹ The fast which God accepts includes the self-denial which the exercise of justice and charity often requires.

² That is, 'from thine own kindred.' Thou shouldest not be ashamed of them because they are poor, nor withhold from them needful help.

³ Alluding to the manner in which the Israelites came up out of Egypt. See Exod. xiii. 21; xiv. 19; and note on ch. lii. 12. By obeying the Divine laws, they would now be as effectually secured and protected as they then were by the pillar of cloud and fire.

⁴ Or, 'wickedness.'

⁵ See Prov. xv. 30, and note.

⁶ The substitution of high spiritual and practical religion for formalism will restore a degraded church or nation to prosperity and honour.

⁷ See Eccles. v. 1. The 'foot' and the 'way' refer probably to the 'walk' or conduct. Abstain habitually from all self-indulgence (whether in business or amusement) on the sabbath, which is my holy day.

⁸ See Deut. xxxii. 13.

⁹ Lest Israel should murmur against God, the prophet traces their sufferings to their sins (vers. 1, 2), which he more fully describes as affecting all their actions, thoughts, and purposes; involving falsehood, injustice, and mischief (3—8), and producing misery and despair (9—11). He thus leads the people to a confession of guilt (12—15); on which God interposes, mingling judgment with salvation (16—19), and finally giving effect to his everlasting covenant of mercy (20, 21).

¹⁰ The people must suffer, not because God could not save them from their calamities, but because he would not on account of their sins.

¹¹ Their purposes are mischievous; but though they hurt others, they do no good to themselves (ver. 6).

- Their works are works of iniquity,—and the act of violence is in their hands.
 7 ^f Their feet run to evil,—and ^g they make haste to shed innocent blood :
 Their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity ;
^h Wasting and destruction are in their paths.
 8 The way of peace they know not ;—and there is no judgment in their goings :
ⁱ They have made them crooked paths :
^k Whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.
 9 Therefore ^l is judgment far from us,—neither doth justice overtake us :
^m We wait for light, but behold obscurity ;—for brightness, but we walk in darkness.
 10 ⁿ We grope for the wall like the blind,—and we grope as if we had no eyes :
 We stumble at noon day as in the night ;—we are in desolate places ^o as dead men.
 11 We roar all like bears,—and ^p mourn sore like doves : ^q
 We look for judgment, but there is none ;—for salvation, ^r but it is far off from us.
 12 For ^s our transgressions are multiplied before thee,
 And ^t our sins testify against us :
 For our transgressions are with us ;—and as for our iniquities, ^u we know them ;
 13 In transgressing and lying against the LORD,—and departing away from our God,
 Speaking oppression and revolt,
 Conceiving and uttering ^v from the heart words of falsehood.
 14 And judgment is turned away backward,—and justice standeth afar off :
 For ^w truth is fallen in the street, ^x—and equity cannot enter.
 15 Yea, truth faileth ;—and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey.
 AND the LORD saw it,—and it displeased him that there was no judgment.
 16 ^y And he saw that there was no man,—and ^z wondered that there was no intercessor : ^a
^b Therefore his arm brought salvation unto him ; ^c
 And his righteousness, it sustained him.
 17 ^d For he put on righteousness as a breastplate,
 And an helmet of salvation upon his head :
^e And he put on the garments of vengeance for clothing,
 And was clad ^f with zeal as a cloak.
 18 ^g According to their deeds, accordingly he will repay,
 Fury to his adversaries, recompence to his enemies ;
 To the islands he will repay recompence.
 19 ^h So shall they fear the name of the LORD from the west,
 And his glory from the rising of the sun.
 When the enemy shall come in ⁱ like a flood, ^j
^k The Spirit of the LORD shall lift up a standard against him.
 20 And ^l the Redeemer shall come to Zion,
 And ^m unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, ⁿ saith the LORD.
 21 ^o As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the LORD ;
^p My spirit that is upon thee,—^q and my words which I have put in thy mouth,
 Shall not depart out of thy mouth,—nor out of the mouth of ^r thy seed,
 Nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the LORD,
 From henceforth and for ever.

The true Israel ; its increase, blessedness, and glory.

60 ARISE! ^u shine! for thy light is come,

¹ Being opposed to all peace and justice (ver. 8), they lose the benefits of God's salvation (ver. 11).

² Or, 'in dark places.' Comp. Lam. iii. 6. This verse probably refers to the threatenings in Deut. xxviii. 28, 29. See also Zeph. i. 17.

³ These expressions seem to allude to the more violent and the more gentle expressions of grief.

⁵ Rather, 'none interposing.' Just when the wickedness and the misery of the people have reached a most alarming height, and evidently cannot be arrested by any human power, Jehovah interposes. The astonishment ascribed to him seems to intimate the desperate condition of Israel, which demanded an extraordinary exercise of both 'his arm' (his power) and 'his righteousness.' Like a warrior rousing and arming himself for some great exploit, He employs all his attributes in this work of salvation. The language can find its full accomplishment only in the personal perfections and glorious work of the Messiah.

⁶ This does not mean that he saved himself (for it was his people whom he saved) ; but that he for himself (or by himself—all alone) wrought salvation.

⁷ Or, 'For it shall come as the pent-up torrent, the Spirit of Jehovah raising a standard in it.' God's name and glory shall be irresistibly and illustriously displayed when he comes to recompense his enemies (ver. 18), and to be revered by all from West to East. Comp. 2 Thess. i. 8, and perhaps Matt. xxiv. 27.

⁸ In this promise the Jewish nation is clearly included : see Rom. xi. 26.

And ° the glory of the LORD is risen upon thee. ¹	o vers. 19, 20; Mal. 4. 2; Rev. 21. 11.
2 For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth,—and gross darkness the people: But the LORD shall arise upon thee,—and his glory shall be seen upon thee.
3 And the ^p Gentiles shall come to thy light, And ^q kings to the brightness of thy rising.	p ch. 49. 6, 23; 54. 1—3; Rev. 21. 24. q vers. 10, 16.
4 ^r Lift up thine eyes round about, and see: All they gather themselves together, ^s they come to thee: Thy sons shall come from far,—and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side. ²	r ch. 49. 18. s ch. 49. 20—22; 66. 12.
5 Then thou shalt see, and flow together, ³ And thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; Because ^t the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, The forces [or , wealth ^u] of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.	t Ro. 11. 25. u ver. 11; ch. 61. 6.
6 ^x The multitude of camels shall cover thee, The dromedaries of Midian ⁴ and ^y Ephah; All they from ^z Sheba shall come:—they shall bring ^a gold and incense; ^b And they shall show forth the praises of the LORD.	x ch. 30. 6; 1 Ki. 10. 2. y Ge. 25. 4. z ch. 45. 14; 2 Chr. 9. 1; Ps. 72. 10. a ch. 61. 6; Mal. 1. 11; Mt. 2. 11. b Ro. 15. 9. c ch. 42. 11; Ge. 25. 13. d ch. 56. 7.
7 All the flocks of ^c Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, The rams of Nebaioth shall minister unto thee: ^d They shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, And ^e I will glorify the house of my glory.	c Hag. 2. 7—9. d ver. 4.
8 Who are these ^f that fly as a cloud,—and as the doves to their windows? ⁵	f ch. 42. 4; 51. 5; Ps. 72. 10.
9 ^g Surely the isles shall wait for me,—and the ships of Tarshish first, ^h To bring thy sons from far,— ⁱ their silver and their gold with them, ^k Unto the name of the LORD thy God, And to the Holy One of Israel, ^l because he hath glorified thee.	g ch. 42. 4; 51. 5; Ps. 72. 10. h Gal. 4. 26. i Ps. 68. 30; Zec. 14. 14. k Jer. 3. 17. l ch. 55. 5; Jer. 30. 19.
10 And ^m the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, ⁿ And their kings shall minister unto thee: For ^o in my wrath I smote thee,— ^p but in my favour have I had mercy on thee.	m ch. 61. 5; Zec. 6. 15. n ver. 3; ch. 49. 23; Rev. 21. 24. o ch. 57. 17, 18. p ch. 54. 7, 8; Ps. 30. 5 q Rev. 21. 25.
11 Therefore thy gates ^r shall be open continually; ⁶ They shall not be shut day nor night; That men may bring unto thee the forces [or , wealth ^r] of the Gentiles, And that their kings may be brought.	r ver. 5.
12 ^s For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; Yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.	s see refs. ch. 41. 11; Zec. 14. 17—19; Mt. 21. 44.
13 ^t The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, The fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, To beautify the place of my sanctuary; And I will make ^u the place of my feet glorious.	t ch. 35. 2; 41. 19. u see ch. 66. 1; 1 Chr. 28. 2; Ps. 132. 7.
14 The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; And all they that despised thee Shall ^x bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; ^y And they shall call thee, The city of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.	x ch. 45. 14; 49. 23; Rev. 3. 9. y Ps. 87. 3; Heb. 12. 22; Rev. 14. 1.
15 Whereas ^z thou hast been forsaken and hated,—so that no man went through thee , I will make thee an eternal excellency,— ^a a joy of many generations.	z ch. 49. 14; 54. 6; Jer. 30. 17; Lam. 1. 1, 2. a ch. 61. 17.
16 Thou shalt also suck the milk of the Gentiles, ^b And shalt suck the breast of kings: And thou shalt know that ^c I the LORD am thy Saviour And thy Redeemer, the mighty One of Jacob.	b ch. 49. 23; 61. 6; 66. 11, 12. c ch. 43. 3, 4.

kings rebuild her walls, and their people flock into her open gates, whilst her enemies utterly perish (10—12). Lebanon, as of old, adorns her temple, and her oppressors yield her homage and service on account of her Saviour-King, who dwells in her for ever (13—16). The wealth and peace of Solomon's days are surpassed (17, 18); for her glory is more truly Divine, and her citizens are personally holy; therefore her honours are lasting, and her numbers multiplied (19—22). Some of the imagery here employed appears to have been suggested by Psa. lxxii., the subject of which is somewhat similar; and much of it recurs in Rev. xxi.

¹ There may be here a reference to the Shechinah, or visible splendour which accompanied the manifestation of God to the ancient Israel. In still greater glory will Messiah appear as his people's Protector and Guide.

² Rather, 'shall be carried at the side.' This may refer to the Eastern mode of carrying children on the hip.

³ This verse describes the joyful excitement with which the church would witness the vast accession made to her numbers. It may be rendered thus: 'Then shalt thou see, and brighten up, and thy heart shall throb and swell; because the abundance of the sea shall be turned upon thee, the strength of nations shall come to thee;' referring to the multitudes and the wealth of distant lands, which should be poured in like a flood upon her.

⁴ On these tribes, see Gen. xxv. 2, 4, 13, 14; and note on Psa. lxxii. 10.

⁵ This image conveys the idea of vast numbers. Morier describes the flocks of pigeons at Ispahan as being so large and compact that they 'looked, at a distance, like a cloud, and obscured the sun in their passage.'

⁶ An emblem of security, which encourages the influx of strangers.

- 17 ^d For brass I will bring gold,—and for iron I will bring silver,
And for wood brass, and for stones iron:
I will also make ^e thy officers peace,—and thine exactors¹ righteousness.
- 18 ^f Violence shall no more be heard in thy land,
Wasting nor destruction within thy borders;
But thou shalt call ^g thy walls, Salvation,—and thy gates, Praise.²
- 19 The ^h sun shall be no more thy light by day;
Neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee:
But the LORD shall be unto thee an everlasting light,—and ⁱ thy God thy glory.³
- 20 ^k Thy sun shall no more go down;—neither shall thy moon withdraw itself:
^l For the LORD shall be thine everlasting light,
And ^m the days of thy mourning shall be ended.
- 21 ⁿ Thy people also shall be all righteous;—^o they shall inherit the land for ever, ^p The branch of my planting,⁴ ^q the work of my hands,—^r that I may be glorified.
- 22 ^s A little one shall become a thousand,—and a small one a strong nation.
I the LORD will hasten it in his⁵ time.

The true Israel; its Prophet, Intercessor, and Restorer.

- 61 THE⁶ ^t Spirit of the Lord GOD is upon me;⁷
Because the LORD ^u hath anointed me⁸—^x to preach good tidings unto ^y the meek;
He hath sent me ^z to bind up the brokenhearted,
To proclaim ^a liberty to the captives,
And the opening of the prison to them that are bound;⁹
- 2 ^b To proclaim the acceptable year¹⁰ of the LORD,
And ^c the day of vengeance of our God;¹¹
- 3 ^d To comfort all that mourn;—to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, ^e To give unto them beauty for ashes,¹²—the oil of joy for mourning,
The garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness;¹³
That they might be called, Trees of righteousness, ^f The planting of the LORD, ^g that he might be glorified.
- 4 And they shall ^h build the old wastes,—they shall raise up the former desolations,
And they shall repair the waste cities,—the desolations of many generations.¹⁴
- 5 And ⁱ strangers shall stand and feed your flocks,
And the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vinedressers.¹⁵
- 6 ^k But ye shall be named, The priests of the LORD:
Men shall call you, The ^l ministers of our God:
^m Ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles,
And in their glory shall ye boast¹⁶ yourselves.
- 7 ⁿ For your shame ye shall have double;¹⁷
And for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion:
Therefore in their land they shall possess the double:
Everlasting joy shall be unto them.
- 8 For ^o I the LORD love judgment,—^p I hate robbery for burnt offering;¹⁸

1 Offices which have been abused by rapacious tyranny shall be filled by men of equity and peace.

2 Thou shalt rejoice in thy security and honour.

3 All inferior sources of illumination shall be eclipsed by the clear and bright manifestation which God will make of his truth, presence, and power.

5 Or, 'in its time.' When God sees that the proper time is come, there shall be no delay. See Heb. x. 37.

6 The great Personage who is qualified and appointed to effect this glorious change now appears, declaring his mission and its object (vers. 1—3), with the honour and joy which he will secure to the church (4—7); pledging Jehovah's truth to accomplish this (8, 9), and triumphing in the prospect of the universal diffusion of righteousness (10, 11). He himself will not rest until this is achieved, and Israel, once forsaken, is honoured by all as Jehovah's bride (lxii. 1—5); and he commands his servants to add their incessant prayers, till Jehovah has fulfilled his oath and restored his people (6—9). The people are then bidden to go forth and prepare the way for this glorious Personage, 'The Salvation of Israel' (10—12). His gorgeous dress, stained with blood, occasions inquiries, which he answers, declaring at once his vengeance and his redemption (lxiii. 1—6).

10 This probably alludes to the year of jubilee, when liberty was given to the bondsman (see Lev. xxv. 9, 10). The Messiah frees men from the degrading servitude of sin. Comp. John viii. 36.

11 God's works of deliverance illustrate his justice as well as his mercy, and therefore involve 'vengeance' upon the obstinately impenitent, as well as salvation for the faithful believer.

12 Or, 'a turban for ashes.' Mourners laid aside their head-dress and other ornaments, abstained from using the 'oil of joy,' and put dust and ashes on their heads. See Josh. vii. 6, and refs.; and 2 Sam. xii. 20. The Messiah changes the sinner's despondency into grateful joy.

 Which shall never hold their peace day nor night :
- 7 Ye that make mention⁷ of the LORD, ^q keep not silence,—and give him no rest,
 Till he establish, and till he make Jerusalem—^r a praise in the earth.
- 8 The LORD hath ^s sworn by his right hand, and by the arm of his strength,
 Surely I will no more ^t give thy corn⁸ to be meat for thine enemies ;
 And the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine,
 For the which thou hast laboured :
- 9 But they that have gathered it shall eat it,—and praise the LORD ;
 And they that have brought it together shall drink it, ^u In the courts of my holiness.
- 10 Go through, go through the gates ;—^x prepare ye⁹ the way of the people ;
 Cast up, cast up the highway ;—gather out the stones ;
^y Lift up a standard for the people.
- 11 Behold, the LORD hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, ^z Say ye to the daughter of ^a Zion, Behold, thy salvation cometh ;
 Behold, his ^b reward is with him,—and his work¹⁰ [or, recompense] before him.

passage may be rendered, 'I hate robbery with iniquity ; and I will give their reward with truth.' i. e. I hate rapine, accompanied, as it always is, with iniquity ; and I will give my people an ample recompense for all they have suffered. See note on ch. xl. 10.

1 The salvation of God's people is always connected with the punishment of his enemies; therefore, to complete the prophetic picture, Israel's Almighty Saviour appears as the blood-stained destroyer of Edom. See ch. xxxiv. 1, and note. The same idea, clothed in imagery and even in language derived from this passage, reappears in John's vision of the Divine Word (Rev. xix. 11–16), who not only speaks and judges, but 'makes war in righteousness.' By this frequent combination of vengeance with mercy, the impenitent sinner is solemnly warned of his dreadful doom.

2 Rather, 'dazzling'; alluding to military dress.

3 Or, 'wine-vat'; into which the grapes were put to be trodden with the feet, whilst the juice flowed off into a reservoir. A person so employed would naturally be splashed with the red juice, and thus resemble one who was covered with blood.

4 As the Messiah is here taking 'vengeance' on his foes, and 'their blood,' not his own, is 'sprinkled on his garments,' this passage cannot refer to his bearing alone the guilt of man, in which he could not have expected any human help. It means that, in vindicating the cause of righteousness in the world, he might reasonably claim the assistance of men, but was left to do it alone.

5 That is, the year long ago appointed for their redemption has arrived.

6 See note on ch. li. 17.

7 As the bright visions of the future fade from his sight, the inspired seer betakes himself to prayer that they may be realized. Praising Jehovah for former deliverances, mixed, indeed, with needful chastenings (vers. 7–10), and especially for the deliverance by Moses (11–14), he pleads for further interposition, on the ground of God's covenant-relation to Israel as a holy people (15–19). He entreats God to appear as at Sinai (lxiv. 1–4); not, however, in strict justice, for their sins have deserved severe wrath (5–7), but in paternal pity for their deep affliction (8–12). The whole is a beautiful and affecting example of humble and contrite, but earnest pleading with God. Comp. Dan. ix. In this, as in other elegiac poetry, there are numerous triplets.

8 Rather, 'children will not be false to me;' indicating the reasonableness of the expectation that Israel, admitted to the privileges of Jehovah's children, would act accordingly.

9 Some read, 'In all their affliction there was not affliction:' this rendering suggesting the completeness of Divine deliverance and support; whilst that of the text expresses the tenderness of Divine sympathy. But the passage may also be translated, 'In all their enmity [to Him] He was not an enemy [to them];' and thus it shows his long-suffering, which, however, they did at last exhaust (ver. 10).

10 See note on Gen. xvi. 7; and compare Exod. xiii. 21 with xiv. 19.

11 See note on ch. xl. 11.

12 See Exod. xxiii. 20, 21; Psal. lxxviii. 17, 40; 1 Cor. x. 9.

13 Their repeated provocations made it necessary to alter his conduct and punish them.

14 Some refer this to Jehovah, who is supposed to determine to interpose lest his power or faithfulness should be called in question. See Deut. xxxii. 27. Others apply it to Israel, who remembers the past, and uses it as a plea for renewed mercy. See ch. li. 9, 10.

15 Or, 'in the midst of him,' i. e. of Israel, the flock. This may refer to the working of miracles.

- ^k Dividing the water before them,—^l to make himself an everlasting name?
- 13 ^m That led them through the deep,
As an horse in the wilderness, that they should not stumble?¹
- 14 As a beast² goeth down into the valley,
ⁿ The Spirit of the LORD caused him to rest :
So didst thou lead thy people,—^o to make thyself a glorious name.
- 15 ^p Look down from heaven, and behold,
^q From the habitation of thy holiness and of thy glory :
Where is thy zeal and thy strength,
The sounding ^r of thy bowels³ and of thy mercies toward me? are they restrained?
- 16 ^s Doubtless thou art our father,
Though Abraham ^t be ignorant⁴ of us,—and Israel acknowledge us not :
Thou, O LORD, art our father, ^u our redeemer;—thy name is from everlasting.
- 17 O LORD, why hast thou ^x made us to err from thy ways,
And ^y hardened our heart from thy fear?⁵
^z Return for thy servants' sake,—the tribes of thine inheritance.
- 18 ^a The people of thy holiness have possessed it but a little while :
^b Our adversaries have trodden down thy sanctuary.
- 19 ^c We are thine : thou never barest rule over them ;
^d They were not called by thy name.⁶
- 64 Oh that thou wouldest ^e rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down,
That ^f the mountains might flow down⁷ at thy presence,
2 As when the melting fire burneth,⁸—the fire causeth the waters to boil,
To make thy name known to thine adversaries,
^g That the nations may tremble at thy presence!
- 3 When ^h thou didst terrible things which we looked not for,
Thou camest down, the mountains flowed down at thy presence.
- 4 For since the beginning of the world
ⁱ Men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear,
Neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee,
What he hath prepared for him ^k that waiteth for him.⁹
- 5 ^l Thou meetest him that rejoiceth ^m and worketh righteousness, ⁿ Those that remember thee in thy ways :
Behold thou art wroth ; for we have sinned :
^o In those is continuance, and we shall be saved.¹⁰
- 6 But we are all ^p as an unclean thing,
And all ^q our righteousnesses are as filthy rags;—and we all do ^r fade as a leaf;
^s And our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.
- 7 And ^t there is none that calleth upon thy name,
That stirreth up¹¹ himself ^u to take hold of thee :
For thou ^x hast hid thy face from us,
And hast consumed us, because of our iniquities.
- 8 ^y But now, O LORD, thou art our father ;

¹ The word 'that' ought not to have been inserted. 'They shall not stumble' in the sea, any more than the horse of the desert does in his native wilds.

² Rather, 'cattle.' This comparison appears to be drawn from the custom of cattle retiring towards noon from the scorching heat of the exposed hill-side to the shade and water of the valley. The passage refers to the end rather than the course of God's leadings. He brought them into valleys with green pastures and still waters; i. e. into the 'rest' of Canaan.

³ That is, 'Where is thy former pity for thy people in their distress?' In Hebrew phraseology, the 'bowels' are spoken of as the seat of the tender emotions.

⁴ No relation is so close and unchanging as that into which God has brought his children to himself. Comp. ch. xlix. 15.

⁵ See note on Exod. iv. 21. It need not be supposed that God exerts any positive influence to harden the hearts of men; but he may, because of their wickedness, withhold from them his grace, and leave them in circumstances from which they will take occasion to pursue their own ways, which lead to spiritual blindness and obduracy.

⁶ Vers. 18, 19 may be rendered, 'For a little while they (i. e. our enemies) have possessed thy holy people ; our enemies have trodden down thy sanctuary: we have been from of old; thou hast not ruled over them, they were not called by thy name.' Our enemies are recent intruders, and are not thy people; we are the ancient rightful possessors of thy land, as thy subjects.

⁷ See note on Judg. v. 5.

⁸ Or, 'as the fire kindleth brushwood.' The presence of Jehovah is evidently desired for the purpose of displaying his justice in punishing his people's enemies.

¹⁰ Perhaps the best meaning of this difficult verse is as follows: 'Thou meetest [as a friend] him that rejoiceth and doeth righteousness (i. e. rejoices in doing it); such shall remember thee by thy ways (i. e. by thy kind dealings with them): behold, thou art wroth, and (i. e. for) we have sinned, [yet] in those there is perpetuity (i. e. thy gracious dealings are unchanged), and we shall be saved.'

¹¹ The people were too deeply sunk in spiritual torpor to make the efforts needful to obtain God's help.

- We are the clay, ² and thou our potter;—and we all are ^a the work of thy hand.¹
 9 Be not ^b wroth very sore, O LORD,—^c neither remember iniquity for ever:
 Behold, see, we beseech thee, ^d we are all thy people.
 10 Thy holy cities are a wilderness,—Zion is a wilderness,—^e Jerusalem a desolation.
 11 ^f Our holy and our beautiful house, where our fathers praised thee,
 Is burned up with fire:—and all ^g our pleasant things² are laid waste.
 12 ^h Wilt thou refrain thyself for these things, O LORD?
ⁱ Wilt thou hold thy peace, and afflict us very sore?

Jehovah's answer to the foregoing prayer.

- 65 ¹³ ^k AM sought⁴ of them that asked not for me;

1 Thou wilt not, therefore, reject those who are so entirely dependent upon thee. Comp. Ps. cxxxviii. 8.

2 All the objects of our desire. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 19, where the same word is used.

3 Jehovah now replies to the suppliants by whom he had been addressed in ch. lxiii., lxiv., and tells them, for their encouragement, that he has blessed the Gentiles, who had not sought him, nor been in covenant with him (ver. 1); that he has constantly offered his mercy to the Jews, until the sins of successive generations, especially their idolatry, which had been aggravated by their hypocrisy and self-righteousness, have provoked him to punish them (2-7); but that still the contrite shall be spared and shall be increased (8-10), though the obstinately impenitent must perish fearfully (11-16). And then in the most glowing language He repeats his promises of future blessedness to his people in moral renovation, and the everlasting removal of curse and of all that could injure or molest them (17-25).

4 Rather, 'I am inquired of,' i. e. successfully. The 'nation' here evidently means the Gentile world, in opposition to the Hebrews, who were called by God's name. See Rom. x. 20.

5 To the people of Israel. See Rom. x. 21. God had continually given them the most pressing invitations to partake of his favours; but they had contumaciously rejected them.

6 Or, 'groves.' See ch. i. 29.

7 Or, 'upon bricks' or 'tiles.' This may refer either to altars made of tiles, and used for idolatrous purposes, or to the worship of idols on the roofs of the houses, mentioned in 2 Kings xxiii. 12; Jer. xix. 13; Zeph. i. 5.

8 That is, probably for purposes of necromancy; seeking to obtain a knowledge of future events from the spirits of the dead, which they imagined to hover about their tombs.

9 The eating of swine's flesh was expressly prohibited by the law; partly, perhaps, because swine's flesh was offered to heathen deities, and eaten at their feasts. See note on Lev. xi. 7.

10 In our Lord's time, the Pharisees and their disciples, who formed a large part of the nation, displayed much of this self-righteous pride.

11 As offensive as smoke is to the nostrils. Or perhaps the meaning is, 'These [produce] a smoke in my wrath, a fire,' etc. Comp. Deut. xxxii. 22.

12 As a royal decree or judicial sentence, 'written' and preserved amongst the public records. This intimates the certainty and the publicity of the punishment.

13 Rather, 'I will not keep silence, unless I requite,' etc.

14 While the corrupt mass is destroyed, whatever is good shall be carefully preserved as the seed (ver. 9) of a future nation. This is one of the permanent principles of the Divine government, observable in the case of Noah (to which reference is made in the Chaldee paraphrase upon this text), and repeatedly afterwards in the history of Israel. Comp. Rom. xi. 4, 5.

15 This was a valley near Jericho, where Achan was put to death. See Josh. vii. 24. Sharon lying on the west, and Achor on the east of the kingdom of Judah, the two are perhaps put for the whole land. Respecting 'Sharon,' see note on ch. xxxiii. 9.

1 Rather, 'And as for you who forsake Jehovah, who forget my holy mountain, who prepare for Gad a table, and who fill for Meni a mixed draught.' Gad and Meni were probably idol deities representing Fortune and Destiny, for whom the idolatrous Jews held sacrificial feasts. Comp. Jer. vii. 18; xlv. 17.

2 There is here an allusion to the name of the idol 'Meni' just mentioned; as if he had said, 'You worship Destiny, and I have destined you to the sword.'

3 These verses forcibly display the difference which God will make 'between the righteous and the wicked.' Comp. Mal. iii. 17—iv. 3.

4 That is, their punishment would be so awful and irremediable, that it would become a formula of curse for those who wished to utter the most terrible imprecations. See 1 Cor. xvi. 22.

5 That is, the God of faithfulness; so called here because he had fulfilled his threatenings and promises. The very Hebrew word here used is applied to Christ, with this explanation of it, in Rev. iii. 14, and perhaps in Rev. i. 18.

6 This new creation signifies a great moral and spiritual revolution, which shall bring to an end the former confusions, iniquities, and miseries of the human race, and shall fill the church with perpetual joy. Compare vers. 17—19 with Rev. xxi. 1—5.

7 That is, he who dies when only a hundred years old shall be regarded as a child in age, and a sinner in character. As under the former economy length of days was one token of Divine favour (see Exod. xx. 12; Psa. xci. 16), it forms part of the representation of the promised blessings; death, the curse, being far removed, if not done away, so that the happiness of that blessed period may be fully enjoyed (ver. 21).

8 This refers to the great age which certain trees attain. The olive, the oak, and the terebinth, among the trees of Palestine, are said to live much more than a thousand years.

9 Heb., 'for the terror;' perhaps meaning, 'for sudden death.' See Lev. xxvi. 16.

10 With these encouraging assurances of God's readiness to hear and answer his people's prayers, compare Dan. ix. 20, 21; Matt. vi. 8; Acts ii. 1, 2, etc.

11 We have here an almost verbal repetition of the beautiful picture of universal harmony in ch. xi. 6—9. Under the reign of the Messiah, the evil passions and propensities of men, and all other hurtful influences, will be subdued, and peace and concord shall universally prevail. If by 'the serpent' is specifically meant the author of evil and tempter of mankind, this prediction may be regarded as having the same meaning as the promise in Rom. xvi. 20.

The conclusion.—The old economy superseded by the new; the true Israel enjoying perfect peace and blessedness, and the wicked doomed to eternal punishment.

66 THUS saith the LORD,¹

- ^a The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool:
^b Where is the house that ye build unto me?²—and where is the place of my rest?
 2 ^c For all those *things*³ hath mine hand made,—and all those things have been,
 Saith the LORD:—^d but to this man will I look,
^e Even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit,—and ^f trembleth at my word.
 3 ^g He that killeth an ox is as if he slew a man;
 He that sacrificeth a lamb, as if he ^h cut off a dog's neck;
 He that offereth an oblation, as if he offered ⁱ swine's blood;
 He that burneth incense, as if he blessed an idol.⁴
 Yea, ^k they have chosen their own ways,
 And their soul delighteth in their abominations.
 4 I also ^l will choose their delusions,⁵—and ^m will bring their fears upon them;
ⁿ Because when I called, none did answer;—when I spake, they did not hear:
^o But they did evil before mine eyes,—and chose that in which I delighted not.
 5 Hear the word of the LORD,—^p ye that tremble at his word;
^q Your brethren that hated you,—that cast you out for my name's sake,
 Said,⁶ ^r Let the LORD be glorified:
 But ^s he shall appear to your joy,—and they shall be ashamed.
 6 ^t A voice of noise from the city,⁷—a voice from the temple,
 A voice of the LORD,—^u that rendereth recompense to his enemies.
 7 Before she⁸ ^v travailed, she brought forth;
 Before her pain came, she was delivered of a man child.
 8 Who hath heard such a thing?—who hath seen such things?
^w Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day?
 Or shall a nation be born at once?
 For as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.
 9 ^x Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD:
 Shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb?⁹ saith thy God.
 10 ^y Rejoice ye with Jerusalem,—and be glad with her, all ye that love her:
 Rejoice for joy with her, all ye that mourn for her:
 11 ^z That ye may suck, and be satisfied—with the breasts of her consolations;
 That ye may milk out, and be delighted—with the abundance of her glory.¹⁰

^b Ps. 122. 6.

² These words plainly declare that the ancient observances of the Mosaic ritual shall no longer be acceptable to God. Some suppose an actual building of the temple to be referred to. If so, the passage may be designed in part to rebuke the self-righteous and hypocritical formalists of our Lord's days, who were glorying in the rebuilding of the temple at the very time when God was superseding it. See John ii. 20.

³ That is, heaven and earth (ver. 1). I need no temples made with hands; all creation is my dwelling. But my temple, the 'place of my rest,' is the humble and reverentially obedient heart. Comp. ch. lvii. 15.

⁴ The various offerings of the Mosaic law are here classed with the most revolting sacrifices of heathenism. Some suppose this to refer to the union of punctilious ritualism with flagitious crimes; or to declare that the most regular outward service, if the heart and life be not right, is as offensive to God as flagrant idolatry. Others remark that, by the one offering of Jesus on the cross, all the Mosaic sacrifices and oblations were for ever set aside; and regard this as declaring that any attempt to revive them is as displeasing to the Most High as the cruel and abominable customs of the heathen.

⁵ Or, 'calamities.'

⁶ Like all other persecutors, professing to do this for God's glory. There was a fulfilment of this in the treatment of the first Christian converts by the unbelieving Jews. See John xvi. 2; Acts xxi. 28; xxvi. 9—11. Some, however, regard the words as ironical, and render them thus: 'Jehovah will be glorified, and we shall gaze upon your joy.' Upon which the prophet adds, 'But they shall be ashamed.'

⁸ That is, the true Jerusalem, the church of the Messiah, by which, even before the convulsions of the great crisis, a new spiritual Israel shall spring suddenly to life. At the first preaching of the apostles three thousand were converted in one day; and the gospel was speedily propagated over almost the whole of the known world. And this may probably be regarded as only a partial fulfilment of the prophecy.

⁹ God will not leave the work for which he has made such preparation, till all is accomplished.

¹⁰ Those who have sympathized with Zion in her sorrows shall partake of her abundance and her glory;

- 12 For thus saith the LORD,—Behold, ^c I will extend peace to her like a river,
And ^d the glory of the Gentiles like a flowing stream :
Then shall ye ^e suck,—ye shall be ^f borne upon her sides,
And be dandled upon her knees.¹
- 13 As one whom his mother comforteth,—so will I comfort you ;
^g And ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem.
- 14 And when ye see this, your heart shall rejoice,
And ^h your bones shall flourish like an herb :²
And ⁱ the hand of the LORD shall be known toward his servants,
And his indignation toward his enemies.
- 15 ^k For, behold, the LORD will come with fire,
And ^l with his chariots like a whirlwind,
To render his anger with fury,—and his rebuke with flames of fire.
- 16 For ^m by fire and by ⁿ his sword—will the LORD plead with all flesh :
And ^o the slain of the LORD shall be many.
- 17 ^p They that sanctify themselves,—and purify themselves in the gardens³
Behind one tree in the midst,
Eating swine's flesh, and the abomination,⁴ and ^q the mouse,
Shall be consumed together, saith the LORD ;
- 18 For ^r I *know*⁵ their works and ^s their thoughts.
It shall come,⁶ ^t that I will gather all nations and tongues ;
And they shall come, “and see my glory.
- 19 ^u And I will set a sign among them,
And ^v I will send those that escape⁷ of them unto the nations,
To Tarshish, Pul, and Lud, that draw the bow,
To Tubal, and Javan, to the isles afar off,
^z That have not heard my fame,—neither have seen my glory ;
^a And they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles.
- 20 And they shall bring all your brethren,
^b For an offering unto the LORD out of all nations,
Upon horses, and in chariots, and in litters,
And upon mules, and upon swift beasts,⁸
To ^c my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the LORD,
As the children of Israel bring an offering
In a clean vessel into the house of the LORD.
- 21 And I will also take of them—for ^d priests and Levites,⁹ saith the LORD.
- 22 For as ^e the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make,
Shall remain before me, saith the LORD,
So shall your seed and your name remain.
- 23 And ^f it shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another,
And from one sabbath to another,
^g Shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the LORD.¹⁰
- 24 And they shall go forth, and look
Upon ^h the carcases of the men that have transgressed against me :
For their ⁱ worm shall not die,—^k neither shall their fire be quenched ;
And ^l they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh.¹¹ nourished by the same truth, and comforted from the same sources of consolation.

¹ That is, as a child is by its mother.

² See note on Prov. iii. 8.

³ That is, by idolatrous rites. See ch. lxxv. 3, 5. In the following clause, instead of the word ‘tree,’ it is perhaps better to supply the word ‘priest ;’ the allusion being apparently to an idolatrous procession, with the priest as the leader, through the midst of the garden or grove where the rites were celebrated.

⁵ More probably, ‘And I [will punish] their deeds and their thoughts.’ The verb may be omitted to give terseness and force to the sentence.

⁶ Rather, ‘It is come ;’ representing the suddenness of the transition.

⁷ That is, those who shall have survived the judgments predicted ; and who, by what they shall have witnessed, shall have been brought to acknowledge and receive the Messiah. These are to become missionaries to the world. The nations specified are obviously put for the whole world.

⁸ These were the most easy, swift, and magnificent methods of conveyance in use in ancient times.

⁹ That is, I will give them an honourable place in my public service.

¹⁰ This verse cannot reasonably be interpreted as referring to any periodical assemblage (either monthly or weekly) of all nations at Jerusalem ; but it indicates the regularity and constancy with which the whole human family shall worship the true God.

¹¹ The spiritual Israelites, offering perpetually their pure worship in the New Jerusalem, shall look down from its heights upon Tophet, and see with abhorrence the death-fires and corruption of apostate Israel. Such is the sublime picture of the final difference which God will make between the righteous and the wicked ; the one for ever blessed and glorified in the presence and service of God, the other sunk in the degradation and misery of eternal death.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET JEREMIAH.

JEREMIAH was the son of Hilkiah, a priest of Anathoth. This Hilkiah was probably not the high priest of that period (2 Kings xxii. 4), for he would not have been spoken of indefinitely as 'of the priests' (ch. i. 1); and the priests of Anathoth seem to have been of the house of Ithamar (see 1 Kings ii. 26), while the high priesthood had long been in the line of Phinehas (1 Chron. vi. 13).

Jeremiah was called to the prophetic office about seventy years after the death of Isaiah, in the thirteenth year of Josiah, whilst he was very young (ch. i. 6), and was still living at Anathoth. Shortly afterwards he received a charge to deliver a message in the metropolis (ch. ii. 1): and some suppose him to have made a tour through the cities and towns of Judah for the purpose of announcing to the inhabitants the contents of the book of the law which had been found in the temple (see ch. xi. 2, 6; 2 Kings xxii.) On his return to Anathoth, his fellow-townsmen, including even some of his own family, offended at his reproofs of their wicked practices, conspired against his life (ch. xi. 21; xii. 6); upon which he appears to have taken up his abode at Jerusalem.

During the reign of Josiah, he was, doubtless, a valuable assistant to that pious monarch in the religious reformation of the people. But when Jehoiakim came to the throne, he was quickly interrupted in his ministry; 'the priests and prophets' becoming his accusers, and demanding, in conjunction with the populace, that he should be put to death for denouncing woe against the city (ch. xxvi.) The princes did not dare to defy God thus openly; but Jeremiah was either placed under restraint, or deterred by his adversaries from appearing in public. In these circumstances he was commanded by God to write his predictions, which Baruch then read in the temple on a fast day. The princes were alarmed, and endeavoured to rouse the king by reading to him the prophetic roll. But it was in vain: the reckless monarch, after hearing three or four pages, cut the roll in pieces, and cast it into the fire, giving immediate orders for the apprehension of Jeremiah and Baruch. God, however, preserved them; and soon afterwards directed Jeremiah to write again the same messages, with some additions (ch. xxxvi.)

In the short reign of the next king, Jehoiachin, he still uttered the voice of warning (comp. 2 Kings xxiv. 12, and ch. xxii. 24-30), though without effect.

In the reign of Zedekiah, Jeremiah was repeatedly commissioned to declare that the Chaldeans should take Jerusalem, and burn it with fire. Endeavouring to leave the city, he was accused of deserting to the enemy, and was cast into prison, where he remained until the city was taken. Nebuchadnezzar, who had been led to respect the prophet's character, gave a special charge to his general, Nebuzar-adan, to protect him. It was put to his choice whether he would go to Babylon, where doubtless he would have been honoured at the court, or would remain with his own people; but he preferred the latter. He subsequently dissuaded the leaders of the people from fleeing to Egypt; assuring them that if they remained in their own land God would protect and bless them. The people refused to obey, and went to Egypt, compelling Jeremiah and Baruch to accompany them (ch. xliii. 6). In Egypt he still sought to turn them to the Lord (ch. xlv.); but his writings give no information respecting his later life. Ancient authors, however, assert that the Jews, offended by his faithful remonstrances, stoned him to death in Egypt.

Jeremiah was contemporary with Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Between his writings and those of Ezekiel there are many interesting points both of comparison and of contrast. They were both long labouring for the same object, at nearly the same time; the one in Palestine, the other in Chaldea; yet the substance of both messages is the same. But they were dissimilar in character and disposition, and differ widely in their modes of expression. We see in Jeremiah a man reluctantly brought out from private life into the publicity and peril which attended the prophet's office. Naturally mild, susceptible, and inclined rather to mourn in secret for the iniquity which surrounded him than to brave and denounce the wrong-doer, he stood forth at the call of God, and proved himself a faithful champion of the truth, amidst reproaches and persecutions. In Ezekiel, on the other hand, we see the power of Divine inspiration acting on a mind naturally of the firmest texture, and absorbing all the powers of the soul.

The writings of Jeremiah correspond with his character. They are peculiarly marked by pathos, and abound in expressions of tenderness, and in affecting descriptions of the miseries of his people.

As, in the days of Jeremiah, the Jewish nation had filled up the measure of their iniquities, his chief duty was to expose the heinous sins of all classes of the people, and to denounce impending judgments. But these subjects, which take up the greater part of the book, and necessarily give to it a mournful aspect, are accompanied with some cheering declarations of God's merciful designs, both as to the restoration of the Jews from the captivity, and as to their future history. There are also a few bright pictures of the times of the Messiah, to whom this prophet repeatedly applies the designation 'The Branch,' which Isaiah had given to Him. Indeed, Jeremiah often uses the very words of his predecessor; yet in such new combinations as to impart even additional interest and importance to those earlier predictions.

The prophecies of this book evidently do not stand in chronological order; and it is not easy to reduce them to order of time, or to account for the present arrangement.

In the Septuagint the prophecies against foreign nations (ch. xlv.-li.) are inserted after ch. xxv., and follow each other in a different course; whilst there are numerous omissions throughout the book.

Blayney alters the order thus: Prophecies delivered (1) in the reign of Josiah, ch. i.-xii.; (2) in that of Jehoiakim, ch. xiii.-xx.; xxii.; xxiii.; xxv.; xxvi.; xxxv.; xxxvi.; xlv.-xlviii.; xlix. 1-33; (3) in the time of Zedekiah, ch. xxi.; xxiv.; xxvii.-xxxiv.; xxxvii.-xxxix.; xlix. 34-39; l.; li.; lii.; (4) under Gedaliah's administration, and in Egypt, ch. xl.-xlv.

Dahler makes still greater changes than these.

Ewald proposes divisions founded upon the present order. He remarks that various portions are prefaced by the expression, 'The word which came to Jeremiah from the Lord,' or, 'The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah;' that other divisions, chiefly historical, are plainly marked by notices of time prefixed; and that two others (ch. xxix. 1; xlv. 1) are in themselves sufficiently distinct. He thus forms five books:—I. The introduction, ch. i. II. Reproofs of the sins of the Jews, in seven sections, ch. ii.-xxiv. III. A general view of all nations, the heathen as well as the people of Israel, consisting of two sections, ch. xxv., and xlv.-xlix.; with an historical appendix of three sections, ch. xxvi.-xxix. IV. Two sections picturing brighter times, ch. xxx.-xxxiii.; to which, as in the last book, is added an historical appendix in three sections, ch. xxxiv., xxxv. V. The conclusion in two sections, ch. xxxvi., and xlv. All this he supposes Jeremiah to have arranged in Palestine during the short interval between the capture of the city and his departure into Egypt. In Egypt he thinks the prophet wrote three sections, ch. xxxvii.—xxxix., xl.—xliii., and xlv.; completed his earlier prophecy respecting that country, by adding ch. xlvi. 13—26; and made, perhaps, some short insertions in other parts.

It is probable that the present arrangement was made by the prophet himself; who seems to have revised and condensed his oral predictions, putting together those which in the main related to similar subjects; although of course the chief topics of one section are mentioned casually in others. Upon this supposition the following division appears to be the most natural:—I. Introduction, ch. i. II. Charges of heinous sin brought against the people of Israel, ch. ii.—x. III. Speedy and destructive punishment threatened, ch. xi.—xvii. IV. The ill-treatment of the prophet and rejection of his messages, ch. xviii.—xxix. V. Encouragements to the penitent and obedient, ch. xxx.—xxxiii. VI. Circumstances which aggravated the sins of the kings and people, leading to the catastrophe, ch. xxxiv.—xxxix. VII. The condition and conduct of the remnant, with a brief appendix, ch. xl.—xlv. VIII. Prophecies against heathen nations, ch. xlvi.—li. IX. Historical supplement, ch. lii.

1 Ch. i. contains the general heading to the book (vers. 1—3); the prophet's call to his office (4, 5); his reluctance to undertake it, overcome by the promise of Divine support (6—8); the purport of his commission (9, 10); followed by two visions symbolical of the speedy fulfilment of his predictions, and of the quarter whence the threatened evil was to come (11—19).

2 Anathoth was a city of the priests (Josh. xxi. 18), in the tribe of Benjamin, about three miles north of Jerusalem; now called Anata.

3 In this list of kings Jehoahaz and Jehoiachin are omitted, as each of them reigned only three months.

4 Not merely to the Jews. See ch. xlvi.—li. To this office Jeremiah was 'sanctified' or set apart in God's purposes before his birth. Comp. Gal. i. 15.

5 That is, to announce these things. See Ezek. xliii. 3. The greatest prominence is here given to threatenings, because, in consequence of the extreme wickedness of the Jews, and of the surrounding nations at this period, they occupied the chief place in these predictions.

6 The almond tree, which flowers very early in the year, derives its Hebrew name from its watching, as it were, for the first dawn of spring. Hence this shoot of an almond tree represented the speedy fulfilment of these predictions, of which God says, 'I am watching over my word to perform it.'

7 Rather, 'from the north.' A boiling pot is a common Oriental image of war; which is here seen to come 'from the north,' because the Chaldean invaders always entered Palestine from that quarter.

8 Comp. ch. xxxix. 3. In ver. 16, God speaks of the heathen conquerors as uttering His sentence.

9 Prepare thyself resolutely for thy work. The phrase is derived from the Eastern custom of binding up the long robes with a girdle, before undertaking any laborious employment.

10 Thou shalt be as secure under my protection as a fortified city.

- And brasen walls against the whole land,
 Against the kings of Judah, against the princes thereof,
 Against the priests thereof, and against the people of the land.
 19 ^k And they shall fight against thee;—but they shall not prevail against thee;
 ' For I am with thee, saith the LORD,—to deliver thee.

Jeremiah is sent to Jerusalem to expostulate with the people on their sins.

1 The prophet, having received his commission, is bidden to go to Jerusalem (ver. 1) and remind his countrymen of the signal favours which God had bestowed on them from the very beginning of their national history (2, 3), and of their unreasonable and ungrateful rebellion against him (4—13). He warns them of the danger of forsaking God (14—19); and sets forth their inveterate propensity to this by a variety of striking images; rebuking especially their idolatry, cruelty, insensibility to correction, and presumptuous abuse of God's covenant and mercy (20—37; iii. 1—5).

2 This may mean, 'thy piety and love towards me;' and may refer to that faithful generation who, after being led through the wilderness, took possession of Canaan. See Preface to Joshua, and note on Josh. xxii. 1. Or it may mean, 'my kindness and love to thee from the time when I chose thee as my people.' See Hos. xi. 1. Their present wickedness is enhanced, according to the one interpretation, by contrast with their forefathers' piety, and according to the other, by the consideration of God's early choice and care of them.

3 On this metaphor, which is applied only to the nation, never to an individual, see Preface to Sol. Song.

4 Rather, 'Israel was holy to Jehovah, [being] the first-fruit of his (i. e. God's) produce: all who eat him will [therefore] be guilty,' etc. God regarded Israel as consecrated, like the first-fruits, to himself (see Exod. xxiii. 19, and refs.); and severely punished all who attempted to injure him, as in the cases of the Amalekites and the Amorites. See Exod. xvii. 14—16; Deut. ii. 30, etc.

5 When the ten tribes had been carried captive, the kingdom of Judah represented the nation of Israel.

6 These words are quoted from 2 Kings xvii. 15. Men assimilate themselves to the object of their worship.

7 See Numb. xi. 1; xxi. 4, and notes. 'A more frightful desert,' says Dr. Robinson, 'it had hardly been our lot to behold.' This description is introduced here, partly to show God's care of them, and partly to enhance the value of their own land (ver. 7).

8 Or, 'shepherds.' This may mean kings or rulers, as distinguished from priests and prophets. See 1 Kings xxii. 17. Or it may be parallel with 'prophets.' See ch. xvii. 16.

9 As the provocation has been prolonged, so shall the chastisement be. The history of nations shows that the correction of inveterate national sins is rarely accomplished in a single generation.

10 Or, 'over to.' 'Chittim' and 'Kedar' are put for west and east. See refs.

11 While the heathen cling to their idols, though they obtain from them no good, Israel has exchanged truth for error—the ever fresh and full fountain of life for the broken cistern which would be stagnant, if it were not dry (ver. 13).

12 'How is it that Israel, Jehovah's first-born son (Exod. iv. 22), once free and happy under his protection, is now enslaved and despoiled?' Some understand this as referring to the past; supposing the ruin of the kingdom of Israel to be held up as a warning to Judah. But it may be a prophetic description of the impending Egyptian invasion and the Babylonian captivity.

² Or, 'consume the crown of thy head ;' i. e. make thee bald ; causing thee the greatest shame and grief. See ch. xlvii. 5 ; xlviii. 37 ; Isa. iii. 24.

⁴ The very alliances with foreign powers into which the Jews had been led by their mistrust of God and disobedience to Him, were both the cause and the means of their punishment. See ver. 36.

⁵ Rather, 'I broke.' But the ancient versions, with a slight change in the punctuation, read, 'Thou hast broken thy yoke and hast burst thy bonds ; and hast said, I will not serve (or obey) ; for upon every high hill,' etc. This agrees better with the latter clause.

⁶ Rather, 'natron,' a native carbonate of soda, found in great abundance in Egypt.

⁷ Or, 'potash,' an alkali obtained from the ashes of plants ; which, mixed with oil, is still used in the East for cleansing.

⁸ Alluding to the worship of Moloch in the valley of Hinnom. See note on 2 Kings xxiii. 10.

⁹ That is, running hither and thither.

¹⁰ This may mean either, 'Do not so ardently follow thy wicked ways ; do not so thirst after idols ;' or, 'Do not, by persevering in thy sins, expose thyself to the shame and suffering of captivity.' Comp. Isa. xx. 3.

¹¹ That is, It is useless to oppose me : I say 'No' to all thine entreaties, for I have loved strange gods, etc.

¹² Or, 'contend with me ;' i. e. why do you complain of me as if I had wronged you ?

¹³ This question implies a strong negation, 'I have not failed to supply all your wants, and to bless you.'

Wherefore say my people,—^y We are lords; ¹—^z we will come no more unto thee?
 32 Can a maid forget her ornaments,—or a bride her attire?

Charges and threatenings against both Judah and Israel; with remonstrances, gracious invitations, and promises.

6 THE LORD¹⁰ said also unto me in the days of Josiah the king, Hast thou seen that which ^f backsliding Israel hath done? she is ^g gone up upon every high 7 mountain and under every green tree, and there hath ^h played the harlot. ⁱ And I said after she had done all these things, Turn thou unto me. But she returned ⁿ and given her a bill of divorce; ^o yet her treacherous sister Judah feared not,

1 Or, 'We rove' at pleasure; like a beast which has broken loose from his master's yoke.

2 That is, Thou hast even taught idolatrous nations to practise new idolatries. Or, 'Thou hast taught thy ways wickednesses;' i. e. Thou hast made sin a study and an art, in which thou hast attained such proficiency that thou canst openly practise the most atrocious cruelties (ver. 34), and yet call them innocent or venial (35).

3 Rather, 'the life-blood of the innocent poor, [though] thou didst not find them in breaking in.' There is here an allusion to the law in Exod. xxii. 2, which allowed a night-robber to be slain if he were caught breaking into a house. The meaning is, for thy cruel deeds of darkness thou hast no excuse.

4 These words may be connected with the following verse: 'And yet, notwithstanding all these things, thou sayest, Because I am innocent,' etc.

5 As one in the deepest shame and grief. See ref.

6 This verse may be connected with the preceding, thus: 'Jehovah hath rejected thy expectations,' etc., 'saying, Lo (or suppose), a man shall put away his wife, and she has gone from him and become another's, shall he return to her again? shall not that land (in which such a thing is done) be greatly defiled? And hast thou played the harlot with many lovers, and [yet thinkest] to return unto me! saith Jehovah.' The passage so read is an exposure of the fallacy of the people's hopes. On the laws of divorce here alluded to, see Deut. xxiv. 1—4.

7 See Gen. xxxviii. 14, 21.

8 The Arabs of the deserts around Palestine have long been notorious for lying in wait for travellers.

9 See Prov. ii. 17, and note. God puts into the people's mouth words whereby they may express their humiliation, and their hope in his mercy; at the same time telling them that he knows that his arguments will have no weight with them. Some, however, render vers. 4, 5 as follows: 'Dost thou not already cry unto me, 'Thou art my father, the guide of my youth: will he keep his anger for ever, will he retain it perpetually?' Behold thou sayest this, and yet thou doest evil and prevailest' (i. e. doest it with all thy might). Jehovah thus accuses the people of having claimed the privileges of their covenant with God, whilst they continued to speak and do evil. See ch. ii. 27.

10 Ch. iii. 6—vi. 30 form one series of prophecies, probably delivered in the latter part of Josiah's reign. It begins with a reproof of the people of Judah for emulating instead of avoiding the apostasy of the Israelites (vers. 6—11). The ten tribes are then addressed and are graciously invited to return to God, with promises of pardon (12—20). Some are heard penitently responding to this appeal (21—25), and are restored (iv. 1, 2); and Judah is solemnly warned to do the same (3, 4). The prophet then describes the punishment of the people as being near and terrible (5—31); and their sins as most aggravated and all but universal (v. 1—31), embracing impiety, unrighteousness, and self-delusion. From these he aims to arouse them by their danger, which is imminent; but their supineness and the false hopes held out by their teachers make all of no avail; so that they must be rejected (vi. 1—30). Remonstrances, appeals, and merciful invitations are interspersed throughout.

² With a mere external reformation.

³ Great as were the sins of Israel, she might be almost called 'just' when compared with Judah; because Judah had possessed the temple of God, with his Divinely-appointed worship and priests (see 2 Chron. xi. 13—17, and note), had been favoured with many pious kings and zealous prophets, and had also been solemnly warned by the defection and the punishment of Israel. If, in spite of all these advantages, she persisted in her idolatry, she was even more culpable than Israel, and deserved to be treated more severely.

⁴ Towards the countries in which the exiles of the ten tribes were dispersed—Mesopotamia, Assyria, and Media (2 Kings xvii. 6).

⁵ Some render this, 'Though I have rejected you, yet I will take you,' etc. See ch. xxxi. 32, and note.

⁶ Or, 'tribe.' Though in a whole city or nation there should be only one or two of my people, I will not forget even these, but will bring them back with the rest. See Deut. xxx. 1—5.

⁷ You shall again enjoy the protection and favours of Israel's Divine King. The prophecy was fulfilled, in part, when many from the ten tribes joined themselves to the people of Judah on their return from Babylon, and at many subsequent periods. But it cannot be regarded as completely fulfilled till 'all Israel shall be saved' Comp. Acts xxvi. 7; Rom. xi. 26.

⁸ See note on ch. ii. 8.

⁹ The ark was the most sacred of all the religious symbols, and the second temple was regarded as having far less glory than the first, because it had not this. But the prophet declares that the ark shall not be needed or even desired; for Jerusalem—the church—into which all nations shall be gathered, shall be Jehovah's throne. Comp. Rev. xxi. 22.

¹⁰ To Jehovah, who there manifests his perfections.

¹² Some consider this to be a continuation of the preceding promise, thus: 'And I have said, How will I put thee among the children!' etc. But others regard the passage as a question designed to bring out the condition of Israel's restoration. I will put thee among my children, when thou 'shalt call me, My Father, and shalt not turn away from me,' as you have hitherto done (ver. 20). The rest of the chapter represents the people as penitently calling upon God, and sets forth his gracious encouragements.

¹³ That is, from the idols worshipped there.

And from the multitude of mountains :

^d Truly in the Lord our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 ^e For shame¹ hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth ;
Their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 ^f We lie down in our shame,—and our confusion covereth us :

^g For we have sinned against the Lord our God,

^h We and our fathers,—from our youth even unto this day,

And ⁱ have not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God.

4 If thou wilt return, O Israel, saith the Lord, ^k return unto me :²

And if thou wilt put away thine abominations out of my sight,

^l Then shalt thou not remove.

2 ^m And thou shalt swear, ⁿ The Lord liveth,

^o In truth, in judgment, and in righteousness ;

^p And the nations shall bless themselves in him, ^q—and in him shall they ^r glory.

3 For thus saith the Lord—to the men of Judah and Jerusalem,

^s Break up⁵ your fallow ground,—and ^t sow not among thorns.

4 ^u Circumcise yourselves to the Lord,—and take away the foreskins of your heart,
Ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem :

Lest my fury come forth like fire,—and burn that none can quench it,

Because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare⁶ ye in Judah,—and publish in Jerusalem ; and say,

Blow ye the trumpet⁷ in the land :—cry, gather together, and say,

^v Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion :—retire,⁸ stay not :

For I will bring evil from the ^w north,—and a great destruction.

7 ^x The lion is come up from his thicket,

And ^y the destroyer of the Gentiles⁹ is on his way ;

He is gone forth from his place—^z to make thy land desolate ;

And thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant.

8 For this ^a gird you with sackcloth,—lament and howl :

For ^b the fierce anger of the Lord is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the Lord,

That ^c the heart of the king shall perish,¹⁰—and the heart of the princes ;

And the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

10 Then said I, Ah, Lord God !

^d Surely thou hast greatly deceived¹¹ this people and Jerusalem,

^e Saying, Ye shall have peace ;—whereas ^f the sword reacheth unto the soul.

11 At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem,

^g A dry wind of the high places¹² in the wilderness

Toward the daughter of my people,—not to fan, nor to cleanse,

12 Even a full wind from those places shall come unto me :¹³

Now also ^h will I give sentence against them.

13 Behold, he shall come up as clouds,—and ⁱ his chariots shall be as a whirlwind :

1 Heb., 'the shame : ' probably meaning the shameful idols. See refs. Idolatry debases the soul ; and what is spent upon it is altogether thrown away.

2 Or, 'If thou wouldst return, O Israel, saith Jehovah, to me thou must return.' A sincere return in righteousness to God's service is insisted upon as needful to ensure his blessing.

3 That is, if thou publicly profess and adhere to his service. See Deut. vi. 13 ; Isa. xix. 18.

4 Your faithfulness to Jehovah, and the prosperity resulting from it, shall lead the Gentiles to seek Him.

5 The two metaphors in vers. 3, 4 are designed to show that there must be a thorough putting away of all sin from the heart, whatever trouble or pain it may involve ; otherwise reformation will be as fruitless as a sowing among thorns. See refs.

6 The prophet sees the threatened punishment as if it were actually present (see Isa. x. 28, etc.) ; he beholds the northern invader entering and ravaging the land. Some suppose this to refer to the Scythians, who overran great part of Western Asia about this time. See Herodot. i. 103. But it is more probable that it alludes to the Chaldeans, who shortly afterwards destroyed Jerusalem, and carried away the princes and many of the people.

7 That is, the trumpet of alarm.

8 Or, 'flee for safety ; ' i. e. to Zion.

9 Rather, 'of the nations.'

10 Or, 'shall fail ; ' i. e. with fear.

11 That is, Thou hast suffered them to be greatly deceived. Some regard this as referring to the promises which God had made, and which the people had appropriated to themselves, neglecting the conditions of faithfulness and obedience annexed to them. But most commentators apply the words to the false prophets, who predicted peace in God's name (ch. vi. 14). God is said to deceive the people when in his anger he leaves them to their delusions, because they had presumed upon his promises and neglected his warnings. Comp. Exod. iv. 21, and Isa. vi. 10.

12 Rather, 'a dry wind of the barren hills in the desert,' etc. God says that he will sweep the land, not with the cool breeze which winnows the grain, but with the deadly Samiel and its clouds of scorching sand. This represents the terrible Chaldean invaders who shall sweep over the country. See Hab. i. 9.

13 Rather, 'a wind fuller (i. e. stronger) than these shall come for me ; ' i. e. to do my bidding.

- 14 O Jerusalem, ^m wash thine heart from wickedness,—that thou mayest be saved.
How long shall thy ⁿ vain thoughts lodge within thee?

^u Because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the LORD.
- 18 ^x Thy way and thy doings have procured these things unto thee;
This is thy wickedness,—because it is bitter,—because it reacheth unto thine heart.
- 19 My ^y bowels! my bowels!⁴—I am pained at my very heart;

Because thou hast heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet,—the alarm of war.
- 20 ^z Destruction upon destruction is cried;—for the whole land is spoiled:
Suddenly are ^a my tents spoiled,—and my curtains in a moment.
- 21 How long shall I see the standard,—and hear the sound of the trumpet?
- 22 For ^b my people is foolish,—^c they have not known me;

^d They are wise to do evil,—but to do good they have no knowledge.
- 23 ^e I beheld the earth—and, lo, it was ^f without form and void;⁵
And the heavens—^g and they had no light.
- 24 ^h I beheld the mountains—and, lo, they trembled, and all the hills moved lightly.
- 25 I beheld, and, lo, ⁱ there was no man,—and all the birds of the heavens were fled.
- 26 I beheld, and, lo, ^k the fruitful place was a wilderness,
And all the cities thereof were broken down,
At the presence of the LORD, and by his fierce anger.
- 27 For thus hath the LORD said,
^l The whole land shall be desolate;—^m yet will I not make a full end.⁶
- 28 For this ⁿ shall the earth mourn,—and ^o the heavens above be black:
Because I have spoken it, I have purposed it,
And ^p will not repent, neither will I turn back from it.
- 29 The whole city ^q shall flee,—for the noise of the horsemen and bowmen;
They shall go into thickets,—and climb up upon the rocks:
Every city shall be forsaken,—and not a man dwell therein.
- 30 And when thou art spoiled, what wilt thou do?
Though thou clothest thyself with crimson,
Though thou deckest thee with ornaments of gold,
^r Though thou rentest thy face⁷ with painting,
In vain shalt thou make thyself fair;
^s Thy lovers will despise thee,—they will seek thy life.
- 31 For I have heard a voice as of a woman in travail,

That bewaileth herself, that ^t spreadeth her hands,
Saying, ^u Woe is me now!⁸—^x for my soul is wearied because of murderers.
- 5 Run ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem,
And see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof,
^y If ye can find a man,—^z if there be any that executeth judgment,
That seeketh the truth;—^a and I will pardon it.⁸
- 2 And ^b though they say, ^c The LORD liveth;—surely they ^d swear falsely.
- 3 O LORD, are not ^e thine eyes upon the truth?
Thou hast ^f stricken them,—but they have not grieved;

¹ This may mean, There is no time to be lost; for the invader has passed the northern frontier, and is already at Mount Ephraim. Or it may be a warning to Judah, derived from the two great Assyrian captivities (2 Kings xv. 29; xvii. 6); in the former of which Dan and all Galilee, and in the latter Samaria and Mount Ephraim, were overrun and subdued.

² That is, 'report it to the nations.' God's chastisement of his people is to be public and exemplary.

³ That is, 'besiegers;' so called to agree with the figure in ver. 17.

⁴ The prophet speaks in the name of the people. Comp. ver. 20 with ch. x. 20; and see Isa. xxvi. 19.

⁵ This is an awful vision of the desolating effects of Jehovah's wrath, reducing all things, as it were, to primeval chaos. See Gen. i. 2, 3; Nahum i. 2—6.

⁶ When all seems to be destroyed, God has yet a reserve in mercy. See ch. v. 10, 18, and comp. Rom. xi. 5.

⁷ Rather, 'distendest thine eyes.' See note on 2 Kings ix. 30. The figure of ch. ii. is resumed, to show how useless shall be all the efforts of the people to obtain help in their distress.

⁸ Or, 'her.' This is not to be taken literally, for there were good men in Jerusalem, such as Baruch, etc.; but it is designed to show that Jerusalem was as guilty as Sodom, (and yet that God was willing to carry his long-suffering and clemency farther, if possible, than in that case. See Gen. xviii. 23—31.

- Thou hast consumed them,—but ^s they have refused to receive correction :
^h They have made their faces harder than a rock ;—they have refused to return.
 4 Therefore I said,—ⁱ Surely these are poor ;—they are foolish :
 For ^k they know not the way of the LORD,—nor the judgment of their God :
 5 I will get me unto the great men,—and will speak unto them ;
 For ^l they have known the way of the LORD,—and the judgment of their God.
 But these have altogether ^m broken the yoke,—and burst the bonds.
 6 Wherefore ⁿ a lion out of the forest shall slay them,
^o And a wolf of the evenings [or, deserts] shall spoil them,
^p A leopard shall watch ¹ over their cities :
 Every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces :
^q Because their transgressions are many,—and their backslidings are increased.
 7 ^r How shall I pardon thee for this ?
 Thy children have forsaken me,—and ^s sworn by them ^t that are no gods :
^u When I had fed them to the full,²—they then committed adultery,
 And assembled themselves by troops in the harlots' houses.
 8 ^x They were as fed horses in the morning :
 Every one ^y neighed after his neighbour's wife.
 9 ^z Shall I not visit for these things ? saith the LORD :
^a And shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this ?
 10 ^b Go ye up upon her walls, and destroy ;—^c but make not a full end :
 Take away her battlements ;³—for they are not the LORD's.
 11 For ^d the house of Israel and the house of Judah
 Have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.
 12 ^e They have belied ⁴ the LORD,—and said, ^f It is not he ;
 Neither shall evil come upon us ;—^g neither shall we see sword nor famine :
 13 And the prophets shall become ^h wind,—and the word is not in them :
 Thus shall it be done unto them.⁵
 14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts,—Because ye speak this word,
 ' Behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire,
 And this people wood, and it shall devour them.
 15 Lo, I will bring a ^k nation upon you ^l from far,—O house of Israel, saith the LORD :
 It is ^m a mighty nation,—it is an ancient nation,
 A nation whose language thou knowest not,—neither understandest what they say.
 16 Their quiver is as an open sepulchre,⁶—they are all mighty men.
 17 And they shall eat up thine ⁿ harvest, and thy bread,
 Which thy sons and thy daughters should eat :
^o They shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds :
 They shall eat up thy vines and thy fig trees :
 They shall impoverish thy fenced cities,—wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.
 18 Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD,—I ^p will not make a full end with you.
 19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say,
^q Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us ?
 Then shalt thou answer them,
 Like as ye have ^r forsaken me,—and served strange gods in your land,
 So ^s shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.
 20 Declare this in the house of Jacob,—and publish it in Judah, saying,
 21 Hear now this, O ' foolish people, and without understanding ;
 Which have eyes, and see not ;—which have ears, and hear not :⁷
 22 ^u Fear ye not me ? saith the LORD :⁸—will ye not tremble at my presence,
 Which have placed the sand for the ^x bound of the sea
 By a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it ;
 And though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail ;
 Though they roar, yet can they not pass over it ?
 23 But this people hath ^y a revolting and a rebellious heart ;
 They are revolted and gone.
 24 Neither say they in their heart,—Let us now fear the LORD our God,

1 That is, shall watch for prey. The invaders shall combine all that is terrible in these three savage beasts. Comp. Hab. i. 8, 9.

2 As the Hebrew stands, the words mean, 'When I had bound them in covenant.' But the rendering of our translators is supported by many manuscripts and versions. The 'adultery' is evidently idolatry, not without a reference to its licentious accompaniments.

3 Or, 'branches ;' i. e. leave only the root or stem. The metaphor is that of a vineyard. Comp. Isa. vi. 13.

4 That is, they have denied ; as in Job xxxi. 28.

5 This is the language of the scoffing Jews. They said the gloomy predictions of the prophets shall turn out to be wind, and shall return on their own heads.

6 See note on Ps. v. 9.

7 See note on Deut. xxix. 4.

8 Man's reverence is due to God, as the Creator, Controller, and beneficent Sustainer (ver. 24) of all things. But the Jews had utterly disregarded even these natural claims.

- ^z That giveth rain, both the ^a former and the latter, in his season :
^b He reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest.
- 25 ^c Your iniquities have turned away these things,
 And your sins have withholden good things from you.
- 26 For ^d among my people are found wicked men :
 They ^e lay wait, as he that setteth snares ;—they set a trap, they catch men.
- 27 As a cage is full of birds,—so are their houses full of deceit :
 Therefore they are become great, and waxen rich.
- 28 They are waxen ^f fat, they shine :—yea, ^g they overpass the deeds of the wicked : ¹
 They judge not ^h the cause,—the cause of the fatherless,—ⁱ yet they prosper ;
 And the right of the needy do they not judge.
- 29 ^k Shall I not visit for these things ? saith the LORD :
 Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this ?
- 30 A wonderful and ^l horrible thing is committed in the land ;
- 31 The prophets prophesy ^m falsely,—and the priests bear rule by their means ; ²
 And my people ⁿ love to have it so :—^o and what will ye do in the end thereof ? ³
- 6 O ye children of ^p Benjamin, ⁴ gather yourselves to flee
 Out of the midst of Jerusalem,
^q And blow the trumpet in ^r Tekoa,—and set up a sign of fire in ^s Beth-haccerem :
^t For evil appeareth out of the north,—and great destruction.
- 2 ^u I have likened the daughter of Zion to a comely and delicate woman. ⁵
- 3 ^x The shepherds ⁶ with their flocks shall come unto her ;
^y They shall pitch their tents against her round about :
 They shall feed every one in his place.
- 4 ^z Prepare ⁷ ye war against her ;—arise, and let us go up ^a at noon.
 Woe unto us ! ⁸ for the day goeth away,
 For the shadows of the evening are stretched out.
- 5 Arise, and let us go by night,—and ^b let us destroy her palaces.
- 6 For thus hath the LORD of hosts said,
^c Hew ye down trees,—^d and cast a mount against Jerusalem :
^e This is the city to be visited ;—^f she is wholly oppression in the midst of her.
- 7 ^g As a fountain casteth out her waters,—so she casteth out her wickedness :
^h Violence and spoil is heard in her ;—before me continually is grief and wounds.
- 8 ⁱ Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem,—lest ^k my soul depart from thee ;
 Lest I make thee desolate,—a land not inhabited.
- 9 Thus saith the LORD of hosts,
^l They shall thoroughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine :
 Turn back thine hand as a grapegatherer into the baskets. ⁹
- 10 To whom shall I speak,—and give warning, that they may hear ?
 Behold, their ^m ear is uncircumcised, ¹⁰—and they cannot hearken :
 Behold, ⁿ the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach ;
 They have no delight in it.
- 11 Therefore I am full of the fury of the LORD ;—^o I am weary with holding in :
 I will pour it out ^p upon the children abroad,
 And upon the assembly of young men together :
 For even the husband with the wife shall be taken,
 The aged with him that is full of days.
- 12 And ^q their houses shall be turned unto others,
 With their fields and wives together :
 For ^r I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land,—saith the LORD.

¹ Or, 'Yea, they have passed by matter of wrong ; they have not judged the cause,' etc.

² Literally, 'on their hand ;' i.e. under their guidance. See 1 Chron. xxv. 2, 3.

³ A nation in which interested deception is welcomed by easy credulity must soon become thoroughly debased, and ripe for Divine judgments.

⁵ Rather, 'I have destroyed (i.e. doomed to destruction) the tender and luxurious one, the daughter of Zion.'

⁶ The Chaldean generals (see ch. xxv. 34) and their armies, who will cover the land like sheep and cattle, and devour everything.

⁷ Literally, 'Sanctify ;' i.e. by the sacrifices usually offered before a battle, to propitiate the Deity. See refs. This is the language of the Chaldean generals.

⁸ Or, 'Alas for us !' The soldiers, eager for plunder, regret the close of day ; but resolve to renew the attack at night (ver. 5).

⁹ That is, put it again and again into them ; do the work thoroughly. It refers, probably, to the successive removals of the people. See 2 Kings xxiv. 14 ; xxv. 11.

¹⁰ Unprepared to receive God's word.

- 13 For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them
Every one is given to ^s covetousness;
^t And from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.
- 14 They have ^u healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly,¹ ^x Saying, Peace, peace;—when there is no peace.
- 15 Were they ^y ashamed when they had committed abomination?
Nay, they were not at all ashamed,—neither could they blush:²
Therefore they shall fall among them that fall:
^z At the time that I visit them they shall be cast down,—saith the Lord.
- 16 Thus saith the LORD,—Stand ye in the ways, and see,
And ask for the ^a old paths,³—where is the good way, and walk therein,
And ye shall find ^b rest for your souls.
^c But they said, We will not walk therein.
- 17 Also I set ^d watchmen⁴ over you, saying,—Hearken to the sound of the trumpet.
But they said, We will not hearken.
- 18 ^e Therefore hear, ye nations,—and know, O congregation,—what is among them.⁵
- 19 ^f Hear, O earth:
Behold, I will bring evil upon this people,—even ^g the fruit of their thoughts,
Because they have not hearkened unto my words,—nor to my law, ^h but rejected it.
- 20 ⁱ To what purpose cometh there to me incense ^k from Sheba,
And the ^l sweet cane from a far country?
^m Your burnt offerings are not acceptable,—nor your sacrifices sweet unto me.
- 21 Therefore thus saith the LORD,
Behold, ⁿ I will lay stumblingblocks⁶ before this people,
^o And the fathers and the sons together shall fall upon them
The neighbour and his friend shall perish.
- 22 Thus saith the LORD,—Behold, a people cometh from the ^p north country,
And a great nation shall be raised from the sides⁷ of the earth.
- 23 ^q They shall lay hold on bow and spear;⁸—they are ^r cruel, and have no mercy;
Their voice ^s roareth like the sea;—and they ride upon horses,
Set in array as men for war,—against thee, O daughter of Zion.
- 24 ^t We⁹ have heard the fame thereof:—our hands wax feeble:
^u Anguish hath taken hold of us,—and pain, as of a woman in travail.
- 25 ^x Go not forth into the field,—nor walk by the way;
For the sword of the enemy—^y and fear is on every side.
- 26 O daughter of my people, ^z gird thee with sackcloth,—^a and wallow thyself in ashes:
^b Make thee mourning, as for an only son,—most bitter lamentation:
^c For the spoiler shall suddenly come upon us.
- 27 I have set thee for a tower¹⁰ and ^d a fortress among my people,
That thou mayest know and try their way.
- 28 ^e They are all grievous revolvers,—^f walking with slanders:¹¹
They are ^g brass and iron;—they are all ^h corrupters.
- 29 The bellows are burned,¹²—the lead is consumed of the fire;
The founder melteth in vain:—for the wicked are not plucked away.
- 30 ⁱ Reprobate silver shall men call them,—because ^k the LORD hath rejected them.

Expostulations and threatenings addressed to the people in the temple.

- 7 THE¹³ word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, 'Stand in the 2 gate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there this word, and say,

¹ They treat it as a slight matter.

² Rather, 'They have been put to shame because they have committed abomination; yet surely they are not at all ashamed, nor do they know how to blush.' They are so hardened as to be utterly insensible to the disgrace which they have brought upon themselves.

³ Act as travellers would when they find themselves going wrong; ask for the 'old paths;' those which God has long ago marked out in his law, and in which your pious ancestors found peace and happiness.

⁴ The prophets. See Ezek. iii. 17—21.

⁶ That is, causes of overthrow or ruin; probably the irruptions of hostile nations.

⁷ Or, 'extremities;' i. e. from a distant land.

⁸ This description of the Chaldean cavalry is illustrated by sculptures still remaining.

⁹ The prophet speaks in the name of his people.

¹⁰ That is, a watch-tower; which, being a post of danger, needed to be a 'fortress.' But some render it, 'I have appointed thee a trier among my people, an assayer (or separator), that thou,' etc. See vers. 28—30.

¹¹ That is, 'going about as slanderers,' as in Lev. xix. 16.

¹² Some render this, 'The bellows snort.' But the meaning may be, that though the fire had been made so hot as to burn the implements, and to melt away all the lead which was designed to attract the baser material, yet the dross could not be separated. The severest measures of correction have been used in vain: now they must be given up to the Chaldean oppressors.

¹³ This is probably the prophetic warning alluded to in ch. xxvi. 1—6. The prophet is sent to expostulate with the people in the temple, which they had profaned (vers. 1—11); to warn them that God's judgments upon Shiloh, the former sanctuary, should be repeated upon Jerusalem (12—15); to represent their present shameless

- Hear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah,
That enter in at these gates to worship the LORD.
- 3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel,
^m Amend your ways and your doings,—and I will cause you to dwell in this place.
- 4 ⁿ Trust ye not in lying words, saying,—^o The temple of the LORD,
The temple of the LORD,—the temple of the LORD, are these.¹
- 5 For if ye thoroughly amend your ways and your doings :
If ye thoroughly ^p execute judgment between a man and his neighbour ;
- 6 If ye oppress not the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow,
And shed not innocent blood in this place,
^q And shed not innocent blood after other gods to your hurt :
- 7 ^r Then will I cause you to dwell in this place,
In 'the land that I gave to your fathers,—for ever and ever.
- 8 Behold, ^s ye trust in ^t lying words, that cannot profit.
- 9 ^u Will ye steal, murder, and commit adultery,
And swear falsely, ^v and burn incense unto Baal
And ^w walk after other gods whom ye know not
- 10 ^b And come and stand before me in this house,—^c which is called by my name,
And say, We are delivered.²—To do all these abominations ?
- 11 Is ^d this house, which is called by my name,
Become a ^e den of robbers³ in your eyes ?
Behold, ^f even I have seen it, saith the LORD.
- 12 But go ye now unto ^g my place which was in Shiloh,⁴ ^h Where I set my name at the first,
And see ⁱ what I did to it,—for the wickedness of my people Israel.
- 13 And now, because ye have done all these works, saith the LORD,
And I spake unto you,—^k rising up early⁵ and speaking,—but ye heard not ;
And I ^l called you,—but ye answered not ;
- 14 Therefore will I do unto this house, which is called by my name, ^m wherein ye trust,
And unto the place which I gave to you and to your fathers,
As I have done to ⁿ Shiloh.
- 15 And I will cast you out of my sight, ^o As I have cast out all your brethren,—^p even the whole seed of Ephraim.
- 16 Therefore ^q pray not thou for this people,—neither lift up cry nor prayer for them,
Neither make intercession to me :—^r for I will not hear thee.⁶
- 17 ^s Seest thou not what they do in the cities of Judah—and in the streets of Jerusalem ?
- 18 'The children gather wood,—and the fathers kindle the fire,
And the women knead their dough,—to make cakes to the queen ^t of heaven,⁷
And to ^u pour out drink offerings unto other gods, ^v That they may provoke me to anger.
- 19 ^w Do they provoke me⁸ to anger ? saith the LORD :
Do they not provoke themselves ^x to the confusion of their own faces ?
- 20 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;
Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place
Upon man, and upon beast,
And upon the trees of the field,—and upon the fruit of the ground ;
^b And it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.
- 21 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel

idolatries as requiring the severest measures (16—20), and the religious ceremonies upon which they relied as entirely unacceptable (21—28) ; and to announce the Divine purpose of converting their present scenes of sin into places of punishment (29—34), and of inflicting posthumous disgrace upon their rulers and teachers who led them into sin (viii. 1—3).

1 That is, these buildings of the temple. The 'lying words' are not so much the statement here made, as the inference drawn from it, that God would always favour and protect the temple and city, which were called his own. Men have always been prone to attribute to the externals of religion a virtue which they do not possess ; mistakenly imagining the mere observance of them to be of equal value with inward holiness.

2 This probably means, 'We are preserved,' though Shiloh and Ephraim are destroyed. The prophet goes on to say, ' [Is it then] in order to do all these abominations ?' Is it for this end that you have been preserved ?

3 A place of resort for the wicked. On the application of these words by our Lord, see Matt. xxi. 13.

4 See note on Josh. xviii. 1 ; also 1 Sam. iv. 12, 22 ; Ps. lxxviii. 60. The fate of Shiloh is referred to in order to destroy the people's false confidence in the possession of the temple, and other national privileges.

5 With prompt and earnest solicitude.

6 Jeremiah is forbidden to pray, not for the reformation of the people, but for the removal of the impending chastisement ; the absolute necessity for which is shown in the following description of their public and shameless idolatry.

7 Probably the moon. See notes on Judg. ii. 13, and Isa. lxx. 11.

8 The sinner's rebellion hurts not God, who needs not his service ; but it ruins himself, for he cannot live without God's favour.

- ^c Put¹ your burnt offerings unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.
- 22 ^d For I spake not² unto your fathers, nor commanded them, In the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, Concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices :
- 23 But this thing commanded I them, saying,—^e Obey my voice,³ And ^f I will be your God,—and ye shall be my people : And walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, That it may be well unto you.
- 24 ^g Yet they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, But ^h walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, And ⁱ went backward, and not forward.
- 25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day, I have even ^k sent unto you all my servants the prophets, ^l Daily rising up early and sending them :
- 26 ^m Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, But ⁿ hardened their neck :—^o they did worse than their fathers.
- 27 Therefore ^p thou shalt speak all these words unto them ; But they will not hearken to thee : Thou shalt also call unto them ;—but they will not answer thee.
- 28 But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the Lord their God, ^q Nor receiveth correction [or, instruction] : ^r Truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.
- 29 ^s Cut off thine hair,⁴ O Jerusalem, and cast it away, And take up a lamentation on high places ; ^t For the Lord hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his ^u wrath.
- 30 For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight, saith the Lord : ^v They have set their abominations In the house which is called by my name,—to pollute it.
- 31 And they have built the ^w high places of Tophet,⁵ Which ^x is in ^y the valley of the son of Hinnom, To ^z burn their sons and their daughters in the fire ; ^a Which I commanded them not, neither came it into my heart.
- 32 Therefore, behold, ^b the days come, saith the Lord, That it shall no more be called Tophet,—nor the valley of the son of Hinnom, But the valley of slaughter :⁶—^c for they shall bury in Tophet, till there be no place.
- 33 And the ^d carcasses of this people shall be meat For the fowls of the heaven,—and for the beasts of the earth ; And none shall fray them away.
- 34 Then will I cause to ^e cease from the cities of Judah, And from the streets of Jerusalem, The voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, The voice of the bridegroom,⁷ and the voice of the bride : For ^f the land shall be desolate.
- 8 At that time, saith the Lord, They shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, And the bones of the priests,⁸—and the bones of the prophets, And the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem,—out of their graves :
- 2 And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, ^g And all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, ^h And whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, And whom they have sought, and ⁱ whom they have worshipped : ^k They shall not be gathered, ^l nor be buried ;

1 Or, 'add.' The meaning is, 'Multiply your sacrifices as you may, so long as you do not bring an obedient heart, they have no value in God's sight, and therefore you may as well eat them as offer them. By the law in Lev. i., no part of a burnt-offering could be eaten.

2 A strong preference is often expressed in Scripture in absolute instead of comparative terms. See Deut. x. 12 ; and comp. Luke xiv. 26 with Matt. x. 37. See also Hos. vi. 6, where the same sentiment is expressed both absolutely and comparatively.

3 The fundamental principle of the whole law was obedience to all that God enjoined. See 1 Sam. xv. 22.

4 Prepare thyself for mourning. See Isa. xv. 2.

6 So terrible shall be the slaughter, and so numerous the burials in this place, that as it has been associated with Judah's sins, it shall in future be associated chiefly with their punishment. Comp. Isa. lxvi. 24.

7 From this and other passages it is clear that the noisy marriage processions which at this day perambulate the cities of Western Asia were not unknown among the Jews.

8 This might be done partly to obtain the jewels and treasures buried with the dead, but chiefly to insult the conquered people, by dishonouring the remains of their rulers and priests.

They shall be for ^m dung upon the face of the earth.

3 And ⁿ death shall be chosen rather than life¹

By all the residue of them that remain of this evil family,
Which remain in all the places whither I have driven them,
Saith the LORD of hosts.

The aggravated apostasy of the Jews, and its irremediable punishment.

4 MOREOVER² thou shalt say unto them,—Thus saith the LORD;

Shall they fall, and not arise?—shall he turn away, and not return?³

5 Why then is this people of Jerusalem ^oslidden back by a perpetual backsliding?

^p They hold fast deceit,—^q they refuse to return.

6 ^r I hearkened and heard,—but they spake not aright:

9 ^z The wise men are ashamed,—they are dismayed and taken:

^a Lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD;—and what wisdom is in them?⁷

10 Therefore ^b will I give their wives unto others,

From the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely.

11 For they have ^d healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly,

Saying, ^e Peace, peace;—when there is no peace.

12 Were they ^f ashamed when they had committed abomination?

Nay, they were not at all ashamed,—neither could they blush:

13 I will surely consume them, saith the LORD:

There shall be no grapes ^g on the vine,—nor figs on the ^h fig tree,

And the leaf shall fade;

And the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

14 Why do we sit still?—ⁱ assemble yourselves,

Because we have sinned against the LORD.

16 The snorting of his horses was heard from ⁿ Dan:

¹ So dreadful shall be the cruelties perpetrated on the survivors. See ch. xxxix. 6, 7.

² The apostasy of God's people has been aggravated by their unreasonable, perverse, and infatuated obstinacy (vers. 4—9), and therefore the judgments which it will provoke will be grievous beyond human remedy (10—ix. 1).

³ These are proverbial questions. Will not those who fall try to rise? Will not one who has taken a wrong road turn back? How irrational, then, is this persistence in sin and refusal to repent!

⁴ For her migrations in spring and autumn.

⁵ Rather, 'the swallow and the crane.' The latter is probably the Numidian crane; which arrives in Palestine from Africa in the spring, and proceeds onward to the north, returning to Africa in the autumn. With these contrasts compare Isa. i. 3.

⁶ Rather, 'But, behold, the false pen of the scribes hath turned it into falsehood.' Those whose business it is to interpret and uphold the law have only perverted it.

⁷ Where shall they obtain wisdom who have perverted the teachings of Divine wisdom?

⁸ A solemn repetition of the charge and threatening in ch. vi. 15.

¹⁰ Implacable enemies. See note on Ps. lvi. 5.

¹¹ Rather, 'My joy within me is sorrow; my heart within me is faint.'

¹² Rather, 'of the daughter of my people from a far country.' This is the complaint of the future exiles, which is answered immediately by God's complaint of their sins: 'Why have they provoked me,' etc.

Why have they 'provoked me to anger with their graven images,
And with strange vanities?

20 "The harvest is past, the summer is ended,—and we are not saved.¹

21 "For the hurt of the daughter of my people am I hurt;
I am ^y black; astonishment hath taken hold on me.

22 Is there no ^z balm in Gilead?—is there no ^a physician there?

Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?

9 Oh ^b that my head were waters,—and mine eyes a fountain of tears,

Lamentations over the corruption of the people, and their punishment.

2 ^d OH ² that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men;
That I might leave my people,³—and go from them!

For ^e they be all adulterers,—^f an assembly of treacherous men.

3 And ^g they bend their tongues, like their bow, for lies:

But they are not ^h valiant for the truth upon the earth;⁴

4 ^k Take ye heed every one of his neighbour,—and trust ye not in any brother:

'For every brother will utterly supplant,

And every neighbour will ^m walk with slanders.

5 And they will deceive every one his neighbour,—and will not speak the truth:

"They have taught their tongue to speak lies,

And ^o weary themselves to commit iniquity.

6 ^p Thine habitation is in the midst of deceit;

Through deceit ^q they refuse to know me,—saith the LORD.

7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts,

Behold, ^r I will melt them, and try them;

^s For how shall I do ⁵ for the daughter of my people?

8 Their tongue is as an arrow shot out;—it speaketh ^t deceit:

One speaketh ^u peaceably to his neighbour with his mouth,

But in heart he layeth his wait.

9 ^v Shall I not visit them for these things? saith the LORD.

Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?

10 (For ⁶ the mountains ^y will I take up a weeping and wailing,

And ^z for the habitations ⁷ of the wilderness a lamentation,

Because they are burned up, ^a so that none can pass through them;

Neither can men hear the voice of the cattle;

^b Both the fowl of the heavens and the beast are fled;—they are gone.)

11 And I will make Jerusalem ^c heaps, and ^d a den of dragons;⁸

And I will make the cities of Judah desolate, without an inhabitant.

12 ^e Who is the wise man, that may understand this?

And who is he to whom the mouth of the LORD hath spoken, that he may declare it,⁹

For what the land perisheth,

And is burned up like a wilderness, that none passeth through?

13 And the LORD saith,

^f Because they have forsaken my law ^g which I set before them,

And have not obeyed my voice,—neither walked therein;

14 But have ^h walked after the imagination of their own heart,

And after Baalim, ⁱ which their fathers taught them:

1 This seems to be a proverbial expression, meaning that all seasons of hope and opportunities of deliverance had passed away without any alleviation to the distress of the people.

2 The prophet mourns over the corruption and faithlessness of his people (vers. 2—8), and their consequent punishments (9—11), which should be evidently just (12—16), although terribly severe (17—22), showing that man's only safety and honour is in submission to God, whose government is perfect and impartial (23—26).

3 So detestable are their lives, that the most desolate lodging-place would be preferable to their company.

4 Rather, 'And not by truth do they prevail in the land.' Compare Ps. xii. 2—5.

5 How otherwise can I reclaim them?

6 The prophet interposes a touching description of the desolation of the open country, as if to suggest that this might be enough, and that the cities might be spared. But this cannot be (ver. 11).

7 Rather, 'And for the pastures of the wilderness a lamentation, because they are desolate,' etc.

8 Rather, jackals: and so in ch. x. 22.

9 Though God's judgments are perfectly just, men are so apt to neglect or misunderstand them, that a wise and Divinely-instructed teacher is required to explain what might be thought plain and obvious.

- 17 Thus saith the LORD of hosts,
Consider ye, and call for ^o the mourning women, that they may come ;
And send for cunning ¹ women, that they may come :
- 18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us,
That ^p our eyes may run down with tears,—and our eyelids gush out with waters.
- 19 For ^q a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, ^r How are we spoiled!—we are greatly confounded,
Because we have forsaken the land,—because ^s our dwellings have cast us out. ²
- 20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O ye women,
And let your ear receive the word of his mouth,
^t And teach your daughters wailing,—and every one her neighbour lamentation.
- 21 For death is come up into our windows, ³—and is entered into our palaces,
To cut off ^u the children from without,—and the young men from the streets.
- 22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD,
Even the carcases of men shall fall—^x as dung upon the open field,
And as the handful after the harvestman,—and none shall gather them.
- 23 Thus saith the LORD,—^y Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, ^z Neither let the mighty man glory in his might,
^a Let not the rich man glory in his riches : ⁴
- 24 But ^b let him that glorieth glory in this,
That he understandeth ^c and knoweth me,—that ^d I am the LORD
Which exercise lovingkindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth :
^e For in these things I delight,—saith the LORD.
- 25 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD,
That ^f I will punish all them which are circumcised with the uncircumcised ;
- 26 ^g Egypt, and Judah, and Edom,—and the children of Ammon, and Moab,
And all that are in the ^h utmost corners, ⁵—that dwell in the wilderness :
For all these nations are uncircumcised,
And all the house of Israel are ⁱ uncircumcised in the heart.

Warnings against idolatry ; its falsehood and folly described.

- 10 HEAR ⁶ ye the word which the LORD speaketh unto you,—O house of Israel :
- 2 Thus saith the LORD,—^k Learn not the way of the heathen,
And ^l be not dismayed at the signs of heaven ; ⁷
For the heathen are dismayed at them.
- 3 For the customs of the people are vain :—for ^m one cutteth a tree out of the forest,
The work of the hands of the workman, with the ax.
- 4 ⁿ They deck it with silver and with gold ;
They ^o fasten it with nails and with hammers,—that it move not.
- 5 They are upright ⁸ as the palm tree,—^p but speak not :
They must needs be ^q borne,—because they cannot go.—Be not afraid of them ;
For ^r they cannot do evil,—neither also is it in them to do good.
- 6 Forasmuch as there is none ^s like unto thee, O LORD ;
^t Thou art great, and thy name is great in might.
- 7 ^u Who would not fear thee, ⁹ O King of nations ?—for to thee doth it appertain :
Forasmuch as ^v among all the wise men ⁹ of the nations,
And in all their kingdoms,—there is none like unto thee.
- 8 But they are altogether ^z brutish and foolish :
^a The stock is a doctrine of vanities. ¹⁰

1 That is, skilful in mourning ; persons who had been taught to utter mournful cries at funerals. See Eccles. xii. 5.

2 Rather, 'They (i. e. our enemies) have cast down our habitations.' This is supposed to be the cry of the captive women leaving the land.

3 Death is personified as entering the house or raging in the streets to kill the people.

4 By such awful judgments God teaches that nothing human or earthly can give security ; and that true safety and honour can be gained only by knowing, obeying, and trusting Him. That the lessons here taught by God's judgments may also be learned from his mercies is shown by the use of this passage in 1 Cor. i. 17–31.

5 Rather, 'All that are cut as to the corner [of the beard].' As this practice was forbidden to the Jews (see Lev. xix. 27 ; xxi. 5), this description would designate Gentiles. The Jew who forsakes God's covenant shall be treated like the heathen, for he is like them 'in heart.'

6 Israel is warned against adopting heathen worship (vers. 1, 2) by a contrast of idols, mere human manufactures (3–5 ; 8, 9 ; 14, 15), with the mighty and everlasting Creator of all, who is Israel's God (6, 7 ; 10–13 ; 16). The date of this warning is not mentioned. It was probably one of Jeremiah's early prophecies.

10 This may mean, 'The wood itself is a reproof of [their] vanities ;' i. e. the absurdity of their worship was shown by the very material of its objects. Or, 'The wood itself is a teacher of vanities ;' and therefore its votaries can only be foolish.

11 THE WORD¹⁴ THAT CAME TO JEREMIAH FROM THE LORD, SAYING,

¹ Uphaz is supposed to be the same as Ophir. See 1 Kings ix. 28. But some regard it as a different name, signifying 'gold-coast.'

² During the feasts and festivals, the statues of the gods were dressed in the sacred vestments.

³ As ver. 11 is in Chaldee, a dialect which Jeremiah uses nowhere else, and appears to interrupt the description of the true God which is continued in vers. 12, 13, many critics, upon the authority of a single Hebrew manuscript, regard it as an interpolation. It is found, however, in the oldest versions; and it is supposed to be designed to supply to the Jewish exiles a brief reply to the Chaldean idolaters by whom they were to be surrounded.

⁴ This may mean, 'Every one is too brutish to know;' i. e. to know the true God: or, 'Every one is brutish by knowledge;' i. e. his fancied wisdom has debased him. See Rom. i. 22. The exposure of idolatry is here resumed from ver. 9.

⁶ In vers. 17—25, the prophet bids the people prepare for exile (17, 18); over which, in their name, he bitterly grieves (19—25). This message was probably delivered just before one of the deportations to Babylon.

- 2 Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and 3 to the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel;
- ^b Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this covenant,¹
- 4 ^c Which I commanded your fathers

 Then answered I, and said, So be it² [Heb. Amen^h], O LORD.
- 6 Then the LORD said unto me,—Proclaim all these words in the cities of Judah,
 And in the streets of Jerusalem, saying,
 Hear ye the words of this covenant,—ⁱ and do them.

 Which refused to hear my words;—and they went after other gods to serve them :

 Behold, I will bring evil upon them,—which they shall not be able to escape ;
 And ^r though they shall cry unto me,—I will not hearken unto them.
- 12 Then shall the cities of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem go, their fathers, had broken (ch. xi. 1—10); to upbraid them with their return to idolatry, and to tell them that they have forfeited their privileges, and incurred God's anger (11—17). This message seems to have brought upon Jeremiah the enmity of his townsmen; of which he complains (18—20), and receives respecting them a threat of punishment (21—23). Pleading further with God to bring to an end the power and prosperity of the wicked (xii. 1—4), he is told that he must expect worse things, even from his own priestly family (5, 6); but that God will severely punish the sinners in Israel (7—13), as well as the neighbouring nations who had first tempted and then triumphed over them (14—17). The worthlessness of the people and their punishment are then represented by two symbols (xiii. 1—14), and distinctly connected with the wickedness of their kings and rulers, and especially with those foreign alliances which had been their sin, and should be their ruin (15—27).

Much of the language of these verses is derived from Deut. iv. 20, 23, 24; v. 2; xi. 26—28; xxvii. 26, etc.

² This appears to be the prophet's response to the covenant just repeated, as prescribed in Deut. xxvii. 15, 26.

⁴ Among the heathen, every city, street, and house had its tutelary deity.

⁵ Rather, 'Whilst the multitude practise [their] device.' This verse is difficult, and the ancient versions appear to have had different readings: but its meaning seems to be, that a people who are addicted to idolatry have no right to God's temple, and 'the holy flesh' of their sacrifices is no longer acceptable to Him. Comp. 1 Cor. x. 14—22; 2 Cor. vi. 14—18.

- 17 For the LORD of hosts, ^a that planted thee,—¹ hath pronounced evil against thee,

- 12 Righteous ^x art thou,⁴ O LORD, when I plead with thee:
Yet let me talk with thee of thy judgments [or, let me reason the case with thee]:
^y Wherefore doth the way of the wicked prosper?
Wherefore are all they happy that deal ^z very treacherously?
- 2 ^a Thou hast planted them—yea, they have taken root:
They grow—yea, they bring forth fruit:
^b Thou art near in their mouth,—and far from their reins.
- 3 But thou, O LORD, ^c knowest me:
Thou hast seen me, and ^d tried mine heart toward thee:
^e Pull them out like sheep for the slaughter,

1 Rather, 'of them,' i. e. of 'their doings.'

2 Rather, 'a pet' or 'house lamb,' such as the Orientals often keep. See 2 Sam. xii. 3.

3 Rather, 'in its food,' or 'fruit,' i. e. when fruit-bearing: probably meaning Jeremiah whilst prophesying.

4 Whatever difficulty we may find in understanding parts of God's ways, we should always hold fast the conviction that He is righteous. This will repress our murmurings, and prepare us to receive his instructions. On this subject, compare Ps. xxxvii.

5 The animate and inanimate creation suffer through the prevalence of wickedness.

6 That is, the prophet's threats will not be fulfilled.

7 Rather, 'the pride of Jordan,' as in Zech. xi. 3: a poetic expression for the dense and luxuriant thickets on its banks, affording shelter to lions and other wild beasts. See ch. xlix. 19; 1. 44. The language appears to be proverbial, meaning, 'If thou art afraid of ordinary dangers, how wilt thou endure greater?' It refers to the severer sufferings which Jeremiah would have to bear.

8 Wild and untameable as a lion, which men hate and destroy. Therefore God will treat them as wild and savage animals (ver. 9).

9 Some render this 'hyena,' but the word here translated 'bird' everywhere else means a bird of prey.

10 See note on ch. ii. 8.

- They have ^y troden my portion under foot,
 They have made my pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.
- 11 ^z They have made it desolate,—and being desolate ^a it mourneth unto me;
 The whole land is made desolate,—because ^b no man layeth it to heart.
- 12 ^c The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness:
 For ^d the sword of the LORD shall devour
 From the one end of the land even to the other end of the land:
 No flesh shall have peace.
- 13 ^e They have sown wheat—but shall reap thorns:
^f They have put themselves to pain—but shall not profit:
 And they [or, ye] shall be ashamed of your revenues
 Because of the fierce anger of the LORD.
- 14 Thus saith the LORD ^g against all mine evil neighbours,¹
 That ^h touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit;
 Behold, I will ⁱ pluck them out of their land, ^k And pluck out the house of Judah from among them.
- 15 ^l And it shall come to pass,—after that I have plucked them out,
 I will return, and have compassion on them, ^m and will bring them again,
 Every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.
- 16 And it shall come to pass.—if they ⁿ will diligently learn the ways of my people,
^o To swear by my name, The LORD liveth;
^p As they taught my people to swear by Baal;
 Then shall they be ^q built in the midst of my people.
- 17 But if they will not ^r obey,—I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation
 Saith the LORD.
- 13 Thus saith the LORD unto me, ^s Go and get³ thee a linen girdle,⁴ and put it ^t upon thy loins, and put it not in water.⁵ So I got a girdle according to the word of the LORD, and put it on my loins.
- 3, 4 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, Take the girdle that thou hast got, which is upon thy loins, and arise, ^u go to Euphrates,⁶ 5 and hide it there in a hole of the rock. So I went, and hid it by Euphrates, as the LORD commanded me.
- 6 And it came to pass after many days,⁷ that the LORD said unto me, Arise, go to Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commanded thee to hide 7 there. Then I went to the Euphrates, and digged, and took the girdle from the place where I had hid it: and, behold, the girdle was marred, ^v it was profitable 8 for nothing. Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- 9 Thus saith the LORD,—After this manner ^w will I mar the pride of Judah,
 And the great pride of Jerusalem.
- 10 ^x This evil people, which refuse to hear my words,
 Which ^y walk in the imagination [or, stubbornness] of their heart,
 And walk after other gods, to serve them, and to worship them,
^z Shall even be as this girdle, which is good for nothing.⁸
- 11 For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man,
^a So have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel
 And the whole house of Judah,—saith the LORD;
 That ^b they might be unto me for a people,
 And ^c for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory:—^d but they would not hear.
- 12 Therefore thou shalt speak unto them this word;
 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel,—Every bottle⁹ shall be filled with wine:

1 The Ammonites, Moabites, etc., 'the birds and beasts of prey' (ver. 9), which had joined in spoiling God's heritage. See 2 Kings xxiv. 1—4; Ps. cxxxvii. 7.

2 That is, the neighbouring nations, who had so often enticed them to idolatry.

3 Some suppose this to have been really done, adducing as parallels ch. xviii. 1—4, and ch. xix.; and, in order to remove the difficulties arising from two long journeys, through districts infested by a hostile army, to the Euphrates, where the Jews could not be witnesses of the condition of the girdle, they suppose a nearer place to be meant, Ephratah or Bethlehem. This, however, is nowhere the meaning of the word here used; and it seems better to regard the whole as a prophetic message put into the lively form of a parable, like ch. xxv. 17.

4 Jeremiah had probably been accustomed to wear a girdle of leather. The girdles now most common in the East consist of long pieces of linen, cotton, or silk, wound in numerous folds round the waist.

5 This may mean, 'Do not wash it;' so that it may be a fit emblem of the polluted house of Israel.

6 The 'Euphrates' points to Babylon as the instrument of the impending punishment.

7 During which the girdle is represented as rotting.

8 The girdle was thus an emblem, first, of the close relation between God and the Jewish people, and then of their utter depravation and consequent degradation and ruin.

9 This word properly means a skin-bottle; but is also used for jars of pottery, wine being kept in both kinds of vessels. By a bold figure, the bottles themselves are represented as drunken, and reeling against each other, so as to be burst or shattered, and therefore destroyed. As the Jews mocked at the symbolic instruction, the prophet explains it in a fearful threatening.

- And they shall say unto thee,
Do we not certainly know that every bottle shall be filled with wine?
13 Then shalt thou say unto them,—Thus saith the LORD,
Behold, I will fill all the inhabitants of this land,
Even the kings that sit upon David's throne,—and the priests, and the prophets,
And all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, ^cwith drunkenness.¹
14 And ^fI will dash them one against another,
Even the fathers and the sons together,—saith the LORD:
I will not pity, nor spare, nor have mercy,—but destroy them.
15 Hear ye, and give ear; ^gbe not proud:—for the LORD hath spoken.
16 ^hGive glory to the LORD your God,—before he cause ⁱdarkness,
And before ^kyour feet stumble upon the dark mountains,²
And, while ye ^llook for light,
He turn it into ^mthe shadow of death,—and make it gross darkness.
17 But if ye will not hear it,—my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride;
And ⁿmine eye shall weep sore, and run down with tears,
Because ^othe LORD's flock ^pis carried away captive.
18 Say unto ^qthe king and to the queen,—Humble yourselves, ^rsit down:
For your principalities³ shall come down,—even the crown of your glory.
19 The cities of the south⁴ shall be ^sshut up,—and none shall open them:
^tJudah shall be carried away captive all of it,
It shall be wholly carried away captive.
20 Lift up your eyes, and behold them ^uthat come from the north:
Where ^vis the flock that was given thee,—thy beautiful flock?
21 What wilt thou say when he shall punish thee?
For thou hast taught them to be captains, and as chief over thee:⁵
Shall not ^ysorrows take thee, as a woman in travail?
22 And if thou say in thine heart,—^zWherefore come these things upon me?
^aFor the greatness of thine iniquity are ^bthy skirts discovered,
And thy heels made bare.⁶
23 ^cCan⁷ the Ethiopian change his skin,—or the leopard his spots?
Then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil.
24 Therefore ^dwill I scatter them ^eas the stubble
That passeth away by the wind of the wilderness.
25 ^fThis is thy lot, the portion of thy measures⁸ from me,—saith the LORD;
^gBecause thou hast forgotten me,—and trusted in ^hfalsehood.
26 Therefore ⁱwill I discover thy skirts upon thy face,—that thy shame may appear.
27 I have seen ^kthine adulteries, and thy ^lneighings,—the lewdness of thy whoredom,
And thine abominations—^mon the hills in the fields.
Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem!
ⁿWilt thou not be made clean?—^owhen shall it once be?

The prophet intercedes for the people, but in vain.

- 14 THE⁹ WORD OF THE LORD THAT CAME TO JEREMIAH CONCERNING THE DEARTH.
2 ^pJudah mourneth,—and ^qthe gates¹⁰ thereof languish;
They are ^rblack unto the ground;—and ^sthe cry of Jerusalem is gone up.
3 ^tAnd their nobles have sent their little ones¹¹ to the waters:

¹ That is, with God's wrath (see Psa. lxxv. 8), which shall confound and divide them; so that they shall injure each other, and become an easy prey to their enemies.

² That is, 'before you are involved in ruin.' The rocky mountain-tracks of Palestine are peculiarly perilous; and a traveller, overtaken by a night-storm, is in imminent danger of falling over the precipices, and perishing miserably.

³ Or, 'your head-dresses.' 'The queen' is probably the queen-mother, whose influence is always powerful in Oriental courts. See 1 Kings xv. 13, and note.

⁴ Even those cities that lie furthest from the approaching enemy (ver. 20) shall be closely shut up by besiegers; and when taken, their inhabitants shall all be carried off, like a flock of sheep, into captivity.

⁵ Or, 'Thou hast accustomed them to be over thee leaders in chief.' By seeking alliance with the powerful monarchs of the East, the kings of Judah reduced themselves to vassalage; and, when they offended their superiors, to disgrace and captivity. See 2 Kings xvi. 7; xviii. 14; xxiv. 1, 17, 20.

⁶ Or, 'Violently stripped,' as those of a captive.

⁷ This means, that the depravity of the people was so inveterate that there was no hope of reformation, and therefore there must be punishment. It vindicates the severity of God's chastisements.

⁸ That is, 'the portion to be measured out to thee.' Thy punishment shall be equitably proportioned to thy sin.

⁹ The prophet vividly depicts the miseries caused by drought (vers. 2—6), and beseeches God to visit his people in mercy (7—9); but is told that his intercession is useless, for they are set upon their sins (10—12). He suggests that the false prophets lead them astray; upon which renewed threats are pronounced against both the deceivers and the deceived (13—18). Again he humbly pleads for Divine forbearance (19—22); but is told again that no intercession can be heard, for the crimes of Manasseh still call for vengeance (xv. 1—9). Bemoaning his hard lot as a minister of strife, he receives a promise of protection (10—21). We have no clear information as to the time to which these chapters refer.

¹⁰ That is, the gates of its cities: meaning those who assemble there. See Job xxix. 7.

- They came to the pits, and found no water ;
 They returned with their vessels empty ;
 They were ^uashamed and confounded,^{1—x} and covered their heads.²
- 4 Because ^ythe ground is chapt,—for there was no rain in the earth, ^zThe plowmen³ were ashamed,—they covered their heads.
- 5 Yea, the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it,—because there was no grass.
- 6 And ^athe wild asses did stand in the high places,
 They snuffed up the wind like dragons ;
^bTheir eyes did fail, because there was no grass.
- 7 O LORD, ^cthough our iniquities testify against us,
 Do thou it ^dfor thy name's sake :
^eFor our backslidings are many ;—we have sinned against thee.
- 8 O the hope of Israel, ^fthe saviour thereof ^hin time of trouble, ⁱWhy shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land,⁴
 And as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night ?
- 9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished,—as a mighty man ^h*that* cannot save ?
 Yet thou, O LORD, ⁱ*art* in the midst of us,
 And ^mwe are called by thy name ;—ⁿleave us not.
- 10 Thus saith the LORD unto this people,
^oThus have they loved to wander,—they have ^pnot refrained their feet,
 Therefore ^qthe LORD doth not accept them ;
^rHe will now remember their iniquity,—and visit their sins.
- 11 Then said the LORD unto me,—^sPray not for this people for their good.
- 12 ^tWhen they fast—I will not hear their cry ;
 And ^uwhen they offer burnt offering and an oblation—I will not accept them :
 But ^vI will consume them by the sword,
 And by the famine, and by the pestilence.
- 13 ^yThen said I,—Ah, Lord God !—^zbehold, the prophets say unto them,
 Ye shall not see the sword,—neither shall ye have famine ;
 But I will give you assured peace in this place.
- 14 Then the LORD said unto me,—^aThe prophets prophesy lies in my name :
^bI sent them not,—neither have I commanded them,—neither spake unto them :
 They prophesy unto you a false vision and ^cdivination,
 And a thing of nought, ^dand the deceit of their heart.
- 15 Therefore thus saith the LORD
 Concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, ^eYet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land ;
 By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.
- 16 And the people to whom they prophesy ^fshall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem
 Because of the famine and the sword ;
^gAnd they shall have none to bury them,
 Them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters :
^hFor I will pour their wickedness⁵ upon them.
- 17 Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them ;
ⁱLet mine eyes run down with tears night and day,—and let them not cease :
^kFor the virgin daughter of my people is broken ^lWith a great breach, with a very grievous blow.
- 18 If I go forth into ^mthe field,—then behold the slain with the sword !
 And if I enter into the city,—then behold them that are sick with famine !
 Yea, ⁿboth the prophet and the priest go about⁶ into a land that they know not.
- 19 ^oHast thou utterly rejected Judah ?—hath thy soul loathed Zion ?
 Why hast thou smitten us—and ^p*there is* no healing for us ?
^qWe looked for peace—and there is no good ;
 And for the time of healing—and behold trouble !
- 20 ^rWe acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness,—and the iniquity of our fathers :
 For ^swe have sinned against thee.
- 21 ^tDo not abhor us, for thy name's sake,—do not disgrace ^uthe throne of thy glory :⁷

 2 Like mourners. See Esth. vi. 12.
 3 Or, 'husbandmen.' They could not till the hard earth, nor hope for a harvest if they did so.
 4 Who, consequently, feels no particular interest in it.
 5 That is, the consequences of their wickedness. The false prophets accommodated their predictions to the tastes of the people, and therefore both were partakers in the 'wickedness,' and both must share the punishment. See ch. v. 31, and comp. 1 Kings xxii. 11, 12.

6 This may be rendered either, 'travel into,' i. e. as captives; or, 'go trafficking into the land, and regard not,' i. e. they carry on their venal deception regardless of God's judgments.

7 That is, thy temple, where thy throne is. See Isa. vi. 1.

* Remember, break not thy covenant with us.

- 22 ^y Are there any among ^z the vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain?
Or can the heavens give showers?—^a Art not thou he, O Lord our God?
Therefore we will ^b wait upon thee:—for thou hast made all these things.

15 Then said the LORD unto me,

^c Though ^d Moses and ^e Samuel ^f stood before me,

Yet my mind could not be toward this people:

^g Cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth.

- 2 And it shall come to pass, if they say unto thee,—Whither shall we go forth?

Then thou shalt tell them,—Thus saith the LORD;

^h Such as are for death, to death;—and such as are for the sword, to the sword;

And such as are for the famine, to the famine;

And such as are for the captivity, to the captivity.

- 3 And I will ⁱ appoint over them four kinds, ² saith the LORD:

The sword to slay, and the dogs to tear,

And ^k the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the earth, to devour and destroy.

- 4 And I will cause them to be ^l removed ³ into all kingdoms of the earth,

Because of ^m Manasseh the son of Hezekiah king of Judah,

For that which he did in Jerusalem.

- 5 For ⁿ who shall have pity upon thee, O Jerusalem?

Or who shall bemoan thee?—or who shall go aside to ask how thou doest?

- 6 ^o Thou hast forsaken me, saith the LORD,—thou art ^p gone backward:

Therefore will I ^q stretch out my hand against thee,—and destroy thee;

^r I am weary with repenting.

- 7 And ^s I will fan them with a fan—in the gates of the land; ⁴

^t I will bereave them of children, I will destroy my people,

Since ^u they return not from their ways.

- 8 ^z Their widows are increased to me above the sand of the seas:

I have brought ⁵ upon them against the mother of the young men

^v A spoiler at noonday;

I have caused him to fall upon it suddenly,—and terrors upon the city.

- 9 ^z She that hath borne seven languisheth:—she hath given up the ghost;

^a Her sun is gone down while it was yet day:

She hath been ashamed and confounded:

And the residue of them will I deliver to the sword before their enemies,

Saith the LORD.

- 10 ^b Woe is me, my mother,—that thou hast borne me ^c a man of strife

And a man of contention to the whole earth!

^d I have neither lent on usury, nor men have lent to me on usury;

Yet every one of them doth ^e curse me. ⁶

- 11 The LORD said,—^f Verily it shall be well ⁷ with thy remnant;

Verily I will cause ^g the enemy to intreat thee well,

In the time of evil and in the time of affliction.

- 12 ^h Shall iron break the northern iron and the steel? ⁸

- 13 ⁱ Thy ⁹ substance and thy treasures will I give to the ^h spoil without price,

And that for all thy sins, even in all thy borders.

- 14 And I will make thee ¹⁰ ⁱ to pass with thine enemies

^m Into a land which thou knowest not:

2 That is, four kinds of destroyers.

3 Rather, 'I will give them over for vexation to,' etc.

4 That is, I will take them to the entrance or boundary of the land, and there scatter them like chaff.

5 Of the various meanings given to this verse, perhaps the best is this: 'I have brought upon them, [even] upon the mothers of the choice youth, destruction at noon (i. e. unexpectedly); I have caused angst and terror to fall upon them suddenly. She that hath borne seven droopeth (with grief); her sun (of joy) is gone down,' etc. This may be taken either literally, as speaking of the grief of mothers who had lost all their sons by war; or figuratively of Jerusalem depopulated by the invader.

6 The unwelcome truths which the prophet delivered caused his countrymen to dislike him as much as they would hate the most hard-hearted usurer.

7 Or, 'Surely I will deliver thee for good (i. e. will deliver and prosper thee): surely I will cause the enemy to come as a suppliant to thee' (or, 'to take thy part') in the time of evil, etc.

8 Rather, 'Can one break iron, the iron of the north, and brass?' 'Northern iron' was probably a sort of steel, prepared by the Chalybes, who lived near the Euxine Sea. It is not easy to determine whether this refers to the Divine strength put forth for Jeremiah's protection, or to the Chaldean power, which was to bring 'evil' and 'affliction' (ver. 11).

9 This is addressed to the people.

10 Or, 'them'; i. e. 'thy substance and treasures.'

- Take me not away in¹ thy longsuffering :
 Know that ^q for thy sake I have suffered rebuke.
- 16 Thy words were found, and I did ^r eat them ;²
 And ^s thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart :
 For I am called by thy name, O LORD God of hosts.
- 17 'I sat not in the assembly of the mockers, nor rejoiced ;
 "I sat alone because of thy hand :³—for ^x thou hast filled me with indignation.
- 18 Why is my ^y pain perpetual,
 And my wound incurable, which refuseth to be healed ?
 Wilt thou be altogether unto me ^z as a liar,—and ^a as waters that fail ?
- 19 Therefore thus saith the LORD,
^b If thou return, then will I bring thee again,⁴—and thou shalt ^c stand before me :
 And if thou ^d take forth the precious from the vile,—thou shalt be ^e as my mouth :
 Let them⁵ return unto thee ;—but return not thou unto them.
- 20 And I will make thee unto this people a fenced brasen ^f wall ;⁶
 And they shall fight against thee,—but ^g they shall not prevail against thee :
^h For I am with thee to save thee and to deliver thee,—saith the LORD.
- 21 And ⁱ I will deliver thee out of the hand of the wicked,
 And I will redeem thee out of the hand of the terrible.

The captivity and restoration of the Jews foretold

- 16 THE word⁷ of the LORD came also unto me, saying,
 Thou shalt not take thee a wife,
 Neither shalt thou have sons or daughters in this place.
- 3 For thus saith the LORD
 Concerning the sons and concerning the daughters that are born in this place,
 And concerning their mothers that bare them,
 And concerning their fathers that begat them in this land ;
- 4 They shall die of ^k grievous deaths ;
 They shall not be ^l lamented ;—^m neither shall they be buried ;
 But they shall be ⁿ as dung upon the face of the earth :
 And they shall be consumed by the sword, and by famine ;
 And their ^o carcases shall be meat
 For the fowls of heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.
- 5 For thus saith the LORD,—^p Enter not into the house of mourning,
 Neither go to lament nor bemoan them :
^q For I have taken away my peace from this people, saith the LORD,
Even lovingkindness and mercies.
- 6 ^r Both the great and the small shall die in this land :
 'They shall not be buried, 'neither shall men lament for them,
 Nor ^s cut themselves,⁸—nor ^t make themselves bald for them :
- 7 Neither shall men tear *themselves*⁹ for them in mourning,
 To comfort them for the dead ;
 Neither shall men give them the cup of consolation to ^u drink
 For their father or for their mother.
- 8 Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting,
 To sit with them to eat and to drink.

¹ That is, in thy long-suffering towards my persecutors, do not leave my life in jeopardy.

² The Hebrew idiom implies that, as soon as the words of God came to the prophet, he eagerly received them. He goes on to say that his whole happiness was in his work as God's messenger ; that he was excited as strongly as the wicked are in their revels, but by a very different impulse—the hand or power of God (ver. 17) ; and that, if God should now fail to protect and comfort him, he would be hopelessly wretched (ver. 18).

³ See note on Isa. viii. 11.

⁴ Jehovah replies to the prophet, that if he will return to his work, he shall again be entrusted with a message ; and if he will boldly defend the right and condemn the wrong, his words shall be found to be of Divine authority.

⁵ This may be a continuation of the command to keep on fearlessly in the work. Or it may mean, 'they shall return unto thee ;' i. e. as suppliants, to seek thy favour and good offices ; and thou shalt have no need to make such applications to them. See ch. xlii. 2.

⁶ See note on ch. i. 18.

⁷ In forbidding the prophet to form new relationships, and to indulge his social feelings, Jehovah forewarns him that all these sources of enjoyment shall become occasions of extreme suffering through the desolations by which the sins of his country will be punished (ch. xvi. 1—13). So signally shall the terrible dispersion of the people, and their gathering and restoration at the predicted time, illustrate the character and plans of the Divine government (14—18), that the Gentiles shall learn to reverence the name of Jehovah (19—21). All this is necessary to remove the deep-seated sins of Judah (xvii. 1—4), and to show the evil of trusting in man's strength or wealth, and the blessedness of resting on Jehovah—'the hope of Israel' (5—13) ; to whom the prophet, in his own persecutions and troubles, turns for succour (14—18).

⁸ This was one of the heathen customs adopted by the Jews, in opposition to the law in Lev. xix. 28.

⁹ Rather, neither shall men 'break bread for them ;' alluding to the funeral feast which was usually provided for mourners. Comp. Deut. xxvi. 14 ; Ezek. xxiv. 16, 17 ; Hos. ix. 4.

- 9 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel ;
Behold, ^zI will cause to cease out of this place—in your eyes, and in your days,
The voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness,
The voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride.
- 10 And it shall come to pass, when thou shalt show this people all these words, and they shall say unto thee, ^aWherefore hath the LORD pronounced all this great evil against us? or what is our iniquity? or what is our sin that we have 11 committed against the LORD our God? Then shalt thou say unto them, ^bBecause your fathers have forsaken me, saith the LORD,
And have walked after other gods,
And have served them, and have worshipped them,
And have forsaken me, and have not kept my law ;
12 And ye have done ^cworse than your fathers ;
For, behold, ^dye walk every one after the imagination of his ^eevil heart,
That they may not hearken unto me :
13 ^fTherefore will I cast you out of this land
^gInto a land that ye know not, neither ye nor your fathers ;
And there shall ye serve other gods day and night ;¹
Where I will not show you favour.
- 14 Therefore, behold, the ^hdays come, saith the LORD,—that it shall no more be said,
The LORD liveth, ⁱthat brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt ;
15 But, The LORD liveth,
That brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north,
And from all the lands whither he had driven them :²
And ^kI will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers.
- 16 Behold, I will send for many ^lfishers, saith the LORD,—and they shall fish them ;
And after will I send for many hunters,
And they shall hunt them—^mfrom every mountain,
And from every hill,—and out of the holes of the rocks.³
- 17 For mine ⁿeyes are upon all their ways :—they are not hid from my face, Neither is their iniquity hid from mine eyes.
- 18 And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin ^odouble ;⁴
Because ^pthey have defiled my land,—^qthey have filled mine inheritance
With ^rthe carcases of their detestable and abominable things.⁵
- 19 O LORD, ^smy strength, and my fortress,—and ^tmy refuge in the day of affliction, ^uThe Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth,
And shall say,—^vSurely our fathers have inherited lies,
Vanity, and things ^wwherein there is no profit.
- 20 Shall a man make gods unto himself, and ^xthey are no gods ?
- 21 Therefore, behold, ^yI will this once cause them to know,
I will cause them to know mine hand and my might ;
And they shall know that ^zmy name is The LORD [or, JEHOVAH ^a].
- 17 The sin of Judah is written with a ^dpen of iron,
And with the point of a diamond :
It is ^egraven upon the table of their heart,⁶—^fand upon the horns of your altars ;
2 Whilst ^gtheir children remember⁷ their altars
And their ^hgroves⁸ by the green tree—upon the high hills.
3 O ⁱmy mountain in the field,⁹
^kI will give thy substance and all thy treasures to the spoil, ^lAnd thy high places for sin, throughout all thy borders.

¹ The meaning appears to be, 'Ye shall have your fill of your idol-worship.'

² The restoration of the Jews from Babylon, though not accompanied by miracles, as the deliverance from Egypt had been, was likely to make a greater impression upon the world; partly as being a manifest fulfilment of prophecy, and partly because of the extensive dispersion of the people. See note on the events connected with the Captivity, p. 478. It must, however, be remembered that this was only a prelude to the more wonderful work of redemption by Christ.

³ There shall be no hiding-place by sea or land for these sinners where God will not find them.

⁴ See note on Isa. xl. 2. But this line may be rendered, 'And I will recompense their former repeated iniquities and sins.'

⁵ Or, 'For they have polluted my land with the carcases of their abominations (i. e. their lifeless idols), and they have filled my inheritance with their detestable things.'

⁶ It is indelibly inwrought into their affections, and shows itself in their multiplied idolatries.

⁷ That is, the children retain and practise the sins which they have learned from their fathers. But it may be rendered, 'It is graven, etc., as a remembering of their children [whom they have sacrificed], their altars, and their images,' etc.; i. e. these sins are so inwrought into their minds that they cannot forget and forsake them.'

⁸ See note on Judg. iii. 7.

⁹ Or, 'O my mountain, with the open country;' meaning Jerusalem, with the whole land of Judah. On 'mountain,' see note on Isa. ii. 2.

- 4 And thou, even thyself,¹ shalt discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee ;
And I will cause thee to serve thine enemies in ² the land which thou knowest not :
For ³ ye have kindled a fire in mine anger, which shall burn for ever.
- 5 Thus saith the LORD ;
⁴ Cursed be the man that trusteth in man,—and maketh ⁵ flesh his arm,
And whose heart departeth from the LORD.
- 6 For he shall be ⁶ like the heath² in the desert,
And ⁷ shall not see when good cometh ;
But shall inhabit the parched places in the wilderness,
⁸ In a salt land and not inhabited.
- 7 ⁹ Blessed is the man that trusteth in the LORD,—and whose hope the LORD is.
- 8 For he shall be ¹⁰ as a tree planted by the waters,
And that spreadeth out her roots by the river,
And shall not see when heat cometh,—but her leaf shall be green ;
And shall not be careful in the year of drought,
Neither shall cease from yielding fruit.
- 9 ¹¹ The heart is deceitful above all things,
And desperately wicked ;¹² who can know it ?
- 10 I the LORD ¹³ search the heart,—I try the reins,
¹⁴ Even to give every man according to his ways,
And according to ¹⁵ the fruit of his doings.
- 11 As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not ;¹⁶
¹⁷ So he that getteth riches, and not by right, ¹⁸ Shall leave them in the midst of his days,—and at his end shall be ¹⁹ a fool.
- 12 ²⁰ A glorious high throne⁵ from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary.
- 13 O LORD, ²¹ the hope of Israel,—²² all that forsake thee shall be ashamed.
And ²³ they that depart from me⁶ shall be ²⁴ written in the earth,⁷
Because they have forsaken the LORD,—the ²⁵ fountain of living waters.
- 14 Heal⁸ me, O LORD, and I shall be healed ;—save me, and I shall be saved :
For ²⁶ thou art my praise.
- 15 Behold, they say unto me,—²⁷ Where is the word of the LORD ?—let it come now.
- 16 As for me, ²⁸ I have not hastened from being a pastor to follow thee :⁹
²⁹ Neither have I desired the woeful day ;—thou knowest :
That which came out of my lips was right before thee.
- 17 Be not a terror unto me :³⁰—³¹ thou art my hope in the day of evil.
- 18 ³² Let them be confounded that persecute me—but ³³ let not me be confounded :
Let them be dismayed—but let not me be dismayed :
³⁴ Bring upon them the day of evil,—and ³⁵ destroy them with double destruction.
- Observance of the Sabbath enjoined.*
- 19 THUS¹¹ said the LORD unto me ; Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, 20 and in all the gates of Jerusalem ; and say unto them, ³⁶ Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, 21 that enter in by these gates : thus saith the LORD ; ³⁷ Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem :
22 neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I ³⁸ commanded your fathers.

¹ Rather, 'even by thyself ;' i. e. through thy own sins.

² Meaning, perhaps, a sort of juniper tree : but more probably, 'a bare (or dry) tree ;' as the Hebrew word signifies 'naked,' or 'destitute.' He who trusts in man will be destitute of support in time of need. He who trusts in God will be safe and prosperous (vers. 7, 8).

³ Rather, 'and incurable ;' i. e. inveterately deceitful. The curse and the blessing described in the preceding verses can be inflicted by none but Jehovah, who alone sees through all the disguises and deceptions of man's heart.

⁴ Perhaps, 'which she has not laid.' It was anciently supposed that the partridge takes the eggs of other birds, and hatches them, but is afterwards abandoned by the young birds ; and thus has nothing to compensate her for her trouble. So he that procures riches by unfair means shall find that he has laboured in vain.

⁵ The throne of Jehovah ; who is therefore represented as being always at hand to help those who seek his protection.

⁶ That is, from Jehovah. The word 'and' should not be inserted ; this clause being a repetition of the preceding, made more emphatic by being spoken in God's name.

⁷ 'Written in the dust ;' i. e. consigned to oblivion. Contrast Job xix. 23, 24.

⁸ That is, Comfort me. See Ps. cxlvii. 3.

⁹ Rather, 'after thee.' I have not shrunk from obeying thy call to be a teacher of this people ; nor, on the other hand, have I desired the calamities which I predicted. I have spoken under thy influence, and as in thy presence.

¹⁰ Others would terrify me : do thou sustain me.

¹¹ This prophetic message consists of a command to observe the sabbath, having reference to profanations of it which were probably particularly prevalent at the time (vers. 19—23). Great national blessings are promised in case of obedience (24—26) ; and the destruction of Jerusalem is threatened if the desecration is continued (27).

God's dealings with his people illustrated; Jeremiah's imprisonment.

- 18 THE word¹ which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, Arise, and ³ go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words. Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the wheels.²
- 4 And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.
- 5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,
- 6 O house of Israel, ^m cannot I do with you as this potter?—saith the LORD. Behold, ⁿ as the clay is in the potter's hand, So are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.

¹ The power of the potter over his work (vers. 1—4) is used to illustrate God's absolute control over all nations (5—10), and is applied to induce the Jews to repent (11). But their obstinate rejection of the message brings upon them a fresh threatening (12—17); and their plots against the unwelcome messenger lead him to renewed entreaties for God's judicial interposition (18—23). To show the ease and certainty with which God will inflict his despised threatenings, the prophet is bidden to take some of the elders to the valley of Hinnom, and there to dash in pieces a potter's vessel, as an emblem of the destruction which shall overtake the people in the very place which has witnessed their crimes (xix. 1—13). Returning to the temple, the prophet repeats the threatenings (14, 15); and for this he is persecuted by the governor of the temple (xx. 1, 2), against whom he utters a prediction of captivity (3—6); and he closes with a pathetic complaint of the trials of his mission, and a prayer for Divine assistance (7—18).

² Literally, 'on the two stones.' Some suppose moulds to be meant; but the reference is probably to the turning instrument, which consisted of two wheels, like those of a hand-mill, on the upper, and smaller, of which the vessel to be formed was placed. Similar wheels were used in Egypt: see Wilkinson's Ancient Egypt, iii. 165.

³ See notes on Gen. vi. 6; 2 Sam. xxiv. 16. God always exercises his absolute right and power over men in accordance with the highest principles of justice and mercy.

⁴ See note on ch. ii. 25.

⁵ Perhaps the best rendering of this verse is, 'On account of a rock will one leave a field of (i. e. watered by) the snow of Lebanon; or [for] strange waters shall cool streams be dried up?' That is, Will a man give up a well-watered field for a barren rock, or give up a fountain for water brought from a distance? Comp. ch. ii. 13.

⁶ Rather, 'for.' I ask this question; for, etc. Vers. 14, 15 are a strong declaration that those who forsake God are most unreasonable and foolish.

⁷ That is, the false teachers.

- To walk in paths, in a way not cast up ;
 16 To make their land ^cdesolate, and a perpetual ^fhissing ;
 Every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished, ^sand wag his head.
 17 ^hI will scatter them, ⁱas with an east wind, before the enemy ;
^kI will show them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

- 18 Then said they, —^lCome, and let us devise devices against Jeremiah ; ^mFor the law shall not perish from the priest,
 Nor counsel from the wise, —nor the word from the prophet, ¹
 Come, and let us smite him with the tongue² [or, for the tongue],
 And let us not give heed to any of his words.

- 19 Give heed to me, O LORD,
 And ⁿhearken to the voice of them that contend with me.
 20 ^oShall evil be recompensed for good? —for ^pthey have digged a pit for my soul.
^qRemember that I stood before thee to speak good for them,
 And to turn away thy wrath from them.

- 21 Therefore³ ^rdeliver up their children to the famine,
 And pour out their blood by the force of the sword ;
 And let their wives be bereaved of their children, and be widows ;
 And let their men be put to death ;
 Let their young men be slain by the sword in battle.

- 22 Let a cry be heard from their houses,
 When thou shalt bring a troop suddenly upon them :
 For ^sthey have digged a pit to take me, —^tand hid snares for my feet.

- 23 Yet, LORD, thou knowest all ^utheir counsel against me to slay me :
^vForgive not their iniquity, —neither blot out their sin from thy sight,
 But let them be overthrown before thee ;
 Deal thus with them ^yin the time of thine anger.

- 19 Thus saith the LORD, ^zGo and get a potter's earthen bottle, and take of the 2 ancients⁴ of the people, and of the ancients of the priests : and go forth unto ^athe valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the east gate,⁵ and proclaim 3 there the words that I shall tell thee, ^band say,

- Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem ;
 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel ; Behold, I will bring evil upon 4 this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall ^ctingle. Because they ^dhave forsaken me, and have ^eestranged⁶ this place, and ^fhave burned incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the 5 kings of Judah, and have filled this place with ^gthe blood of innocents ; ^hthey have built also the high places of Baal, to burn their sons with fire for burnt offerings unto Baal,⁷ ⁱwhich I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into 6 my mind :⁸ therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that ^kthis place shall no more be called Tophet, nor ^lThe valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of 7 slaughter. And ^mI will make void the counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place ; ⁿand I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives : and their ^ocarcasses will I give to be 8 meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth. And I will make this city ^pdesolate, and an hissing ; every one that passeth thereby shall 9 be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof. And I will cause them to eat the ^qflesh⁹ of their sons, and the flesh of their daughters, and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

- 10 ^rThen shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee, 11 and shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts ; ^sEven so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot be made

1 That is, Jeremiah is not the only true priest or prophet, nor are all the others ignorant or deceitful, as he declares them to be.

2 The meaning is either, let us accuse him to the rulers ; or, let us contradict his predictions by our own.

3 In their persecution of himself, the prophet had proof of the people's determined enmity to God, and of the hopelessness of all efforts to reclaim them and all intercession for them. He therefore feels that it is best for justice to take its course.

4 That is, the elders.

5 More probably, 'the pottery-gate.'

6 That is, have alienated it to the worship of idols.

3 H

7 The word 'Baal,' which signifies Lord, is perhaps used here generically. Human sacrifices were commonly offered to Moloch. See notes on Lev. xx. 2 ; 2 Kings xvi. 3. That such sacrifices were offered in this very place appears from 2 Chron. xxxiii. 6.

8 A very forcible manner of saying that such cruelties were most abhorrent to the Divine nature.

9 A repetition of the threatening in Deut. xxviii. 53, which was fulfilled speedily (see Lam. iv. 10), and repeatedly, as appears from Josephus's account of the siege of Jerusalem by Titus. See Bell. Jud. b. 6, ch. 3, sec. 8. They have sacrificed their children to their idols : they shall do it to their hunger.

- whole again: and they shall 'bury them in Tophet, till there be no place to bury.
- 12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof,
- 13 and even make this city as Tophet: and the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be defiled "as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses upon whose "roofs¹ they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven, and "have poured out drink offerings unto other gods.
- 14 Then came Jeremiah "from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in "the court of the LORD's house; and said to all the
- 15 people, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, I will bring upon this city and upon all her towns all the evil that I have pronounced against it, because ^b they have hardened their necks, that they might not hear my words.
- 20 Now Pashur the son of 'Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in
- 2 the house of the LORD, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things. Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks² that were in the high gate of Benjamin,³ which was by the house of the LORD.
- 3 And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The LORD hath not called thy

For thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends: and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it: ^e and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon,
- 5 and he shall slay them with the sword. Moreover I ^f will deliver all the strength of this city, and all the labours⁵ thereof, and all the precious things thereof, and all the treasures of the kings of Judah will I give into the hand of their enemies,

And thou, Pashur, and all that dwell in thine house, shall go into captivity: and thou shalt come to Babylon, and there thou shalt die, and shalt be buried there, thou, and all ^g thy friends, to whom thou hast ^h prophesied lies.
- 7 O LORD, thou hast deceived⁶ me, and I was deceived:
- ⁱ Thou art stronger than I, and hast prevailed:
- ^k I am in derision daily,—every one mocketh me.
- 8 For since⁷ I spake, I cried out, 'I cried violence and spoil; Because "the word of the LORD was made a reproach unto me, and a derision, daily.
- 9 Then I said, "I will not make mention of him,—nor speak any more in his name. But his word was in mine heart as a ^o burning fire shut up in my bones, And I was weary with forbearing, and ^p I could not stay.⁸
- 10 ^q For I heard the defaming of many, ^r fear on every side.⁹

- 12 But, O LORD of hosts, that ^a triest the righteous,—and seest the reins and the heart, ^b Let me see thy vengeance on them:—for unto thee have I opened my cause.

¹ See 2 Kings xxiii. 12, and note.

² The strokes and the torture which Pashur inflicted show his extreme malignity against Jeremiah. The 'stocks' were probably an instrument of torture, in which the neck, hands, and feet of the prisoner were so fastened as to hold the body in a painfully distorted position.

³ Probably the gate of the temple corresponding to the gate of Benjamin in the north wall of the city.

⁴ 'Pashur' is supposed to mean prosperity around. 'Magor-missabib' means terror on every side.

⁵ That is, all the possessions gained by labour.

⁶ Rather, 'allured,' as in Hos. ii. 14; or, 'persuaded,' as in Prov. xxv. 15. The following words should also be in the past tense: 'Thou wast stronger than I, and didst prevail.' Thy representations and urgent commands overcame my reluctance to undertake this office. See ch. i. 4—10.

⁷ Or, 'For, as often as I speak, I cry out on account of violence, and complain of oppression. The word of Jehovah [which I speak] is a reproach unto me,' etc.

⁸ I was tempted to renounce an office so unthankful and perilous; but then an inward impulse would not let me rest, and I was constrained to persevere. An overpowering sense of responsibility urges the faithful servant of God to deliver his message, even when it is unwelcome and severe, and though sinners, by rejecting it, aggravate their guilt and misery.

⁹ These words form exactly the name given to Pashur (see note on ver. 3); and their meaning here seems to be, that God's servant might appropriate the title rather than His enemy.

1 Vers. 14—18 have been thought to be out of place here, and to come in better after ver. 7. But in violent emotion the transitions of feeling are often great and sudden, particularly when personal interest appears to be in conflict with the urgent claims of duty. It should be remembered, that the feelings here expressed are not justified (compare Job iii., and note on ver. 1) : but this record of them shows the prophet's lively sensibility, whilst denouncing the most awful punishments.

2 Among the Orientals the birth of a son is communicated to the father by a special messenger, who receives a present for bringing good tidings. The birth of a daughter is almost unnoticed.

3 Whilst Nebuchadnezzar is besieging Jerusalem, Zedekiah sends to inquire whether he may look for that help which God had heretofore granted (vers. 1, 2). The prophet replies that God had determined to punish the nation (3—7), and that nothing could avert this punishment from the people but submission to the Chaldeans (8—10), or from the royal family and city but the exercise of justice (11—14). The chronological place of the chapter is probably after ch. xxxvii.

4 This is frequently written 'Nebuchadnezzar.' In some words the Hebrew dialect prefers 'n,' and the Aramaic 'r.' The latter, as might be expected, is in this case the nearer to the original form of the name, which has been found on some Babylonian cylinders.

5 This expression means, to escape with life, as a person does with plunder or spoil which he carries off with great risk and difficulty.

6 Rather, 'quickly.' See note on Ps. xlix. 14.

7 A description of Jerusalem, which was situated partly in a valley and partly on rocky hills ; so that the people thought it almost impregnable.

8 Ch. xxii. 1—xxiii. 8 refer particularly to the kings of Judah, requiring them to rule justly, with promises sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that 3 enter in by these gates: thus saith the LORD;

^s Execute ye judgment and righteousness,

And deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor:

And ^t do no wrong, do no violence—to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow,
Neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For if ye do this thing indeed,—^u then shall there enter in by the gates of this house
Kings sitting upon the throne of David,—riding in chariots and on horses,
He and his servants, and his people.

5 But if ye will not hear these words,

^x I swear by myself, saith the LORD,—^y that this house shall become a desolation.

6 For thus saith the LORD ^z unto the king's house of Judah;

Thou art Gilead unto me, and the head of Lebanon:

¹ Yet ^a surely I will make thee a wilderness,—and cities which are not inhabited. ¹

7 ^b And I will prepare destroyers against thee,—every one with his weapons:

And they shall cut down ^c thy choice cedars,—^d and cast them into the fire.

8 And many nations shall pass by this city,

And they shall say every man to his neighbour,

9 ^e Wherefore hath the LORD done thus unto this great city?—Then they shall answer,

^f Because they have forsaken the covenant of the LORD their God,

And worshipped other gods, and served them.

10 Weep ye not for ^g the dead,²—neither bemoan him:

But weep sore for him ^h that goeth away:³

For he shall return no more,—nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching ⁱ Shallum—the son of Josiah king of Judah,
Which reigned instead of Josiah his father,—^k which went forth out of this place;
He shall not return thither any more;

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive,
And shall see this land no more.

13 ^l Woe unto him ⁴ that buildeth his house by unrighteousness,
And his chambers by wrong;

^m That useth his neighbour's service without wages,

And giveth him not for his work;

14 That saith, I will build me a wide house—and large chambers,
And cutteth him out windows;

And ⁿ it is ceiled with cedar,—and painted with vermilion.⁵

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar?⁶

^o Did not thy father ^p eat and drink,—and do judgment and justice?

And then ^q it was well with him.

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy;—then it was well with him:

Was not this to know me?—saith the LORD.

17 ^r But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness,

And ^s for to shed innocent blood,—and for oppression, and for violence, to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD

Concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah;

^t They shall not lament for him, saying,—“Ah my brother!”⁷ or, Ah sister!

They shall not lament for him, saying,—Ah lord! or, Ah his glory!

19 ^x He shall be buried with the burial of an ass,

Drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

of the continuance and prosperity of the kingdom in case of obedience, and threats of the desolation of their city if their sins are persevered in (vers. 1—9); then declaring the doom of Shallum, or Jehoahaz, as a captive (10—12); also of the tyrannical and luxurious Jehoiakim (13—19), and the people whom he had encouraged in their indifference (20—23); and of his son Coniah or Jehoiachin (24—30). But Israel shall yet be gathered under Messiah's righteous rule (xxiii. 1—8).

¹ This may mean, Though for beauty thou (O royal palace) art like Gilead, and for majestic height like Lebanon, yet I will have thee desolated by invaders, as they have been. See 2 Kings x. 32, etc.

² Referring to Josiah, the pious and patriotic king of Judah, who died deeply lamented (see 2 Chron. xxxv. 24, 25), being spared the pain of seeing and sharing the disgrace and suffering of his country. See 2 Kings xxii. 20.

³ Probably Shallum; who, though a younger son of Josiah, was raised by the people to the throne under the name of Jehoahaz, but was soon carried captive into Egypt, never to return. See 2 Kings xxiii. 31—35.

⁴ That is, Jehoiakim the reigning prince; who is first described (vers. 13, 14), then addressed (15—17), and finally named (18).

⁵ The ancient vermilion was a bi-sulphuret of mercury.

⁶ Your father enjoyed what he needed, without all this pomp; and distinguished himself, not by his splendour, but by the justice of his government.

⁷ You shall not be lamented like your father; your corpse shall not be cared for more than that of an ass who dies on the road. Comp. ch. xxxvi. 30. Of the circumstances of Jehoiakim's death we have no record. Nebuchadnezzar appears to have designed to carry him to Babylon; but he probably died on the way. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6. ‘Ah sister’ may refer to the queen, and be either lamentation for or condolence with her.

- 20 Go up¹ to Lebanon, and cry;—and lift up thy voice in Bashan,
And cry from the passages:²—³for all thy lovers are destroyed.
- 21 ² I spake unto thee in thy prosperity.—But thou saidst, I will not hear.
^a This hath been thy manner from thy youth,—that thou obeyedst not my voice.
- 22 ^b The wind shall eat up³ all ^c thy pastors,—and ^d thy lovers shall go into captivity:
Surely then shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness.
- 23 O inhabitant of Lebanon,⁴—^e that makest thy nest in the cedars,
^f How gracious⁵ shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee,
^g The pain as of a woman in travail!
- 24 As I live, saith the LORD,
^h Though Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah ⁱ Were the signet upon my right hand,—yet would I pluck thee thence;
- 25 ^k And I will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life,
And into the hand of them whose face thou fearest,
Even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon,
And into the hand of the Chaldeans.
- 26 ^l And I will cast thee out,—and thy mother that bare thee,
Into another country, where ye were not born;—and there shall ye die.
- 27 But ^m to the land whereunto they desire to return,—thither shall they not return.
- 28 Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?⁶—Is he ⁿ a vessel wherein is no pleasure?
Wherefore are they cast out, he and ^o his seed,
And are cast into a land which they know not?
- 29 ^p O earth!⁷ earth! earth! hear the word of the LORD.
- 30 Thus saith the LORD,—Write ye this man ^q childless,⁸
A man that shall not prosper⁹ in his days:—for no man of his seed shall prosper, ^r Sitting upon the throne of David,—and ruling any more in Judah.
- 23 Woe ^s be unto the pastors¹⁰ that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture!
Saith the LORD.
- 2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel
Against the pastors that feed my people;
Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away,—^t and have not visited them:
^u Behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings,—saith the LORD.
- 3 And ^v I will gather the remnant of my flock
Out of all countries whither I have driven them,
And will bring them again to their folds;—and they shall be fruitful and increase.
- 4 And I will set up ^w shepherds over them which shall feed them:
And they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed,
^z Neither shall they be lacking,¹¹—saith the LORD.
- 5 Behold, ^a the days come, saith the LORD,
That I will raise unto David a righteous Branch,¹²
And a King shall reign and prosper,
^b And shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.
- 6 ^c In his days Judah shall be saved,—and Israel ^d shall dwell safely:
And ^e this is his name whereby he shall be called,
THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.¹³
- 7 Therefore, behold, ^f the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say,
The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;
- 8 But, The LORD liveth,

1 This is addressed to Jerusalem.

2 Rather, 'from Abarim.' See note on Numb. xxvii. 12.

3 Or, 'consume,' as a parching wind withers the grass.

4 Referring to ver. 6.

5 Rather, 'How pitiable!' what an object of pity!
But some explain the word to mean condescending, or submissive to good admonition, and to refer to the assumed appearance of humility, or piety, or mercy to their oppressed brethren.

6 Rather, 'broken vessel.' This is the inquiry of those who witness his degradation.

7 Or, 'O land.' The repetition is emphatic, as in ch.
vii. 4; Ezek. xxi. 27.

8 Not as a man, for he had children (see 1 Chron. iii.
17); but as a king, for none of his children became king,
'sitting upon the throne of David.' He was the furthest in descent from David, who reigned in Judah. The promise of the temporal kingdom is here abrogated.

9 He spent thirty-seven years in imprisonment; and though he was then liberated and treated kindly by Evil-merodach, he was retained to attend the court of a superior monarch (2 Kings xxv. 27–30).

10 The kings just mentioned, and their subordinate officers. With these are contrasted more righteous rulers
(ver. 4), and especially the King Messiah (5), the 'Good Shepherd' (John x. 11, 14). Here, as in similar passages in Isaiah, the return of the Jews to Canaan is but an introduction to a far greater work of salvation to be wrought by the Divine Redeemer.

11 For fulfilment of this by our Lord, see refs.

12 This name of the Messiah is evidently derived from Isa. iv. 2, on which see note. To comfort God's people under the tyranny of their kings, the debasement of their country, their sufferings from the Chaldeans, and the division and dispersion of their tribes, the prophet dwells upon the justice, prosperity, unity, and safety which shall be enjoyed under Messiah's reign.

13 This title is used here (as in Isa. lxii. 1, etc.) as one leading characteristic of that Divine salvation of which Christ is the Author.

Which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel
Out of the north country,¹ ^h and from all countries whither I had driven them;
And they shall dwell in their own land.

Reproofs and threatenings addressed to the false prophets.

- 9 ⁱ MINE heart within me is broken—^k because of the prophets;²
^l All my bones shake;
^m I am like a drunken³ man,—and like a man whom wine hath overcome,
Because of the LORD,—and because of the words of his holiness.
- 10 For ⁿ the land is full of adulterers;⁴
For ^o because of swearing⁵ ^p the land mourneth;
^q The pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up,
And their course is evil,—and their force is not right.⁶
- 11 For ^r both prophet and priest are profane;
Yea, ^s in my house have I found their wickedness,—saith the LORD.
- 12 ^t Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways ^u in the darkness:
They shall be driven on, and fall therein:—for I ^x will bring evil upon them,
Even the year of their visitation,—saith the LORD.
- 13 And⁷ I have seen folly ^y in the prophets of Samaria;
^z They prophesied in Baal, and ^a caused my people Israel to err:
I have seen also ^b in the prophets of Jerusalem an horrible thing:
^c They commit adultery, and ^d walk in lies:
They ^e strengthen also the hands of evildoers,
That none doth return from his wickedness:
They are all of them unto me as ^f Sodom,—and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.
- 15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts—concerning the prophets;
Behold, I will feed them with ^g wormwood,
And make them drink the water of gall:
For from the prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth into all the land.
- 16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts,
^h Harken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you:
ⁱ They make you vain:
^k They speak a vision of their own heart,—and not out of the mouth of the LORD.
- 17 They say still unto them that despise me,
The LORD hath said,—^l Ye shall have peace;
And they say unto every one that walketh after the imagination [or, stubbornness ^m] of his own heart,
ⁿ No evil shall come upon you.
- 18 For ^o who hath stood in the counsel [or, secret] of the LORD,
And hath perceived and heard his word?⁸
Who hath marked his word, and heard it?
- 19 Behold, a ^p whirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury,
Even a grievous whirlwind:—it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.
- 20 The ^q anger of the LORD shall not return,
Until he have executed, and till he have performed, the thoughts of his heart:
^r In the latter days⁹ ye shall consider it perfectly.
- 21 ^s I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran:
I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.
- 22 But if they had ^t stood in my counsel,—and had caused my people to hear my words,
Then they should have ^u turned them from their evil way,
And from the evil of their doings.
- 23 ^x Am I a God at hand, saith the LORD,—and not a God afar off?¹⁰
- 24 Can any ^y hide himself in secret places—that I shall not see him?—saith the LORD.
^z Do not I fill heaven and earth?—saith the LORD.

2 Rather, according to the Hebrew, 'Concerning the prophets (a title to the section). My heart within me is broken,—all my bones shake,' etc. Jeremiah, awake to the solemn responsibilities of his work, is deeply grieved at the profanity and deceit of the false prophets in Judah, who rival those of Samaria in their sins, and shall share their punishment (vers. 9—10).

3 That is, overpowered by my emotions.

4 See note on Numb. xiv. 33.

5 Or, 'because of the curse;' i.e. of Jehovah. See refs.

6 Perhaps, 'their power is not stable.' See the corresponding threat in ver. 12.

7 Rather, 'As I saw folly in the prophets of Samaria, etc.; so I have seen a horrible thing in the prophets of Jerusalem.'

8 That is, Who among these false prophets has been admitted to his confidence, and heard him declare his purposes? They are mere impostors.

9 The time 'of your visitation' (ver. 12). Experience will convince you of the truth of my predictions, and the falsehood of your own.

10 He who is everywhere present, and knows all things (vers. 23, 24), sees and knows the falsehood of these prophets (25, 26), and He can and will punish them (ver. 30, etc.)

- 25 ^a I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, ^b Saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed.
- 26 How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies?
 Yea, they are ^c prophets of the deceit of their own heart;
- 27 ^d Which think to cause my people to forget my name
 By their dreams which they tell every man to his neighbour, ^e As their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal.
- 28 The prophet that hath a dream,—let him tell a dream;
 And he that hath my word, ^f let him speak my word faithfully.¹
 What is the chaff to the wheat?—saith the LORD.
- 29 Is not my word ^g like as a fire?—saith the LORD;
 And like a hammer, that breaketh the rock in pieces?²
- 30 Therefore, behold, ^h I am against the prophets,—saith the LORD,
 That steal my words every one from his neighbour.³
- 31 Behold, I am against the prophets,—saith the LORD,
 That use [or, smooth ⁱ] their tongues, and say, ^k He saith.
- 32 Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams,—saith the LORD,
 And do tell them, and cause my people to err,
 By their lies, and by ^l their lightness;
 Yet I sent them not, nor commanded them:
^m Therefore they shall not profit this people at all,—saith the LORD.
- 33 And when this people, or the prophet, or a priest,—shall ask thee, saying,
 What is ⁿ the burden⁴ of the LORD?
 Thou shalt then say unto them,—What burden?
^o I will even forsake you,—saith the LORD.
- 34 And as for the prophet, and the priest, and the people,
 That shall say, The burden of the LORD,
 I will even punish that man and his house.
- 35 Thus shall ye say every one to his neighbour, and every one to his brother,
 What hath the LORD answered?—and, What hath the LORD spoken?
- 36 And the burden of the LORD shall ye mention no more:
^p For every man's word shall be his burden;
 For ye have perverted the words of the living God,—of the LORD of hosts our God.
- 37 Thus shalt thou say to the prophet,
 What hath the LORD answered thee?—and, What hath the LORD spoken?
- 38 But since ye say, The burden of the LORD;—therefore thus saith the LORD;
 Because ye say this word, The burden of the LORD,
 And I have sent unto you, saying,—Ye shall not say, The burden of the LORD;
- 39 Therefore, behold, I, even I, ^q will utterly forget you,
 And ^r I will forsake you,—and the city that I gave you and your fathers,
^s And cast you out of my presence:
- 40 And I will bring ^t an everlasting reproach upon you,
 And a perpetual shame, which shall not be forgotten.

¹ This may mean either, Let the false prophet tell his dreams, and let the true prophet faithfully declare God's word; and it will soon be seen which is chaff and which is wheat; for God's word has a mighty power (ver. 29): or, Let the prophet who has a dream or a message from God tell it truly; but let him not utter pretended prophecies, mixing chaff with wheat.

² These words may refer either to the state of the prophet's mind when under the influence of inspiration, or to the effect of the Divine communications on those to whom they were addressed.

³ Three species of deception practised by false prophets appear to be here specified: 1, They sometimes borrowed Divine oracles from the true prophets (ver. 30), and doubtless perverted them; 2, They delivered mere human utterances to the people as of Divine authority (31); 3, They invented dreams to give currency to their delusions (32).

⁴ This appears to be a scoffing play upon the Hebrew word (which means both 'a burden' and 'a prophecy'), taunting Jeremiah with announcing only grievous calamities. God will put an end to this profanity, making every such scoffing 'word' a 'burden' of woe to him who utters it (ver. 36).

⁵ Two baskets of figs of opposite qualities are employed to represent the different fates of those who have submitted to Nebuchadnezzar, and have been taken by him to Babylon, where they shall be blessed (vers. 1—7), and of those who, remaining in their own land or going to Egypt, meditate resistance to him (8—10). Compare ch. xxxvii.; 2 Kings xxiv. 12, 20; and note on 2 Chron. xxxvi. 20.

⁶ Probably as first-fruits to be offered to God. See Exod. xxiii. 19; Deut. xxvi. 2.

⁷ It is likely that the artisans were taken away partly for the service of the Chaldean monarch, and partly to deprive the Jews of the means of rebellion. See 1 Sam. xiii. 19, and note.

- 4 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel;—Like these good figs,
So will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah,
Whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans ^b for their good.³
6 For I will set mine eyes upon them for good,
And ^c I will bring them again to this land:
And ^d I will build them, and not pull them down;
And I will plant them, and not pluck them up.
7 And I will give them ^e an heart to know me,—that I am the LORD:
And they shall be ^f my people,—and I will be their God:
For they shall return unto me ^g with their whole heart.
8 And as the evil ^h figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil;
Surely thus saith the LORD,
ⁱ So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes,
And the residue of Jerusalem, that remain in this land,
And ^k them that dwell in the land of Egypt:⁴
9 And I will deliver them to ^l be removed Into all the kingdoms of the earth ^m for their hurt, ⁿ To be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt ^o and a curse,

- 25 ^q THE⁵ word that came to Jeremiah concerning all the people of Judah ^r in the fourth year⁶ of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that was the first year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; the which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,
3 ^s From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year,⁷ the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; ^t but ye have not hearkened. And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants⁸ the prophets,
4 ^u rising early⁹ and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear. They said, ^v Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given
5 unto you and to your fathers ^w for ever and ever: ^x and go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works
6 of your hands; and I will do you no hurt. Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might ^y provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.
7 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; Because ye have not heard my 8 words, behold, I will send and take ^z all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, ^a my servant,¹⁰ and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, ^b and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and ^c make

10 stones,¹¹ and the light of the candle. And this whole land shall be a desolation, ¹ The early figs were considered the best. There are three sorts of figs: the first, which is the fig here mentioned, comes to maturity about the middle or latter end of June; this is deemed a great delicacy. The summer or dry fig is ripe about August; and the winter fig not till November.

⁴ Either taken captive by Necho, or more probably fugitives from the Chaldeans.

⁵ The captivity awaiting the Jewish nation in Babylon is explicitly foretold, and its duration assigned (vers. 1—11). This chastisement of the Jews shall be followed by severer punishments of the Chaldeans and other heathen nations (12—14). As a symbol of this, the prophet is directed to take a cup of wrath, and hand it to different princes in succession (15—29); and, under the figure of a ravening lion, to show how inevitable and destructive is the anger of Jehovah (30—38).

⁶ This was the year in which Nebuchadnezzar, having defeated the Egyptians at Carchemish, came to Jerusalem, and imposed a tribute on king Jehoiakim. These events occurred about the end of the third and beginning of the fourth year of that king. See Dan. i. 1, and note.

¹ Considerable diversity of opinion exists as to the right manner of reckoning these seventy years; but it is most probable that they began when Nebuchadnezzar defeated the Egyptians at Carchemish and made Jehoiakim tributary, B. C. 605-6, and ended in the first year of Cyrus, B. C. 536, when Babylon ceased to be the capital of a kingdom. See notes on 2 Kings xxiv. 1; xxv. 11, and Chronological Table, p. 518.

Jeremiah predicts the destruction of the temple, and narrowly escapes death.

- 26 ^b IN⁴ the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah ² came this word from the LORD, saying, Thus saith the LORD; Stand in ^c the court of the LORD's house, and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in the LORD's house, ^d all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; ^e diminish not a word: ^f if so be they will hearken, and turn every which I have set before you, to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, ^k whom I sent unto you, both rising up early, and sending them, but ye have not hearkened; then will I make this house like ^l Shiloh,⁵ and will make this city ^m a curse to all the nations of the earth.

- 7 So the priests and the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.
- 8 Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that ⁿ the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die. Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the LORD.
- 10 When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up⁶ from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down in the entry of the new gate⁷ of the LORD's house. Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, This man is worthy to die;⁸ ^o for he hath that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: ^t for of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears.

- 16 Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets;
This man is not worthy to die;⁹ for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.
- 17 ^u Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly

² Or, 'peaceable sheep-folds.'

³ Or, 'the fierceness of the destroying sword.'

⁴ Jeremiah, standing in the temple, threatens it with destruction like that of the former sanctuary at Shiloh (vers. 1—7); at which the priests and prophets are so irritated, that they excite some of the people to put him to death (8, 9). But, by the interposition of the princes (10—16), and by the remonstrances of some of the elders, the prophet is saved (17—24).

⁵ See note on ch. vii. 12. It is a probable supposition that this narrative is to be connected with that chapter.

⁶ The princes, hearing of the tumult, came to the temple to bring the matter to a regular trial.

⁷ Perhaps a gate recently repaired: see 2 Kings xv. 35.

⁸ For a similar charge of constructive blasphemy, see Acts vi. 11—13.

⁹ There is a striking resemblance between this trial and that of our Lord before Pilate, as to the nature of the charge, the malignity of the priests, and the declaration of his innocence by the civil magistrate.

¹⁰ See Micah iii. 12, and notes.

LORD of hosts; ^y Zion shall be plowed like a field, and ^z Jerusalem shall become 19 heaps, and ^a the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest. Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? ^b did he not fear the LORD, and besought the LORD, and the LORD ^c repented him of the evil which he had pronounced against them? ^d Thus might we procure great evil against our souls.

20 And ¹ there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and 21 against this land according to all the words of Jeremiah: And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, ^e he was afraid, and 22 fled, and went into Egypt. And Jehoiakim the king sent men into Egypt, namely, Elnathan the son of Achbor, and certain men with him into Egypt.
23 And they fetched forth Urijah out of Egypt, and brought him unto Jehoiakim the king; ^f who slew him with the sword, and cast his dead body into the graves of the common people.²

24 Nevertheless ^g the hand of Ahikam the son of Shaphan was with Jeremiah, ^h that they should not give him into the hand of the people to put him to death.

The Jews and neighbouring nations are commanded to submit to Nebuchadnezzar; the false prophet Hananiah, contradicting Jeremiah, is threatened with punishment.

27 IN ³ the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim ⁴ the son of Josiah ⁱ king of Judah
2 came this word unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, Thus saith the LORD to 3 me; ^k Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck, ^l and send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers 4 which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah; and command them to say unto their masters, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Thus 5 shall ye say unto your masters; ^m I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and 6 ⁿ have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me. ^o And now have I given all these lands into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, ^p my servant;
7 and ^q the beasts ⁵ of the field have I given him also to serve him. ^r And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, ^s until the very time of his land come: ^t and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves ⁶ 8 of him. And it shall come to pass ^u that the nation and kingdom which will not serve the same Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, and that will not put their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, that nation will I punish, saith the LORD, with the sword, and with the famine, and with the pestilence, until I have consumed them by his hand.

9 Therefore ^v hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners, ⁷ nor to your dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, 10 saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon: ^y for they prophesy a lie unto you, ^z to remove you far from your land, ^a and that I should drive you out, and 11 ye should perish. But the nations that bring their neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him, ^b those will I let remain still in their own land, saith the LORD; and they shall till it, and dwell therein.

12 I spake also to ^c Zedekiah king of Judah according to all these words, saying, ^d Bring your necks under the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serve him and 13 his people, and live. ^e Why will ye die, thou and thy people, ^f by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence, as the LORD hath spoken against the nation

¹ Vers. 20—23 may be a speech of the enemies of Jeremiah, adducing a recent case in opposition to the former. But it is more probable that they contain a statement (added when the prophecies were arranged in their present form) of a similar case of persecution during the reign of the same king; which is mentioned to show that Jeremiah was in imminent danger of falling a victim to the anger of his enemies. From this, however, he was saved by the kindness of an influential man (ver. 24) whose father had probably been the royal secretary (2 Kings xxii. 12—14).

² That is, they treated even the corpse with indignity; not allowing it an honourable burial.

(vers. 1—11). He also addresses Zedekiah and the Jewish people to the same purport (12—15); and bids those who oppose his predictions to pray for the preservation of the sacred vessels remaining in the temple, and to see whether they will prevail (16—22). One of these false prophets contradicts his message (xxviii. 1—4); upon which Jeremiah refers him to ancient prophecies of calamity already in part fulfilled (5—9); but as Hananiah persists in his falsehood, and breaks the yoke which the prophet wears, Jeremiah repeats the prediction, and adds a personal threatening against Hananiah, which is speedily fulfilled (10—17).

⁴ This reading, though very ancient, is clearly an error in copying, and the name should be 'Zedekiah.' See vers. 3, 12, and ch. xxviii. 1.

- 12 Then the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah ^{the prophet}, after that Hananiah the prophet had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Letter to the Jewish captives at Babylon; with threatenings against false prophets.

29 NOW³ these are the words of the letter that Jeremiah the prophet sent from Jerusalem unto the residue of the elders which were carried away captives, and to the priests, and to the prophets, and to all the people whom Nebuchadnezzar 2 had carried away captive from Jerusalem to Babylon; (after that ^h Jeconiah the king, and the queen, and the eunuchs [or, chamberlains], the princes of Judah and Jerusalem, and the carpenters, and the smiths, were departed from Jerusalem:)
 3 by the hand of Elasah the son of Shaphan, and Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, unto all that are carried away captives, ⁱ whom I have caused to be carried away from Jerusalem unto Babylon;
 5 ^k Build ye houses,⁴ and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of 6 them; take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters; and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; 7 that ye may be increased there, and not diminished. ^l And seek the peace of the city⁵ whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, ^m and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, ⁿ deceive you, neither hearken to your 9 dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.⁶ ^o For they prophesy falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD.

10 For thus saith the LORD, that after ^p seventy years be accomplished at Babylon ^q I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to 11 return to this place. For ^r I know the ^s thoughts that I think toward you, saith 12 the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end.⁷ Then shall ye ^t call upon me, and ye shall go⁸ and pray unto me, and I will hearken 13 unto you. And ^u ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me 14 ^v with all your heart. And ^w I will be found of you, saith the LORD: and I will turn away your captivity, and ^x I will gather you from all the nations, and from all the places whither I have driven you, saith the LORD; and I will bring you again into the place whence I caused you to be carried away captive.

 16 know that thus saith the LORD, of ^y the king that sitteth upon the throne of David, and of all the people that dwelleth in this city, and of your brethren 17 that are not gone forth with you into captivity; thus saith the LORD of hosts;
 Behold, I will send upon them the ^z sword, the famine, and the pestilence, and will make them like ^a vile figs, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.
 18 And I will persecute them with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence, and ^b will deliver them to be removed to all the kingdoms of the earth, to be ^c a curse, and an astonishment, and an hissing, and a reproach, 19 among all the nations whither I have driven them: ^d because they have not hearkened to my words, saith the LORD, which ^e I sent unto them by my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them; but ye would not hear, saith the LORD.

20 Hear ye therefore the word of the LORD, all ye of the captivity, ^f whom I

¹ Leading the people to neglect God's warnings and injunctions, by persuading them that his declarations will not be accomplished.

² In the second month after his doom had been denounced: compare ver. 1.

³ As the captives already in Babylon, like their brethren at home, were exposed to the delusions of false prophets, Jeremiah is directed to send them a letter, commanding them to settle peaceably in the land of their exile (vers. 1—7), and not to listen to deceivers (8, 9); for, after seventy years, Jehovah will bring them back (10—14); whereas their brethren remaining in Canaan have yet to suffer the severest punishments (15—19). He is then to announce the fearful doom of two of the false prophets who had deceived them (20—23); and to threaten Shemaiah for writing to Jerusalem to accuse him (24—32).

⁴ Expecting soon to return to their own country, the captives seem to have neglected their personal and social duties and interests in Chaldea.

⁵ Though you are unwilling exiles in a foreign land, discharge the duties of good subjects and citizens.

⁶ Namely, by making inquiries of these prophets, and giving credit to their responses.

⁷ Literally, 'a hereafter and an expectation;' i. e. a happy termination of your calamities equal to your highest hopes. These promises extend far beyond the return of the Jews from Babylon.

⁸ That is, ye shall go to the places of prayer.

prophecy a lie unto you in my name; Behold, I will deliver them into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon; and he shall slay them before your eyes; ²² and of them shall be taken up a curse by all the captivity of Judah which are in Babylon, saying, The LORD make thee like Zedekiah and like Ahab, ²³ whom the king of Babylon roasted¹ in the fire; because 'they have committed villany in Israel, and have committed adultery with their neighbours' wives, and have spoken lying words in my name, which I have not commanded them; ^m even I know, and am a witness, saith the LORD.

^{24, 25} Thus shalt thou also speak to Shemaiah the Nehelamite,² saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Because thou hast sent letters in thy name unto all the people that are at Jerusalem, ⁿ and to Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, and to all the priests, saying, The LORD hath made thee priest in the stead of³ Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be ^o officers in the house of the LORD, for every man that is ^p mad, and maketh himself a prophet,⁴ that thou shouldest ^q put him in prison, and in the stocks. Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you? For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: ^r build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

^{30, 31} Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the LORD, concerning Shemaiah the Nehelamite; Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, ^s and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie: therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, 'I will punish Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and his seed: ^t he shall not have a man to dwell among this people; neither shall he behold ^u the good that I will do for my people, saith the LORD; ^v because he hath taught rebellion against the LORD.

Promises of the deliverance and restoration of Israel; and of a new spiritual and everlasting covenant.

³⁰ THE word⁵ that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, ³ ^y Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book. For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that ^z I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the LORD: ^a and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it. And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

⁵ For thus saith the LORD;

^b We have heard⁶ a voice of trembling,—of fear, and not of peace.

⁶ Ask ye now, and see, whether a man doth travail with child? Wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, ^c as a woman in travail, And all faces are turned into paleness?

⁷ ^d Alas! for that day is great,⁷—^e so that none is like it: It is even the time of Jacob's trouble.—^f But he shall be saved out of it.

⁸ For it shall come to pass in that day—saith the LORD of hosts, That ^g I will break his yoke⁸ from off thy neck,—and will burst thy bonds, ¹ That the Chaldeans were accustomed to inflict this cruel punishment is evident from Dan. iii. 6, 20.

² Nothing more is known of this person.

⁴ That is, for every one who madly takes on himself to be a prophet, and delivers his own fancies as Divine oracles.

⁵ Chapters xxx., xxxi. were not originally a spoken, but a written prophecy (vers. 1—4); and may be regarded as parallel with the later part of the book of Isaiah, many of whose predictions are here almost verbally repeated, though in new combinations and with important additions. The prophet may have written these chapters before Jerusalem was destroyed; but he takes his stand near the end of the captivity. To calm the terrors of God's people in the view of approaching judgments (5—7), the prophet assures them that these shall end in their deliverance and restoration (8—11), however grievous their chastisements may be (12—15); so that, whilst their oppressors are punished, they shall again enjoy all social and religious blessings under the rule of their rightful Prince

(16—24). This salvation, the result of God's unchangeable love, shall include all Israel (xxxi. 1—3); for all shall be brought back, even from the remotest distance, shall unite in the worship of Jehovah, mingling penitence with praise, and shall share the abundant gifts of his love (4—14). God remembers their tears, and will dry them up; for they sorrow to repentance, and his heart yearns towards his children (15—20). Let them, then, prepare for their return; for God's power will certainly accomplish it, and will repeople the wasted land (21—28). But all this shall be done under a new covenant, personal (29, 30), spiritual (31—34), and everlasting (35—37); and a New Jerusalem shall be built for those who are thus fitted to inhabit it (38—40). It is evident that here, as in the corresponding prophecies of Isaiah, the restoration of Israel and Judah is referred to as foreshadowing the greater blessings of the gospel.

⁷ That is, an important and terrible crisis.

⁸ The yoke of the king of Babylon.

- And strangers shall no more serve themselves of him :
- 9 But they shall serve the LORD their God,
And ^h David their king,¹ whom I will ⁱ raise up unto them.
- 10 Therefore ^k fear thou not, O my servant Jacob,—saith the LORD;
Neither be dismayed, O Israel :
For, lo, I will save thee from afar,—and thy seed ^l from the land of their captivity;
And Jacob shall return,^m and shall be in rest, and be quiet,
And none shall make him afraid.
- 11 ⁿ For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee :
^o Though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee,
^p Yet will I not make a full end of thee :
But I will correct thee ^q in measure,²
And will not leave thee altogether unpunished.
- 12 For thus saith the LORD,
^r Thy bruise is incurable,—and thy wound is grievous.
- 13 ^s There is none to plead thy cause, that thou mayest be bound up :
^t Thou hast no healing medicines.
- 14 ^u All thy lovers have forgotten thee ;—they seek thee not ;
For I have wounded thee with the wound ^x of an enemy,
With the chastisement ^y of a cruel one,
For the multitude of thine iniquity ;—^z because thy sins were increased.
- 15 Why ^a criest thou for thine affliction ?
^b Thy sorrow is incurable for the multitude of thine iniquity :
^c Because thy sins were increased, I have done these things unto thee.
- 16 Therefore³ all they that devour thee ^d shall be devoured ;
And all thine adversaries, every one of them, shall go into captivity ;
And they that spoil thee shall be a spoil,
And all that prey upon thee will I give for a prey.
- 17 ^e For I will restore health unto thee,—and I will heal thee of thy wounds,
Saith the LORD ;—^f because they called thee an Outcast, saying,
This is Zion, whom no man seeketh after.
- 18 Thus saith the LORD ;
Behold, ^g I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents,
And ^h have mercy on his dwellingplaces ;
ⁱ And the city shall be builded upon her own heap,
And ^k the palace shall remain after the manner thereof.⁴
- 19 And ^l out of them shall proceed thanksgiving
And the voice of them that make merry :
^m And I will multiply them—and they shall not be few ;
ⁿ I will also glorify them—and they shall not be small.
- 20 Their children also shall be ^o as aforetime,⁵
And their congregation shall be established—before me, ^p And I will punish all that oppress them.
- 21 And ^q their nobles shall be of themselves,
^r And their governor shall proceed from the midst of them ;⁶
And I will ^s cause him to draw near, and he shall approach unto me :
For who is this that engaged his heart to approach unto me ?—saith the LORD.
- 22 And ye shall be ^t my people,—and I will be your God.
- 23 Behold, the ^u whirlwind of the LORD goeth forth with fury,
A continuing whirlwind : it shall fall with pain upon the head of the wicked.⁷
- 24 ^x The fierce anger of the LORD shall not return, until he hath done it,
And until he have performed the intents of his heart :
^y In the latter days ye shall consider it.

¹ As the Jews have never since their return from Babylon had a king named David, nor indeed any king, this must refer to the Messiah, to whom the Targum applies it. He is called David, not only because He was 'of the seed of David according to the flesh,' but because in Him the promises made to David, of which his prosperous reign was a pledge and shadow, are fulfilled to God's people.

² Rather, 'to justice,' i. e. as is right.

³ As the wound was incurable, because it was Jehovah's determination to chastise Israel (vers. 12—15) ; so the restoration could not be hindered, because he had purposed it.

⁴ Rather, 'And the city shall be built on its hill, and the palace shall be inhabited on its place,' or, 'according to its custom,' i. e. as of old. All shall be restored, from the tent to the palace.

⁵ As they were in the prosperous days of David. See note on ver. 9.

⁶ Rather, 'And his Prince shall be from himself, and his Ruler shall come forth from his midst.' This also evidently must refer to the Messiah, as the restored Jews were no more governed by a ruler of their own nation in Canaan than in Babylon, where they appear to have had a 'Prince of the captivity.'

⁷ See ch. xxiii. 19. The judgment which was there denounced against sinners in Israel is here threatened to Israel's enemy.

- 31 At ^z the same time, saith the LORD,
^a Will I be the God ^b of all the families of Israel,—and they shall be my people.
 2 Thus saith the LORD,—^c The people which were left of the sword ^d Found grace in the wilderness; ¹—even Israel,—when ^e I went to cause him to rest.
 3 The LORD hath appeared of old unto me, saying,
 Yea, ^f I have loved thee with ^g an everlasting love:
 Therefore with lovingkindness have I ^h drawn thee.²
 4 Again ⁱ I will build thee,—and thou shalt be built,—^k O virgin of Israel:
 Thou shalt again be adorned with thy ^l tabrets,
 And shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.
 5 ^m Thou shalt yet plant vines upon ⁿ the mountains of Samaria:
 The planters shall plant, and shall eat them as common things.
 6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen³ ^o upon the mount Ephraim shall cry,
^p Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion—unto the LORD our God.
 7 For thus saith the LORD;
^q Sing with gladness for Jacob,—and shout among the chief⁴ of the nations:
 Publish ye, praise ye, and say,—^r O LORD, save thy people, ^s the remnant of Israel.
 8 Behold, I will bring them ^t from the north country,
 And ^u gather them from the coasts of the earth,
^x And with them the blind and the lame,
 The woman with child and her that travaileth with child together:⁵
 A great company shall return thither.
 9 ^y They shall come with weeping,—and with ^z supplications will I lead them:
 I will cause them to walk ^a by the rivers of waters
^b In a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble:
 For I am a father to Israel,—and Ephraim is my ^c firstborn.
 10 Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations,
^d And declare it in the isles afar off, and say,
^e He that scattered Israel ^f will gather him,
 And keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.
 11 For ^g the LORD hath redeemed Jacob,
 And ransomed him ^h from the hand of him that was stronger than he.
 12 Therefore ⁱ they shall come and sing in ^k the height of Zion,
 And shall flow together to ^l the goodness of the LORD,
^m For wheat, and for wine, and for oil,
 And for the young of the flock and of the herd:
 And their soul shall be as a ⁿ watered garden;
^o And they shall not sorrow any more at all.
 13 ^p Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance,—both young men and old together:
^q For I will turn their mourning into joy,
 And will comfort them,—and make them rejoice from their sorrow.
 14 ^r And I will satiate the soul of the priests⁶ with fatness,
 And my people shall be satisfied with ^s my goodness,—saith the LORD.
 15 Thus saith the LORD;
^t A voice was heard in ^u Ramah,⁷—lamentation, and bitter weeping;
 Rachel weeping for ^x her children
 Refused to be comforted for her children,—because ^y they were not.
 16 Thus saith the LORD;
^z Refrain thy voice from weeping,—and thine eyes from tears:
^a For thy work shall be rewarded,⁸—saith the LORD;
 And ^b they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

¹ The 'wilderness' may perhaps mean the land of exile; for this would be as a wilderness to those who pined for their own land, which they are here assured they shall revisit. But it is more probable that the reference is to the ancient mercies of God. As, notwithstanding the people's provocations, which led to the destruction of a whole generation by the sword of God's justice, he brought those who escaped safely to the rest of Canaan; so (ver. 4) will he build Israel again, etc. Compare Isa. xliii. 16; xlv. 27, and note.

² Rather, 'Therefore have I prolonged mercy to thee.'

³ Probably persons stationed upon the mountains to proclaim the festival. See Isa. lii. 7, 8. The proclamation of the feasts in Zion by watchmen on Mount Ephraim indicates the removal of former enmities and jealousies between Ephraim and Judah. Compare Isa. xi. 13.

⁴ That is, Israel now restored to its pre-eminence.

⁵ None shall be left behind, not even those who appear to be most unfit to undertake the journey.

⁶ This refers to the abundance of offerings, the fat of which would be the priests' share.

⁷ By a beautiful figure, Rachel is introduced as mourning in her grave near Ramah (Gen. xxxv. 16; 1 Sam. ix. 6; x. 2) over the destruction of her descendants, the people of Ephraim and Benjamin; but she is comforted by the promise of their return (vers. 16, 17). Comp. Isa. xlix. 20, 21. The language, being figurative, is susceptible of other applications, and is used in Matt. ii. 18 to describe the grief caused by Herod's cruelty.

⁸ The meaning may be either, Thy sorrow shall be compensated; or, Thou shalt not have brought forth and brought up children in vain.

- 17 And ^c there is hope in thine end,¹—saith the LORD,
That thy children shall come again to their own border.
- 18 ^d I have surely heard ^e Ephraim bemoaning himself thus;
^f Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised,
As a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke:
^g Turn thou me,² and I shall be turned;—^h for thou art the LORD my God.
- 19 Surely ⁱ after that I was turned, I repented;
And after that I was instructed, ^k I smote upon my thigh:³
^l I was ashamed, yea, even confounded,
Because ^m I did bear the reproach of my youth.⁴
- 20 ⁿ Is Ephraim my dear son?—is he a pleasant child?
For since I spake against⁵ him,—^o I do earnestly remember him still:
^p Therefore my bowels are troubled for him;
^q I will surely have mercy upon him,—saith the LORD.
- 21 ^r Set thee up waymarks,—make thee high heaps:⁶
^s Set thine heart toward the highway,—even the way which thou wentest:
Turn again, 'O virgin of Israel,—^t turn again to these thy cities.
- 22 How long wilt thou ^u go about,—O thou ^v backsliding daughter?
For the LORD hath created a new thing in the earth,
A woman shall compass a man.⁷
- 23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel;
As yet they shall use this speech—in the land of Judah and in the cities thereof,
When I shall bring again their captivity;
^z The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice,—and ^a mountain of holiness.
- 24 And there shall dwell in Judah itself, and ^b in all the cities thereof together, Husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.
- 25 ^c For I have satiated the weary soul,—and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.
- 26 Upon this I awaked,⁸ and beheld;—and my sleep was sweet unto me.
- 27 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD,
That ^d I will sow the house of Israel and the house of Judah
With the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.
- 28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have ^e watched over them,
^f To pluck up, and to break down,
And to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict;
So will I watch over them,—^g to build, and to plant,—saith the LORD.
- 29 ^h In those days they shall say no more,
The fathers have eaten a sour grape,—and the children's teeth are set on edge.⁹
- 30 ⁱ But every one shall die for his own iniquity:
Every man that eateth the sour grape,—his teeth shall be set on edge.
- 31 Behold, the ^k days come, saith the LORD,—that I will make a new covenant¹⁰
With the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:
- 32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers
In the day that ^l I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt;
^m Which my covenant they brake,
Although I was ⁿ an husband unto them,¹¹—saith the LORD:
- 33 ^o But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel;
After those days, saith the LORD,

² The language of genuine humility and self-knowledge, which always regards real conversion as a work requiring Divine aid.

³ Among the Hebrews, Persians, Greeks, and other nations, smiting on the thigh was a common mode of expressing indignation and grief. See Ezek. xxi. 12.

⁴ The reproach brought upon me by sins committed in my youth.

⁵ Or, 'as often as I speak of him.'

⁶ Or, 'poles;' i. e. to mark the way for the exiles to return through the deserts.

⁷ The most natural interpretation of this phrase is, 'Woman shall protect man;' i. e. there shall be such a state of tranquillity and freedom from alarm, that the weaker sex will be a sufficient guard, instead of looking for protection to the stronger. Calvin, however, remarks upon it, 'As the prophet compares man with woman, I cannot doubt that he meant the Israelites, who were like women, i. e. were without strength, were destitute of all help; and he says that they shall be superior to their enemies, whose power was able to strike terror into the whole world.'

⁸ This is probably inserted to keep the reader in mind that all these bright prospects were presented in vision to the prophet, and would certainly be fulfilled.

⁹ A proverbial expression (see refs.), the meaning of which appears from Lam. v. 7.

¹⁰ Vers. 31—34 are a clear announcement that the old Jewish economy, and especially its relative and hereditary provisions (see vers. 29, 30), would be superseded by one of a personal and spiritual character; and they are accordingly quoted for this purpose in Heb. viii. 8—12. In the connection in which they stand here, they predict not only the gospel covenant, but also the enjoyment of its blessings by the Hebrew race. Comp. Rom. xi. 25—32.

¹¹ Many follow the Septuagint in rendering these words, 'for I rejected them.' See note on ch. iii. 14.

- 32 THE⁵ word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD ^k in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar.
 2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up ^l in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's 3 house. For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, ^m Behold, I will give this city into the 4 hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it; and Zedekiah king of Judah ⁿ shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, 5 and his eyes shall behold his eyes; and he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be ^o until I visit⁶ him, saith the LORD: ^p though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.
 6, 7 And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Behold Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field⁷ that is in ^q Anathoth: for the ^r right of redemption is thine to buy it.
 8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me ^s in the court of the prison according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance

¹ There will not be a mere slavish punctiliousness in the observance of ceremonies; but the knowledge, love, and zealous fulfilment of God's commands. Compare Ezek. xi. 19, etc.; John iv. 23.

² The laws which regulate these bodies.

⁵ The ruin which the Jews have brought upon their city by rejecting God's commands and imprisoning his prophet is just at hand (vers. 1—5); yet, to show that God will restore them, Jeremiah by his direction buys an estate at Anathoth (6—15). The prophet takes occasion from this humbly to lay the case of the people before him (16—25); upon which God vindicates the severity of his chastisement, but adds a fresh promise of restoration (26—44); which He subsequently enlarges, announcing the pardon, purification, and blessedness of the restored people (ch. xxxiii. 1—9); the renewal of social and religious enjoyments (10, 11), and of wealth and prosperity (12, 13); and, above all, the advent of the long-promised 'Branch of righteousness,' who shall unite and perpetuate the royal and priestly functions (14—18): and He declares that all this is as sure as the recurrence of day and night (19—26). These transactions occurred during the last siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, only a few months before it was taken.

⁶ This word is used sometimes in a favourable sense (see ch. xxvii. 22), sometimes the contrary (see ch. v. 9). Here it means simply, 'until I shall visit him with death.' He died in peace at Babylon: see ch. xxxiv. 5.

⁷ Though the Levites (including the priests) could not hold other land, they possessed the suburbs of their cities (see Numb. xxxv. 4); which, however, could not be alienated, as other town property might (Lev. xxv. 32—34). But this transaction was merely a transfer from one member of a family to another, as in Ruth iv.

is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. Then I knew that 9 this was the word of the LORD. And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and 'weighed¹ him the money, even seventeen shekels 10 of silver. And I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, "and took witnesses, 11 and weighed him the money in the balances. So I took the evidence² of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that 12 which was open: and I gave the evidence of the purchase unto *Baruch³ the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the ^ywitnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, 13 before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison. And I charged Baruch 14 before them, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel,⁴ that they may continue many 15 days. For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards ^zshall be possessed again in this land.

16 Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son 17 of Neriah, "I prayed unto the LORD, saying, Ah Lord God! behold, ^bthou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and 18 'there is nothing too hard for thee: thou showest ^dlovingkindness unto thousands,
 'and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children 19 after them: the Great, ^fthe Mighty God, ^gthe LORD of hosts, is his name, ^hgreat in counsel, and mighty in work: for thine ⁱeyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men: ^kto give every one according to his ways, and according to the 20 fruit of his doings:⁵ ^lwhich hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee ^ma 21 name, as at this day; and ⁿhast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a 22 stretched out arm, and with great terror; and hast given them this land, ^owhich thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, ^pa land flowing with milk and 23 honey; and they came in, and possessed it; but ^qthey obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law; they have done nothing of all that thou commandedst 24 them to do: ^rtherefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them. Behold the ^smounts,⁶ they are come unto the city to take it; and the city 'is given into the hand of the Chaldeans, that fight against it, because of ^tthe sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken is come to pass; 25 and, behold, thou seest it. ^xAnd thou hast said unto me, O Lord God, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; for ^ythe city is given into the hands of the Chaldeans.

26, 27 Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, Behold, I am the 28 LORD, the ^zGod of all flesh: ^ais there any thing too hard for me? Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^bI will give this city into the hand of the Chal-deans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take 29 it: and the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and ^cset fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, ^dupon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink offerings unto other gods, to provoke 30 me to anger. For the children of Israel and the children of Judah ^ehave only done evil before me from their youth: for the children of Israel have only pro-31 voked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD. ^fFor this city hath been to me, as a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it⁷ even unto this day; ^gthat I should remove it from 32 before my face, because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, ^hthey, their kings, their

1 The Jews do not appear to have had a national coinage before the exile; but they made use of pieces of silver of a certain weight, called shekels. The purchase-money of this property did not exceed £2 sterling. The field itself may have been small; and its value was diminished by its being then in the possession of the Chaldeans: but in this case Jeremiah was probably expected to pay nothing more than the difference in value between a contingent and an absolute reversion.

2 This is the first record of the use of written documents in the purchase of land; and it shows a near approach to the caution and completeness of similar modern transactions. The deed, being duly signed by the contracting parties and by witnesses, was sealed up, that it might be carefully preserved; while an 'open' copy was made for occasional reference.

3 Baruch appears to have been of a noble family, a friend and helper of Jeremiah on various occasions in his public ministry (see ch. xxxvi., xliii.), and honoured by a special promise of Divine protection (see ch. xlv.)

4 That they might be safely buried in the earth: a frequent mode of securing valuable things in the East.

5 The infinite wisdom and power which the Creator has displayed in his works is exercised by Him also, as the Governor of all, in discerning and rewarding his creatures according to their doings.

6 These were works raised by the besiegers, partly to cover their engines, and partly to elevate the soldiers to a level with the battlements of the city.

7 Solomon, who completed the city of Jerusalem, introduced into it that idolatry which afterwards caused its ruin. See 1 Kings xi. 4.

princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. And they have turned unto me the ⁱback, and not the face: though I taught them, ^krising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction. But they ^lset their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it. And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to ^mcause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto ⁿMolech; ^owhich I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin.

And now therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, ^pIt shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence; Behold, I will ^qgather them out of all countries, whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them ^rto dwell safely: and they shall be ^smy people, and I will be their God: and I will ^tgive them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: and ^u"I will make an everlasting covenant with them, ^vthat I will not turn away from them, to do them good; but ^wI will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. Yea, ^xI will rejoice over them to do them good, and ^yI will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul.

For thus saith the LORD; ^bLike as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them. And ^cfields shall be bought in this land, ^dwhereof ye say, It is desolate without man or beast; it is given into the hand of the Chaldeans. ^eMen shall buy fields for money, and subscribe evidences, and seal them, and take witnesses in ^fthe land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, and in the ^gcities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south: for ^hI will cause their captivity to return, saith the LORD.

33 MOREOVER the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time, while he was yet ⁱshut up in the court of the prison, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD the ^jmaker ²thereof,
The LORD that formed it, to establish it;

^kThe LORD [or, JEHOVAH] is his name;

3 ^lCall unto me, and I will answer thee,

^mAnd show thee great and ⁿmighty ³things,—which thou knowest not.

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel,—concerning the houses of this city, And concerning the houses of the kings of Judah,

Which are thrown down by ^othe mounts,—and by the sword;

5 ^pThey come to fight with the Chaldeans,

But it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, ⁴

Whom I have slain in mine anger and in my fury,

And for all whose wickedness ^qI have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, ^rI will bring it health and cure,—and I will cure them, And will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And ^sI will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, And will build them, ^tas at the first.

8 And I will ^ucleanse them from all their iniquity,

Whereby they have sinned against me;

And I will ^vpardon all their iniquities,—whereby they have sinned, And whereby they have transgressed against me.

9 ^wAnd it ⁵shall be to me a name of joy,

A praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth,

Which shall hear all the good that I do unto them:

And they shall ^xfear and tremble

For all the goodness and for all the prosperity—that I procure unto it.

10 Thus saith the LORD;—Again there shall be heard in this place,

^yWhich ye say shall be desolate—without man and without beast,

Even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem,

That are desolate, without man,—and without inhabitant, and without beast,

To ^q offer burnt offerings,—and to kindle meat offerings,
And to do sacrifice continually.
- 19 And the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, saying,
20 Thus saith the LORD ;
^r If ye can break my covenant of the day,—and ' my covenant of the night,
And that there should not be day and night in their season ;
- 21 Then may also ' my covenant be broken with David my servant
^s That he should not have a son to reign upon his throne ;
And with the Levites the priests, my ministers.
- 22 As ^t the host of heaven cannot be numbered,
Neither the sand of the sea measured :
^u So will I multiply the seed of David my servant,
And the Levites that minister unto me.⁴
- 23 Moreover the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, saying,
24 Considerest thou not what this people have spoken, saying,
^z The two families⁵ which the LORD hath chosen,—^a he hath even cast them off ?
^b Thus they have despised my people,
That they should be no more a nation before them.
- 25 Thus saith the LORD ;—If ' my covenant⁶ be not with day and night,
And if I have not ^d appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth ;
- 26 ' Then will I cast away the seed of Jacob,—and David my servant,
So that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers
Over the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob :
For ^f I will cause their captivity to return, ^g and have mercy on them.

1 A formula of praise. See Ps. cxxxvi.

2 That is, descriptively, and supplying the substantive verb, 'The Lord is our righteousness.' The city is thus honoured with an appellation derived from her Divine King: see ch. xxiii. 6.

3 The functions of the ancient kings and priests are here employed to illustrate the offices and work of the Messiah. Compare Heb. vii.—ix., x. 1—18; and see notes on Isa. iv. 2; lv. 3, 4.

4 'The seed of David' and 'the Levites' are evidently the children or attendants of the Royal Priest; that is, true believers in Christ, who are described in the New Testament as 'kings and priests' (1 Pet. ii. 5; Rev. i. 6).

5 Meaning, perhaps, the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah; but more probably, the royal and sacerdotal families of David and Levi.

6 The invariableness of natural phenomena should sustain our faith in the promises of God.

- 2 Thus saith¹ the LORD, the God of Israel; 'Go and speak to Zedekiah king of Judah, and tell him, Thus saith the LORD; Behold, ^mI will give this city into 3 the hand of the king of Babylon, and ⁿhe shall burn it with fire: and ^othou shalt not escape out of his hand, but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand; ^pand thine eyes shall behold² the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth, and thou shalt go to Babylon.
- 4 Yet hear the word of the LORD, O Zedekiah king of Judah; Thus saith the 5 LORD of thee, Thou shalt not die by the sword: but thou shalt die in peace:³ and with ^qthe burnings of thy fathers, the former kings which were before thee, ^rso shall they burn odours for thee; and ^sthey will lament thee, saying, Ah lord! for I have pronounced the word, saith the LORD.
- 6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of 7 Judah in Jerusalem, when the king of Babylon's army fought against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against Lachish, and against Azekah: for ^tthese defended cities remained of the cities of Judah.

Renewed threatenings on account of the oppression of bond-servants.

- 8 THIS is the word⁴ that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem,
9 to proclaim ^uliberty unto them;⁵ ^xthat every man should let his manservant, and every man his maidservant, being ^yan Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free;
10 ^zthat none should serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother. Now when all the princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his manservant, and every one his maidservant, go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more, then they obeyed, 11 and let them go. But ^aafterward they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.
- 12 Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, 13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel; I made a covenant with your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of 14 bondmen, saying, At the end of ^bseven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which hath been sold [or, sold himself] unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: ^cbut your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear. ^dAnd ye were now turned, and had done right in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour; and he had ^emade a covenant before me^f in the house which is called by 16 my name: ^gbut ye turned and ^hpolluted my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.
- 17 Therefore thus saith the LORD; Ye have not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty, every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: ⁱ'behold, I proclaim a liberty for you,⁶ saith the LORD, ^jto the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you to be ^k'removed into all the kingdoms of the 18 earth. And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, 19 when ^mthey cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,⁷ the princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, ⁿthe eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf; I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life: and their ^odead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the 21 heaven, and to the beasts of the earth. ^pAnd Zedekiah king of Judah and his princes will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them

1 Ch. xxxiv. 2—7 contains a prediction of the capture of the city, and of Zedekiah's captivity, death, and royal burial. It is referred to in ch. xxxii. 3 as having occasioned the prophet's imprisonment.

2 See notes on 2 Kings xxv. 6, 7.

3 That is, by a natural death. Josephus says that Nebuchadnezzar honoured his remains with a magnificent funeral (Antiq. x. 8. 7).

4 Ch. xxxiv. 8—22 denounces the treachery of those who, when in fear of the Chaldeans, had complied with the law and freed their Hebrew servants; but, when the siege was raised, had again reduced them to bondage (8—16). For this they and their city are to perish (17—22). In date it was a little later than ch. xxxvii.

5 By the law (Exod. xxi. 2; Deut. xv. 12), the Israelites were required to let their Hebrew bondsmen go free after having served six years; but this law had fallen into disuse. We are not told what were the king's motives in reviving it at the time of the invasion; but it was a measure of good policy, as the emancipated people would have the greater interest in defending their country.

6 By these words the people were taught to connect the subsequent horrors of the siege and sacking of Jerusalem with their crime.

7 A mode of confirming a covenant (see Gen. xv. 10). The ceremony implied the consent of the parties covenanting, if they broke their engagement, to be themselves thus cut asunder, and made a sacrifice to Divine justice.

The Rechabites presented to the Jews as an example of obedience and its reward.

35 THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehoiakim ² the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying, Go unto the house of the ^x Rechabites, ¹ and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of ^y the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

³ Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his ⁴ brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites; and I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan, the son of Igdaliah, ^z a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, ^a the keeper of the door: ⁵ and I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, ^b Drink ye wine.

⁶ But they said, We will drink no wine: for ^c Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons ⁷ for ever: neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall ^d dwell in tents; ^e that ye may live many ⁸ days in the land where ye be strangers.² ^f Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no ⁹ wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters; nor to build ¹⁰ houses for us to dwell in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed: but we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab ¹¹ our father commanded us. But it came to pass, ^g when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, ^h Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

^{12, 13} Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not ⁱ receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the ¹⁴ LORD. ^k The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment. ^l Notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, ^m rising ¹⁵ early and speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me. ⁿ I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, ^o Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, ^p and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto ¹⁶ me. Because ^q the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them; but this people hath not ¹⁷ hearkened unto me: therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, ^r I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: ^s because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard; and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

¹⁸ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; ^t Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath ¹⁹ commanded you: therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to "stand before me for ever."³

² These regulations may have been designed partly to avoid exciting the envy or jealousy of the people in whose country they lived; but the character of Jehonadab renders it probable that they were also intended to preserve them from the luxury which was enervating and debasing the Hebrews.

³ The perpetuity of the race, not distinct nationality, is here promised. It is, however, said that there are still existing Arab tribes near Mecca, maintaining Hebrew worship and customs, who claim to be descended from the Rechabites. The approbation which God here expresses shows with what favour He regards obedience to parental and other rightful authority, and how He rewards it in this world. See Exod. xx. 12, and note.

Jeremiah's prophecies read publicly in the temple and before the king, who burns the roll.

- 36 AND¹ it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king
 2 of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying, Take thee a ^x roll of a book,² and ^y write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and against ^z all the nations, from the 3 day I spake unto thee, from the days of ^a Josiah, even unto this day. ^b It may be that the house of Judah ^c will hear all the evil which I purpose to do unto them; that they may ^d return every man from his evil way; ^e that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin.
- 4 Then Jeremiah ^f called Baruch the son of Neriah: and ^g Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book.
- 5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, ^h I am shut up; ³ I cannot go into 6 the house of the LORD: therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon ⁱ the fasting day: ⁴ and also thou shalt read them in the ears 7 of all Judah that come out of their cities. ^k It may be they will present their supplication before the LORD, and will return every one from his evil way: for great ^l is the anger and the fury that the LORD hath pronounced against this people.
- 8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house.
- 9 And it came to pass in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they ^m proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people ⁿ that came from the cities of 10 Judah unto Jerusalem. Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, ^o in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the ^p entry of the new gate ⁵ of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.
- 11 When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the 12 book all the words of the LORD, then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber: and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.
- 13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people.
- 14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch 15 the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them. And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.
- 16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, ^q they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, ^r We will surely tell the king of all 17 these words. ⁶ And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou 18 write all these words at his mouth? Then Baruch answered them, ^s He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink in 19 the book. Then said the princes unto Baruch, ^t Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.
- 20 And they went in to the king into the court, but they laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

¹ To make a deeper impression upon the king and the people, Jeremiah is commanded to write a collection of his prophecies (vers. 1—3), which he dictates to Baruch, who reads them on a fast-day publicly in the temple (4—10), and then before the king's counsellors (11—19). The counsellors in alarm inform the king; and he sends for the roll; but, after hearing a small portion, impiously destroys it, and tries in vain to apprehend Jeremiah and Baruch (20—26). For this, new threatenings are added on a second roll (27—32).

² Or, 'a book-roll'; i. e. such as books were made of. At one end of the roll, or, if it were long, at each end, a stick was attached, around which it was rolled and unrolled in order to read the contents. See Luke iv. 17. The text was not written in lines across from one end to the other, but in compartments or columns (improperly translated 'leaves' in ver. 23); so that only a portion need be unrolled at a time.

³ He was probably not in prison (see ver. 26), but was obliged to conceal himself, as he had incurred Jehoiakim's displeasure.

⁵ Where he was most likely to attract their attention. If the whole of Jeremiah's prophecies delivered up to this time were read, some hours must have been required for the purpose.

⁶ They seem to have done this with a good intent (see ver. 25); hoping that the impious king and his favourites might be alarmed, as they had been.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll: and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of 22 all the princes which stood beside the king. Now the king sat in 'the winter-house¹ in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before
 23 him. And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, ^u he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until 24 all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth. ^x Yet they were not afraid, nor ^y rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants
 25 that heard all these words. Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll: but he would 26 not hear them. ^z But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet: but the LORD hid them.
 27 Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,
 28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned. And thou shalt
 29 say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD; ^a Thou hast burned this roll, saying, ^b Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man
 30 and beast? Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah; ^c He shall have none to sit upon the throne² of David: and his dead body shall be
 31 ^d cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.³ And ^e I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.
 32 Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah; who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire: and there were added besides unto them many like words.

37 AND⁴ king ^f Zedekiah the son of Josiah reigned instead of Coniah the son of Jehoiakim, whom⁵ Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon ^g made king in the land
 2 of Judah. ^h But neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the LORD, which he spake by the prophet Jeremiah.
 3 And Zedekiah the king sent Jehucal the son of Shelemiah and ⁱ Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest to the prophet Jeremiah, saying, ^k Pray now unto the 5 for they had not put him into prison. Then ^l Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt: ^m and when the Chaldeans that besieged Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they departed from Jerusalem.

⁴ Chapters xxxvii.—xliv. are chiefly memorials of events (in most of which Jeremiah was personally interested) occurring shortly before and after the capture and destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans. The king desires the prophet's intercession; in reply to which a Divine message is sent to him (xxxvii. 1—10). Jeremiah, attempting to escape the horrors of the siege, is imprisoned by the princes (11—15). The king relaxes for a time the rigour of his confinement (16—21); but again leaves him to the cruelty of his enemies (xxxviii. 1—6), until an Ethiopian chamberlain obtains permission to remove him from the dungeon (7—13). After this, Zedekiah again consults him, but does not follow the direction which Jeremiah gives him from God (14—28). So that all the prophet's terrible predictions are fulfilled (xxxix. 1—10), whilst he is delivered by command of Nebuchadnezzar (11—14). The narrative ends with a promise of safety to his friendly protector (15—18).

⁵ That is, Zedekiah. See 2 Kings xxiv. 17.

⁶ That is, he was at liberty. See Josh. vi. 1.

⁷ A forcible expression of the important truth that God can never be at a loss for means to accomplish his purposes. Comp. Matt. iii. 9.

- 11 ^r And it came to pass, that when the army of the Chaldeans was broken up 12 from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, then Jeremiah ^s went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin, to separate¹ himself thence in the midst of the people [or, to slip away from thence in the midst of the people].
 13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took 14 Jeremiah the prophet, saying, 'Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans. Then said Jeremiah, It is false; I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not 15 to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, ^u and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that² the prison.
 16 When Jeremiah was entered into ^a the dungeon, and into the cabins,³ and 17 Jeremiah had remained there many days; then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out: and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, 18 ^y thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, What have I offended against thee, or against 19 thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? Where are now ^z your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon 20 shall not come against you, nor against this land? Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest 21 I die there. Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah ^a into the court of the prison, and that they should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street,⁴ ^b until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.
 38 Then Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and ^c Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and ^d Pashur the son of Malchiah, ^e heard the words
 2 that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying, Thus saith the LORD, ^f He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall 3 have his life for a prey, and shall live. Thus saith the LORD, ^g This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.
 4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, ^h let this man be put to death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them:
 5 for this man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt. Then Zedekiah ⁱ the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do 6 any thing against you.⁵ ^k Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison:
 and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water,⁶ but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.
 7 'Now when Ebed-melech⁷ the Ethiopian, one of ^m the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; the king
 8 then sitting in the gate of Benjamin; Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's 9 house, and spake to the king, saying, My lord the king, these men have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and he is like to die for hunger in the place where he is:
 10 ⁿ for there is no more bread in the city. Then ^o the king commanded Ebedmelech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty men with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.
 11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king

² In Eastern countries, a part of the house of a public functionary is often employed as a prison.

³ Or, 'vaults.' The 'dungeon' was probably a deep pit (see ch. xxxviii. 6) in the midst of the inner court of the house, having vaulted recesses round it near the bottom, in which the prisoners were lodged.

⁴ That is, from the bakers' shops. It is much more customary in the East than in Europe for persons of the same trade to carry on their business in the same street. The prophet was thus supplied with food at the king's expense; and the whole passage affords an illustration of the truth contained in Prov. xxviii. 23.

⁵ Zedekiah was evidently a weak prince (see ver. 24).

His history shows how moral imbecility may involve a man in crime and ruin. See notes on 1 Kings xxi. 19; xxii. 2.

⁶ These 'dungeons' or 'pits' were probably used as cisterns during part of the year. The whole of Jerusalem is still supplied with water by large cisterns hewn in the rock under the houses.

⁷ It has long been the practice in Eastern courts to entrust the guardianship of the royal harem to foreign slaves, the chief of whom derives great power from his opportunity of gaining access to the king at all times. In the present case, this influence was possessed by a humane man (vers. 9, 12), who was afterwards rewarded by Divine protection when others were punished (ch. xxxix. 18).

And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine armholes under the cords. And Jeremiah did so. ^p So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and Jeremiah remained ^q in the court of the prison.

14 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me. Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken unto me? So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, As the LORD liveth, ^r that made us this soul,² I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand ^s of these men that seek thy life.

6 'Rab-saris' means chief of the eunuchs; and 'Rab-mag' chief of the Magi. These were the titles of the officers whose names precede them. The second of the preceding names, 'Samgar-nebo,' may also be a title. See note on 2 Kings xviii. 17.

" overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to ^o Riblah in the land of Hamath, where he gave judgment upon him. Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah. Moreover ^p he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him with chains, to carry him to Babylon. ^q And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained. But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard ^r left of the poor of the people, which had nothing in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.

11 Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon ^s gave charge concerning Jeremiah to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, ^t saying, Take him, and look well to him, and ^u do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee. So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes; even they sent, ^x and took Jeremiah out of the court of the prison, and committed him ^y unto Gedaliah, ^z the son of ^z Ahikam the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him home: so he dwelt among the people.

15 Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, ^a while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying, Go and speak to ^b Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, ^c

Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel;

Behold, ^c I will bring my words upon this city—for evil, and not for good;

And they shall be accomplished in that day ^d before thee.

17 But I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD:

And thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee,—and thou shalt not fall by the sword,

But ^e thy life shall be for a prey unto thee:

^f Because thou hast put thy trust in me,—saith the LORD.

The liberation of Jeremiah; the murder of Gedaliah; and the flight of the Jews into Egypt, contrary to the command of God.

40 THE ^g word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, ^h after that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from Ramah, ⁱ when he had taken him being bound in chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and ^j said unto him, The LORD thy God ^k hath pronounced this evil upon this place. Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: ^l because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thine hand. ^m If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come; and I will look well unto thee: but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, ⁿ all the land is before thee: whither it seemeth good

5 and convenient for thee to go, thither go. Now while he was not yet gone back, ^o he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, ^p whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people: ^q or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward,

6 and let him go. ^r Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to ^s Mizpah; ^t and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

2 The son of the nobleman who had before befriended Jeremiah (see ch. xxvi. 24).

3 An illustration of the promise in Matt. x. 42.

4 In chapters xl.—xliv. the prophet's personal narrative is continued. He is freed by Nebuzar-adan, and entrusted to the care of Gedaliah; who, however, is soon murdered by Ishmael. Upon this the Jewish leaders determine to flee into Egypt; against which the prophet cautions them in vain; and they take him and Baruch with them. Jeremiah, in Egypt, warns the Jews of the invasion of that country by the Chaldeans, and reproves and threatens them for their idolatries.

5 This appears to be a more detailed account than that in ch. xxxix. 11—14. Jeremiah probably was not set at liberty till he reached Ramah, which is only six miles from Jerusalem.

6 Nebuzar-adan, though an idolater, acknowledged Jehovah as the God of the Jews, and attributed the conquest of a place so strongly fortified as Jerusalem to his displeasure.

7 Or, 'And as he still did not depart, Go [said he],' etc. Jeremiah appears to have hesitated; from which the General gathered that he wished to stay in the land, and therefore sent him to Gedaliah with a 'present' (not a 'reward'), as a mark of respect.

8 This was the Mizpah in Benjamin, about four miles north-west of Jerusalem, now called Neby Samwil.

- 7 ^q Now when all the captains of the forces¹ which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of ^r the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away
- 8 captive to Babylon; then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, ^s even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai ^t the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of ^u a Maachathite, they and their men.
- 9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, ^v Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and
- 10 serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you. As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us: but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.
- 11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son
- 12 of Ahikam the son of Shaphan; even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much.
- 13 Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that
- 14 were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, and said unto him, ^w Dost thou certainly know that ^x Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to slay thee?² But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them
- 15 not. Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah
- 16 perish? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, Thou shalt not do this thing: for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.
- 41 Now it came to pass in the seventh month, ^y that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah; and there ^z they

Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and ^a smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, ^b whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land. Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war.
- 4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man
- 5 knew it, that there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria,³ even fourscore men, ^c having their beards shaven, and their clothes rent, and having cut themselves,⁴ with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them
- 6 to ^d the house of the LORD. And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping all along as he went: and it came to pass, as he
- 7 met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam. And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men
- 8 that were with him. But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, ^e Slay us not: for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren.
- 9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of Gedaliah, was it ^f which Asa the king had made⁵ for fear of Baasha king of Israel: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.
- 10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, ^g even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, ¹ Leaders of scattered troops, or perhaps guerilla chieftains, called out by the exigencies of the times.

² Baalis may have been incited to this by the hope of reaping advantage from divisions among the Jews; and Ishmael, by resentment, because one who was not of the royal family was made governor.

³ In the reign of Josiah many persons from the ten tribes, who were left in the land, had attended the worship at Jerusalem; and some of these probably availed themselves of the restoration of order to bring gifts for the service re-established among the ruins of the temple.

⁴ These signs of mourning were most likely adopted on account of the destruction of the city and temple. Cutting the flesh was forbidden to the Hebrews (see Lev. xix. 28), but seems to have been practised by them.

they went 'to burn incense, and to "serve other gods, whom they knew not, 4 neither they, ye, nor your fathers. Howbeit "I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not y this abominable

 6 from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods. Wherefore a my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.
 7 Therefore now thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel;
 Wherefore commit ye this great evil b against your souls, to cut off from you man 8 and woman, child and suckling, out of Judah, to leave you none to remain; in that ye c provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense h humbled even unto this day, neither have they i feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

 11 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Behold, h I will set 12 my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah. And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and j they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine: and m they shall be an 13 execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach. "For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the 14 sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: so that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, o to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there: for p none shall return but such as shall 15 Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying, 16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, q we 17 will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do r whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the s queen of heaven,² and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem:

 18 for then had we plenty of victuals, and were well, and saw no evil. But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, t we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and 19 by the famine. "And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink offerings unto her, u without our men³ [or, husbands]?
 20 Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to 21 all the people which had given him that answer, saying, The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; c therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

 24 Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the 25 word of the LORD, all Judah d that are in the land of Egypt: Thus saith the

¹ This word is feminine in Hebrew; showing that this clause is addressed to the women, either by their husbands, who thus publicly ratify their wives' vows, or by the prophet, as a declaration of their obstinacy in sin.

² The 'Apries' of the Greek historians, the grandson of Necho. He was defeated and dethroned, and subsequently put to death by Amasis, who headed a revolt of the troops.

³ This short chapter is a sort of appendix to the prophecies against Judah. It contains a personal promise to Baruch, distressed by the prospect of predicted sufferings. Its place in order of time is after ch. xxxvi.; but it was probably put after the narrative of the prophet's deportation to Egypt, because its fulfilment up to that period is recorded there (ch. xliii. 6).

⁴ That is, he had added one cause of grief to another.

⁵ In the midst of such terrible calamities, do not seek for exemption from loss and suffering. Be content that your life is secured to you.

⁶ The rest of the prophecies in this book are directed against foreign nations; beginning with Egypt and ending with Babylon. They should be compared with the corresponding predictions of Amos and Isaiah, many of which they repeat; as well as with those of the contemporary prophets, Ezekiel and Obadiah. Ch. xlv. contains two distinct prophecies: one announcing the defeat of the Egyptian army by Nebuchadnezzar (vers. 1—12); the other, delivered long afterwards, foretelling his invasion and conquest of Egypt (13—26). Their connection with God's purposes respecting his people is shown by the promises to Israel at the close (27, 28), repeated from ch. xxx. 10, 11.

⁷ The son and successor of Psammetichus, one of the most powerful kings of Egypt. His former successful expedition to the Euphrates is mentioned in 2 Kings xxiii. 29—35.

⁹ Covering the land with his forces, as the Nile does with its waters. The Hebrew term here translated 'flood' is almost always applied to the Nile.

- I will destroy the city¹ and the inhabitants thereof.
- 9 Come up, ye horses;—and rage, ye chariots;—and let the mighty men come forth;
The Ethiopians and the Libyans, that handle the shield;
And the Lydians,² ^d that handle and bend the bow.
- 10 For this is ^e the day of the Lord God of hosts,
A day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries:
And ^f the sword shall devour,
And it shall be satiate and made drunk with their blood:
For the Lord God of hosts ^g hath a sacrifice³
^h In the north country by the river Euphrates.
- 11 ⁱ Go up into Gilead, and take balm,—^k O virgin, the daughter of Egypt:
In vain shalt thou use many medicines; for ^l thou shalt not be cured.
- 12 The nations have heard of thy shame,—and thy cry hath filled the land:
For the mighty man hath stumbled against the mighty,
And they are fallen both together.
- 13 THE word that the LORD spake to Jeremiah the prophet, how Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon should come and ^m smite the land of Egypt.
- 14 Declare ye in Egypt, and publish in Migdol,
And publish in Noph and in Tahpanhes:
Say ye, ⁿ Stand fast, and prepare thee;
For ^o the sword shall devour round about thee.
- 15 Why are thy valiant men swept away?
They stood not, because the LORD did drive them.
- 16 He made many to fall,—yea, ^p one fell upon another:
And they ^q said, Arise, and let us go again to our own people,
And to the land of our nativity,—from the oppressing sword.
- 17 They did cry there,
Pharaoh king of Egypt is but a noise;—he hath passed the time appointed.⁵
- 18 As I live, saith ^r the king, ^s whose name is the LORD of hosts,
Surely as Tabor is among the mountains,
And as Carmel by the sea, so shall he come.⁶
- 19 O ^t thou daughter dwelling in Egypt,—furnish thyself ^u to go into captivity:
For ^v Noph shall be waste—and desolate without an inhabitant.
- 20 Egypt is like a very fair ^x heifer,
But destruction cometh;—it cometh ^y out of the north.
- 21 Also ^z her hired men are in the midst of her like fatted bullocks;
For they also are turned back,—and are fled away together: they did not stand,
Because ^a the day of their calamity was come upon them,
And the time of their visitation.
- 22 ^b The voice thereof shall go like a serpent;—for they shall march with an army,
And come against her with axes,—as hewers of wood.⁷
- 23 They shall ^c cut down her forest, saith the LORD,—though it cannot be searched;⁸
Because they are more than ^d the grasshoppers,—and are innumerable.
- 24 ^e The daughter of Egypt shall be confounded;
She shall be delivered into the hand of ^f the people of the north.
- 25 The LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saith;
Behold, I will punish the multitude of ^g No,⁹—and Pharaoh, and Egypt, ^h With their gods, and their kings;—even Pharaoh, and all them that trust in him:
- 26 ⁱ And I will deliver them into the hand of those that seek their lives,
And into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon,
And into the hand of his servants:
And ^k afterward it shall be inhabited,—as in the days of old,¹⁰ saith the LORD.

Gen. x. 13.³ See Isa. xxxiv. 6, and note.⁴ Either allied and subject nations (ver. 9), or mercenaries (ver. 21).⁵ This may be rendered either, 'Pharaoh king of Egypt is a crash (or ruin, i. e. is ruined); he hath suffered the season to pass;' or, 'O Pharaoh king of Egypt, destruction hath caused [thy] assembled host to pass away.'⁶ This may mean, that the king of Babylon 'shall come,' whose power is compared to Tabor and Carmel, two of the most considerable mountains in the land of Israel: or the words may be rendered, 'he shall go;'i. e. though Pharaoh's power may seem as stable as these mountains, he shall depart.⁷ The Chaldean hosts, devastating the numerous and populous cities of Egypt, are compared to woodmen felling the forests and thickets, and thus disturbing the serpents, who show their anger by a furious hiss, while they flee away.⁸ Or, 'found out;' i. e. its trees cannot be reckoned; they are innumerable. So shall the Chaldean hosts be.⁹ Rather, 'I will punish Amon of No.' Amon was the principal Egyptian deity, here called Amon of No, or Thebes, because that city was the chief seat of his worship. Hence it was called, in Greek, Diospolis—the city of Zeus Ammon.¹⁰ See note on Ezek. xxix. 13.

- 27 ¹ But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob,—and be not dismayed, O Israel :
For, behold, ^m I will save thee from afar off,
And thy seed from the land of their captivity ;
And Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease,—and none shall make him afraid.
- 28 Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant,—saith the LORD : ⁿ for I am with thee :
For I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee :
But I will not make ^o a full end of thee,—but correct thee in measure ;
Yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished.

The subjugation of the Philistines predicted.

- 47 THE¹ word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet ^p against the 2 Philistines, ^q before that Pharaoh² smote Gaza. Thus saith the LORD ;
Behold, ^r waters rise up ^s out of the north,—and shall be an overflowing flood,
And shall overflow the land, and all that is therein ;
The city, and them that dwell therein :
Then the men shall cry,—and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.
- 3 At the ^t noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses,
At the rushing of his chariots,—and at the rumbling of his wheels,
The fathers shall not look back to their children—for feebleness of hands ;
- 4 Because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines,
And to cut off from ^u Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth :
For the LORD will spoil the Philistines,
^v The remnant of the country of ^w Caphtor. ³
- 5 ^z Baldness⁴ is come upon Gaza ;
^a Ashkelon is cut off—with the remnant of their valley : ⁵
How long wilt thou ^b cut thyself ?
- 6 O thou ^c sword of the LORD,—how long will it be ere thou be quiet ? ⁶ Put up thyself into thy scabbard,—rest, and be still.
- 7 How can it be quiet,—seeing the LORD hath ^d given it a charge Against Ashkelon, and against ^e the sea shore ?—There hath he ^f appointed it.

The desolation of Moab foretold.

48 AGAINST⁷ ⁸ Moab.

- Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel ;
Woe unto ^h Nebo ! for it is spoiled :—ⁱ Kiriathaim⁸ is confounded and taken :
Misgab [or, The high place] is confounded and dismayed.
- 2 ^k There shall be no more praise of Moab : in ^l Heshbon
They have devised evil against it ;—come, and let us cut it off from being a nation.
Also thou shalt ^m be cut down, O ⁿ Madmen ;—the sword shall pursue thee.
- 3 ^o A voice of crying shall be from Horonaim,—spoiling and great destruction.
- 4 Moab is destroyed ;—her little ones have caused a cry to be heard.
- 5 ^p For in the going up of Luhith continual weeping shall go up ;
For in the going down of Horonaim the enemies have heard a cry of destruction.
- 6 ^q Flee, save your lives,—and be like the ^r heath in the wilderness. ⁹
- 7 For because thou hast trusted in thy works¹⁰ and in thy treasures,
Thou shalt also be taken :—and ^s Chemosh¹¹ shall go forth into captivity
With his ^t priests and his princes together.
- 8 And ^u the spoiler shall come upon every city, and no city shall escape :
The valley also shall perish,—and the plain shall be destroyed,
As the LORD hath spoken.
- 9 ^v Give wings unto Moab,—that it may flee and get away :
For the cities thereof shall be desolate,—without any to dwell therein.

¹ This chapter predicts the humiliation of the Philistines as allies of Tyre, by the Chaldeans.

² This was probably Pharaoh-necho, after his victory at Carchemish ; and if so, the prophecy would be the more remarkable, as there was no likelihood of a Chaldean invasion at that time.

³ That the Philistines came from Caphtor is clear from Deut. ii. 23 ; Amos ix. 7. But it is not determined where Caphtor is to be found. Some place it in the Egyptian Delta, others in Crete or Cyprus.

⁴ 'Baldness' may be a sign of intense sorrow ; or it may refer to the utter loss of all that was valuable.

⁵ Or, 'low-land : ' the Philistines inhabited the plain country along the shore.

⁶ By this forcible apostrophe and reply the prophet shows how necessary was the infliction of Divine justice.

⁷ Rather, 'Concerning Moab ;' as in ch. xlix. 1, 7, 23, etc. This chapter consists of denunciations against the Moabites ; many of which are repetitions of previous prophecies of Isaiah (compare especially Isa. xv., xvi., xxiv., and notes). It concludes with a promise of a merciful restoration hereafter. The devastations here predicted were effected by Nebuchadnezzar not long after the destruction of Jerusalem.

⁸ Many of these cities belonged at first to the Emim (Gen. xiv. 5), then to the Moabites, and afterwards to the Amorites (Numb. xxi. 24—30), who were speedily dispossessed by the Hebrews (Numb. xxxii. 37). After the Assyrians subdued Israel, they fell again into the hands of the Moabites.

⁹ See note on ch. xvii. 6. Choose poverty and desolation to save your life.

¹⁰ Or, what is gained by work ; thy resources.

¹¹ See Numb. xxi. 29, and note.

- 10 ^y Cursed be he that doeth the work ¹ of the LORD deceitfully,
And cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.
- 11 Moab hath been at ease from his youth,—and he ^z hath settled on his lees,²
And hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel,
Neither hath he gone into captivity:
Therefore his taste remained in him,—and his scent is not changed.
- 12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD,
That I will send unto him ^a wanderers,³—that shall cause him to wander,
And shall ^b empty his vessels,—and break their bottles.
- 13 And Moab shall be ashamed of ^c Chemosh,
As the house of Israel ^d was ashamed of ^e Bethel their confidence.⁴
- 14 ^f How say ye, ^g We are mighty—and strong men for the war?
- 15 ^h Moab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities,
And his chosen young men are ⁱ gone down to the slaughter,
Saith ^j the king, whose name is the LORD of hosts.
- 16 The calamity of Moab is near to come,—and his affliction hasteth fast.
- 17 All ye that are about him, bemoan him;—and all ye that know his name, say, ^l How is the strong staff broken,—and the beautiful rod!⁵
- 18 ^m Thou daughter that dost inhabit ⁿ Dibon,
Come down from thy glory, and sit ^o in thirst;⁶
For ^p the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee,
And he shall destroy thy strong holds.
- 19 O inhabitant of ^q Aroer!⁷—stand by the way, and espy;
Ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth,—and say, What is done?
- 20 Moab is confounded; for it is broken down:
^r Howl and cry;—tell ye it in ^s Arnon,—that Moab is spoiled,
- 21 And judgment is come upon ^t the plain country;
Upon Holon, and upon ^u Jahazah, and upon Mephaath,
- 22 And upon Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim,
- 23 And upon Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon Beth-meon,
- 24 And upon ^v Kerioth, and upon Bozrah,
And upon all the cities of the land of Moab,—far or near.
- 25 ^z The horn of Moab is cut off,—and his ^a arm is broken,—saith the LORD.
- 26 ^b Make ye him drunken:⁸—for he magnified himself against the LORD:⁹
Moab also shall ^c wallow in his vomit,—and he also shall be in derision.¹⁰
- 27 For ^d was not Israel a derision unto thee?—^e was he found among thieves?¹¹
For since thou spakest of him.—thou skippedst for joy [or, movedst thyself].
- 28 O ye that dwell in Moab,—leave the cities, and ^f dwell in the rock,
And be like ^g the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.
- 29 We have heard the ^h pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud.)
His loftiness, and his arrogancy,—and his pride,—and the haughtiness of his heart.
- 30 I know his wrath, saith the LORD;
But it shall not be so;—ⁱ his lies shall not so effect it.¹²
- 31 Therefore ^j will I howl for Moab,—and I will cry out for all Moab;
Mine heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres.
- 32 ^k O vine of Sibmah,—I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer:
Thy plants are gone over the sea,—they reach even to the sea of Jazer:
The spoiler is fallen upon thy summer fruits and upon thy vintage.
- 33 And ^l joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab;
And I have caused wine to fail from the winepresses:
None shall tread with shouting;—their shouting shall be no shouting.¹³

¹ The work of punishment to be inflicted on the Moabites. These words impressively represent God's determination to fulfil his threatenings.

² A figure denoting that Moab had enjoyed great prosperity, as well as tranquillity, in consequence of her freedom from foreign wars. See note on Isa. xxv. 6.

⁴ Chemosh shall defend the Moabites no better than the golden calf at Bethel had protected the Israelites.

⁵ The 'sceptre,' the ensign of dominion.

⁶ That is, in a parched place. This expression is emphatic, as Dibon was remarkable for its well-watered situation. See note on Isa. xv. 9.

⁷ Vers. 19—25 represent strongly the consternation of the Moabites and the desolation of the whole country; judgment falling on every place.

⁸ That is, with the cup of fury and trembling. See ch. xxv. 15; Isa. li. 17, 22.

⁹ The Moabites had frequently been enemies of Israel. See 2 Sam. viii. 2; 2 Kings i. 1; iii. 4, etc.; xiii. 20; 2 Chron. xx. 1.

¹⁰ Others shall treat him as he has treated Israel: see ver. 27.

¹¹ Persons who, when caught, are justly scorned.

¹² Rather, 'I know, saith Jehovah, his rage, and it is falsehood; his pretensions have wrought falsehood.' All his rage is impotent, and his boastings false.

¹³ These joyous shoutings shall give place to the wailing, or the death-wail.

- 34 ^o From the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh,
And even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice,
^p From Zoar even unto Horonaim,—as an heifer of three years old :¹
For the waters also of Nimrim shall be desolate.
- 35 Moreover I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the LORD, ^q Him that offereth in the high places,—and him that burneth incense to his gods.
- 36 Therefore ^r mine heart shall sound for Moab like pipes,
And mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kir-heres :
Because ^s the riches that he hath gotten are perished.
- 37 For ^t every head shall be bald,—and every beard clipped :
Upon all the hands shall be cuttings,—and ^u upon the loins sackcloth.
- 38 There shall be lamentation generally
^x Upon all the housetops of Moab,—and in the streets thereof
For I have broken Moab—like ^y a vessel wherein is no pleasure,—saith the LORD.
- 39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down !
How hath Moab turned the back with shame !
So shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.
- 40 For thus saith the LORD ;
Behold, ^z he ² shall fly as an eagle,—and shall ^a spread his wings over Moab.
- 41 ^b Kerioth is taken,—and the strong holds are surprised,
And ^c the mighty men's hearts in Moab at that day
Shall be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.
- 42 And Moab shall be destroyed ^d from being a people,
Because he hath magnified himself against the LORD.
- 43 ^e Fear, and the pit, and the snare,³
Shall be upon thee, O inhabitant of Moab,—saith the LORD.
- 44 He that fleeth from the fear shall fall into the pit ;
And he that getteth up out of the pit shall be taken in the snare :
For ^f I will bring upon it, even upon Moab,
The year of their visitation,—saith the LORD.
- 45 They that fled stood under the shadow of Heshbon because of the force :⁴
But ^g a fire shall come forth out of Heshbon,—and a flame from the midst of Sihon,⁵
And ^h shall devour the corner of Moab,
And the crown of the head of the tumultuous ones.
- 46 ⁱ Woe be unto thee, O Moab !—the people of Chemosh perisheth :
For thy sons are taken captives,—and thy daughters captives.
- 47 Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab—^k in the latter days, saith the LORD.
Thus far is the judgment of Moab.

Punishment of the Ammonites for their conduct to Israel ; with a promise of restoration.

49 CONCERNING ^l the Ammonites.⁶

- Thus saith the LORD ; Hath Israel no sons ?—hath he no heir ?
Why then doth ^m their king⁷ inherit ⁿ Gad,—and his people dwell in his cities ?
- 2 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD,
That I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in ^o Rabbah⁸ of the Ammonites ;
And it shall be a desolate heap,—and her daughters shall be burned with fire :
Then shall Israel be heir ^p unto them that were his heirs,—saith the LORD.
- 3 Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled :—cry, ye daughters of Rabbah, ^q Gird you with sackcloth ;—lament, and run to and fro by the hedges ;⁹
For ^r their king shall go into captivity,—and his ^s priests and his princes together.
- 4 ^t Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys,
Thy flowing valley,¹⁰ O ^u backsliding daughter ?
^x That trusted in her treasures, ^y saying,—Who shall come unto me ?

⁵ See note on Numb. xxi. 28 ; xxiv. 17 ; from which these words are taken.

⁶ The Ammonites are to be punished for seizing eagerly the portion of Gad in Gilead when the Israelites were carried into captivity ; as if no remnant were left, and the people were never to return (vers. 1—5) ; compare Amos i. 13—15. Yet Ammon shall be restored (6).

⁷ For 'their king,' some read 'Milcom,' or Molech, the chief deity of the Ammonites. See 1 Kings xi. 7.

⁸ 'Rabbah' (which means the great) was the capital of the Ammonites. See 2 Sam. xii. 26. Her 'daughters' are probably her dependent 'towns' and 'villages,' as the word is sometimes rendered ; e. g. Josh. xvii. 11, 16 ; 2 Chron. xxviii. 18, etc.

⁹ That is, the fences of the vineyards.

¹⁰ Rather, 'Thy valley is flowing, O daughter that rebellest, that trustest,' etc. This may refer either to the fruitfulness of their valleys, in which they gloried and trusted ; or to the punishment of their sin, which should make their rich valleys flow with blood.

And ye shall be driven out every man right forth,
And none shall gather up him that wandereth.

- 6 And ^a afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon,
Saith the LORD.

The desolation of Edom foretold.

- 7 ^b CONCERNING Edom.¹

Thus saith the LORD of hosts;—^c *Is wisdom no more in ^d Teman?*²

^e Is counsel perished from the prudent?—is their wisdom vanished?

- 8 ^f Flee ye, turn back, dwell deep,³ O inhabitants of ^g Dedan;⁴
For I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him,—the time that I will visit him.

- 9 If ^h grapegatherers come to thee,—would they not leave some gleaning grapes?
If thieves by night,—they will destroy till they have enough.

- 10 ⁱ But I have made Esau bare,—I have uncovered his secret places,
And he shall not be able to hide himself:

^k His seed is spoiled,—and his brethren, and his neighbours,—and ^l he is not.

- 11 Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive;
And let thy widows trust in me.⁵

- 12 For thus saith the LORD;

Behold, ^m they whose judgment was not⁶ to drink of the cup have assuredly drunken;

And art thou he that shall altogether go unpunished?

Thou shalt not go unpunished,—but thou shalt surely drink of it.

- 13 For ⁿ I have sworn by myself, saith the LORD,

That ^o Bozrah⁷ shall become a desolation,—a reproach, a waste, and a curse;
And all the cities thereof shall be perpetual wastes.

- 14 I have heard a ^p rumour from the LORD,

And an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying,

Gather ye together, and come against her,—and rise up to the battle.

- 15 For, lo, ^q I will make thee small among the heathen,—and despised among men.

- 16 ^r Thy terribleness hath deceived thee,—and the pride of thine heart,
O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock,⁸—that holdest the height of the hill:

^s Though thou shouldest make thy ^t nest as high as the eagle,

^u I will bring thee down from thence,—saith the LORD.

- 17 Also ^v Edom shall be a desolation:

^w Every one that goeth by it shall be astonished,

And shall hiss at all the plagues thereof.

- 18 ^z As in the overthrow of Sodom and Gomorrah

And the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD,

No man shall abide there,—neither shall a son of man dwell in it.

- 19 ^a Behold, he⁹ shall come up,—like a lion from ^b the swelling of Jordan
Against the habitation of the strong:

But I will suddenly make him run away from her:

And who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her?

¹ The phraseology of certain parts of this prophecy so closely resembles that of Obadiah, as to make it evident that one of these prophets had read the work of the other (comp. vers. 9, 10, 14—16, with Obad. 2—6). The more probable opinion is, that Obadiah was the earlier of the two, and that Jeremiah borrowed from him, as he has done from the books of Numbers and Isaiah.

² A city and district in the east of Edom; so called from Teman, a grandson of Esau. See Gen. xxxvi. 11. Its inhabitants were celebrated for wisdom: see Job ii. 11; Obad. vers. 8, 9.

³ Hide yourselves from the enemy, either by retiring into caverns, or by fleeing into the depths of the desert, whither they cannot pursue you.

⁴ The Dedanites were probably descendants of Abraham, dwelling among the Edomites. See Gen. xxv. 2.

⁵ If these words are to be taken as they stand, they appear like a promise converted into a threatening, by the implication that, if the widows and orphans are not protected by God, there shall be no one else to protect them; for the land shall be stripped of men, as it had been before (1 Kings xi. 16). But vers. 10, 11 may perhaps be joined thus: 'His seed is destroyed, and his brethren, and his neighbours; and there is no one [to say], Leave thy fatherless children,' etc. Such an ellipsis is frequent: see ver. 4.

⁶ That is, God's own people: see ch. xxv. 28, 29.

⁷ See note on Isa. xxxiv. 6.

⁹ Or, 'Behold, one (i. e. the invader) comes up as a lion from the pride of Jordan (see note on ch. xii. 5) to the sheepfold of the strong; for I will suddenly make him (i. e. the strong) run away from it. And who is the chosen one? I will appoint [him] against it; for who is like me? and who will meet me? and who is the shepherd that will stand before me?' God compares the rock-hewn city to a sheepfold (see 1 Sam. xxiv. 3, and note), and sends an enemy against it, like a lion, whom the strongest shepherd cannot resist; for he is chosen and appointed by God for the work of destruction.

And his purposes,—that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of s Teman :

h Surely the least of the flock shall draw them out :

Surely he shall make i their habitations desolate with them.¹

21 h The earth is moved at the noise of their fall,

At the cry the noise thereof was heard in the Red Sea.

22 Behold, i he shall come up and fly as the eagle,—and spread his wings over Bozrah :

And at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom be

As the heart of a woman in her pangs.

Prediction of the destruction of Damascus.

23 m CONCERNING Damascus.²

Hamath³ is confounded, and Arpad :—for they have heard evil tidings :

They are fainthearted [melted];—n there is sorrow on the sea ; it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee,—and fear hath seized on her :

o Anguish and sorrows have taken her,—as a woman in travail.

25 How is p the city of praise not left,—the city of my joy!⁴

26 q Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets,

And all the men of war shall be cut off in that day,—saith the LORD of hosts.

27 And I will kindle a r fire in the wall of Damascus,

And it shall consume the palaces of Ben-hadad.

Judgments on Kedar and Hazor foretold.

28 s CONCERNING Kedar,⁵ and concerning the kingdoms of Hazor, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon shall smite,⁶ Thus saith the LORD ;—Arise ye, go up to Kedar,—and spoil t the men of the east.

29 Their u tents and their flocks shall they take away :

They shall take to themselves their x curtains, and all their vessels,

And their camels ;—and they shall cry unto them, y Fear is on every side.

30 z Flee, get you far off,—dwell deep, O ye inhabitants of Hazor,—saith the LORD ;

For a Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you,

And hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise,⁷ get you up unto b the wealthy nation [or, nation that is at ease],

That dwelleth without care,—saith the LORD,

Which have neither gates nor bars,—which c dwell alone.⁸

32 And their camels shall be a booty,—and the multitude of their cattle a spoil :

And I will d scatter into all winds e them that are in the utmost corners ;⁹

And I will bring their calamity from all sides thereof,—saith the LORD.

33 And Hazor f shall be a dwelling for dragons,—and a desolation for ever :

g There shall no man abide there,—nor any son of man dwell in it.

Prediction of the overthrow and dispersion of Elam ; with a promise of future restoration.

34 THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against h Elam¹⁰ in the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, saying,

35 Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;

Behold, I will break i the bow of Elam,—the chief of their might.

36 And upon Elam will I bring the four winds¹¹—from the four quarters of heaven,

And k will scatter them toward all those winds ;

And there shall be no nation whither the outcasts of Elam shall not come.

37 For I will cause Elam to be dismayed before their enemies ;

And before them that seek their life :

And I will bring evil upon them,—even my fierce anger, saith the LORD ;

l And I will send the sword after them,—till I have consumed them :

38 And I will m set my throne in Elam,

And will destroy from thence the king and the princes,—saith the LORD.

39 But it shall come to pass n in the latter days,

That I will bring again the captivity of Elam,—saith the LORD.

² Damascus had been taken by the Assyrians (2 Kings xvi. 9) ; but was probably soon reepeople with new colonists. In the decay of the Assyrian empire, it is supposed to have become for a short time independent ; but it soon fell under the power of Babylon.

Prophecies of the destruction of Babylon, and of the deliverance and restoration of Israel.

50 THE¹ word that the LORD spake ^o against Babylon and against the land of the Chaldeans ^p by Jeremiah the prophet.

2 ^q Declare ye among the nations,
And publish, and set up a standard;—publish, and conceal not:
Say, ' Babylon is taken,—^s Bel² is confounded,—^t Merodach is broken in pieces;
^u Her idols are confounded,—her images are broken in pieces.

3 ^z For out of the north³ there cometh up ^y a nation against her,
Which shall make her land desolate,⁴—and none shall dwell therein:
They shall remove, they shall depart, ^z both man and beast.

4 ^a In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD,
The children of Israel shall come,—^b they and the children of Judah together, ^c Going and weeping:⁵ they shall go,—^d and seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying,
^e Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD
In ^f a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been ^g lost sheep:—^h their shepherds have caused them to go astray,
They have turned them away on ⁱ the mountains:
They have gone from mountain to hill,—they have forgotten their ^k restingplace.

7 All that found them have ^l devoured them:
And ^m their adversaries said, ⁿ We offend not,
Because they have sinned against the LORD,—^o the habitation of justice,⁶
Even the LORD, ^p the hope of their fathers.

8 ^q REMOVE⁷ out of the midst of Babylon,
And go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans,
And be as the ^r he goats⁸ before the flocks.

9 ^s For, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon
An assembly of great nations from the north country:
And they shall ^t set themselves in array against her;
From thence she shall be taken:

Their arrows shall be as of a mighty expert man;—^u none shall return in vain.
10 And Chaldea shall be a spoil:—^v all that spoil her shall be satisfied,—saith the LORD.

11 ^y Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced,—O ye destroyers of mine heritage
Because ye are grown fat ^z as the heifer at grass,⁹
And bellow as bulls [or, neigh as steeds];

12 Your mother shall be sore confounded;—she that bare you shall be ashamed:
Behold, the hindmost of the nations
Shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert.

13 Because of the wrath of the LORD
It shall not be inhabited,—^a but it shall be wholly desolate:
^b Everyone that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished,—and hiss at all her plagues.

14 ^c Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about:
All ye ^d that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows:
For she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about:—she hath ^e given her hand:¹⁰
Her foundations are fallen,—^f her walls are thrown down:
For ^g it is the vengeance of the LORD:
Take vengeance upon her;—^h as she hath done, do unto her.

1 The subjects of chapters 1., li. are the overthrow and destruction of Babylon, and the deliverance of Israel. These are presented in a series of prophetic pictures; in which, according to the peculiar style and manner of Jeremiah, the same objects are presented again in new aspects. Vers. 2—7 announce the general subject, the destruction of Babylon, and confusion of its idols (2, 3), and the repentance and restoration of Israel (4—7).

2 See note on Isa. xlv. 1. 'Merodach' is supposed by some to represent the planet Mars, regarded as the god of slaughter and blood.

3 The Medes came from the north-east of Babylon.

4 Babylon was reduced to this state by a series of events extending through several centuries. See note on Isa. xiv. 23.

5 When Israel repents of his sins, his enemies and oppressors are punished.

6 Or, 'the fold of righteousness;' i. e. the true source of good and safety.

7 In vers. 8—20 the Jews are commanded to flee out of Babylon (8); for Jehovah is sending invaders from the north to seize and plunder her (9, 10); and her arrogance is to be turned into shame through His wrath (11, 13). Her enemies are summoned to execute vengeance; the foreigners dwelling there are warned to save themselves (14—16); and Israel, whom she had oppressed, is liberated, brought home, and restored to a holy covenant of mercy with Jehovah (17—20).

8 March with boldness and energy. The goat is a bolder animal than the sheep; and therefore it has been customary, in moving from place to place, to put some goats in the forefront of the flocks. See Prov. xxx. 31.

9 Or, 'as a threshing-heifer;' which, not being muzzled while it is treading out the grain, feeds freely and becomes wanton.

10 That is, she has surrendered. Ancient Oriental sculptures frequently indicate the submission of the conquered by the stretching out of the hand.

- 16 ⁱ Cut off the sower¹ from Babylon,
And him that handleth the sickle in the time of harvest :
For fear of the oppressing sword, ^k they shall turn every one to his people,
And they shall flee every one to his own land.
- 17 Israel is ^l a scattered sheep ;—^m the lions have driven him away :
First ⁿ the king of Assyria hath devoured him ;
And last this ^o Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.
- 18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel ;
Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land,
^p As I have punished the king of Assyria.
- 19 ^q And I will bring Israel again to his habitation,
And ^r he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan,
And ^s his soul shall be satisfied ^t upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.
- 20 ^u In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, ^x The iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none ;
And the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found :
For I will pardon them ^y whom I reserve.
- 21 ^z GO² up against the land of Merathaim,
Even against it, and against the inhabitants of ^a Pekod :³
Waste and utterly destroy after them,⁴—saith the LORD,
And do ^b according to all that I have commanded thee.
- 22 ^c A sound of battle is in the land,—and of great destruction.
- 23 How is ^d the hammer⁵ of the whole earth cut asunder and broken !
How is Babylon become a desolation among the nations !
- 24 I have laid a snare for thee,
And thou art also taken, O Babylon,—^e and thou wast not aware :⁶
Thou art found, and also caught,—^f because thou hast striven against the LORD.
- 25 The LORD hath opened his armoury,
And hath brought forth ^g the weapons of his indignation :
For this is the work of the Lord God of hosts⁷—in the land of the Chaldeans.
- 26 Come against her from the utmost border,—^h open her storehouses :
Cast her up as heaps,—and destroy her utterly :—let nothing of her be left.
- 27 Slay all her ⁱ bullocks ;⁸—let them go down to the slaughter :
Woe unto them ! for their day is come,—the time of ^k their visitation.
- 28 ^l The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon,
^m To declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God,
The vengeance of his temple.
- 29 Call together the archers⁹ against Babylon :—ⁿ all ye that bend the bow,
Camp against it round about ;—let none thereof escape :
^o Recompense her according to her work ;
According to all that she hath done, do unto her :
^p For she hath been proud against the LORD,—against the Holy One of Israel.
- 30 ^q Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets,
And all her men of war shall be cut off in that day,—saith the LORD.
- 31 Behold, I am against thee, O thou most proud,—saith the Lord God of hosts :
For ^r thy day is come,—the time that I will visit thee.
- 32 And the most proud shall stumble and fall,—and none shall raise him up :
And ^s I will kindle a fire in his cities,—and it shall devour all round about him.
- 33 Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
The children of Israel and the children of Judah—were oppressed together :

¹ In ancient times, the plain of Babylon was so fertile that, according to Herodotus (b. i. c. 193), the seed yielded from two to three hundredfold. It is now an utter waste, with here and there a patch of cultivation.

² In vers. 21—40 the invader is summoned, the sound of war and carnage is heard, and the destroyer is smitten unawares (21—24). Jehovah commissions the instruments of his wrath to destroy the wealth and nobles of Babylon ; and the report of her fall is sent to Jerusalem (25—28). Again the enemy is summoned to execute Jehovah's anger against Babylon, killing her warriors and burning her cities (29—32). Thus Israel is delivered from his mighty tyrants by his mightier Saviour (33, 34) ; who turns the sword of his vengeance against all the pride, power, and luxury of the Chaldeans (35—38), and makes the land an empty, uninhabitable waste (39, 40). The King of Babylon is then threatened with the same chastisement which he has indicted upon Israel and Edom (41—46 ; compare ch. vi. 22—24 ; xlix. 19, 20) ; showing that the cruelties of the oppressor shall recoil upon himself. Compare Psa. cxxxvii. 8.

³ 'Merathaim' and 'Pekod' may be names of cities or districts of Chaldea ; but if so, they seem to have been selected on account of their significance. The time of visitation (Pekod) on the doubly rebellious (Merathaim) is come.

⁴ That is, pursuing after them.

⁵ Heb., 'Pattish,' which some suppose to be the same as 'Patis,' or Master, a title of the Chaldean kings.

⁶ This is generally supposed to refer to the stratagem of Cyrus, who took the city by surprise. See note on Isa. xlv. 1.

⁷ Or, 'For the Lord God of hosts hath a work.'

⁸ Her princes, and great men.

⁹ The Persians were celebrated bowmen.

- ^t And all that took them captives held them fast;—they refused to let them go.
- 34 ^u Their Redeemer is strong;—^x the LORD of hosts is his name:
^v He shall thoroughly plead their cause,
^z That he may give rest to the land,—and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.
- 35 A sword is upon the Chaldeans,—saith the LORD,
 And upon the inhabitants of Babylon,
 And ^a upon her princes, and upon ^b her wise men.
- 36 A sword is ^c upon the liars¹—and they shall dote:
 A sword is upon her mighty men—and they shall be dismayed.
- 37 A sword is upon ^d their horses, and upon their chariots,
 And upon all ^e the mingled² people that are in the midst of her;
 And ^f they shall become as women:
 A sword is upon her treasures—and they shall be robbed.
- 38 ^g A drought³ is upon her waters—and they shall be dried up:
 For it is the land of ^h graven images,—and they are ⁱ mad upon their idols.⁴
- 39 ^k Therefore the wild beasts of the desert with the wild beasts of the islands shall dwell there,
 And the owls shall dwell therein:—^l and it shall be no more inhabited for ever;
 Neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.
- 40 ^m As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah
 And the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD;
 So shall no man abide there,—neither shall any son of man dwell therein.
- 41 ⁿ Behold, a people shall come from the north,⁵
 And a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.
- 42 ^o They shall hold the bow and the lance:
^p They are cruel, and will not show mercy:
^q Their voice shall roar like the sea,—and they shall ride upon horses,
 Every one put in array, like a man to the battle, Against thee, O daughter of Babylon.
- 43 ^r The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them,—and his hands waxed feeble:
^s Anguish took hold of him,—and pangs as of a woman in travail.
- 44 ^t Behold, he shall come up—like a lion from the swelling of Jordan Unto the habitation of the strong:
 But I will make them suddenly run away from her:
 And ^u who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her?
 For who is like me?—and who will appoint me the time?
 And ^x who is that shepherd that will stand before me?
- 45 Therefore hear ye ^y the counsel of the LORD,—that he hath taken against Babylon;
 And his purposes,—that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans:
 Surely ^z the least of the flock shall draw them out:
 Surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.
- 46 ^a At the noise of the taking of Babylon⁶ the earth is moved,
 And the cry is heard among the nations.
- 51 THUS saith the LORD;⁷—Behold, ^b I will raise up against Babylon,
 And against them that dwell in the midst of them that rise up against me,
^c A destroying wind;
 2 And will send unto Babylon ^d fanners,
 That shall fan her, and shall empty her land:
^e For in the day of trouble they shall be against her round about.
- 3 Against him that bendeth⁸ ^f let the archer bend his bow,
 And against him that lifteth himself up in his brigandine:
 And spare ye not her young men;—^g destroy ye utterly all her host.
- 4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans,
^h And they that are thrust through in her streets.

1 The false prophets, as in Isa. xlv. 25.

2 See note on ch. xxv. 24.

3 Babylon owed its fertility in part to an extensive system of irrigation by canals (see Herod. b. i. c. 193); and, when these failed or were destroyed, barrenness was the result, notwithstanding the natural richness of the soil.

4 Heb., 'their fears' (i. e. the objects of their fear), or, 'their terrific idols.' Babylon was full of idols.

5 See note on ver. 3. The 'kings' may be the allies or vassals of Cyrus, or the later conquerors of Babylon.

6 Or, 'At the sound, 'Babylon is taken,' the earth is moved.'

7 God is about to exterminate the Chaldean warriors (vers. 1—4), and to deliver and avenge Israel (5, 6). He has used Babylon as his instrument; but it shall now be irreparably destroyed (7—9); for Israel is to be saved, that God may be glorified in Zion (10). He therefore summons the besiegers and the besieged to the conflict, which shall end in the ruin of Babylon (vers. 11—13); thus fulfilling the oath of Jehovah, the Creator of all, and the 'Portion of Israel' (14—19). Vers. 15—19 are repeated from ch. x. 12—16, on which see notes.

8 That is, 'that bendeth [the bow].' See note on Psa. xxxvii. 14.

- 5 For ⁱ Israel hath not been forsaken,—nor Judah, of his God, of the LORD of hosts ;
^k Though their land was filled with sin against the Holy One of Israel.
- 6 ⁱ Flee out of the midst of Babylon,—and deliver every man his soul :
 Be not cut off in her iniquity ;—for ^m this is the time of the LORD's vengeance ;
ⁿ He will render unto her a recompence.
- 7 ^o Babylon hath been a golden ^p cup¹ in the LORD's hand,
 That made all the earth drunken :
^q The nations have drunken of her wine ;—therefore the nations ^r are mad.
- 8 Babylon is suddenly ^s fallen and destroyed :—^t howl for her ;
^u Take balm for her pain,—if so be she may be healed.
- 9 We would have healed Babylon,²—but she is not healed :
 Forsake her,—and ^x let us go every one into his own country :
^y For her judgment reacheth unto heaven,—and is lifted up even to the skies.
- 10 The LORD hath ^z brought forth our righteousness :
 Come, and let us ^a declare in Zion the work of ^b the LORD our God.
- 11 ^c Make bright the arrows ; gather the shields :
^d The LORD hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes :
^e For his device is against Babylon, to destroy it ;
 Because it is ^f the vengeance of the LORD,—the vengeance ^g of his temple.
- 12 ^h Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon,
 Make the watch strong,—set up the watchmen,—prepare the ambushes :³
 For the LORD hath both devised and done
 That which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.
- 13 ⁱ O thou that dwellest upon many waters,⁴—abundant in treasures,
 Thine end is come,—and the measure of thy covetousness.
- 14 ^k The LORD of hosts hath sworn by himself, saying,
 Surely I will fill thee with men, ^l as with caterpillars ;
 And they shall lift ^m up a shout against thee.
- 15 ⁿ He hath made the earth by his power,
 He hath established the world by his wisdom,
 And ^o hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.
- 16 ^p When he uttereth his voice, there is a multitude of waters in the heavens :
 And ^q he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth :
 He maketh lightnings with rain,—and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.
- 17 ^r Every man is brutish by his knowledge [or, is more brutish than to know] ;
 Every founder is confounded by the graven image :
^s For his molten image is falsehood,—and there is no breath in them.
- 18 ^t They are vanity, the work of errors :
 In the time of their visitation they shall perish.
- 19 ^u The portion of Jacob is not like them ;—for he is the former of all things :
 And Israel is the rod of his inheritance :—the LORD of hosts is his name.
- 20 ^x THOU⁵ art my battle ax⁶ and weapons of war :
 For with thee [or, by thee] will I ^y break in pieces the nations,
 And with thee will I destroy kingdoms ;
- 21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider ;
 And with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider ;
- 22 With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman ;
 And with thee will I break in pieces ^z old and young ;
 And with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid
- 23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock ;
 And with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen ;
 And with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.
- 24 ^a And I will render unto Babylon—and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea
 All their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight,—saith the LORD.

1 Comp. ch. xxv. 15, 16. The epithet 'golden' indicates the wealth and splendour of Babylon.

2 This appeal to her allies (ver. 8), and their reply (ver. 9), forcibly show the hopelessness of her restoration.

3 See note on ch. l. 24.

4 The Euphrates and its numerous canals, which passed through and near the city.

5 After addressing Babylon as his instrument of destruction (vers. 20—23), Jehovah threatens her with similar destruction (24—26), summons all the nations under the Medes to attack her (27, 28), and describes vividly the fright and cowardice of the people, and the sudden capture of the city (29—32), which is now at hand (33). Hearing Israel's complaints of Nebuchadnezzar's cruelties, and cries for vengeance (vers. 34, 35), Jehovah promises to punish Babylon, turning her land into a desert (36, 37), and her revelry into the sleep of death (38—40).

6 Rather, 'club.' As the verbs are in the past tense in Hebrew, they should be rendered, 'I have broken in pieces,' 'I have destroyed,' etc. ; and thus they apply to Babylon. Comp. Isa. x. 5, 15. Some, however, regard them as the prophetic past, and refer them to the future and to Cyrus.

- 25 Behold, I am against thee, ^b O destroying mountain, ¹—saith the LORD,
Which destroyest all the earth:—and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee,
And roll thee down from the rocks,—^c and will make thee a burnt mountain.
- 26 ^d And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner,—nor a stone for foundations;
^e But thou shalt be desolate for ever,—saith the LORD.
- 27 ^f Set ye up a standard in the land,
Blow the trumpet among the nations,—^g prepare the nations against her,
Call together against her ^h the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and ⁱ Ashchenaz;²
Appoint a captain against her;
Cause the horses to come up as the rough³ caterpillars.
- 28 Prepare against her the nations—with ^k the kings of the Medes,
The captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof,—and all the land of his dominion.
- 29 And the land shall tremble and sorrow:
^l For every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon,
^m To make the land of Babylon a desolation—without an inhabitant.
- 30 ⁿ The mighty men of Babylon have forborn to fight,
They have remained in their holds:
Their might hath failed;—^o they became as women:

To show the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end,⁵
- 32 And that ^r the passages are stopped,⁶—and the reeds they have burned with fire,
And the men of war are affrighted.
- 33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel;
The daughter of Babylon is ^s like a threshingfloor,—^t it is time to thresh⁷ her:
Yet a little while, ^u and the time of her harvest shall come.
- 34 Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon hath ^v devoured me,—he hath crushed me,
He hath made me an empty vessel,—he hath swallowed me up like a dragon,
He hath filled his belly with my delicates,—he hath cast me out.
- 35 ^w The violence done to me and to my flesh be upon Babylon, Shall the inhabitant of Zion say;
And my blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea,—shall Jerusalem say.
- 36 Therefore thus saith the LORD;
Behold, ^x I will plead thy cause,—and take vengeance for thee;
^y And I will dry up her sea,⁸—and make her springs dry.
- 37 ^z And Babylon shall become heaps,—a dwellingplace for dragons,
^a An astonishment, and an hissing,—without an inhabitant.
- 38 They shall roar together like lions:—they shall yell as lions' whelps.
- 39 In their heat⁹ I will make their feasts,
And ^b I will make them drunken,—that they may rejoice,
And sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake,—saith the LORD.
- 40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter,—like rams with he goats.

¹ Literally, 'mountain of destruction;' so in Prov. xxviii. 24, 'man of destruction,' i. e. destroyer. Some suppose this to be a reference to a volcano, which, after some destructive eruptions, spends itself and is 'burnt' out. The word 'mountain' is also applied by some to the high walls and lofty tower of the city (see Gen. xi. 4), which now present a vast mound of vitrified ruins. Others regard the word as merely emblematic of the elevation which the kingdom had attained, from which it was brought down to a mere heap of ashes.

² The mountainous countries towards the Caucasus and the Black Sea.

³ Representing the bristling spears of the riders.

⁴ Her 'bars of iron.' See Isa. xlv. 2.

⁵ Or, 'on every side.' Herodotus (b. i. c. 191) states that, owing to the great extent of Babylon, those who dwelt in the outskirts were taken prisoners by the Persians before the people in the centre of the city knew of the attack.

⁶ Rather, 'are taken.' The 'passages' are probably the ferries or fords across the river, which would naturally be guarded. But the channel of the river being dried, and the reeds burnt, either to clear the way or to hide the Persian troops by the smoke, the city was captured.

⁷ See notes on Isa. xxi. 10; xli. 15.

⁸ The Euphrates. The term is frequently applied in Scripture to large rivers. See Isa. xix. 5, and note.

⁹ That is, while they are heated with wine, I will prepare for them another sort of wine, the wine of my indignation. See note on Isa. xxi. 4.

¹⁰ Vers. 41—58 repeat the two-sided picture of Babylon's punishment and Israel's deliverance, contrasting the oppressor's present magnificence and splendour with her coming desolation. Babylon and her cities shall be taken and desolated (vers. 41—43) to punish her gods (44). Let Israel, therefore, flee out of the midst of her (45), joyfully regarding rumours and commotions (46) as indications of her speedy downfall (47); over which heaven and earth (48), the slain (49) and the living, who still love Jerusalem, shall exult (50); for, as Babylon has violated Jehovah's temple, so her gods and their worshippers shall be punished (51, 52), and her pride and power be humbled (53). Her sounds of gaiety, commerce, and triumph are to be exchanged, first, for the outcries of the vanquished (54, 55) under the retribution of Jehovah (56), and then for the silence of death (57); for her very walls and gates shall be utterly demolished (58).

42 ^g The sea is come up upon Babylon : She is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof. ¹	^g see Is. 8. 7, 8.
43 ^h Her cities are a desolation,—a dry land, and a wilderness, A land wherein no man dwelleth,—neither doth any son of man pass thereby.	^h ver. 29; ch. 50. 39, 40.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts ; ^g The broad walls ⁶ of Babylon shall be utterly broken, And her high gates shall be burned with fire ; And ^h the people shall labour in vain, And the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary. ⁷	^g ver. 44. ^h Hab. 2. 13.
59 The ⁸ word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon

¹ As the Euphrates floods the plains, so shall the country be inundated with invaders.

² That is, the riches of his temple, consisting of the spoils of conquered countries; especially the sacred vessels from Jerusalem, which had been placed there: see refs.

⁴ Or, 'Both Babylon is to fall, O ye slain of Israel; and with Babylon shall fall the slain of all the country.'

⁵ Or, 'For Jehovah is a God of recompences, He will surely requite.'

⁶ According to ancient historians, six chariots could be driven abreast on the walls of Babylon. These walls lasted above a thousand years after this prediction was uttered, but have now entirely disappeared.

⁷ Or, 'The people shall have laboured for vanity, and the folk [only] for the fire, and been wearied.' All the vast labours spent on the walls and palaces of Babylon shall be thrown away; for they shall come to the fire and to nothing.

⁸ This oracle against Babylon was not to be communicated at once to all the people, but to one individual (compare ch. xxx.) The announcement of deliverance to a people who gave no signs of penitence would only tend to harden them; but when made known it would serve greatly to revive the dejected spirits of the exiles.

60 in the fourth year of his reign. And this Seraiah was a quiet prince.¹ So 61 Jeremiah wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even all 62 these words that are written against Babylon. And Jeremiah said to Seraiah, 63 When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt read all these words;
 64 then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, to cut it off, that ^k none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be desolate 63 for ever. And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, 64 ^l that thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates: and thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her: ^m and they shall be weary.

Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

Second siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar; its capture and destruction; pillage of the temple; and deportation of many of the people.

52 ZEDEKIAH² was ⁿ one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And his mother's name was Hamutal the 2 daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah. And he did that which was evil in the eyes of 3 the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done. For through the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 And it came to pass in the ^o ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it 5 round about. So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, the famine was sore
 7 in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land. Then the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about:) and they went by 8 the way of the plain. But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army was scattered 9 from him. ^p Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon, to Riblah in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 ^q And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew 11 also all the princes of Judah in Riblah. Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death.

12 ^r Now in the fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, ^s which was the nine-tenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, ^t came Nebuzar-adan, captain of 13 the guard, which served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem, and burned the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and 14 all the houses of the great men, burned he with fire. And all the army of the Chaldeans, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 ^u Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the 16 multitude. But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor 17 of the land for vinedressers and for husbandmen. ^x Also the ^y pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brasen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them 18 to Babylon. ^z The caldrons also, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they 19 away. And the basins, and the firepans [or, censers], and the bowls, and the caldrons, and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard 20 away. The two pillars, one sea, and twelve brasen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD: ^a the brass of 21 all these vessels was without weight. And concerning the ^b pillars, the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and 22 the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow. And a chapter of brass was upon it; and the height of one chapter was five cubits, with network and pomegranates upon the chapters round about, all of brass. The second pillar

24 And ^dthe captain of the guard took Seraiah the chief priest, ^eand Zephaniah
25 the second priest, and the three keepers of the door: he took also out of the city an eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that were near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of 26 the people of the land, that were found in the midst of the city. So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard took them, and brought them to the king of 27 Babylon to Riblah. And the king of Babylon smote them, and put them to death in Riblah in the land of Hamath. Thus Judah was carried away captive out of his own land.

¹ There is an apparent discrepancy between these numbers and those in 2 Kings xxiv. 14, 16; and various explanations of it have been suggested. It appears to be most probable, either that these deportations were additional to those mentioned in 2 Kings xxiv., and that they are introduced here to show that the people were taken away on other occasions beside the great deportations; or that this is the number of men carried away 'from Jerusalem' alone, the larger numbers in 2 Kings xxiv. including men from all the land of Judah. The whole number of exiles, including women and children, probably exceeded 50,000.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

THIS book is an appendix to the prophecies of Jeremiah, of which in the ancient Scriptures it formed a part. It consists of five elegies, in which the prophet pathetically expresses his grief for the miseries of famine, the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem, the cessation of public worship, and the other calamities with which his countrymen had been visited for their sins. His great object evidently was to teach the suffering Jews neither 'to despise the chastening of the Lord, nor to faint when rebuked of him;' but to turn to God with deep repentance, confessing their sins, and humbly looking to him for pardon and deliverance.

As a composition, this book is remarkable for the great variety of pathetic images which it contains, all expressive of the deepest sorrow, and worthy of the subject which they are designed to illustrate.

Each of these poems consists of twenty-two stanzas. All but the last are in the Hebrew alphabetical acrostics, and the lines are longer than is usual in Hebrew poetry. The first three consist chiefly of triplets, and the stanzas commence with the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet in regular order. The third has this further peculiarity, that all the three lines in each stanza begin with the same letter. In the fourth, each stanza consists only of two lines. And the last resembles in its structure the ordinary poetry.

- * She dwelleth among the heathen, she findeth no rest :
 † All her persecutors overtook her between the straits.¹
- 4 ^m The ways of Zion² do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts :
 All her gates are desolate : her priests sigh,
 Her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.
- 5 Her adversaries ⁿ are the chief,³ her enemies prosper ;
 For the LORD hath afflicted her ^o for the multitude of her transgressions :
 Her ^p children are gone into captivity before the enemy.
- 6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed :
 Her princes are become like harts that find no pasture,
 And they are gone without strength before the pursuer.
- 7 Jerusalem remembered, in the days of her affliction and of her miseries,
 All her ^q pleasant things that she had in the days of old,
 When her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her :
 † The adversaries saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.⁴
- 8 ^s Jerusalem hath grievously sinned ; therefore she is † removed :⁵
 All that honoured her despise her, because ^t they have seen her nakedness :
 Yea, ^u she sigheth, and turneth backward.
- 9 ^v Her filthiness is in her skirts ;⁶ she ^z remembereth not her last end ;
 Therefore she came down wonderfully : ^a she had no comforter.
 O LORD, behold my ⁷ affliction : for the enemy hath magnified himself.
- 10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon ^b all her pleasant things :
 For she hath seen that ^c the heathen entered into her sanctuary,
 Whom thou didst command that ^d they should not enter into thy congregation.
- 11 All her people sigh, ^e they seek bread ;
 They have given their pleasant things for meat to relieve the soul :⁸
 See, O LORD, and consider ; for I am become vile.
- 12 Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by ?
 Behold, and see ^f if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, Wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.
- 13 From above hath he sent ^g fire into my bones, and it prevaieth against them :
 He hath ^h spread a net for my feet, he hath turned me back :
 He hath made me desolate and faint all the day.
- 14 ⁱ The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand : they are wreathed,⁹
And come up upon my neck : he hath made my strength to fall, ^j The Lord hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.
- 15 The Lord hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me :
 He hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men :
 † The Lord hath trodden the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a winepress.¹⁰
- 16 For these things I weep ; ^m mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water,
 Because ⁿ the comforter¹¹ that should relieve my soul is far from me :
 My children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.
- 17 ^o Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and ^p there is none to comfort her :
 † The LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him :
 Jerusalem is as a menstruous woman among them.
- 18 The LORD is ^r righteous ; for I have ^s rebelled against his commandment :
 Hear, I pray you, all people, and behold my sorrow :
 My virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.
- 19 I called for my lovers, but ^t they deceived me :
 My priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city, † While they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

Elegy II. The siege and famine, the capture and destruction of Jerusalem.

- 2 HOW hath the Lord ^f covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, ^g And cast down from heaven unto the earth ^h the beauty of Israel,
 And remembered not ⁱ his footstool⁵ in the day of his anger!
- 2 The Lord hath ^k swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, ^l and hath not pitied:
^m He hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah;
ⁿ He hath brought them down to the ground: he hath polluted the kingdom and

- 3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horn⁶ of Israel:
^o He hath drawn back his right hand⁷ from before the enemy,
^p And he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.
- 4 ^q He hath bent his bow like an enemy, he stood with his right hand as an adversary,
 And slew ^r all that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion:
 He poured out his fury like fire.
- 5 ^s The Lord was as an enemy: he hath swallowed up Israel, ^t He hath swallowed up all her palaces: he hath destroyed his strong holds,
 And hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.
- 6 And he hath violently ^u taken away his tabernacle,⁸ ^x as if it were of a garden:
 He hath destroyed his places of the assembly:
^y The LORD hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion,
 And hath despised in the indignation of his anger ^z the king and the priest.
- 7 ^a The Lord hath cast off his altar, he hath abhorred his sanctuary,
^b He hath given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces;
^c They have made a noise in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.⁹
- 8 The LORD hath ^d purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion:
^e He hath stretched out a line, he hath not withdrawn his hand from destroying:
 Therefore he made ^f the rampart and the wall to lament; they languished together.
- 9 Her gates are sunk into the ground; he hath destroyed and ^g broken her bars:
^h Her king and her princes are among the Gentiles:
ⁱ The law is no more; her ^k prophets also find no vision from the LORD.
- 10 The elders of the daughter of Zion ^l sit upon the ground, and keep silence:
 They have ^m cast up dust upon their heads; they have ⁿ girded themselves with sackcloth:
 The virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.
- 11 ^o Mine eyes do fail with tears, ^p my bowels are troubled, ^q My liver is poured¹⁰ upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people;
 Because ^r the children and the sucklings swoon in the streets of the city.
- 12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine?
 When they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city,
 When their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.
- 13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? ^s what thing shall I liken to thee,
 O daughter of Jerusalem?
 What shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion?

1 That is, 'is vehemently agitated,' an allusion to the bodily excitement connected with intense grief.

2 That is, death by pestilence or famine.

3 That is, announced; when thou wilt execute thy judgments on my oppressors.

4 See note on Ps. v. 10.

5 Some, referring to 1 Chron. xxviii. 2, think that the ark is meant. But probably the term refers to the temple as the earthly (in contrast to the heavenly) dwelling-place of God. See Isa. lxvi. 1.

6 All her power and glory: see note on 1 Sam. ii. 1.

9 They have triumphed over us with festive shouts.

10 See note on ch. i. 20.

11 Thy destruction is as vast as the sea.

- 14 Thy ^x prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee :
And they have not ^y discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity ;
But have seen for thee ^z false burdens ¹ and causes of banishment.
- 15 ^a All that pass by ^b clap their hands at thee ;
^c They hiss ^d and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying,
*Is this the city that men call 'The perfection of beauty, The joy of the whole earth?'*²
- 16 ^f All thine enemies have opened their mouth against thee :
They hiss and gnash the teeth : they say, ^g We have swallowed her up :
Certainly this is the day that we looked for ; we have found, ^h we have seen it.
- 17 The LORD hath done that which he had ⁱ devised ;
He hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old :
^k He hath thrown down, and hath not pitied :
And he hath caused thine enemy to ^l rejoice over thee,
He hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.
- 18 Their heart ³ cried unto the Lord,
O ^m wall ⁴ of the daughter of Zion, ⁿ let tears run down like a river day and night :
Give thyself no rest ; let not the apple of thine eye cease.
- 19 Arise, ^o cry out in the night : in the beginning of the ^p watches ⁵
^q Pour out thine heart like water before the face of the Lord :
Lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, ^r That faint for hunger ^s in the top of every street.
- 20 Behold, O LORD, and ^t consider to whom thou hast done this.
^u Shall the women eat their fruit, ⁶ and children of a span long ?
^v Shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord ?
- 21 ^y The young and the old lie on the ground in the streets :
My virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword ;
^z Thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger ; ^a thou hast killed, and not pitied.
- 22 Thou hast called as in a solemn day ^b my terrors round about, ⁷
So that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped nor remained :
^c Those that I have swaddled and brought up hath mine enemy consumed.

Elegy III. Jeremiah's penitential grief for his own and his country's sufferings.

- 3 ^d I AM the man ⁸ that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.
2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light.
3 Surely against me is he turned ; he turneth his hand against me all the day. ⁹
4 ^e My flesh and my skin hath he made old ; he hath ^f broken my bones.
5 ^g He hath builded against me, ¹⁰ and compassed me with ^h gall ¹¹ and travail.
6 ⁱ He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.
7 ^k He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out : ^l he hath made my chain heavy.
8 Also ^m when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.
9 He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone, he hath made my paths crooked.
10 ⁿ He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.
11 He hath turned aside my ways, and ^o pulled me in pieces : he hath made me desolate.
12 He hath bent his bow, and ^p set me as a mark for the arrow.
13 He hath caused ^q the arrows of his quiver to enter into my reins.
14 I was a ^r derision to all my people ; and ^s their song all the day.
15 ^t He hath filled me with bitterness, he hath made me drunken with wormwood.
16 He hath also ^u broken my teeth ^x with gravel stones ; ¹² ^y he hath covered me with ashes.
17 And thou hast removed my soul far off from peace : I forgot prosperity.
18 ^z And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the LORD.
19 Remembering ¹³ mine affliction and my misery, ^a the wormwood and the gall.
20 ^b My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is humbled in me.
21 This I recall to my mind, ^c therefore have I hope.

7 Thou hast collected all kinds of fear and suffering in great numbers around me.

8 Through this chapter the prophet speaks in his own name, evidently with the view of leading his countrymen to consider their own personal share in the sins which had caused the public calamities, and to participate in the penitence which was essential to their removal.

9 That is, He smites me again and again.

13 Or, 'Remember my affliction and my homelessness,

- 22 ^d It is of the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, ' because his compassions fail not.
- 23 They are new ' every morning : ' great is thy faithfulness.
- 24 The LORD is my ^h portion, saith my soul ; therefore will I hope in him.
- 25 The LORD is good unto them that ⁱ wait for him, ^k to the soul that seeketh him.
- 26 ⁱ It is good that a man should both hope ^m and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.
- 27 ⁿ It is good for a man that he bear the yoke¹ in his youth.
- 28 ^o He sitteth alone and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.²
- 29 ^p He putteth his mouth in the dust ; ^q if so be there may be hope.
- 30 ^r He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him : he is filled full with reproach.
- 31 ^s For the LORD will not cast off for ever :
- 32 But though he cause grief, ^t yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.
- 33 For ^u he doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men.
- 34 To crush⁴ under his feet ^x all the prisoners of the earth,
- 35 ^y To turn aside the right of a man before the face of the Most High,
- 36 To subvert a man in his cause, ^z the Lord approveth not.

the wormwood and the gall; Thou wilt surely remember, and that my soul is bowed down within me.' Vers. 19—42 contain a most instructive example of submissive confidence in God, under overwhelming trials.

² Rather, 'because he (Jehovah) hath laid it upon him.'

³ Receiving without murmuring the corrections laid on him by God. The same spirit of humility is indicated in the following verse. Indignities from our fellow-men are patiently submitted to when we regard them as deserved Divine chastisements. See 2 Sam. xvi. 11.

⁴ The present version gives a good sense. But perhaps the following will agree better with the context: 'The crushing under one's feet, etc.; the turning aside, etc.; the wronging a man in his cause—doth not the Lord see?' Does not God know and order all things? (37, 38). Let none therefore murmur against Him, who knows all their sins, but in his severest chastisements has spared their lives, giving them space to repent (39). Let them search their hearts, etc. (40).

⁵ Acceptable confession requires not only sincerity, but knowledge of our own hearts, as tested by God's word.

⁶ Probably, 'Thou hast covered thyself;' see next verse.

⁷ See note on Isa. xxiv. 17.

⁸ Closing my dungeon with a stone (see Dan. vi. 17). Or 'stone' may be taken collectively for 'stones.'

Elegy IV. The miseries of the various classes of the people.

- 1 HOW is ^a the gold become dim! how is the most fine gold changed!
The stones of the sanctuary are poured out ^r in the top of every street.¹
- 2 The precious sons of Zion, comparable to fine gold,
How are they esteemed ^s as earthen pitchers, the work of the hands of the potter!
- 3 Even the sea monsters² draw out the breast, they give suck to their young ones:
^t 'The daughter of my people is become cruel, ^u like the ostriches³ in the wilderness.
- 4 ^x The tongue of the sucking child cleaveth to the roof of his mouth for thirst:
^y The young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them.
- 5 They that did feed delicately are desolate in the streets:
They that were ^z brought up in scarlet ^a embrace dunghills.
- 6 For the punishment of the iniquity of the daughter of my people is greater than the punishment of the sin of Sodom,
That was ^b overthrown as in a moment, and no hands stayed on her.
- 7 Her ^c Nazarites⁴ were purer than snow, they were whiter than milk,
They were more ruddy in body than rubies, their polishing⁵ was of sapphire:
- 8 Their visage is ^d blacker than a coal,⁶ they are not known in the streets:
^e Their skin cleaveth to their bones; it is withered, it is become like a stick.
- 9 They that be slain with the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger:
For these ^f pine away, stricken through⁷ for want of the fruits of the field.
- 10 ^g The hands of the ^h pitiful⁸ women have sodden their own children:
They were their ⁱ meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people.
- 11 ^k The LORD hath accomplished his fury; ^l he hath poured out his fierce anger.
And ^m hath kindled a fire in Zion, and it hath devoured the foundations thereof.
- 12 ⁿ The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world, would not have believed
That the adversary and the enemy should have entered into the gates of Jerusalem.⁹
- 13 ^o For the sins of her prophets, and the iniquities of her priests, ^p That have shed the blood of the just in the midst of her,
- 14 ^q They have wandered¹⁰ as blind men in the streets, ^r they have polluted themselves with blood,
^s So that men could not touch their garments.
- 15 They cried unto them, Depart ye, it is ^t 'unclean; depart, depart, touch not:
When they fled away and wandered,
They said among the heathen, They shall no more sojourn there.
- 16 The anger of the LORD ^u hath divided¹¹ them; he will no more regard them:
^x They respected not the persons of the priests, they favoured not the elders.
- 17 As for us, ^y our eyes as yet failed for our vain help;
In our watching we have watched for a nation that could not save us.¹²
- 18 ^z They hunt our steps, that we cannot go in our streets:
Our end is near, our days are fulfilled; for ^a our end is come.
- 19 Our persecutors are ^b swifter than the eagles of the heaven:
They pursued us upon the mountains, they laid wait for us in the wilderness.
- 20 The ^c breath of our nostrils, ^d the anointed of the LORD, ^e was taken in their pits,
Of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall live among the heathen.
- 21 ^f Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom,¹³ that dwellest in the land of Uz;
^g The cup also shall pass through unto thee: thou shalt be drunken, and shalt make thyself naked.
- 22 ^h The punishment of thine iniquity is accomplished, O daughter of Zion; ⁱ he will no more carry thee away into captivity:
^j He will visit thine iniquity, O daughter of Edom; he will discover thy sins.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

EZEKIEL (whose name means 'God will strengthen' or 'prevail') was, like Jeremiah, a priest as well as a prophet. He was among those Jews who were carried captive by Nebuchadnezzar, with Jehoiachin king of Judah, and were settled on the river Chebar, in the northern part of Mesopotamia; where they would meet the descendants of the earlier exiles from the ten tribes, some of whom had been located in this neighbourhood. Here he received his commission as a prophet in the fifth year of his captivity, soon after Jeremiah's message to the exiles (Jer. ch. xxix.), and about six years before Jerusalem was destroyed; and he continued to prophesy for at least twenty-two years, probably at the same place. He was evidently much esteemed by his countrymen; for their elders came frequently to inquire what message God had sent through him. His personal character was as remarkable as his writings for vigour and energy. He was eminently fitted to oppose the people of 'stubborn front and hard heart' to whom he was sent. How thoroughly he was devoted to his work is apparent in the touching account which he gives of his conduct when his wife died (ch. xxiv. 15—18). Tradition says that he was put to death by a leader among his fellow-exiles. In the middle ages, a building near Bagdad was shown as his tomb.

Ezekiel was contemporary with Jeremiah and Daniel, and probably with Habakkuk. Jeremiah's ministry began thirty-four years before that of Ezekiel, and continued for six or seven years after its commencement. Daniel was known as an interpreter of dreams, and was highly honoured for sanctity and wisdom, before Ezekiel became a prophet; but most of his predictions were not delivered till a much later period.

The messages of this prophet were delivered partly before and partly after the destruction of Jerusalem. Before that event they consist mainly of rebuke and condemnation; for their immediate object was to awaken the Jews to a sense of their guilt and danger, and to lead them to repentance; especially warning them against the attempt to shake off the Babylonian yoke by the help of Egypt; and assuring them that the destruction of their city and temple was near at hand. After that event they are remarkably consolatory, and peculiarly adapted to reanimate the exiles by the prospects of future deliverance and prosperity. The predictions respecting foreign nations come between these two great divisions, and were for the most part uttered during the interval between the Divine intimation of the siege of Jerusalem (ch. xxiv. 2) and the arrival of the news of its fall (ch. xxxiii. 21).

The prophecies of Ezekiel are remarkable not only for the frequency of symbolic representations, but also for the repeated use of images derived from the writings of his predecessors, which however supply only the germs of lengthened and elaborate descriptions. Thus the simple and sublime outlines of David and Isaiah are here filled in with numerous picturesque details. Compare Psa. ii., cx., with ch. xxxviii., xxxix; and Isa. xxvii. 19, with ch. xxxvii. 1—14. And this characteristic of the prophet must be borne in mind in order to understand aright many parts of his writings, especially the sustained allegory in ch. xl.—xlviii.

In the prophecies of Ezekiel, as in those of Isaiah, allusions to the person and kingdom of Messiah are usually connected with promises of the return of the Jews to Canaan. But, in accordance with the character of his mind, these subjects are presented in figurative language, with the greatest particularity of detail. This is observable especially in the last nine chapters of the book, where a new vast temple with its furniture and service, a new city far larger than the former, a new land much more extensive than Canaan, and divided equally among the tribes of Israel, are minutely described as the material representation of the church and people of God, consecrated, united, and extended under the dominion of the true David (ch. xxxiv. 23).

The book may be divided into nine sections, which are for the most part chronologically arranged as follows:—

- I. Ezekiel's call to the prophetic office (ch. i.—iii. 14).
- II. Symbolical representations and predictions of the approaching destruction of Jerusalem, and the sufferings of the people; with a promise of the preservation of a remnant (ch. iii. 15—vii.).
- III. Visions presented to the prophet a year and two months later than the former, exhibiting the temple polluted by Egyptian, Phœnician, and Assyrian idolatries, and the consequent judgments on the inhabitants of Jerusalem and on the priests; a few faithful being marked for exemption; closing with promises of better times and a purer worship (ch. viii.—xi.).

IV. A series of reproofs and warnings directed against the prevalent sins and errors of the people, calls to repentance, and renewed threatenings of punishment, which is shown to be the consequence of their own acts, and not only of the sins of their fathers (ch. xii.—xix.).

V. Another series of warnings, delivered about a year later, announcing the coming judgments to be yet nearer; accompanied with promises of future mercy (ch. xx.—xxiii.).

VI. Predictions, uttered two years and five months later, announcing to the exiles the beginning of the siege of Jerusalem on that very day (comp. 2 Kings xxv. 1), and assuring them of its complete overthrow (ch. xxiv.).

VII. Predictions of approaching Divine judgments on surrounding heathen nations (ch. xxv.—xxxii.).

VIII. Exhortations to the Jews, to repent and reform, delivered after the destruction of Jerusalem; prophecies of the future restoration of Israel, the overthrow of their enemies, and the triumphs of the kingdom of God upon earth (ch. xxxiii.—xxxix.).

IX. Symbolic representations of the establishment and prosperity of the kingdom of Christ (ch. xl.—xlviii.).

The Divine vision beheld by Ezekiel; and his prophetic commission, duties, and encouragements.

- 1 NOW¹ it came to pass "in the thirtieth year,² in the fourth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I was among the captives³ by the river of Chebar,³
- 2 that "the heavens were opened, and I saw⁴ visions of God. In the fifth day of
- 3 the month, which was the fifth year of "king Jehoiachin's captivity, the word of the LORD came expressly unto Ezekiel the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chebar; and 'the hand of the LORD was there upon him.
- 4 And I looked, and, behold, "a whirlwind came⁵ out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself,⁴ and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire.⁵
- 5 'Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four living creatures.⁶
- 6 And "this was their appearance; they had 'the likeness of a man.⁷ And every
- 7 one had four faces, and every one had four wings. And their feet were straight feet; and the sole of their feet was like the sole of "a calf's foot: and they
- 8 sparkled "like the colour of burnished brass. "And they had the hands of a man under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and
- 9 their wings. "Their wings were joined one to another; "they turned not⁸ when
- 10 they went; they went every one straight forward. As for "the likeness of their faces, they four "had the face of a man, "and the face of a lion, on the right side: "and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; "they four
- 11 also had the face of an eagle. Thus were their faces: and their wings were stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and "two

1 Ch. i.—iii. 14 form the introduction to the book, containing its date and author (vers. 1—3); the vision of God which Ezekiel beheld (4—28); the commission given to him (ii. 1—7); with a symbolical representation of it, and of his duty with regard to it (8—10; iii. 1—14).

2 Of what era the prophet does not say. It was therefore probably a public and common one; perhaps the era of the independence of Babylon under Nabopolassar.

3 The 'Chaboras' of the Greeks; now the 'Khabour'; a river which joins the Euphrates from the east near the ancient 'Carchemish' ('Circesium,' now Kerkesiyeh), about three hundred miles north of Babylon.

4 Or, 'catching itself'; perhaps meaning unintermitted. The expression occurs only in one other passage, Exod. ix. 24. The appearance seems to have been that of a dark storm-cloud, in which was an incessant blaze like lightning, the centre being a clear, intense light. In this, as it approached, were seen the forms of four living creatures (recognised as cherubim, though different from those in the temple), having wheels beside them, and supporting a blue expanse above, on which was enthroned Jehovah in human form. As the ark with the cherubim, in the temple, represented the throne of the invisible King of Israel (see note on Isa. vi. 1); so this vision seems to bring Him before us, in his chariot, coming to perform a great work. And the absence of the significant mercy-seat, which was above the ark, suggests the thought, that his coming now is to vindicate his holiness rather than to display his grace to Israel; whilst the addition of the rainbow yet gives hope to the world. This august vision was designed to prepare Ezekiel for his prophetic office. As many of its duties would expose him to the hostility of his fellow-men, it was most important that his mind should be deeply impressed with a sense of the reality, majesty, and power of the Divine providence and perfections.

5 Rather, 'and it (masc. the cloud) had a brightness around, and from the midst of it (fem. the fire) like an eye of gold alloy' (i. e. a clear centre of golden light), from the midst of the fire.

6 On the cherubim see notes on Gen. iii. 24; Exod. xxv. 18. The four faces and four wings, and other variations, were probably intended to suggest intelligence and energy corresponding with the rest of the vision.

7 In their erect stature; their feet, however, were not flat, but upright (ver. 7).

8 Having a face in every direction, they had no need to turn.

12 covered their bodies.¹ And ² they went every one straight forward: ^a whither 13 the spirit² was to go, they went; and ^b they turned not when they went. As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like ^c burning coals of fire, ^d and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.
 14 And the living creatures ^e ran and returned ^f as the appearance of a flash of lightning.³
 15 Now as I beheld the living creatures, behold ^g one wheel⁴ upon the earth by 16 the living creatures, with his four faces. ^h The appearance of the wheels and their work was ⁱ like unto the colour of a beryl:⁵ and they four had one likeness:
 and their appearance and their work was as it were ^k a wheel in the middle of a 17 wheel. When they went, they went upon their four sides: ^l and they turned 18 not when they went. As for their rings, they were so high that they were dreadful; and their rings were ^m full of eyes round about them four.
 19 And ⁿ when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them: and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.
 20 ^o Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels were lifted up over against them: ^p for the spirit of the living 21 creature [or, of life] was in the wheels. ^q When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature [or, of life] was in the wheels.
 22 ^r And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal,⁶ stretched forth over their heads above.
 23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other:
 every one had two, ^s which covered on this side, and every one had two, which 24 covered on that side, their bodies. ^t And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings, ^u like the noise of great waters, as ^v the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host:⁷ when they stood, they let down their 25 wings. And there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.⁸
 26 ^y And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, ^z as the appearance of a sapphire stone: and upon the likeness of the 27 throne was the likeness as ^a the appearance of a man⁹ above upon it. ^b And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it, from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire, and it had brightness 28 round about. ^c As the appearance of the bow that is in the cloud in the day of rain, so was the appearance of the brightness round about.
^d This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the LORD. And when I saw it, ^e I fell upon my face, and I heard a voice of one that spake.
 2 And he said unto me, ^f Son of man,¹⁰ ^g stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee. And ^h the spirit entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me.
 3 And he said unto me, Son of man, ⁱ I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation¹¹ that hath rebelled against me: ^k they and their fathers have 4 transgressed against me, even unto this very day. ^l For they are impudent children and stiffhearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto 5 them, Thus saith the Lord God. ^m And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet¹² ⁿ shall know that there hath been a prophet among them.

1 In token of humility.

2 They were moved by an immediate Divine impulse.

3 That is, with the greatest velocity.

4 That is, one by each of the living creatures. Each wheel being composed of two rims intersecting each other at right angles, four semicircular parts or 'faces' were thus formed, and the wheels seemed to move in any direction without turning. Their astonishing height, numerous eyes, power of rapid motion, and sympathy with the living creatures, greatly heighten the impression of Divine intelligence and omnipotence which the whole vision appears to be designed to convey.

5 Heb., 'tarshish'; so called from the country whence it came. It is probably the chrysolite or topaz.

6 Rather, 'as a glance of the terrible (dazzling) crystal'; perhaps the diamond. Comp. Rev. iv. 6.

7 Or, 'a noise of a tumult.'

8 The last clause, which is repeated from ver. 24, is omitted by the Septuagint and Syriac versions. If retained, it had better be rendered, 'when they had stood still, and had let down their wings;' as being designed to show that the chariot stopped when Jehovah spoke.

9 God was pleased to appear in human form also to Daniel (Dan. vii. 9). These manifestations of Jehovah might serve to prepare the minds of his people for the incarnation of our Lord.

10 This phrase is applied only to Ezekiel and Daniel, both of whom prophesied in Chaldea, where it was a common expression, equivalent to 'O man!'

11 Literally, 'nations,' or 'peoples;' the common designation of the heathen; perhaps implying that Israel had become like them. See Hos. i. 9.

12 If the warning did not profit them, it would yet vindicate the justice and mercy of God.

- 6 And thou, son of man, ^o be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though ^p briars and thorns be with thee, and thou dost dwell among ^q scorpions: ¹ ^r be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, ⁷ though they be a rebellious house. 'And thou shalt speak my words unto them, ^u whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear: for they are most rebellious.
- 8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like ⁹ that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and ^{eat} ² that I give thee. And when I looked, behold, ^v an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, ^z a roll³ of a book was ¹⁰ therein; and he spread it before me: and it was written within and without: ⁴ and there was written therein ^a lamentations, and mourning, and woe.
- ³ Moreover he said unto me, ^b Son of man, eat that thou findest; ^c eat this roll, ² and ^d go speak unto the house of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he caused ³ me to eat that roll. And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and ^e fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I ^f eat it; and it was in my mouth ⁵ as honey for sweetness.
- ⁴ And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and ⁵ speak with my words unto them. For thou art not sent to a people of a strange ⁶ speech and of an hard language, but to the house of Israel; not to many people of a strange speech and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand. Surely, ^h had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened ⁷ unto thee. But the house of Israel ⁱ will not hearken unto thee; ^k for they will not hearken unto me: ^l for all the house of Israel are impudent and hardhearted ⁸ [Heb. stiff of forehead, and hard of heart]. Behold, I have made thy face strong ⁹ against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads. ^m As an adamant harder than flint have I made thy forehead: ⁿ fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.
- ¹⁰ Moreover he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto ¹¹ thee, receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears. And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, ^o Thus saith the Lord God; whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.
- ¹² Then ^p the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me ^q a voice of a great ¹³ rushing, saying, Blessed be ^r the glory of the Lord, from his place. ⁶ I heard also ^s the noise of the wings of the living creatures that touched one another, and the noise ^t of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing. ¹⁴ So ^u the spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; but ^v the hand of the Lord was strong⁷ upon me.

- ¹⁵ THEN⁸ I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib,⁹ that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and ^v I sat where they sat,¹⁰ and remained there astonished among them seven days.
- ¹⁶ And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of the Lord came ¹⁷ unto me, saying, ^z Son of man, I have made thee ^a a watchman¹¹ unto the house of Israel: therefore ^b hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from ¹⁸ me. ⁶ The sound of praise came from the place where the chariot of the Almighty was.

⁷ I was under a powerful Divine impulse.

⁸ Having received his commission, the prophet is solemnly warned of the responsibility of his office (vers. 15—21), is permitted again to see Jehovah's glory, and is told that he must speak only when and as God pleases (22—27). He is then bidden to represent by expressive symbols the siege of Jerusalem (iv. 1—3), the exact adaptation of the Jews' chastisements to their sins (4—8), the destitution and sufferings of the people (9—17), the destruction of many, and the dispersion of the remnant, some even of the latter being afterwards destroyed (v. 1—4). These he follows up by three discourses containing the same threatenings, and showing that every sin would be visited with appropriate punishment (5—17; vi., vii.) The great design of these messages appears to be to teach the people, on the one hand, that obedience was indispensable to the enjoyment of God's favour, and, on the other, that the most guilty who would return to God should certainly be forgiven.

⁹ Probably the chief colony of Jews on the Chebar.

¹⁰ This was the common attitude of grief; and seven days was the usual period of deep mourning (Job ii. 13). This proof of the prophet's sympathy with his exiled brethren ought to have gained their confidence and their attention to his message.

¹¹ The unusual solemnity of this appointment was an impressive testimony to the people of their imminent danger in consequence of their obstinate depravity.

him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, ^e to save his life; the same wicked man ^f shall die in his iniquity; ^g but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; ^h but thou hast delivered thy soul.

20 Again, When a ⁱ righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, ¹ ^k and I lay a stumblingblock ² before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, ^l and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; ^m but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless ⁿ if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also ^o thou hast delivered thy soul.

22 ^p And the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, go forth ^q into the plain, and I will there talk with thee. Then I arose, and went forth into the plain: and, behold, ^r the glory of the LORD stood there, as the glory which I ^s saw by the river of Chebar: ^t and I fell on my face. Then ^u the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, shut thyself within thine house. But thou, O son of man, behold, ^x they shall put bands upon thee, and shall bind thee ³ with them, and thou shalt not go out among them: and ^y I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb, ^z and shalt not be to them a reprover: ⁴ ^a for they are a rebellious house. ^b But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, ^c Thus saith the Lord God; ^d He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear: ^e for they are a rebellious house.

4 Thou also, son of man, ^f take thee a tile, ⁵ and lay it before thee, and pourtray ² upon it the city, ^g even Jerusalem: and lay siege against it, and build a fort against it, and cast a mount against it; set the camp also against it, and set ³ ^h battering rams against it round about. Moreover take thou unto thee an iron pan, and set it ⁱ for a wall of iron between thee and the city: and set thy face against it, and it shall be besieged, and thou shalt lay siege against it. ^j This shall be a sign to the house of Israel.

4 Lie thou also upon thy left side, and lay the iniquity of the house of Israel upon it: ^k according to the number of the days that thou shalt lie upon it thou shalt bear their iniquity. ⁶ For I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days, three hundred and ninety days: ⁷ ^l so shalt thou bear the iniquity of the house of Israel. And when thou hast accomplished them, lie again on thy right side, and thou shalt bear the iniquity of the house of Judah forty days: I have appointed thee each day for a year.

7 Therefore thou shalt set thy face toward the siege of Jerusalem, and thine arm ⁸ shall be uncovered, ⁷ and thou shalt prophesy against it. ^l And, behold, I will lay bands upon thee, and thou shalt not turn thee from one side to another, till thou hast ended the days of thy siege.

1 The most eminent in holiness is safe only as he keeps constantly in mind his liability to fall; watching over himself with a godly jealousy, and praying and striving against all evil.

2 Allowing him to be placed where his principles are put to a severe test.

3 Some suppose the meaning to be, that the prophet would be regarded as a madman needing restraint. Others think that the obstinacy of the people would be felt by the prophet like bands repressing his soul. But see note on ver. 15.

4 It is a sign of God's anger when his admonitions cease.

5 Rather, 'brick.' Such bricks, on which inscriptions and designs were portrayed by stamping or engraving when moist, were much used in Chaldea; and are found in great numbers in the ruins of its cities. There can be little doubt that the successive actions here described took place only in vision, like the eating of the prophetic roll mentioned in ch. iii. 1—3.

6 As this phrase always means to bear the punishment due to sin (see Numb. xiv. 33; Lev. xix. 8; Isa. liii. 11; Ezek. xviii. 19, 20; xxiii. 35), it is clear that the periods represented are those, not of committing sin, but of enduring chastisement for sins already committed; although the appointment of a day for a year may only indicate a period of punishment duly proportioned to 390 and 40 years of sin. Comp. Numb. xiv. 34. But it is difficult to determine what are these periods of 390 and 40 years. Fairbairn supposes them to refer to the 430 years of sojourn in Canaan and Egypt (Exod. xii. 41), and the 40 years of wandering in the wilderness; and to intimate that Israel must be chastised like their forefathers in Egypt, and Judah as the Israelites were in the desert. This, however, would seem to require 430 and 40 years, instead of 390 and 40. The common explanation is, that the 390 years refer to the period between the accession of Rehoboam and Jeroboam (B. C. 977) when idolatry was established in Israel, and the capture of the last remaining city of Judah by Nebuchadnezzar (B. C. 587); and that the 40 years for Judah refer to 40 years in which Judah continued to sin after the ten tribes had been punished, during part of the reign of Manasseh and during those of Amon and of Josiah's successors. But this explanation is very doubtful.

5 And thou, son of man, take thee a sharp knife, take thee a barber's razor, ^x and

 3 in the wind; and ^b I will draw out a sword after them. ^c Thou shalt also take

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD;—^e This is Jerusalem:
 I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.

6 And ^f she hath changed my judgments into wickedness⁴ more than the nations,
 And my statutes more than the countries that are round about her:
 For they have refused my judgments and my statutes,
 They have not walked in them.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD;
 Because ye multiplied⁵ more than the nations that are round about you,
 And have not walked in my statutes,—neither have kept my judgments, ^g Neither have done according to the judgments of the nations⁶ that are round about you;

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD;—Behold, I, even I, am against thee,
 And will execute judgments ^h in the midst of thee—in the sight of the nations.

9 ⁱ And I will do in thee that which I have not done,
 And whereunto I will not do any more the like,—because of all thine abominations.

10 Therefore the fathers ^k shall eat the sons in the midst of thee,
 And the sons shall eat their fathers;—and I will execute judgments in thee,
 And the whole remnant of thee will I ^l scatter into all the winds.

11 Wherefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD;
 Surely, because thou hast ^m defiled my sanctuary⁷
 With all thy ⁿ detestable things, and with all thine abominations,
 Therefore will I also diminish thee;

^o Neither shall mine eye spare,—neither will I have any pity.

12 ^p A third part of thee shall die with the pestilence,
 And with famine shall they be consumed in the midst of thee:

And a third part shall fall by the sword round about thee;

And ^q I will scatter a third part into all the winds,

And ^r I will draw out a sword after them.

13 Thus shall mine anger ^s be accomplished,
 And I will ^t cause my fury to rest upon them,—^u and I will be comforted:

^x And they shall know that I the LORD have spoken it in my zeal,
 When I have accomplished my fury in them.

¹ The mixture of all sorts of meal in one cake, the small quantity prescribed (giving less than a pound of food a day) the revolting cookery at first ordered, and the stinted allowance of about a pint and a half of water daily, were evidently combined to show the extreme destitution to which God would reduce the luxurious Jews.

² In some parts of Western Asia, at the present day, animal dung is used as fuel.

³ A symbol of violent and humiliating treatment.

⁴ Or, 'She hath wickedly rebelled against my judgments.' Israel was worse than other nations, because she had sinned against God's word and covenant.

⁵ 'Ye have multiplied' your sins; or, 'ye have raged.'

⁶ Who had held to their gods. See Jer. ii. 10, 11.

⁷ This profanation of the sanctuary was the climax of the prevailing iniquity.

- 14 Moreover ^y I will make thee waste,
And a reproach among the nations that are round about thee,
In the sight of all that pass by.
- 15 So it shall be a ^z reproach and a taunt,—^a an instruction and an astonishment
Unto the nations that are round about thee,
When I shall execute judgments in thee
In anger and in fury and in ^b furious rebukes.—I the LORD have spoken it.
- 16 When I shall ^c send upon them the evil arrows of famine,
Which shall be for their destruction,—and which I will send to destroy you :
And I will increase the famine upon you,—and will break your ^d staff of bread :
17 So will I send upon you famine and ^e evil beasts,—and they shall bereave thee ;
And ^f pestilence and blood shall pass through thee ;
And I will bring the sword upon thee.—I the LORD have spoken it.

The threatenings repeated.

- 6 AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, ^g set thy face
2 toward the ^h mountains of Israel, and prophesy against them, and say,
3 Ye mountains of Israel, ⁱ hear the word of the Lord God ;
Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, ¹ and to the hills,
To the rivers, and to the valleys ;—Behold, I, even I, ^k will bring a sword upon you,
And ^l I will destroy your high places.
- 4 And your altars shall be desolate,—and your images shall be broken :
And ^m I will cast down your slain men before your idols. ²
- 5 And I will lay the dead carcasses of the children of Israel before their idols ;
And I will scatter your bones round about your altars.
- 6 ⁿ In all your dwellingplaces ^o the cities shall be laid waste,
^p And the high places shall be desolate ;
^q That your altars may be laid waste and made desolate,
And your idols may be broken and cease,
And your images may be cut down,—and your ^r works may be abolished.
- 7 ^s And the slain shall fall in the midst of you,
And ^t ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 8 ^u Yet will I leave a remnant,
That ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations,
When ye shall be scattered through the countries.
- 9 And they that escape of you ^v shall remember me
Among the nations whither they shall be carried captives,
Because ^y I am broken ³ with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me,
And ^z with their eyes, which go a whoring after their idols :
And ^a they shall lothe themselves for the evils which they have committed
In all their abominations.
- 10 And they shall know that I am the LORD,
And that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.
- 11 Thus saith the Lord God ;
Smite ^b with thine hand, ⁴—and stamp with thy foot, and say,
Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel !
^c For they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.
- 12 ^d He that is far off shall die of the pestilence ;
And he that is near shall fall by the sword ;
And he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine :
^e Thus will I accomplish my fury upon them.
- 13 Then ^f shall ye know that I am the LORD,
When their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars,
^g Upon every high hill, ^h in all the tops of the mountains,
And ⁱ under every green tree, and under every thick oak,
The place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.
- 14 So will I ^k stretch out my hand upon them,—and make the land desolate,
Yea, more desolate than the wilderness toward ^l Diblath, ⁵
In all their habitations.—And they shall know that I am the LORD.

idolatries, he was now about to destroy it as an unclean thing. Some, however, suppose the 'ornament' to be the gold and silver just mentioned, which they 'used in pride, and made the images and their abominations and detestable things thereof.'

² To foreshow the approaching captivity.

⁴ In chapters viii.—xi., Ezekiel beholds in vision the sins and punishments of the people yet remaining at Jerusalem ; he sees idolatry established in the temple of Jehovah (vers. 3—5) ; the elders of the people secretly worshipping the beast-gods of Egypt (6—11), the women occupied in the licentious rites of the Syrian Tammuz (12—14), and, worse still, the heads of the priesthood turning their backs on Jehovah to adore the sun (15, 16). God, having thus convicted the people of their sins, declares his design to punish (17, 18) ; he withdraws his glory to the entrance ; summons the ministers of vengeance ; and (when his faithful servants have been duly marked for preservation) sends them to their work of destruction (ix. 1—6). They begin with the elders, with whose corpses they defile the temple ; and they go through the city, notwithstanding Ezekiel's intercession (7—11). Jehovah, from his chariot, bids the man who had marked his servants take of the sacred fire from between the cherubim and scatter it on the city (x. 1—8). The prophet's attention being attracted to the Divine chariot, he hears the command to move ; upon which the Shekinah leaves the threshold of the holy place, and removes with the chariot to the eastern gate of the court (9—22). The prophet himself, being conveyed thither, sees the twenty-five leaders in sin, and is commanded to denounce their crimes and doom (xi. 1—12) ; upon which one of them falls down dead (13). His renewed intercession obtains a gracious promise for the exiles, but no remission of wrath against Jerusalem (14—21) ; in token of which the chariot-throne leaves the city for the mountain on the east (22, 23). Ezekiel then relates the vision to the exiles (24, 25).

¹ This description applies exactly to the Egyptian temples (such as those at Edfou and Denderah), the walls of which are covered with representations of gods in the forms of animals and men, and in monstrous combinations of both.

² Seventy had on more than one occasion been the number chosen to represent the whole people. See Exod. xxiv. 1; Numb. xi. 16.

³ That is, in his image-chambers: see ver. 10.

⁴ The legend and festival of Tammuz seem to have resembled those of the Egyptian Osiris and the Grecian Adonis; whose death was first lamented, and their restoration to life was afterwards celebrated with licentious rejoicings. Some suppose all these fables to represent the diminution and increase of the sun's vital heat in winter and spring.

- 5 And the ^v sound of the cherubim's wings was heard ^w even to the outer court, as ^x the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh.
- 6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubim; ^y then he went in, and stood beside the wheels. And one cherub stretched forth his hand from between the cherubim unto the fire that was between the cherubim, and took thereof, and put it into the hands of him that was clothed with linen: ^z who took it, and went out. ^a And there appeared in the cherubim the form of a man's hand under their wings.

As for the wheels, it was cried unto them in my hearing, O wheel. ^h
- 14 ⁱ And every one had four faces: the first face was the face of a cherub, and the second face was the face of a man, and the third the face of a lion, and the fourth the face of an eagle. And the cherubim were lifted up. This is ^j the living creature that I saw by the river of Chebar.
- 16 ^k And when the cherubim went, the wheels went by them: and when the cherubim lifted up their wings to mount up from the earth, the same wheels also turned not from beside them. ^l When they stood, these stood; and when they were lifted up, these lifted up themselves also: for the spirit of the living creature [or, of life] was in them.

⁵ Most probably the same persons as those mentioned in ch. viii. 16.

⁶ If this translation be correct, the words may be a taunting reply to the warning of Jeremiah (xxix. 5). But it may be rendered as the saying of the exiles, 'The time is not near for us to build houses' in Chaldea, as the prophet directs. See Jer. xxix. 5—28.

⁷ This is apparently a proverb, which means, 'We will share all fates with the city; we will either be preserved with her, or perish.' There is perhaps a derisive allusion to the image of Jeremiah (ch. i. 13).

- 9 And I will bring you out of the midst thereof,
^k And deliver you into the hands of strangers,
 And ^l will execute judgments among you.
- 10 ^m Ye shall fall by the sword ;—I will judge you in ⁿ the border of Israel ;
^o And ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 11 ^p This city shall not be your caldron,
 Neither shall ye be the flesh in the midst thereof ; ²
 But I will judge you in the border of Israel :
- 12 And ^q ye shall know that I am the LORD :
 For ye have not walked in my statutes,—neither executed my judgments,
 But ^r have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.
- 13 And it came to pass, when I prophesied, that ^s Pelatiah the son of Benaiah died. Then ^t fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said,
 " Ah Lord God ! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel ?
- 14, 15 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, thy brethren, even ^x thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, ^y Get you far from
- 16 the LORD : unto us is this land given in possession. Therefore say,
 Thus saith the Lord God ;—Although I have cast them far off among the heathen,
 And although I have scattered them among the countries, ^z Yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary ³ in the countries where they shall come.
- 17 Therefore say,—Thus saith the Lord God ;
^a I will even gather you from the people,
 And assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered,
 And I will give you the land of Israel.
- 18 And they shall come thither,
 And ^b they shall take away all the detestable things thereof
 And all the abominations thereof from thence.
- 19 And ^c I will give them one heart, ⁴—and I will put ^d a new spirit within you ;
 And I will take ^e the stony heart ⁵ out of their flesh,
 And will give them an heart of flesh :
- 20 ^f That they may walk in my statutes,—and keep mine ordinances, and do them :
^g And they shall be my people, and I will be their God.
- 21 But as for them ^h whose heart walketh after
 The heart of their detestable things and their abominations, ⁱ I will recompense their way upon their own heads,—saith the Lord God.
- 22 Then did the cherubim ^k lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them ; and 23 the glory of the God of Israel was over them above. And ^l the glory of the LORD went up from the midst of the city, ⁶ and stood ^m upon the mountain ⁿ which is on the east side of the city.
- 24 Afterwards ^o the spirit took me up, and brought me in a vision by the Spirit of God ^p into Chaldea, to them of the captivity. So the vision that I had seen 25 went up from me. Then I spake unto them of the captivity all the things that the LORD had showed me.

1 So that the victims of your violence shall have had a better fate than you ; for you shall perish in a foreign land.

2 Your purpose of remaining in this city shall not be realized ; but you shall be taken forcibly out of it, either to be led away into captivity, or to perish outside the walls. See note on ver. 7.

3 Perhaps, 'a sanctuary for a little time.' The temple might be destroyed, and its worship interrupted ; but to His sincere and humble worshippers, even in a heathen land, God would be as a temple. Compare Isa. lxvi. 1, 2.

4 That is, a heart not divided between God and idols.

5 This phrase denotes the insensibility and obduracy of the sinner, which the Spirit of God will remove.

6 Deserting it in displeasure. This withdrawal of the Divine presence was gradual, as if it were reluctant. First, the Divine glory comes forth from the interior of the holy place to its external threshold (ch. x. 4) ; then it removes to 'the door of the east gate' (ch. x. 19) ; and now it leaves the city altogether.

The approaching sufferings and captivity of the people.

- 12 THE¹ word of the LORD also came unto me, saying, Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of ^a a rebellious house, which ^r have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: ^s for they are a rebellious house. Therefore, thou son of man, ^t prepare thee stuff [or, instruments] for removing,² and remove by day in their sight; and thou shalt remove from thy place to another place in their sight. "It may be they will consider, though they be a rebellious house.
- 4 Then shalt thou bring forth thy stuff by day in their sight, as stuff for removing: and thou shalt go forth ^u at even³ in their sight, as they that go forth into captivity. Dig thou through the wall in their sight, and carry out thereby.
- 6 In their sight shalt thou bear it upon thy shoulders, and carry it forth in the twilight: thou shalt cover thy face,⁴ that thou see not the ground: ^v for I have set thee for a sign unto the house of Israel.
- 7 And I did so as I was commanded: I brought forth my stuff by day, as stuff for captivity, and in the even I digged through the wall with mine hand; I brought it forth in the twilight, and I bare it upon my shoulder in their sight.
- 8 And in the morning came the word of the LORD unto me, saying, Son of man, hath not the house of Israel, ^w the rebellious house, said unto thee, ^x What doest thou? Say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; This ^y burden concerneth ^z the prince in Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that are among them.
- 11 Say, ^a I am your sign:—like as I have done, so shall it be done unto them: ^b They shall remove and go into captivity.
- 12 And ^c the prince that is among them shall bear upon his shoulder in the twilight, and shall go forth: They shall dig through the wall to carry out thereby: He shall cover his face, that he see not the ground with his eyes.
- 13 My ^d net also will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare: And ^e I will bring him to Babylon to the land of the Chaldeans; Yet shall he not see⁵ it, though he shall die there.
- 14 And ^f I will scatter toward every wind All that are about him to help him, and all his bands; And ^g I will draw out the sword after them.
- 15 ^h And they shall know that I am the LORD, When I shall scatter them among the nations, And disperse them in the countries.
- 16 ⁱ But I will leave a few men of them From the sword, from the famine, and from the pestilence; ^j That they may declare all their abominations⁶ Among the heathen whither they come; And they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 17 Moreover the word of the LORD came to me, saying,
- 18 Son of man, ^k eat thy bread with quaking, And drink thy water with trembling and with carefulness;
- 19 And say unto the people of the land,—Thus saith the Lord God Of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and of the land of Israel; ^l They shall eat their bread with carefulness, And drink their water with astonishment, That her land may ^m be desolate from all that is therein, ⁿ Because of the violence of all them that dwell therein.
- 20 ^o And the cities that are inhabited shall be laid waste, And the land shall be desolate;—and ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 21, 22 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, ^p The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?⁷ Tell them therefore,
- Thus saith the Lord God;—I will make this proverb to cease, And they shall no more use it as a proverb in Israel;

¹ The Jewish exiles, slow to learn the unwelcome truth that they shall not return to their own land (vers. 1, 2), are to be taught it again and again. The prophet is first commanded to give an expressive symbol (3—7), followed by a plain prediction, of Zedekiah's flight, capture, blindness, and captivity in Babylon (8—13), and of the destruction of all his adherents except a small remnant of captives (14—16); and then another symbol of the want and wretchedness of the people remaining in Judea (17—20). And this is followed by a reiterated declaration that the fulfilment of the predictions is close at hand (21—28).

² That is, whatever is necessary for a long journey.

³ By secret flight. See 2 Kings xxv. 4.

⁴ Either through shame, or to disguise himself.

⁵ See 2 Kings xxv. 7, and note.

⁶ That is, by their punishment showing what their sins have been.

⁷ Time passes on, and these prophecies of evil are not fulfilled.

But say unto them, "The days are at hand,—and the effect¹ of every vision.
 24 For ^xthere shall be no more any ^yvain vision,
 Nor flattering divination, within the house of Israel.
 25 For I am the LORD: I will speak,
 And ^zthe word that I shall speak shall come to pass;
 It shall be no more prolonged:
 For ^ain your days, O rebellious house, will I say the word,
 And will perform it, saith the Lord God.

26 Again the word of the LORD came to me, saying,
 27 ^bSon of man, behold, they of the house of Israel say,
 The vision that he seeth is ^cfor many days to come,
 And he prophesieth of the times that are far off.²
 28 ^dTherefore say unto them,—Thus saith the Lord God;
 There shall none of my words be prolonged any more,
 But the word which I have spoken shall be done,—saith the Lord God.

The doom of the false prophets.

13 AND³ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel that prophesy, and say thou unto ^ethem that prophesy out of their own ^fhearts,

Hear ye the word of the LORD;

3 Thus saith the Lord God;—Woe unto the ^gfoolish prophets,
 That follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing!⁴

4 O Israel, thy prophets are ^hlike the foxes⁵ in the deserts.

5 Ye ⁱhave not gone up into the gaps,
 Neither made up the hedge for the house of Israel
 To stand in the battle in the day of the LORD.

6 ^kThey have seen vanity and lying divination, 'saying, The LORD saith:
 And the LORD hath not sent them:

^mAnd they have made others to hope that they would confirm the word.⁶

7 Have ye not seen a vain vision,—and have ye not spoken a lying divination, Whereas ye say, The LORD saith it;—albeit I have not spoken?

8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
 Because ye have spoken vanity, and seen lies,
 Therefore, behold, I am against you,—saith the Lord God.

9 And ⁿmine hand shall be upon the prophets that see vanity, and that divine lies:

^oThey shall not be in the assembly of my people,

^pNeither shall they be written in the writing of the house of Israel,⁷ ^qNeither shall they enter into the land of Israel;

^rAnd ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

10 Because, even because they have seduced my people,
 Saying, ^sPeace; and there was no peace;

And one built up a wall,—and, lo, others 'daubed it with untempered mortar.⁸

11 Say unto them which daub it with untempered mortar, that it shall fall:

^tThere shall be an overflowing shower;

And ye, O great hailstones, shall fall;—and a stormy wind shall rend it.

12 Lo, when the wall is fallen, shall it not be said unto you,

^uWhere is the daubing wherewith ye have daubed it?

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;

I will even rend it with a stormy wind in my fury;

And there shall be an overflowing shower in mine anger,

^vAnd great hailstones in my fury to consume it.

14 So will I break down the wall that ye have daubed with untempered mortar,

¹ That is, the fulfilment of every vision.

² The same spirit of unbelief still produces the same false security; and is declared in the New Testament to be one characteristic of 'the last times' (Matt. xxiv. 38, 39; 2 Pet. iii. 3—10).

³ In ch. xiii., Ezekiel is commanded to denounce the hollow and mischievous pretensions of the false prophets, and to declare their doom and that of their deluded followers (vers. 1—16); as well as to expose the arts of the prophetesses, who aimed to keep the people in luxurious security, which shall end in the ruin both of the deceivers and the deceived (17—23).

⁴ The false prophets are described as those who, having received no Divine message, follow their own guesses or inclinations, and utter that which has no reality. The true prophets spake 'as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.' These false prophets were numerous at this time both in Judea and in Babylon, and greatly misled the people. See Jer. xxiii.

⁶ Or, 'they have hoped for the confirming of the word.' Beginning with deluding others, they have even deceived themselves.

⁷ That is, They shall be cut off from all the privileges of my people. See refs.

⁸ Rather, 'with whitewash.' The false prophets aimed to give an attractive appearance to the unsubstantial fabric of the people's hopes.

- And bring it down to the ground,
So that the foundation thereof shall be discovered,
And it shall fall, and ye shall be consumed in the midst thereof:
^y And ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 15 Thus will I accomplish my wrath upon the wall,
And upon them that have daubed it with untempered mortar,
And will say unto you, The wall is no more,—neither they that daubed it;
- 16 To wit, the prophets of Israel ^z which prophesy concerning Jerusalem,
And which ^a see visions of peace for her,—^b and there is no peace, saith the Lord God.
- 17 Likewise, thou son of man,—^c set thy face against ^d the daughters of thy people, ^e Which prophesy out of their own heart;
- 18 And prophesy thou against them, and say,—Thus saith the Lord God;
Woe to the women ^f that sew pillows to all armholes,
And make kerchiefs ¹ upon the head of every stature to hunt souls!
Will ye ^g hunt the souls of my people,
^h And will ye save the souls alive that come unto you? ²
- 19 And ⁱ will ye pollute me among my people
^k For handfuls of barley and for pieces of bread,
^l To slay the souls that should not die, ³
And ^m to save the souls alive that should not live,
By your lying to my people that hear your lies?
- 20 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God;—Behold, ⁿ I am against your pillows,
Wherewith ye there hunt the souls, to make them fly, ⁴
And I will tear them from your arms,—and will let the souls go,
Even the souls that ye hunt to make them fly.
- 21 Your kerchiefs also will I tear,—and deliver my people out of your hand,
And they shall be no more in your hand to be hunted;
^o And ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 22 Because ^p with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, ⁵
Whom I have not made sad;—and ^q strengthened the hands of the wicked,
That he should not return from his wicked way,—^r by promising him life:
- 23 Therefore ^s ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations:
^t For I will deliver my people out of your hand:
^u And ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- The people are rebuked for their hypocrisy, and threatened with inevitable judgments.*
- 14 THEN ⁶ ^x came certain of the elders of Israel unto me, and sat before me. And ³ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, ^y these men have set up their idols in their heart, and put ^z the stumblingblock of their iniquity 4 before their face: ^a should I be inquired of at all by them? ⁷ Therefore speak unto them, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Every man of the house of Israel that setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumbling-block of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to the prophet; I the LORD 5 will answer him that cometh ⁸ according to the multitude of his idols; ^b that I may take the house of Israel in their own heart, because they are all ^c estranged from me through their idols.
- 6 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; ^d Repent, and turn yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your 7 abominations. For every one of the house of Israel, or of the stranger that

1 Either 'cushions' for indolent repose, or 'head-veils for every size,' i. e. to suit every one's size. The whole language is metaphorical; and denotes the flattering answers which the false prophetesses gave, accommodated to those who consulted them.

2 Rather, 'Shall ye hunt the souls of my people, and [yet] keep your own souls alive?' In destroying others you shall destroy yourselves.

3 Or, 'that shall not die,' etc., and 'that shall not live;' i. e. declaring that the righteous shall die, and the wicked shall live. For the most paltry considerations these women uttered predictions quite at variance with all God's righteous dealings; thereby 'polluting,' or dishonouring, Him among his people.

4 If this rendering is correct, it may mean either, 'ye hunt the souls to make them fly' into snares laid for them; or, 'I am against you, that I may make them escape' your snares. But though the meaning of the word is uncertain, it is clear that God threatens to punish them, and to deliver their victims.

5 Their lies perplexed the good and emboldened the wicked.

6 The elders, having come to inquire of the prophet, apparently hoping for some intimation of mercy from Jehovah (vers. 1, 2), are met by a strong rebuke for their hypocrisy (3—5), and with a command to repent and a threatening against themselves and their deceivers, whose destruction is necessary to the restoration of the people to God's favour (6—11). This is followed by a solemnly reiterated declaration that no intercession can avail to check the manifold punishments which, as the character of the remnant will testify, they have fully deserved (12—23).

7 Those who mock God with professions of desire to know His will, whilst they are cherishing their sins, cannot expect Divine teaching, but will be answered according to their character and deserts (vers. 4, 5).

8 Rather, 'I the Lord will answer him according to it, according to the multitude,' etc. There is a designed emphasis.

- sojourneth in Israel, which separateth himself from me, and setteth up his idols in his heart, and putteth the stumblingblock of his iniquity before his face, and cometh to a prophet to inquire of him¹ concerning me; ⁷I the LORD will answer him by myself: and ⁸I will set my face against that man and will make him a ⁹sign and a proverb, and I will cut him off from the midst of my people; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- ⁹ And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD ¹⁰have deceived² that prophet, and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel. And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity: the punishment of the prophet shall be even as the
- ¹¹ punishment of him that seeketh unto him; that the house of Israel may ¹²go no more astray from me, neither be polluted any more with all their transgressions; ¹³but that they may be my people, and I may be their God, saith the Lord God.
- ^{12, 13} The word of the LORD came again to me, saying, Son of man, when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously, then will I stretch out mine hand upon it, and will break the ¹⁴staff of the bread thereof, and will send famine upon it, ¹⁵and will cut off man and beast from it: ¹⁶though these three men, ¹⁷Noah, ¹⁸Daniel,³ and ¹⁹Job, were in it, they should deliver but their own souls ²⁰by their righteousness, saith the Lord God.
- ¹⁵ If I cause ¹⁶noisome beasts to pass through the land, and they spoil it, so that it be desolate, that no man may pass through because of the beasts: ¹⁷though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters; they only shall be delivered, but the land shall be desolate.
- ¹⁷ Or if ¹⁸I bring a sword upon that land, and say, Sword, go through the land; so that I ¹⁹cut off man and beast from it: ²⁰though these three men were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither sons nor daughters, but they only shall be delivered themselves.
- ¹⁹ Or if I send ²⁰a pestilence into that land, and ²¹pour out my fury upon it in blood, to cut off from it man and beast: ²²though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord God, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; they shall but deliver their own souls ²³by their righteousness.
- ²¹ For thus saith the Lord God; How much more when [or, Also when] ²²I send my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem (the sword, and the famine, and the ²³noisome beast, and the pestilence), to cut off from it man and beast? ²⁴Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters. Behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ²⁵ye shall see their way and their doings: and ye shall be comforted⁴ concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all ²⁶that I have brought upon it. And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that I have not done ²⁷without cause all that I have done in it, saith the Lord God.

The rectitude of the Divine judgments vindicated.

- 15 AND⁵ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- ² Son of man, What is ³the vine tree more than any tree, Or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?
- ³ ⁴Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? Or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?
- ⁴ Behold, ⁵it is cast into the fire for fuel; ⁶The fire devoureth both the ends of it,—and the midst of it is burned.⁶ Is it meet for any work?
- ⁵ Behold, when it was whole, it was meet for no work:

¹ Rather, 'and cometh to a prophet to inquire for himself concerning me, I the Lord will answer him concerning myself.' The answer follows in ver. 8.

² See note on 1 Kings xxii. 23.

³ At this time Daniel had been at least fourteen years in Babylon, and had held for nearly ten years the high posts to which his supernatural gifts had caused him to be elevated. See Dan. i., ii. There was, therefore, ample time for his extraordinary worth to be generally known and acknowledged. Noah had been permitted to save his family, Daniel his associates, and Job his friends; but not all of them together could save idolatrous Israel. Comp. Jer. vii. 16; xv. 1.

⁴ When you see the wickedness of the remnant whom I will bring into exile, you will be fully satisfied that the punishment which I have inflicted was not too severe.

⁵ In ch. xv., the propriety of the foregoing Divine judgments is illustrated by the treatment of an unfruitful vine. Valuable as the vine is for its fruit, when it is barren it is only fit for fuel. So Israel, precious as he might be when bearing fruits of holiness, is fit only to be destroyed if he perseveres in sin. Comp. Isa. v.; John xv. 5, 6. The parable very impressively indicates the strictly moral ends for which God chooses a people out of the world; and is therefore applicable to all times and stages of the church's history.

⁶ Rather, 'scorched.' Is it (the scorched part that remains) fit for any work? The allusion is to the impoverished and reduced state of the covenant-people.

^q So will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

16 AGAIN¹ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, ^x cause Jerusalem to know her ^y abominations, and say,

3 Thus saith the Lord God unto Jerusalem;

Thy birth ^z and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan;

^a Thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite.²

4 And as for thy nativity,—^b in the day thou wast born thy navel was not cut,
Neither wast thou washed in water to supple³ thee;

Thou wast not salted⁴ at all, nor swaddled at all.

5 None eye pitied thee, to do any of these unto thee,—to have compassion upon thee;
But thou wast cast out in the open field, to the loathing of thy person,⁵
In the day that thou wast born.

6 ^c And when I passed by thee, and saw thee polluted in thine own blood,
I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, ^d Live;

Yea, I said unto thee when thou wast in thy blood, Live.

7 ^e I have caused thee to multiply [or, made thee a million] as the bud of the field,
And thou hast increased and waxen great,
And thou art come to excellent ornaments:
Thy breasts are fashioned, and thine hair is grown,
Whereas thou wast naked and bare.⁶

8 Now when I passed by thee, and looked upon thee,
Behold, thy ^f time was the time of love;

^g And I spread my skirt over thee, and covered thy nakedness:

Yea, ^h I swore unto thee, and entered into a covenant with thee,

Saith the Lord God,—and ⁱ thou becamest mine.

9 Then ^k washed I thee with water;

Yea, I thoroughly washed away thy blood from thee,

And I ^l anointed thee with oil.

10 ^m I clothed thee also with brodered work,—and shod thee with badgers' skin,
And I girded thee about with fine linen,—and I covered thee with silk.

11 I decked thee also with ornaments,

And I ⁿ put bracelets upon thy hands,—^o and a chain on thy neck.

12 And I put a jewel on thy ^p forehead,—and earrings in thine ears,
And a beautiful crown upon thine head.

13 Thus wast thou decked with gold and silver;

And thy raiment was of fine linen, and silk, and brodered work;

^q Thou didst eat fine flour, and honey, and oil:

And thou wast exceeding ^r beautiful,—^s and thou didst prosper into a kingdom.

14 And ^t thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty:

For it was perfect ^u through my comeliness,

Which I had put upon thee,—saith the Lord God.

¹ In ch. xvi. the origin and increase of the chosen people are described under the image of the birth and growth of a female child (vers. 3–7); who, when arrived at maturity, is advanced to the honour of being the spouse of the king of Zion, and is enriched with the gifts of his love (8–14). She, however, becomes ungrateful, and unfaithful to his covenant, and runs to the greatest excesses in sin, so as to be worse than all around her (15–34). For this she is threatened with exemplary judgment (35–52); but she shall yet be pardoned and restored when truly penitent and humbled (53–63). The whole representation appears to be designed to excite feelings of shame and disgust at the base and gross conduct of the Israelites.

² The Hittites and Amorites were two of the chief Canaanite tribes; and Israel is here connected with them to show how she had manifested the very propensities to evil which had caused their extermination. For the same reason Sodom is called her 'sister' (vers. 46, 49).

³ Rather, 'purify.'

⁴ Salt was anciently applied to new-born infants; partly, perhaps, to harden the skin, and probably also as an emblem of purity.

⁵ Rather, 'with contempt of thy life.'

⁶ Rather, 'And thou (still) wast naked and bare.' This part of the description refers to the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt, when they were greatly increased in numbers, but were much distressed.

- 15 * But thou didst trust in thine own beauty,
 † And playedst the harlot because of thy renown,¹
 And pouredst out thy fornications on every one that passed by; his it was.
- 16 ‡ And of thy garments thou didst take,
 And deckedst thy high places with divers colours,
 And playedst the harlot thereupon:
The like things shall not come, neither shall it be so.
- 17 Thou hast also taken thy fair jewels
 Of my gold and of my silver, which I had given thee,
 And madest to thyself images of men,—and didst commit whoredom with them,
- 18 And tookedst thy broidered garments, and coveredst them:
 And thou hast set mine oil and † mine incense before them.
- 19 ‡ My meat also which I gave thee,
 Fine flour, and oil, and honey, wherewith I fed thee,
 Thou hast even set it before them for a sweet savour:
 And thus it was, saith the Lord God.
- 20 † Moreover thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters,
 Whom thou hast borne unto me,
 And these hast thou sacrificed unto them to be devoured.
 † Is this of thy whoredoms a small matter,
- 21 That thou hast slain my children, and delivered them
 To cause them to pass through the fire for them?
- 22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms
 Thou hast not remembered the days of thy † youth, † When thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.
- 23 And it came to pass after all thy wickedness,
 (Woe, woe unto thee! saith the Lord God;)
 24 That † thou hast also built unto thee an eminent place,
 And † hast made thee an high place in every street.
- 25 Thou hast built thy high place † at every head of the way,
 And hast made thy beauty to be abhorred,
 And hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by,
 And multiplied thy whoredoms.
- 26 Thou hast also committed fornication
 With † the Egyptians² thy neighbours, great of flesh;
 And hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.
- 27 Behold, therefore I have stretched out my hand over thee,
 † And have diminished thine ordinary food,
 † And delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee,
 † The daughters³ of the Philistines, which are ashamed of thy lewd way.
- 28 † Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians,
 Because thou wast unsatiable;
 Yea, thou hast played the harlot with them,—and yet couldest not be satisfied.
- 29 Thou hast moreover multiplied thy fornication
 In the land of Canaan † unto Chaldea;
 And yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.
- 30 † How weak is thine heart, saith the Lord God,
 Seeing thou doest all these things,—the work of an imperious whorish woman;
 31 In that † thou buildest thine eminent place in the head of every way,
 And makest thine high place in every street;
 And hast not been as an harlot, † in that thou scornest hire;⁴
- 32 But as a wife that committeth adultery,
 Which taketh strangers instead of her husband!⁵
- 33 They give gifts to all whores:—but † thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers,
 And hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.
- 34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms,
 Whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms:
 And in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee,
 Therefore thou art contrary.

1 Instead of regarding all their privileges as God's unmerited gifts, and using them for his glory, they looked upon them as their own, prided themselves in them, and perverted them into occasions of sin.

2 This refers probably as much to political alliances with Egypt as to the adoption of its idolatry; both of which involved the guilt of unfaithfulness to Jehovah (Isa. xxxi.)

3 Here put for the Philistines. Wicked as they are, they have not apostatized like you. See Jer. ii. 10, 11.

4 You persist in your wicked courses, not because there is anything to be gained by them, but from love to the sins themselves.

5 Or, 'who receiveth strangers while under [subjection to] her husband.'

- 35 Wherefore, 'O harlot, hear the word of the LORD:
 36 Thus saith the Lord God;—Because thy filthiness was poured out,
 And thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers,
 And with all the idols of thy abominations,
 And by ^u the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;
 37 Behold, therefore ^z I will gather all thy lovers,
 With whom thou hast taken pleasure,
 And all them that thou hast loved,—with all them that thou hast hated;
 I will even gather them round about against thee,¹
 And will discover thy nakedness unto them,—that they may see all thy nakedness.
 38 And I will judge thee, as ^y women that break wedlock and ^z shed blood are judged;
 And I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.
 39 And I will also give thee into their hand,
 And they shall throw down ^a thine eminent place,
 And shall break down thy high places:
^b They shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take thy fair jewels,
 And leave thee naked and bare.
 40 ^c They shall also bring up a company against thee,
^d And they shall stone thee with stones,²
 And thrust thee through with their swords.
 41 And they shall ^e burn thine houses with fire,
 And ^f execute judgments upon thee in the sight of many women.³
 And I will cause thee to ^g cease from playing the harlot,
 And thou also shalt give no hire any more.
 42 So ^h will I make my fury toward thee to rest,
 And my jealousy shall depart from thee,
 And I will be quiet, ⁱ and will be no more angry.
 43 Because ^k thou hast not remembered the days of thy youth,
^l But hast fretted me⁴ in all these things;
 Behold, therefore ^m I also will recompense thy way upon thine head,
 Saith the Lord God:
 And thou shalt not commit this lewdness above all thine abominations.
 44 Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, Saying, ⁿ As is the mother, so is her daughter.
 45 Thou art thy mother's daughter,—that loatheth her husband and her children;
 And thou art the sister of thy sisters,
 Which loathed their husbands and their children:
^o Your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.
 46 And ^p thine elder sister is Samaria,
 She and her daughters that dwell at thy left hand:
 And ^q thy younger sister, that dwelleth at thy right hand,
Is Sodom and her daughters.
 47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways,—nor done after their abominations:
 But, as if that were a very little thing,
^r Thou wast corrupted more than they⁵ in all thy ways.
 48 As I live, saith the Lord God,
^s Sodom thy sister hath not done, she nor her daughters,⁶
 As thou hast done, thou and thy daughters.
 49 Behold, this was the iniquity of thy sister Sodom,
 Pride, ^t fulness of bread, and abundance of idleness was in her and in her daughters, ^u Neither did she strengthen the hand of the poor and needy.
 50 And they were haughty, and ^x committed abomination before me:
 Therefore ^y I took them away as I saw good.
 51 Neither hath Samaria committed half of thy sins;
 But thou hast multiplied thine abominations more than they,
 And ^z hast justified⁷ thy sisters in all thine abominations which thou hast done.
 52 Thou also, which hast judged thy sisters, bear thine own shame for thy sins
 That thou hast committed more abominable than they:
 They are more righteous than thou:

Lord God ;
- ^b A great eagle with great wings,
Longwinged, full of feathers, which had divers colours,
Came unto Lebanon, and ^c took the highest branch of the cedar :
- 4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs,
And carried it ^d into a land of traffic ;—he set it in a city of merchants.⁹
- 5 He took also of ^e the seed of the land,—and planted it in ^f a fruitful field ;
He placed it by great waters, and set it ^g as a willow tree.
- 6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine ^h of low stature,
Whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him :¹⁰
So it became a vine,—and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.
- 7 There was also another great eagle with great wings and many feathers :
And, behold, ⁱ this vine did bend her roots toward him,
And shot forth her branches toward him,
That he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.¹¹
- 8 It was planted¹² in a good soil by great waters,—that it might bring forth branches,

² This may mean either, It was not spoken of as a warning example ; or, It was not mentioned, as being unworthy of thy notice.

³ Rather, 'the reproach ;' i. e. the disgrace which they inflicted on thee by invading the land.

⁴ The oath of fidelity to me. See Exod. xxiv. 3, 8 ; Josh. xxiv. 22.

⁶ Not by such alliances as thou hast wickedly formed of old ; but according to Jehovah's covenant.

seed, Zedekiah, who is to be not a self-supporting cedar, but a dependent vine (vers. 3—6). Another eagle, Pharaoh, attracts to himself the roots and branches of the vine ; and for this the vine is to be plucked up and destroyed (7—10). After applying all this plainly to Zedekiah (11—21), the prophet adds a prediction of another topmost branch of the cedar, which Jehovah will plant upon his mountain, and which shall become a vast tree, sheltering all his creatures. This is evidently Messiah, 'the Branch.' See Isa. xi. 1, and note.

⁸ See note on Prov. i. 6.

⁹ Babylon ; so called on account of its extensive commerce. See Isa. xliii. 14 ; xlvii. 15.

¹⁰ That is, the king of Babylon ; who gave the kingdom of Judah to Zedekiah as his vassal.

¹¹ Or, 'from the beds where it was planted.'

¹² That is, 'And yet it was planted.' The rule of the king of Babylon during the reign of Zedekiah appears not to have been oppressive, but rather mild and liberal.

- And that it might bear fruit,—that it might be a goodly vine.
- 9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord God; Shall it prosper?
^k Shall he not pull up the roots thereof,
 And cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither?
 It shall wither in all the leaves of her spring,¹ ^l Even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.²
- 10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper?
^m Shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it?
 It shall wither in the furrows where it grew.
- 11 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, 12 Say now to "the rebellious house,—Know ye not what these things mean?
 Tell them, Behold, ^o the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem,
 And hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof,
^p And led them with him to Babylon;
 13 ^q And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him,
^r And hath taken an oath of him:—^s he hath also taken the mighty of the land:
 14 That the kingdom might be 'base,—that it might not lift itself up,
But that " by keeping of his covenant it might stand.
 15 But ^x he rebelled against him ^y in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, ^z That they might give him horses and much people.
^a Shall he prosper? ^b shall he escape that doeth such things?
 Or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?
- 16 As I live, saith the Lord God,
 Surely ^c in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king,
^d Whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake,
Even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.
- 17 ^e Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war,
^f By casting³ up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:
 18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant,
 When, lo, he had ^g given his hand, and hath done all these things,
 He shall not escape.
- 19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
 As I live, ^h surely mine⁴ oath that he hath despised,
 And my covenant that he hath broken,
 Even it will I recompense upon his own head.
- 20 And I will ⁱ spread my net upon him,—and he shall be taken in my snare,
 And I will bring him to Babylon,
 And ^k will plead⁵ with him there for his trespass—that he hath trespassed against me.
- 21 And 'all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword,
 And they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds:
 And ye shall know that I the LORD have spoken it.
- 22 Thus saith the Lord God;
 I will also take of the highest ^m branch of the high cedar, and will set it;
 I will crop off from the top of his young twigs ⁿ a tender one,
 And will ^o plant it upon an high mountain and eminent:
 23 ^p In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it:
^q And it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar:
 And ^r under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing;
 In the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.
- 24 And all the trees of the field shall know
 That I the LORD ^s have brought down the high tree, 'have exalted the low tree,
 Have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish:
^t " I the LORD have spoken and have done it.
- God's equitable treatment of every individual; on which is founded a call to repentance.*
- 18 AND⁶ the word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,
 2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying,
 The ^u fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

4 Zedekiah had sworn allegiance to Nebuchadnezzar in the name of Jehovah. See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.

5 See note on ch. xxxviii. 22.

6 In ch. xviii., Jehovah addresses those who charge Him with punishing the innocent sons for the fathers' sins (vers. 1—3); He declares emphatically the separate responsibility of every individual (4), and illustrates the operation of this principle in successive generations; for, whereas the obedient man lives by his righteousness (5—9), his son shall be punished if he forsake his father's righteous way (10—13); and this sinner's son shall live

- 3 As I live, saith the Lord God,
^v Ye shall not have occasion any more¹ to use this proverb in Israel.
- 4 Behold, ^z all souls are mine;
^a As the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine:²
^b The soul that sinneth, it shall die.
- 5 But ^c if a man be just,—and do that which is lawful and right,
 6 ^d And hath not eaten upon the mountains,³
 Neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel,
 Neither hath ^e defiled his neighbour's wife,
 Neither hath come near to ^f a menstruous woman,
- 7 And hath not ^g oppressed any,—but hath restored to the debtor his ^h pledge,
 Hath spoiled none by violence,
 Hath ⁱ given his bread to the hungry,—and hath covered the naked with a garment;
- 8 He that hath not given forth upon ^k usury,—neither hath taken any increase,⁴
That hath ^l withdrawn his hand from iniquity,
^m Hath executed true judgment between man and man,
- 9 Hath walked in my statutes,—and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly;
ⁿ He is just, he shall surely ^o live, saith the Lord God.
- 10 If he beget a son that is a robber, ^p a shedder of blood,
 And that doeth the like to any one of these things,
- 11 And that doeth not ^q any of those duties,
 But even hath eaten upon the mountains,—and defiled his neighbour's wife.
- 12 Hath oppressed the poor and needy,—hath spoiled by violence,
 Hath not restored the pledge,—and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols,
 Hath ^r committed abomination,—hath given forth upon usury,
- 13 And hath taken increase:—shall he then live?
^s He shall not live:—he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die;
^t His blood shall be upon him.
- 14 Now, lo, if he beget a son,—that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done,
 And considereth, and doeth not such like,
- 15 ^u That hath not eaten upon the mountains,
 Neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel,
 Hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,
- 16 Neither hath oppressed any,—hath not withholden the pledge,
 Neither hath spoiled by violence,—but hath given his bread to the hungry,
 And hath covered the naked with a garment,
- 17 That ^x hath taken off his hand from the poor,
That hath not received usury nor increase,
 Hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes;
^y He shall not die for the iniquity of his father,—he shall surely live.
- 18 As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed,—spoiled his brother by violence,
 And did that which is not good among his people,
 Lo, even ^z he shall die in his iniquity.
- 19 Yet say ye, Why? ^a doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father?
^b When the son hath done that which is lawful and right,
 And hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them,—he shall surely live.
- 20 ^c The soul that sinneth, it shall die.
^d The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father,
 Neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son:
^e The righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him,
^f And the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.
- 21 But ^g if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed,
 And keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right,
 He shall surely live,—he shall not die.

if he turn from his father's ways of sin (14—20). Nay, more: if the wicked man become a good man, or the good man become wicked, each shall then be treated according to the change in his character (21—29). Upon this, God finds an earnest call to those who arraign his proceedings to repent and live (30—32).

¹ This does not indicate any change in God's government, but only that He will make it clear that every individual is held responsible for his own conduct.

² All are equally subject and accountable to God, and each will be reckoned with separately; for, whatever may be the influences of men's social connections, they cannot interfere with their personal responsibility. Although children are often implicated in the temporal consequences of the sins of their parents, no one will be condemned hereafter for any but his own sins.

³ See note on Lev. xvii. 3. The different excellencies of character here specified were those most opposed to the prevailing corruptions.

¹ It is wrong, therefore, to found any judgment as to our character before God on our past experiences, when these are not in harmony with our present religious state.

² Although it is God who works in us to will and to do what is good, and is the first mover in our regeneration ; we must yet work together with Him, not resisting the influences of his Spirit, nor receiving his grace in vain.

³ Ch. xix. is a dirge, in highly figurative language, first over two kings of the house of David, who, like wild beasts, had been carried off, the former to Egypt, the second by the Chaldeans (vers. 1—9) ; and then over the whole royal family, who are described, under the figure of a wasted vine, as humbled and almost destroyed (10—14).

Recital of the sins of Israel throughout their past history; and promises of future mercy.

20 AND ² it came to pass in the seventh year, ³ in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that ^f certain of the elders of Israel came to inquire of the LORD, and 3 sat before me. Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying, Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God;

Are ye come to inquire of me? As I live, saith the Lord God, ^g I will not be 4 inquired of by you. Wilt thou ^h judge ⁴ them, son of man, wilt thou judge them?

ⁱ Cause them to know the abominations of their fathers: and say unto them, Thus 5 saith the Lord God;

In the day when ^k I chose Israel,

And ^l lifted up mine hand unto the seed of the house of Jacob,

And made myself ^m known unto them in the land of Egypt,

When I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying,—“I am the LORD your God;

6 In the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them,

^o To bring them forth of the land of Egypt—into a land that I had espied for them,
Flowing with milk and honey,—^p which is the glory of all lands:

7 Then said I unto them,—“Cast ye away every man ^r the abominations of his eyes,
And defile not yourselves with ^s the idols of Egypt:—I am the LORD your God.

8 But they rebelled against me,—and would not hearken unto me:

They did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes,

Neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt:

Then I said, I will ‘pour out my fury upon them,

To accomplish my anger against them—in the midst of the land of Egypt.

9 “But I wrought ^u for my name’s sake,

That it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were,

^z In whose sight I made myself known unto them,

In bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt.

10 Wherefore I ^v caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt,
And brought them into the wilderness.

11 ^z And I gave them my statutes,—and showed them my judgments,

^a Which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

12 Moreover also I gave them my ^b sabbaths,—to be a sign ⁶ between me and them,
That they might know that ^c I am the LORD that sanctify them.

13 But the house of Israel ^d rebelled against me in the wilderness:

They walked not in my statutes,—and they ^e despised my judgments,

Which if a man do, he shall even live in them;

And my sabbaths they greatly ^f polluted:

Then ^g I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the ^h wilderness, to consume them.

14 “But I wrought for my name’s sake,

That it should not be polluted before the heathen,

In whose sight I brought them out.

15 Yet also ^k I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness,

That I would not bring them into the land which I had given them,

Flowing with milk and honey,—^l which is the glory of all lands;

16 ^m Because they despised my judgments,—and walked not in my statutes,

But polluted my sabbaths:—for ⁿ their heart went after their idols.

1 The fall of the royal family arose from its sins.

2 A new series of prophecies begins here, which reaches to the close of ch. xxiv. Some of the Jewish elders having come to the prophet, to consult him respecting the Divine will (vers. 1—3), he is commanded to recall to their remembrance their various national sins (4): first, during their residence in Egypt (5—9); afterwards, during their wanderings in the wilderness (10—26); and, finally, after their settlement in Canaan (27—29). This recital is concluded, as it was commenced, by a refusal to return any answer to their inquiries (3, 30—32).

Yet better times are promised, in which the people shall be reclaimed by chastisement from their apostasies, and shall again enjoy the Divine favour (33—41).

3 That is, in the seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity.

4 Probably meaning, according to our idiom, ‘Wilt thou not judge them?’ i. e. They ask for information: my reply through you shall be judgment.

5 That is, ‘I interposed on their behalf.’

6 The sabbath, and the other appointed rests (see Lev. xxv. 1—16) were both a sign of their special relation to God, and an important means of preserving it.

- 17 ^o Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them,
Neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.
- 18 ^p But I said unto their children in the wilderness,
Walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers,—neither observe their judgments,
Nor defile yourselves with their idols :
- 19 I am the LORD your God ;
^q Walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments,—and do them ;
- 20 ^r And hallow my sabbaths ;—and they shall be a sign between me and you,
That ye may know that I am the LORD your God.
- 21 Notwithstanding ^s the children rebelled against me :
They walked not in my statutes,—neither kept my judgments to do them,
^t Which if a man do, he shall even live in them ;—they polluted my sabbaths.
Then I said, ^u I would pour out my fury upon them,
To accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness.
- 22 ^x Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand,—and ^y wrought for my name's sake,
That it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen,
In whose sight I brought them forth.
- 23 ^z I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness,
That ^a I would scatter them among the heathen,
And disperse them through the countries ;
- 24 ^b Because they had not executed my judgments,—but had despised my statutes,
And had polluted my sabbaths,—and ^c their eyes were after their fathers' idols.
- 25 Wherefore ^d I gave them also statutes that were not good,¹
And judgments whereby they should not live ;
- 26 And I polluted them in their own gifts,
In that they caused to pass ^e through the fire ^f all that openeth the womb,
That I might make them desolate,
To the end that they ^g might know that I am the LORD.
- 27 Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them,
Thus saith the Lord God ;—Yet in this your fathers have ^h blasphemed me,
In that they have committed a trespass against me.
- 28 For when I had brought them into the land,
ⁱ For the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them,
Then ^k they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees,
And they offered there their sacrifices,
And there they presented the provocation of their offering :
There also they made their ^l sweet savour,
And poured out there their drink offerings.
- 29 Then I said unto them,—What is the high place whereunto ye go ?
^m And the name thereof is called Bamah² unto this day.
- 30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel,—Thus saith the Lord God ;
Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers ?
And commit ye whoredom after their abominations ?
- 31 For when ye offer ⁿ your gifts,—when ye make your sons to pass through the fire,
Ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day :
And ^o shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel ?
As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not be inquired of by you.
- 32 And that ^p which cometh into your mind shall not be at all,
That ye say, ^q We will be as the heathen,
As the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.
- 33 As I live, saith the Lord God,
Surely with a mighty hand, and ^r with a stretched out arm,
And with fury poured out, will I rule over you :
- 34 And ^s I will bring you out from the people,
And will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered,
With a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm,—and with fury poured out.
- 35 And I will bring you ^t into the wilderness of the people,³
And there ^u will I plead with you face to face.
- 36 ^x Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt,

¹ That is, God suffered them to fall into the observance of debasing idolatry, which was apparently at one period enforced by their kings. See note on 1 Kings xvi. 25.

² That is, high place. The meaning is, Notwithstanding my remonstrance, the place is notorious for idolatrous practices unto this day.

³ Into some place which should be to the Jews of that time what the wilderness had been to their fathers on their departure from Egypt : see Hos. ii. 14, and note. Their wish to be like the heathen (see ver. 32) should not be gratified ; but God, in his providence, would rather insulate them, and discipline them for their good.

So will I plead with you, saith the Lord God.

37 And I will cause you to ^y pass under the rod,¹

^z And I will bring you into the bond² of the covenant :

38 And ^a I will purge out from among you the rebels,

And them that transgress against me :

I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn,

And ^b they shall not enter into the land of Israel.

^c And ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord God ;

^d Go ye, serve ye every one his idols,³

And hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me :

^e But pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols.

40 For ^f in mine holy mountain,

In the mountain of the height of Israel,—saith the Lord God,

There shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me :

There ^g will I accept them,—and there will I require your offerings,

And the firstfruits of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your ^h sweet savour, ⁱ When I bring you out from the people,

And gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered ;

^k And I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 ^l And ye shall know that I am the LORD,

^m When I shall bring you into the land of Israel,

Into the country ⁿ for the which I lifted up mine hand—to give it to your fathers.

43 And ^o there shall ye remember your ways,

And all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled ;

And ^p ye shall lothe yourselves in your own sight

For all your evils that ye have committed.

44 ^q And ye shall know that I am the LORD,

When I have wrought with you ^r for my name's sake,

Not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings,

O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord God.

The approaching destruction of Jerusalem.

45 MOREOVER⁴ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 ^s Son of man, set thy face toward the south,⁵

^t And drop thy word toward the south,

And prophesy against ^u the forest of the south field ;

47 And say to the forest of the south,—Hear the word of the LORD ;

Thus saith the Lord God ;—Behold, ^v I will kindle a fire in thee,

And it shall devour ^w every green tree in thee,—and every dry tree :⁶

^x The flaming flame shall not be quenched,

And all faces ^y from the south to the north shall be burned therein.

48 And ^z all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it :—it shall not be quenched.

49 Then said I, Ah Lord God ! they say of me, Doth he not speak parables ?⁷

21 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

^a Son of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem,

And ^b drop thy word toward the holy places,

And prophesy against the land of Israel,

3 And say to the land of Israel, Thus saith the LORD ;

Behold, I am against thee,—^c and will draw forth my sword⁸ out of his sheath,

And will cut off from thee ^d the righteous and the wicked.

4 Seeing then that I will cut off from thee the righteous and the wicked,

Therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath

Against all flesh ^e from the south to the north :⁹

3 That is, 'Renounce me or renounce your idols.' God abhors half-heartedness and indecision in religion. Comp. Josh. xxiv. 20 ; 1 Kings xviii. 21 ; Rev. iii. 16.

4 The destruction impending over Jerusalem is represented first under the image of a devouring fire (vers. 45—49) ; and next under that of a glittering sword, already prepared for action, which shall make the most lamentable havoc among all the people (xxi. 1—17). The sword is afterwards identified with that of the king of Babylon, who is represented as uncertain whether to turn it first against the Jews or against the Ammonites (18—22). Neither of these people shall escape its stroke (23, 24, 28—32), and the Jewish sovereign shall be visited with his subjects (25—27).

5 Ezekiel was in the northern part of Chaldea, and therefore Judea lay to the south.

6 This fearful visitation will involve the better part of the people as well as the worst. See refs.

7 That is, 'Doth he not speak unintelligibly?' Therefore, the same message is delivered plainly in the words which follow (ch. xxi. 1—5).

8 The Chaldeans, the instrument of God's judgments.

9 From one end of the land to the other.

- 5 ^a That all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath:—it ⁱ shall not return any more.
- 6 ^b Sigh therefore, thou son of man,—with the breaking of thy loins; And with bitterness sigh ^l before their eyes.
- 7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, ^m Wherefore sighest thou? That thou shalt answer, For the tidings; ⁿ because it cometh:
^o And every heart shall melt, and ^p all hands shall be feeble,
 And every spirit shall faint, and all knees shall be weak as water:
 Behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass,—saith the Lord God.
- 8 Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
 9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD;
 Say, ^q A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:
 10 It is ^r sharpened to make a sore slaughter;—it is furbished that it may glitter:
 Should we then make mirth?—It contemneth ^s the rod of my son, ¹ as every tree.
 11 And he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled:
 This sword is sharpened, and it is furbished,—to give it into the hand of ^t the slayer.
 12 Cry and howl, son of man:—for it shall be upon my people,
 It shall be upon all the princes of Israel:
 Terrors by reason of the sword shall be upon my people:
^u Smite therefore upon thy thigh.
 13 Because it is ^v a trial,—and what if the sword ^w contemn even the rod?
^x It shall be no more, ^y saith the Lord God.
 14 Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy,—and ^z smite thine hands together,
 And ^a let the sword be doubled the third time, ³
 The sword of the slain:—it is the sword of the great men that are slain,
 Which entereth into their ^c privy chambers. ⁴
 15 I have set the point [or, glittering; or, fear] of the sword ^d against all their gates,
 That their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied:
 Ah! ^e it is made bright,—it is wrapped up [or, sharpened] for the slaughter.
 16 ^f Go thee one way or other,
 Either on the right hand, or on the left,—whithersoever thy face is set. ⁵
 17 I will also ^g smite mine hands together,—and ^h I will cause my fury to rest: ⁶
 I the LORD have said it.
- 18 The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,
 19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways,
 That the sword of the king of Babylon may come:
 Both ⁷ twain shall come forth out of one land:
 And choose thou a place,—choose it at the head of the way to the city.
 20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to ⁱ Rabbath of the Ammonites,
 And to Judah in Jerusalem ^k the defenced. ⁸
 21 For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way,
 At the head of the two ways, to use divination:
 He made his arrows bright, ⁹—he consulted with images,—he looked in the liver. ¹⁰
 22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem,
 To appoint captains [or, battering rams ^l],
 To open the mouth in the slaughter, ¹¹—to ^m lift up the voice with shouting, ⁿ To appoint battering rams ¹² against the gates,—to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

¹ According to the rendering in the text, the clause means that the sword shall not spare even royalty ('the sceptre') more than others. But some translate, 'It is the rod of my son, it despises every tree;' meaning, We have no cause for mirth; the sword is a chastisement for my son, doing its work impartially (ch. xx. 47).

² 'For it is the trier; and what if it contemns the sceptre? It (i. e. the sceptre) shall be no more.' The sword did, in fact, humble the royalty of Judah.

³ 'Let the stroke be repeated twice and thrice;' i. e. often (see Job xxxiii. 29).

⁶ That is, by satisfying it; by inflicting severe punishment.

⁷ That is, both of the ways or roads.

⁸ Jerusalem is so called, because the people of Judah confided in its natural strength and its fortifications.

⁹ Rather, 'He shook the arrows.' Jerome tells us that the Chaldeans, before a warlike expedition, used the following mode of divination: they marked several arrows with the names or signs of the cities which they intended to assault, put them together in a quiver, shook them and drew them out, as lots are drawn. They then marched against the city whose arrow was first drawn, believing that their gods had directed them to destroy it.

¹⁰ A mode of divination familiar to the Greeks and Romans, as well as to the Orientals. The liver of the animal sacrificed was the first part inspected; and, if this presented very unfavourable signs, no further observations were made.

¹¹ That is, to give command to kill; or, perhaps, to raise the war-cry of death.

¹² These instruments of war are represented in many of the sculptures lately discovered at Nineveh. They are often placed on inclined planes of stone.

- 23 And it shall be unto them¹ as a false divination in their sight,
To them that² have sworn oaths:²
³ But he will call to remembrance the iniquity,—that they may be taken.
- 24 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered,
In that your transgressions are discovered,
So that in all your doings your sins do appear;
Because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance,
Ye shall be taken with the hand.³
- 25 And thou, ⁴ profane wicked prince⁴ of Israel,
⁵ Whose day is come,—when iniquity shall have an end,⁵
- 26 Thus saith the Lord God;—⁶ Remove the diadem,⁶ and take off the crown:
This shall not be the same:⁷—⁸ exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.
- 27 I will overturn, overturn, overturn, it:
⁸ And it shall be no more, until he come, whose right it is;⁸
And I will give it him.
- 28 And thou, son of man, prophesy and say,—Thus saith the Lord God
⁹ Concerning the Ammonites,⁹—and concerning their reproach;¹⁰
Even say thou,—¹¹ The sword, the sword is drawn:
For the slaughter it is furbished,—to consume because of the glittering:¹¹
- 29 Whiles they ¹² see vanity unto thee,—whiles they divine a lie unto¹² thee,
To bring thee upon the necks¹³ of them that are slain,
Of the wicked, ¹⁴ whose day is come, when their iniquity shall have an end.
- 30 ¹⁵ Shall¹⁴ I cause it to return into his sheath?
¹⁶ I will judge thee in the place where thou wast created, ¹⁷ In the land of thy nativity.
- 31 And I will ¹⁸ pour out mine indignation upon thee,
I will ¹⁹ blow¹⁵ against thee in the fire of my wrath,
And deliver thee into the hand of brutish men, and skilful to destroy.
- 32 Thou shalt be for fuel to the fire;—²⁰ thy blood shall be in the midst of the land;
²¹ Thou shalt be no more remembered:—for I the LORD have spoken it.

The sins and punishment of Jerusalem and Judah.

- 22 MOREOVER¹⁶ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
Now, thou son of man, ¹⁷ wilt thou judge,¹⁷ wilt thou judge ¹⁸ the bloody city?
Yea, ¹⁹ thou shalt show her all her abominations.
- 3 Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord God;
The city ²⁰ sheddeth blood in the midst of it, ²¹ that her time may come,
And maketh idols against herself to defile herself.
- 4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast ²² shed;
And hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made;
And thou hast caused thy days to draw near,—and art come even unto thy years:¹⁸

¹ That is, to the Jews. They shall despise as vain the auguries of the Chaldeans.

² That is, who have sworn oaths of submission to the Chaldeans (see 2 Chron. xxxvi. 13). These oaths are referred to in the next clause: 'But he (Nebuchadnezzar) will call to mind the iniquity (i. e. the treachery which they have practised), that they may be taken.'

³ That is, with the well-known hand or power of Nebuchadnezzar.

⁴ Or, 'And thou, O pierced, wicked prince of Israel.' See ver. 14.

⁵ That is, 'when thy iniquity shall have its appropriate issue;' its appropriate recompense or retribution. See ch. xxxv. 5.

⁶ Rather, 'turban;' or, 'mitre:' the head-dress of the high priest. See Exod. xxviii. 36—38.

⁷ Literally, 'This shall not be thus;' i. e. the priestly and royal functions shall not continue.

⁸ Or, 'to whom judgment belongs.' The nation, and particularly its priestly and royal dignities, shall be unsettled, until the appearing of the great Administrator of righteousness and judgment, in whom both offices shall be united in their highest glory. Comp. Zech. vi. 13.

⁹ Although the divining lot had determined Nebuchadnezzar to proceed first against Jerusalem (see ver. 22), the turn of the Ammonites would also come.

¹⁰ That is, the reproach which the Ammonites cast upon the Jews in their distress: see ch. xxv. 3, 6; Zeph. ii. 8.

¹¹ Rather, 'to consume, to flash.' See ver. 10.

¹² That is, 'for thee;' 'while they utter false prophecies to buoy up thy hopes.'

¹³ That is, 'to add thee to the number of those who are already slain in Judea (see ver. 14), and to make thy condition like theirs.'

¹⁴ Or, as some render, 'Return it (i. e. the sword) into its sheath;' i. e. Make no resistance, for it will be of no avail.

¹⁵ That is, to increase the heat of the fire.

¹⁶ In ch. xxii. the prophet is commanded in God's name to judge Jerusalem for her sins, which must be punished with shame and ruin (vers. 1—5). The various allegations against the people are produced in the terms of the laws which they have broken (6—12), and the sentence of rejection and dispersion is pronounced (13—16). The prophet is then directed to address the whole land, declaring that all its inhabitants have become reprobate (17, 18), and shall therefore be punished with Jerusalem (19—22). And, finally, he is commanded to charge the prophets, priests, and princes as the leaders in the national apostasy (23—30), and to threaten them with severe retribution (31).

¹⁷ See note on ch. xx. 4.

¹⁸ That is, either to the last years of thy political existence, or to the years appointed for thy punishment; or, more probably, to thy maturity (in crime).

- ^q Therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen,
And a mocking to all countries.
- 5 *Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee,
Which art infamous and much vexed.*¹
- 6 Behold, ^r the princes of Israel, every one, were in thee to their power² to shed blood.
- 7 In thee³ have they ^s set light by father and mother :
In the midst of thee have they ^t dealt by oppression with the stranger :
In thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.
- 8 Thou hast ^u despised mine holy things,—and hast ^x profaned my sabbaths.
- 9 In thee are ^y men that carry tales to shed blood :
^z And in thee they eat upon the mountains :
In the midst of thee they commit lewdness.
- 10 In thee have they ^a discovered their fathers' nakedness :
In thee have they humbled her that was ^b set apart for pollution.
- 11 And one hath committed abomination ^c with his neighbour's wife ;
And another ^d hath lewdly defiled his daughter-in-law ;
And another in thee hath humbled his ^e sister, his father's daughter.
- 12 In thee^f have they taken gifts to shed blood ;—^g thou hast taken usury and increase,
And thou ^h hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion,
And ⁱ hast forgotten me, saith the Lord God.
- 13 Behold therefore, I have ^k smitten mine hand,⁴
At thy dishonest gain which thou hast made,
And at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.
- 14 ^l Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong,
In the days that I shall deal with thee ?
^m I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.
- 15 And ⁿ I will scatter thee among the heathen,—and disperse thee in the countries,
And ^o will consume thy filthiness out of thee.
- 16 And thou ^p shalt take thine inheritance⁵ in thyself in the sight of the heathen.
And ^q thou shalt know that I am the LORD.
- 17 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
18 Son of man, ^r the house of Israel is to me become dross :
^s All they are brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, ^t in the midst of the furnace ;
They are even the dross of silver.⁶
- 19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;—Because ye are all become dross, Behold, therefore ^u I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.⁷
- 20 As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin,
Into the midst of the furnace,—to blow the fire upon it, to melt it ;
So will I gather you in mine anger and in my fury,
And I will leave you there, and melt you.
- 21 Yea, I will gather you, and ^x blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, ^y And ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.
- 22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace,
So shall ye be melted in the midst thereof ;
And ye shall know that I the LORD have ^z poured out my fury upon you.
- 23 And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
24 Son of man, say unto her,—Thou art the land ^a that is not cleansed,
Nor rained upon,⁸ in the day of indignation.
- 25 ^b There is a conspiracy of her prophets in the midst thereof,
Like a roaring lion ravening the prey ;—they ^c have devoured souls ;
^d They have taken the treasure and precious things ;
They have made her many widows in the midst thereof.
- 26 ^e Her priests have violated my law,—and have ^f profaned mine holy things :
They have put no ^g difference between the holy and profane,
Neither have they showed difference between the unclean and the clean,

¹ Or, 'as infamous and full of confusion.' Even the heathen round about the Jews, not having, like them, forsaken the religion of their fathers, would insult them under their troubles, adding ignominy to suffering.

² Literally, 'to their arm;' i. e. every one employed his power in violence and bloodshed.

³ These charges are worded in accordance with the various specific precepts which the people had violated; and they are made the more emphatic by reference to the fact that the sins were committed in Jerusalem, the city which God had chosen for his residence, and had favoured with his ordinances and oracles.

⁴ That is, with grief and indignation.

⁵ Rather, 'Thou shalt be profaned,' etc.; thou shalt no longer be set apart for my residence; but shalt be treated as common ground, and be profaned by the heathen.

⁶ They are not only alloyed with baser metals, but their very silver is turned to dross. See Isa. i. 22.

⁷ As into a furnace, to consume you. See ver. 20.

⁸ Not purified or fertilized by showers of rain.

- And have hid their eyes from my sabbaths ;—and I am profaned among them.
- 27 Her ^a princes in the midst thereof are like wolves ravening the prey,
To shed blood, and to destroy souls,—to get dishonest gain.
- 28 And ^b her prophets have daubed them with untempered mortar,¹
^a Seeing vanity, and divining lies unto them, Saying, Thus saith the Lord God, when the Lord hath not spoken.
- 29 'The people of the land have used oppression, and exercised robbery,
And have vexed the poor and needy :
Yea, they have ^m oppressed the stranger wrongfully.
- 30 " And I sought for a man among them, that should ^o make up the hedge,
And ^p stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it :
But I found none.
- 31 Therefore have I ^q poured out mine indignation upon them ;
I have consumed them with the fire of my wrath :
^r Their own way have I recompensed upon their heads,—saith the Lord God.
- The apostasies of Israel and Judah, and their consequent ruin.*
- 23 THE² word of the Lord came again unto me, saying,
Son of man, There were ^s two women,—the daughters of one mother :
- 3 And ^t they committed whoredoms in Egypt ;³
They committed whoredoms in ^u their youth :
There were their breasts pressed,—and there they bruised the teats of their virginity.
- 4 And the names of them were Aholah ^x the elder, and Aholibah her sister :
And ^y they were mine, and they bare sons and daughters.
Thus were their names ; Samaria is Aholah,—and Jerusalem ^z Aholibah.⁴
- 5 And ^a Aholah played the harlot when she was mine ;
And she doted on her lovers, on ^b the Assyrians her neighbours,
- 6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers,
All of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses.
- 7 Thus she committed her whoredoms with them,
With all them that were the chosen men of Assyria,
And with all on whom she doted :—with all their idols she defiled herself.
- 8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought ^c from Egypt :
For in her youth they lay with her,—and they bruised the breasts of her virginity,
And poured their whoredom upon her.
- 9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers,
Into the hand of the ^d Assyrians, upon whom she doted.
- 10 These ^e discovered her nakedness :
They took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword :
And she became famous⁵ among women ;—for they had executed judgment upon her.
- 11 And ^f when her sister Aholibah saw this,
^g She was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she,
And in her whoredoms more than her sister in her whoredoms.
- 12 She doted upon the ^h Assyrians her neighbours, ⁱ Captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously,
Horsemen riding upon horses,—all of them desirable young men.
- 13 Then I saw that she was defiled,—^h that they took both one way,
- 14 And that she increased her whoredoms :
For when she saw men⁶ ⁱ portrayed upon the wall,
^m The images of the Chaldeans portrayed with vermilion,⁷
- 15 Girded with girdles⁸ upon their loins,
Exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads,—all of them princes to look to,
After the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity :

¹ See note on ch. xiii. 10.

² In ch. xxiii. the faithlessness of the whole nation of Israel is portrayed under the most degrading and revolting figures : see note on ch. xvi. 1. After a general introduction (vers. 1—4), the prophet describes the sins and punishment of the ten tribes (5—10) ; the greater sins of Judah (11—21) ; the penalties threatened against her (22—35) ; and the judicial process consisting of the accusation (36—45), and the sentence (46—49).

³ The Israelites had been greatly contaminated with idolatry in Egypt : see refs.

⁴ Aholah means, 'her own tent,' or 'tabernacle ;' Aholibah, 'my tabernacle [is] in her.' Samaria (or the kingdom of the ten tribes) openly deserted the sanctuary of Jehovah, which was in Jerusalem, and set up 'her own tabernacle' for the worship of the golden calf.

⁵ Rather, 'notorious ;' that is, 'infamous.'

⁶ Either deified men, such as most of the gods of the nations were—in other words, Babylonian gods painted in human form ; or Babylonian princes, with whom the Jews were led to form alliances, and by whom they were allured to idolatry. See ch. viii. 10.

⁸ The Assyrians generally wore flowing robes, mantles of various shapes, long fringed scarfs, and embroidered girdles.

- 16 " And as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them,
And sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.
- 17 And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love,
And they defiled her with their whoredom,
And she was polluted with them, and ^o her mind was alienated¹ from them.
- 18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness :
Then ^p my mind was alienated from her,
Like as my mind was alienated from her sister.
- 19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms,
In calling to remembrance the days of her youth,
^q Wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.
- 20 For she doted upon their² paramours,
^r Whose flesh is as the flesh of asses,—and whose issue is like the issue of horses.
- 21 Thus thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth,
In bruising thy teats by the Egyptians—for the paps of thy youth.
- 22 Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord God ;
^s Behold, I will raise up thy lovers against thee,
^t From whom thy mind is alienated,
^u And I will bring them against thee on every side ;
- 23 The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans,
^x Pekod, and Shoa, and Koa,³ and all the Assyrians with them :
^y All of them desirable young men,
Captains and rulers, great lords and renowned,—all of them riding upon horses.
- 24 And they shall come against thee with chariots,⁴ wagons, and wheels,
And with an assembly of people,
Which shall set against thee buckler and shield and helmet round about :
^z And I will set judgment before them,
And they shall judge thee according to their judgments.
- 25 And I will set ^a my jealousy against thee,—and they shall deal furiously with thee :
^b They shall take away thy nose and thine ears ;⁵
And thy remnant shall fall by the sword :
They shall take thy sons and thy daughters ;
And thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.
- 26 ^c They shall also strip thee out of thy clothes,—and take away thy fair jewels.
- 27 Thus ^d will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee,
And ^e thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt :
So that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them,—nor remember Egypt any more.
- 28 For thus saith the Lord God ;
Behold, ^f I will deliver thee into the hand of them ^g whom thou hatest,
Into the hand of them ^h from whom thy mind is alienated :
- 29 ⁱ And they shall deal with thee hatefully,
And shall take away all thy labour,—and ^k shall leave thee naked and bare :
^l And the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered,
Both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.
- 30 I will do these things unto thee,
Because thou hast ^m gone a whoring after the heathen,
And because thou art polluted with their idols.
- 31 " Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister ;
Therefore will I give her ⁿ cup into thine hand.
- 32 Thus saith the Lord God ;—Thou shalt ^o drink of thy sister's cup deep and large :
^p Thou shalt be laughed to scorn, and had in derision ; it containeth much.
- 33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow,
With the cup of astonishment and desolation,—with the cup of thy sister Samaria.
- 34 Thou shalt ^r even drink it and suck it out,
And thou shalt break⁶ the sherds thereof,
^s And pluck off thine own breasts :—for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.
- 35 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;
Because thou ^t hast forgotten me, and ^u cast me behind thy back,
Therefore bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.⁷

^cThey have defiled my sanctuary ^din the same day,
 And ^ehave profaned my sabbaths.
- 39 For when they had slain their children to their idols,
 Then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it ;
 And, lo, ^fthus have they done in the midst of mine house.
- 40 And furthermore, ^gthat ye have sent for men to come from far, ^h ^hUnto whom a messenger was sent ; and, lo, they came :
 For whom thou didst ⁱwash thyself,
^kPaintedst thy eyes, ^land deckedst thyself with ornaments,
- 41 And satest upon a stately ^mbed, and a table prepared before it, ⁿWhereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.
- 42 And a voice of a multitude ^obeing at ease was with her :
 And with the men of the common sort
 Were brought Sabeans [or, drunkards] from the wilderness, ³
 Which put bracelets upon their hands,—and beautiful crowns upon their heads.
- 43 Then said I unto her that was ^pold in adulteries,
 Will they now commit whoredoms with her, and she with them ?
- 44 Yet they went in unto her,—as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot :
^qSo went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.
- 45 And ^rthe righteous men, ^sthey shall ^sjudge them after the manner of adulteresses,
 And after the manner of women that shed blood ;
 Because they are adulteresses, and ^tblood is in their hands.
- 46 For thus saith the Lord God ;—“ I will bring up a company upon them,
 And I will give them to be removed and spoiled.
- 47 ^uAnd the company shall stone them with stones,
 And dispatch them with their swords ;
^vThey shall slay their sons and their daughters, ^wAnd burn up their houses with fire.
- 48 Thus ^xwill I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, ^yThat all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness.
- 49 ^zAnd they shall recompense your lewdness upon you,
 And ye shall ^abear the sins of your idols :
^bAnd ye shall know that I am the Lord God.

The impending fate of Jerusalem.

- 24 AGAIN⁵ in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, ² the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of this same day : the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem ³this same day. ⁴And utter a parable unto ^hthe rebellious house, and say unto them,

Thus saith the Lord God ; ⁱSet on a pot,—set it on, and also pour water into it :

- 4 Gather the pieces thereof into it,
Even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder ;—fill it with the choice bones.
- 5 Take the choice of the flock, and burn also the bones under it, ⁶
 And make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.
- 6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord God ;—Woe to ^hthe bloody city,

² They not merely yielded to temptation, but courted it.

³ The ‘wilderness’ means the tract of country which lay between Babylon and Palestine.

⁴ These may be the prophets, who would ‘judge’ their countrymen by denouncing the Divine judgments against them ; or the nations whom God would employ as the instruments of his righteousness or justice.

awful punishment now to be inflicted on the guilty city and nation (3—14) ; he is then commanded, by his own conduct under a sudden and painful bereavement, to show the exiles that the impending judgment shall be such as to surpass all customary expressions of sorrow (15—24) ; and he is told that when intelligence arrives of the fall of the city, he shall resume his prophecies, which the people will be prepared to hear (25—27).

⁶ This may mean either, ‘Make under it a pile for the bones,’ i. e. one which shall thoroughly boil them ; or perhaps, ‘Make under it a heap of the bones,’ i. e. Put the more bony pieces not into the pot, but into the fire beneath. Both the upper and lower classes of the people must be involved in the calamity.

- To the pot whose scum¹ is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it!
¹ Bring it out piece by piece; let no ^m lot fall upon it.²
 7 For ⁿ her blood is in the midst of her;—she set it upon the top of a rock;³
^o She poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;
 8 ^p That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance;
^q I have set her blood upon the top of a rock,—that it should not be covered.
 9 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
^r Woe to the bloody city!—I will even make the pile for fire great.
 10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire,
 Consume the flesh, and spice it well,⁴ and let the bones be burned.
 11 Then set it empty⁵ upon the coals thereof,
 That the brass of it may be hot, and may burn,
 And that ^s the filthiness of it may be molten in it,
That the scum of it may be consumed.
 12 She hath ^t wearied herself with lies,⁶
 And ^u her great scum went not forth out of her:—her scum shall be in the fire.
 13 In thy filthiness is lewdness:
^x Because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged,
 Thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more,
^y Till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.
 14 ^z I the LORD have spoken it:—it shall come to pass, and I will do it;
 I will not go back, ^a neither will I spare, neither will I repent.
^b According to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee,
 Saith the Lord God.
 15 ALSO the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
 16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee ^c the desire of thine eyes with a stroke:?
 Yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep,—neither shall thy tears run down.
 17 Forbear to cry, ^d make no mourning for the dead,
^e Bind the tire of thine head⁸ upon thee,—and ^f put on thy shoes upon thy feet,
 And ^g cover not thy ^h lips,—and ⁱ eat not the bread of men.
 18 So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife died; and I
 19 did in the morning as I was commanded. And the people said unto me, ^k Wilt 20 thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so? Then I 21 answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Speak unto the house of Israel,
 Thus saith the Lord God;
 Behold, ^l I will profane my sanctuary,—^m the excellency of your strength, ⁿ The desire of your eyes,—and that which your soul pitieth;
^o And your sons and your daughters whom ye have left shall fall by the sword.
 22 And ye shall do as I have done:
^p Ye shall not cover your lips,—nor eat the bread of men.
 23 And your tires shall be upon your heads,—and your shoes upon your feet:
^q Ye shall not mourn nor weep;
 But ^r ye shall pine away for your iniquities,—and mourn one toward another.
 24 Thus ^s Ezekiel is unto you a sign:—according to all that he hath done shall ye do:
^t And when this cometh, ^u ye shall know that I am the Lord God.
 25 Also, thou son of man, shall it not be
 In the day when I take from them ^x their strength,
 The joy of their glory, the desire of their eyes,
 And that whereupon they set their minds,—^y their sons and their daughters,
 26 That ^z he that escapeth in that day shall come unto thee,
 To cause thee to hear it with thine ears?

¹ Or, 'rust;' or, 'verdigris;' i. e. wickedness. The complaint is, that former judgments have not in any degree purified the city.

² That is, Let all the inhabitants, without distinction of age or station, be the prey of the enemy. The lot was frequently used on the capture of a city, to determine which of the inhabitants should be slain, and which should be spared. See 2 Sam. viii. 2.

³ Instead of attempting to conceal her iniquities, as a murderer would try to cover the blood of his victim with dust, she had sinned without shame; therefore her punishment shall be public (ver. 8).

⁴ Rather, 'mix it thoroughly;' i. e. let it be wholly consumed.

⁵ So as to burn the cauldron itself; for the city shall be destroyed by the Chaldeans as well as its inhabitants.

⁶ Rather, 'It (i. e. the cauldron) hath wearied [me] with labours;' i. e. with endeavours to cleanse it.

⁷ The servant of God is now called upon to suffer rather than to speak; and he appears as submissive under trial as he had been obedient to the calls of active duty.

⁸ That is, 'turban;' or, 'head-dress.' The usual tokens of grief were loud outcries, the removal of the usual head-dress and sandals, whilst the mouth and beard, and sometimes the head, were wrapped in the mantle. To these, on occasion of death was added the funeral feast. See refs. This abstinence from the usual mourning solemnities was to be a token to the Jews, that, on the destruction of their capital and its inhabitants, they should have no opportunity to lament their dead (vers. 21—24).

27 ^aIn that day shall thy mouth be opened to him which is escaped,
And thou shalt speak, and be no more dumb :¹
And ^bthou shalt be a sign unto them ;—and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Predictions of judgments on the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, and Philistines.

25 THE² word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, Son of man, ^cset thy 3 face ^dagainst the Ammonites, and prophesy against them ; and say unto the Ammonites,

Hear the word of the Lord God ;—Thus saith the Lord God ;
^eBecause thou saidst, Aha ! against my sanctuary, when it was profaned ;³
And against the land of Israel, when it was desolate ;

And against the house of Judah, when they went into captivity ;
4 Behold, therefore I will deliver thee to the men of the east⁴ for a possession,
And ^fthey shall set their palaces in thee, and make their dwellings in thee :
They shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk.

5 And I will make ^gRabbah ^ha stable for camels,
And the Ammonites a couchingplace for flocks.
ⁱAnd ye shall know that I am the LORD.

6 For thus saith the Lord God ;
Because thou ^khast clapped thine hands, ^land stamped with the feet,
And ^mrejoiced in heart with all thy despite against the land of Israel ;

7 Behold, therefore I will ⁿstretch out mine hand upon thee,
^oAnd will deliver thee for a spoil to the heathen ;

And I will cut thee off from the people,
And I will cause thee to perish out of the countries :
I will destroy thee ; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

8 Thus saith the Lord God ;—Because that ^pMoab and ^qSeir do say,
Behold, ^rthe house of Judah is like unto all the heathen ;⁵

9 Therefore, behold, I will open the side of Moab from the cities,⁶
From his cities which are on his frontiers, the glory of the country,
Beth-jeshimoth, Baal-meon, and Kiriathaim,

10 ^sUnto the men of the east, with the Ammonites,—and will give them in possession,
That the Ammonites ^tmay not be remembered⁷ among the nations.

11 And I will execute judgments upon Moab ;—and they shall know that I am the LORD.

12 Thus saith the Lord God ;
^uBecause that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah by taking vengeance,⁸
And hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them ;

13 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;—I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom,
And will cut off ^vman and beast from it ;—and I will make it desolate from ^wTeman ;
And they of Dedan shall fall by the sword [or, they shall fall by the sword unto Dedan].

14 And ^xI will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel :
^yAnd they shall do in Edom according to mine anger, and according to my fury.
And they shall know my vengeance,—saith the Lord God.

15 Thus saith the Lord God ;—^bBecause ^cthe Philistines have dealt by revenge,
And have taken vengeance with a despiteful heart,
To destroy it for the old hatred⁹ [or, with perpetual hatred^a] ;

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;

1 During the siege of Jerusalem the prophet was to wait in silence the fulfilment of his last terrible predictions. When they were fulfilled, he would have new messages to deliver to the smitten and humbled remnant.

2 Whilst Ezekiel awaits the fulfilment of his last threatenings against the Jews, he is directed to predict the punishment of their heathen neighbours (ch. xxv. —xxxii.), who had been the instigators and accomplices of their sins. Four of these, the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, and Philistines, are marked out in ch. xxv. as the objects of Divine vengeance on account of their inhuman triumph over the fall of Israel. Comp. Amos i.

3 Rather, 'for it is profaned ;' 'for it is desolate ;' 'for they go into captivity.' With the feeling here expressed compare Ps. lxxxiii. 2—5.

4 Probably the Medianites and other tribes of the desert lying between Palestine and the Persian Gulf. See Judg. vi. 3 ; Jer. xlix. 28. These might either form part of the army of Nebuchadnezzar, or might follow him and complete the desolation which he had begun.

5 That is, We see no difference between Israel and other nations : their God has no more power to preserve them than the gods of their neighbours have.

6 That is, I will cause the territory on his borders to be invaded or passed through.

7 The Ammonites and Moabites have long lost their national existence, and would hardly have been known but for the Scripture record of their crimes and doom.

8 The sin charged against Edom is that of long-cherished, implacable resentment against the superiority of Israel. How this was shown may be gathered from Psa. cxxxvii. See also Obadiah, and notes.

9 This hatred dated back from the time when the Philistines began to oppress the Israelites in the days of the Judges. See Judg. x. 7 ; xiii. 1.

10 As Philistia lay on the direct route from Egypt to Chalden, it suffered exceedingly in the wars between the two rival powers ; and before the Christian era it had ceased to be the residence of an independent people. Gaza alone has retained any importance.

- And I will cut off the ^f Cherethims,¹—^g and destroy the remnant of the sea coasts.
 17 And I will ^h execute great vengeance upon them with furious rebukes.
ⁱ And they shall know that I am the LORD,
 When I shall lay my vengeance upon them.

Prophecies against Tyre and Zidon; with a promise of restoration to Israel.

- 26 AND² it came to pass in the eleventh year,³ in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

- 2 Son of man, ^k because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem,
^l Aha! she is broken that was the gates of the people:⁴
 She is turned unto me:⁵—I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:
 3 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;—Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus,
 And will cause many nations to come up against thee,
^m As the sea causeth his waves to come up.
 4 And ⁿ they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus,—and break down her towers:
 I will also scrape her dust from her,—and ^o make her like the top of a rock.⁶
 5 It shall be a place for the spreading of nets ^p in the midst of the sea:
 For I have spoken it, saith the Lord God:
 And it shall become a spoil to the nations.⁷
 6 And her daughters which are in the field⁸ shall be slain by the sword;
^q And they shall know that I am the LORD.
 7 For thus saith the Lord God;—Behold, ^r I will bring upon Tyrus, Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon,—^s a king of kings, from the north,
 With horses, and with chariots,
 And with horsemen, and companies, and much people.
 8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field:
 And he shall ^t make a fort against thee,—and cast a mount against thee,
 And lift up the buckler against thee.
 9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls,
 And with his axes he shall break down thy towers.
 10 By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee:
 Thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen,
 And of the wheels, and of the chariots,
 When he shall enter into thy gates,
 As men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.
 11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets:
 He shall slay thy people by the sword,
 And thy strong garrisons⁹ shall go down to the ground.
 12 And they shall make a spoil of thy riches,—and make a prey of ^u thy merchandise:
 And they shall break down thy walls,—and destroy thy pleasant houses:
 And they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust
 In the midst of the water.¹⁰
 13 ^v And I will cause the noise of ^v thy songs to cease;
 And the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.
 14 And ^z I will make thee like the top of a rock:

¹ A name or a tribe of the Philistines. See 1 Sam. xxx. 14; 2 Sam. viii. 18. The word is here used for the sake of the paronomasia, 'I will slay the slayers.'

² Chapters xxvi.—xxviii. form a connected series of prophecies against Tyre, divided into four parts. In ch. xxvi. the exultation of Tyre over the fall of her rival is adduced as the immediate cause of the threatenings, and it is declared that her destruction shall be far more complete than that of Jerusalem (vers. 2—6). Nebuchadnezzar is announced as the first agent of punishment, and his assaults and the subsequent desolations are described (7—14); and the alarm of other nations is depicted, with their lamentations at her terrible overthrow (15—21).

³ It is remarkable that this was the year in which Jerusalem was taken. The month is not mentioned; but it was probably the fifth—the month immediately following that of the fall of Jerusalem (Jer. lii. 6—12). Tyre had scarcely uttered its proud taunts against Zion, when Jehovah, by the mouth of his prophet, announced its own doom.

⁴ Referring to the great confluence of people from all parts to Jerusalem, not only for worship, but for traffic.

⁵ Her commerce and wealth will now be transferred to me. The words may also denote an expectation of profiting directly by purchasing the spoils of her rival, and especially her unhappy inhabitants, many of whom were probably sold at Tyre for slaves. See Joel iii. 4—6.

⁶ Her destruction shall be complete.

⁷ See note on Isa. xxiii. 1. When Ezekiel uttered these predictions, Tyre had attained the highest prosperity, as head of the Phœnician cities and colonies. The island-town had successfully resisted a siege of five years by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria; and it is doubtful whether Nebuchadnezzar succeeded in taking that part of the city after besieging it for thirteen years. He, however, destroyed the other part, and reduced the whole to dependence; and thus gave the first blow to its power. Alexander captured it, B. C. 332, by constructing a mole from the mainland. This has, during a long series of ages, aided the accumulation of sand; so that the port is now almost useless; whilst the rocky island is literally a 'place for the spreading of nets,' and a little town of miserable hovels marks the site of ancient Tyre.

⁸ That is, the dependent towns in the neighbourhood.

¹⁰ This was done when Alexander used the materials of the town on the mainland to make a mole for approaching the island.

Thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon ;
Thou shalt be built no more :—for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

15 Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus ;

Shall not the isles ^a shake at the sound of thy fall,
When the wounded cry,—when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee ?

16 Then all the ^b princes of the sea shall ^c come down from their thrones,

And lay away their robes, and put off their brodered garments :
They shall clothe themselves with trembling ;—^d they shall sit upon the ground,
And ^e shall tremble at every moment,—and ^f be astonished at thee.

17 And they shall take up a ^g lamentation for thee, and say to thee,

How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited of seafaring men,
The renowned city, which wast ^h strong in the sea,—she and her inhabitants,
Which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it !

18 Now shall ⁱ the isles tremble in the day of thy fall ;

Yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy departure.

19 For thus saith the Lord God ;

When I shall make thee a desolate city,—like the cities that are not inhabited ;
When I shall ^k bring up the deep upon thee,—and great waters shall cover thee ;

20 When I shall bring thee down

^l With them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time,
And shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old,
With them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited ;
^m And I shall set glory ⁿ in the land of the living ;¹

21 ^o I will make thee a terror, and thou shalt be no more :

^p Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou never be found again,
Saith the Lord God.

27 THE² word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, Now, thou son of man,

3 ^q take up a lamentation for Tyrus ; and say unto Tyrus,

^r O thou that art situate at the entry of the sea,
Which art ^s a merchant of the people for many isles,
Thus saith the Lord God ;—O Tyrus, thou hast said, 'I am of perfect beauty.

4 Thy borders are in the midst of the seas,—thy builders have perfected thy beauty.

5 They have made all thy ship boards of fir trees of ^u Senir :³

They have taken cedars⁴ from Lebanon to make masts for thee.

6 Of the oaks of Bashan have they made thine oars ;

The company of the Ashurites have made thy benches of ivory,⁵
Brought out of ^v the isles of Chittim.

7 Fine linen with brodered work⁶ from Egypt

Was that which thou spreadest forth to be thy sail ;
Blue and purple from the isles of ^w Elishah⁷ was that which covered thee.

8 The inhabitants of Zidon and ^x Arvad⁸ were thy mariners :

^a Thy wise men, O Tyrus, that were in thee, were thy pilots.

9 The ancients of ^b Gebal⁹ and the wise men thereof were in thee, thy calkers :

All the ships of the sea with their mariners were in thee to occupy¹⁰ thy merchandise.

10 They of ^c Persia and of ^d Lud and of ^e Phut were in thine army, thy men of war :

They hanged the shield and helmet in thee ;—they set forth thy comeliness.¹¹

1 That is, When I shall restore Judea to national life and prosperity. The land of the Jews is styled 'the land of the living;' in opposition to Tyre, whose inhabitants would be among those 'that descend to the pit.'

2 The second part of this prophecy is a lamentation over Tyre; describing her beauty and resources under the appropriate figure of a vast ship, constructed, manned, and freighted by the combined skill, strength, and riches of all nations (vers. 1—25); now broken by a violent storm, and foundering with all on board, to the utter dismay and grief of all men, who loudly lament her ruin (26—36). The full and lively picture here drawn of Tyre's wealth and glory in the prophet's time illustrates the Divine prescience, as well as the Divine power, in making her what she has become. This chapter is deeply interesting also, as being the most extended account which we possess of the commerce of the world at that early date.

3 'Or, 'Shenir,' a name of Hermon. See note on Deut. iii. 8, 9.

4 The word rendered 'cedar' is probably generic, and includes some species of juniper and pine, besides the 'cedar of Lebanon.'

5 Rather, 'They have made thy planking of ivory, inlaid in box from the isles of Chittim.' See note on Numb. xxiv. 24.

6 In Egypt, the ordinary sails were white; but those of the pleasure vessels of the king and nobles were often richly painted or embroidered.

7 'Elishah' probably means the coast lands and islands of Greece. The name may be connected with Hellas, or with that of the province of Elis, sometimes used for the whole Peloponnesus, whence purple dye is obtained.

8 An island on the northern part of the Phœnician coast, now Ruad. See Gen. x. 18.

9 Called by the Greeks Byblos, and now Jebail. See note on 1 Kings v. 18.

10 Rather, 'deal in.'

11 That is, 'they contributed to thy glory.' After the destruction of Tyre as an independent power by Nebuchadnezzar, she contributed her quota of ships and men to the service of Persia (Herod. vii. 89; Arrian. ii. 15).

- 11 The men of Arvad with thine army were upon thy walls round about,
And the Gammadims¹ were in thy towers:
They hanged their shields upon thy walls round about;
They have made ^fthy beauty perfect.
- 12 ^gTarshish was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of all kind of riches;
With silver, iron, tin, and lead, they traded in thy fairs.
- 13 ^hJavan,² Tubal, and Meshech, they were thy merchants:
They traded ⁱthe persons of men and vessels ^kof brass in thy market.
- 14 They of the house of ^lTogarmah traded in thy fairs
With horses and horsemen³ and mules.
- 15 The men of ^mDedan⁴ were thy merchants;
Many isles were the merchandise of thine hand:
They brought thee for a present⁵ horns⁶ of ivory and ebony.
- 16 Syria⁷ was thy merchant by reason of the multitude of the wares of thy making:
They occupied in thy fairs with emeralds, purple, and brodered work,
And fine linen, and coral, and agate.
- 17 Judah, and the land of Israel, they were thy merchants:
They traded in thy market ⁿwheat of ^oMinnith,⁸
And Pannag,⁹ and honey, and oil, and ^pbalm.
- 18 Damascus was thy merchant in the multitude of the wares of thy making,
For the multitude of all riches;—in the wine of Helbon,¹⁰ and white wool.
- 19 ^qDan also and Javan going to and fro [or, Meuzal] occupied in thy fairs:¹¹
Bright iron, ^rcassia, and calamus, were in thy market.
- 20 ^sDedan was thy merchant in precious clothes for chariots.¹²
- 21 Arabia, and all the princes of ^tKedar,¹³ they occupied with thee
In lambs, and rams, and goats:—in these were they thy merchants.
- 22 The merchants of ^uSheba and Raamah,¹⁴ they were thy merchants:
They occupied in thy fairs with chief of all spices,
And with all precious stones, and gold.
- 23 ^vHaran, and Canneh,¹⁵ and ^wEden,
The merchants of ^xSheba, ^yAsshur, and Chilmad, were thy merchants.
- 24 These were thy merchants in all sorts of things,
In blue clothes, and brodered work,
And in chests of rich apparel, bound with cords, and made of cedar,
Among thy merchandise.
- 25 ^bThe ships of Tarshish did sing of thee¹⁶ in thy market:
And thou wast replenished,—and made very glorious ^cin the midst of the seas.
- 26 ^dThy rowers have brought thee ^einto great waters:
^fThe east wind¹⁷ hath broken thee in the midst of the seas.
- 27 Thy ^griches, and thy fairs,—thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots,
Thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise,
And all thy men of war, that are in thee,
And in all thy company which is in the midst of thee,
Shall fall into the midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin.

Comp. Gen. x.³ Or, perhaps, 'riding-horses,' as distinguished from chariot-horses.⁴ See note on Isa. xxi. 13.⁵ Rather, 'for a price;' i. e. in exchange.⁶ So called, probably, from the resemblance of elephants' tusks to horns.⁷ Some manuscripts and versions read 'Edom,' which suits the arrangement better.⁸ A place belonging to the Ammonites. See Judg. xi. 33.⁹ Perhaps, 'cake.' 'Honey' probably includes syrup as well as bee-honey.¹⁰ Probably Chalybon, now Aleppo, which produced the favourite wine of the Persian kings.¹¹ Some render this clause, 'Vedan and Javan brought thread to thy markets;' others, 'Vedan and Javan from Uzal traded in thy fairs.' According to the last rendering, these were Arabian tribes. See Gen. x. 27.

¹² In the Egyptian and Assyrian monuments, the chariot-horses are often covered with clothes embroidered and tasseled.¹³ See note on Isa. xxi. 17.¹⁴ Cushite nations mentioned in Gen. x. 7.¹⁵ Probably the same as Calneh or Calno, since Ctesiphon, on the Tigris. These three places were in Mesopotamia. See Isa. x. 9; xxxvii. 12. 'Sheba' in this verse is probably the Shemite Sheba of Gen. x. 28. 'Chilmad' is unknown. Some ancient versions read 'Charman,' and the Chaldee renders it 'Media.' This suggests 'Carmania,' east of Persia.¹⁶ Or, 'The ships of Tarshish are thy caravans for thy market;' i. e. they bring thy merchandise.¹⁷ The east wind is peculiarly tempestuous on the coast of Palestine. See Job xxvii. 21; Psa. xlviii. 7; Jer. xviii. 17.

1 Or, 'now that thou art broken.'

2 In the third part of the predictions against Tyre, the prophet addresses the king in a vein of severe irony, depicting his assumption of Divine attributes and super-human greatness, which provoked God to lay all his glory in the dust (vers. 1—10); and showing that, as God had distinguished him with peculiar favours, on account of which he thought himself like one of His cherubic attendants, or like Adam in his unfallen state; so He would now punish him for his sins with proportionate severity (11—19). The fall of Zidon is then foretold (20—23); and the prophecy concludes with a prospect of better days for Israel, to whom the downfall of these heathen powers betokened good (24—26).

3 This king was Ithobal (or Ethbaal) rr. The first king of that name was the father of Jezebel (1 Kings xvi. 31), and great-grandfather of Dido, the founder of Carthage.

4 See ch. xiv. 14, and note.

5 In the lips of a Jew this was a term of contempt (see Exod. vi. 12, and note; 1 Sam. xvii. 36); and when applied to persons, often meant idolatrous and impious.

6 That is, Thou exhibitest human nature in its complete perfection: and, like a perfect and unfallen man, thou dwellest in Eden (ver. 13). The proud monarch of Tyre is ironically represented as a kind of model-man, the type of humanity in its most godlike form; for the purpose of showing how incapable he was of sustaining so high a dignity, and the punishment that would follow his assumption of it.

7 Oriental monarchs were accustomed to adorn, or rather overlay, their persons with jewellery.

8 Some translate this, 'of thy jewel-holes and of thy sockets;' i.e. the holes in which the jewels just mentioned were set. To all this wealth and splendour he regarded himself as being naturally entitled.

- 14 Thou art the anointed¹ ^ucherub that covereth;—^xand I have set thee so :
Thou wast upon ^ythe holy mountain of God ;²
Thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire.
- 15 ^zThou wast perfect in thy ways³ from the day that ^athou wast created, ^bTill iniquity was found in thee.
- 16 ^cBy the multitude of thy merchandise
They have filled the midst of thee⁴ with violence, and thou hast sinned :
^dTherefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God :
And I will destroy thee, ^eO covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.
- 17 ^fThine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty,
Thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness :⁵
^gI will cast thee to the ground,
I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.
- 18 Thou hast defiled thy sanctuaries⁶ by the multitude of thine iniquities,
By the iniquity of thy traffic ;
^hTherefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee,
It shall devour thee ;—and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth
In the sight of all them that behold thee.
- 19 All they that know thee among the people shall be astonished at thee :
ⁱThou shalt be a terror,—and never shalt thou be any more.
- 20, 21 AGAIN⁷ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, ^kset thy 22 face ^lagainst Zidon, and prophesy against it, and say,
Thus saith the Lord God ;—^mBehold, I am against thee, O Zidon ;
And I will be glorified in the midst of thee :
And ⁿthey shall know that I am the LORD,
When I shall have executed judgments in her,—and shall be ^osanctified in her.
- 23 ^pFor I will send into her pestilence, and blood into her streets ;
And the wounded shall be judged in the midst of her
By the sword upon her on every side.—And they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 24 And there shall be no more ^qa pricking brier⁸ unto the house of Israel,
Nor any grieving thorn of all that are round about them, that despised them.
And they shall know that I am the Lord God.
- 25 Thus saith the Lord God ;
When I shall have ^rgathered the house of Israel
From the people among whom they are scattered,
And shall be ^ssanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, ^tThen shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob.
- 26 And they shall ^udwell safely therein,
And shall ^xbuild houses, and ^yplant vineyards ;
Yea, they shall dwell with confidence,
When I have executed judgments upon all those that despise them round about them ;
And they shall know that I am the LORD their God.

¹ Or, 'the outspread cherub.' The king of Tyre is compared to the cherubim which covered the ark, being set there by God's command (Exod. xxv. 20); as if he were exalted by God himself to the highest dignity.

² It is doubtful whether the reference is to the approach of the Hebrew elders to Jehovah recorded in Exod. xxiv. 9—11, or to the brightness of the Shekinah, reflected from the gems and gold of the high priest's breastplate and of the most holy place.

³ Appearing to rival Adam in his unfallen state.

⁴ The king is here identified with the city, in which wealth had led to oppression and cruelty.

⁵ Thy prosperity made thee proud and infatuated.

⁶ See ver. 14. Therefore the Divine 'fire,' instead of illuminating, shall 'devour thee.'

⁷ The prophet denounces punishment upon Zidon, the mother-city of Tyre; reverting again to the injuries she had inflicted on Israel, to whom deliverance and peace are promised (vers. 20—26).

⁸ Alluding to the language of Moses in Numb. xxxiii. 55.

⁹ The series of prophecies against Egypt comprises six or seven predictions delivered at different times, extending over a period of seventeen years. In ch. xxix., God threatens Pharaoh, for his self-sufficient pride, with destruction to himself, and all the horrors of a desolating war through his country (vers. 2—12); yet a promise is given of some relief after forty years, though the kingdom shall then be enfeebled and debased (13—16). The prophecy was in part fulfilled by the revolt against Hophra, who was dethroned and put to death (see Jer. xlv. 30), and by the subsequent civil war, which led to the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar, who overran the country.

¹⁰ See note on Ps. lxxiv. 13.

And all the fish of thy rivers shall stick unto thy scales.
- 5 And ^f I will leave thee thrown into the wilderness,
Thee and all the fish of thy rivers:—thou shalt fall upon the open field;
^g Thou shalt not be brought together, nor gathered:
^h I have given thee for meat to the beasts of the field
And to the fowls of the heaven.
- 6 And all the inhabitants of Egypt shall know that I am the Lord,
Because they have been a ⁱ staff of reed to the house of Israel.
- 7 ^k When they took hold of thee by thy hand,
^l Thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder:
And when they leaned upon thee,
Thou breakest, and madest all their loins to be at a stand.³
- 8 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
Behold, I will bring ^m a sword upon thee,—ⁿ and cut off man and beast out of thee.
- 9 And ^o the land of Egypt shall be desolate and waste;
And they shall know that I am the Lord.
^p Because he hath said, The river is mine, and I have made it,
- 10 Behold, therefore I am against thee, and against thy rivers,
^q And I will make the land of Egypt utterly waste and desolate, ^r From the tower of ^s Syene³ even unto the border of Ethiopia.
- 11 ^t No foot of man shall pass through it,—nor foot of beast shall pass through it,
Neither shall it be inhabited forty years.⁴
- 12 ^u And I will make the land of Egypt desolate
In the midst of the countries that are desolate,
And her cities among the cities that are laid waste shall be desolate forty years:
And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations,
And will disperse them through the countries.
- 13 Yet thus saith the Lord God;
At the ^x end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians
From the people whither they were scattered:
- 14 And I will bring again the captivity of Egypt,
And will cause them to return into the land of Pathros,⁵
Into the land of their habitation;—and they shall be there a ^y base kingdom.
- 15 ^z It shall be the basest of the kingdoms;
Neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations:
For I will diminish them, that they shall no more rule over the nations.
- 16 And it shall be no more ^a the confidence of the house of Israel,
Which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance,
When they shall look after them:⁶
But they shall know that I am the Lord God.
- 17 AND it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year,⁷ in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,
- 18 Son of man, ^b Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon caused his army
To serve a great service against Tyrus:
Every head was made bald, and every shoulder was peeled:⁸
Yet had he no wages,⁹ nor his army, for Tyrus,

² Or, 'and madest all their loins to totter.'

³ Or, 'from Migdol even to Syene, even to the border of Ethiopia;' the former being at the northern, the latter at the southern boundary of Egypt.

⁴ Some regard 'forty years' as a symbolic number for a period of chastisement and affliction, derived from the facts recorded in Numb. xiv. 34. But it is more likely that it is to be taken literally, and that the country did not recover from the depression consequent upon anarchy and invasion for about that period, or towards the latter part of the reign of Amasis.

⁵ Pathros is Upper Egypt, or the Thebaid; but is here probably put for the whole land.

⁶ Or, 'And they shall no more be to the house of Israel for a confidence, bringing to mind [their] iniquity in their turning after them (the Egyptians),' etc. Egypt, once so powerful, shall be so greatly depressed that the Israelites shall no more look to it for assistance.

⁷ This prophecy, which is the latest in date of the series, announces Nebuchadnezzar's invasion of Egypt, which shall yield him such rich spoils as to compensate for his unproductive expedition against Tyre; and it adds a promise of Israel's restoration (vers. 17—21). It then more fully describes the fear and desolation caused by the Chaldean invasion through all the cities of Egypt, and even in Ethiopia (xxx. 1—19).

⁸ This description shows the severity as well as the length of the service.

⁹ Or, 'There were not wages to him and his army,' etc. The words do not imply complete failure, but only that the gain was not proportioned to the time and labour expended. Jerome says that Nebuchadnezzar took Tyre, but found that the inhabitants had fled with all their wealth. It is more likely that the island-city was not captured, but was able to make advantageous terms. See notes on ch. xxvi. 1, 5.

- For the service that he had served against it :
- 19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;
Behold, ^c I will give the land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon ;
And he shall take her multitude,—and take her spoil, and take her prey ;
And it shall be the wages for his army.
- 20 I have given him the land of Egypt,
For his labour wherewith he ^d served against it,
Because they wrought for me, saith the Lord God.
- 21 In that day ^e will I cause the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth,
And I will give thee ^f the opening of the mouth ¹ in the midst of them ;
And they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 30 The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,—Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God ;—^g Howl ye, Woe worth ² the day !
- 3 For ^h the day is near,—even the day of the LORD is near, a cloudy day ;
ⁱ It shall be the time of the heathen.
- 4 And the sword shall come upon Egypt,—and great pain shall be in Ethiopia,
When the slain shall fall in Egypt,—and they ^k shall take away her multitude,
And ^l her foundations shall be broken down.
- 5 ^m Ethiopia, and ⁿ Libya, and Lydia,—and ^o all the mingled people, and Chub, ³
^p And the men of the land that is in league,—shall fall with them by the sword.
- 6 Thus saith the LORD ;—^q They also that uphold Egypt shall fall ;
And the pride of her power shall come down :
^r From the tower of Syene shall they fall in it by the sword,—saith the Lord God.
- 7 ^s And they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate,
And her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted.
- 8 And they shall know that I am the LORD,
When I have set a fire in Egypt,—and when all her helpers shall be destroyed.
- 9 In that day ^t shall messengers go forth from me in ships
To make the ^u careless ⁴ Ethiopians afraid,
And great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt :—for, lo, it cometh.
- 10 Thus saith the Lord God ;—^x I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease
By the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.
- 11 He and his people with him, ^y the terrible of the nations,
Shall be brought to destroy the land :
And they shall draw their swords against Egypt,—and fill the land with the slain.
- 12 And ^z I will make the rivers dry,—and ^a sell the land into the hand of the wicked : ⁵
And I will make the land waste, and all that is therein, ^b By the hand of strangers.—I the LORD have spoken it.
- 13 Thus saith the Lord God ;—I will also ^c destroy the idols,
And I will cause their images to cease out of ^d Noph ; ⁶
^e And there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt :
^f And I will put a fear in the land of Egypt.
- 14 And I will make ^g Pathros desolate,
And will set fire in ^h Zoan,—ⁱ and will execute judgments in No. ⁷
- 15 And I will pour my fury upon Sin [or, Pelusium], the strength of Egypt ; ⁸
And ^k I will cut off the multitude of No.
- 16 And I will ^l set fire in Egypt :—Sin shall have great pain,
And No shall be rent asunder,—and Noph shall have distresses daily.
- 17 The young men of ^m Aven and of ⁿ Pi-beseth ⁹ shall fall by the sword :
And these cities shall go into captivity.
- 18 ^o At Tehaphnehes also ^p the day shall be darkened,
When ^q I shall break there the yokes of Egypt :
And the pomp of her strength shall cease in her :
As for her, ^r a cloud shall cover her,—and her daughters shall go into captivity.
- 19 Thus will I execute judgments in Egypt :—and they shall know that I am the LORD.

It may have been in Mareotis, a province of Egypt ; but it is more likely the name of a foreign people.⁴ The Ethiopians on the Upper Nile thought themselves 'secure' from danger ; but messengers shall go 'in ships' up the river, and alarm them as Egypt was alarmed.⁵ That is, 'cruel,' or 'destructive,' as in ch. v. 16, 17. See Isa. xix. 4. This epithet has been justly applicable to the successive conquerors and oppressors of Egypt through all subsequent ages.

⁶ See note on Isa. xix. 13.⁷ See notes on Psa. lxxviii. 12, and Jer. xli. 25.⁸ Sin, or Pelusium, is called the 'strength,' or in other writers the 'key' of Egypt, because of its position and fortification as a frontier-town.⁹ Aven or On (see note on Gen. xli. 45), Pi-beseth or Bubastis, and Tehaphnehes or Tahapanhes (see note on Jer. ii. 16), all lay in Lower Egypt between Pelusium and Memphis.

- 20 AND¹ it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first month, in the seventh day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
- 21 Son of man, I have ^sbroken the arm of Pharaoh king of Egypt;
And, lo, 'it shall not be bound up to be healed,
To put a roller to bind it, to make it strong to hold the sword.
- 22 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
Behold, "I am against Pharaoh king of Egypt,
And will ^zbreak his arms, the strong, ^yand that which was broken;
^zAnd I will cause the sword to fall out of his hand.
- 23 "And I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations,
And will disperse them through the countries.
- 24 And I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon,
And put ^bmy sword in his hand:—but I will break Pharaoh's arms,
And he shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly wounded man.
- 25 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon,
And the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down;
And ^cthey shall know that I am the LORD,
When I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon,
And he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.
- 26 ^dAnd I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations,
And disperse them among the countries;—and they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 31 AND² it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man,
2 speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude;
^eWhom art thou like in thy greatness?
- 3 ^fBehold, the Assyrian was a cedar in Lebanon with fair branches,
And with a shadowing shroud,³ and of an high stature;
And his top was among the thick boughs.
- 4 ^gThe waters made him great, the deep set him up on high
With her rivers running round about his plants,
And sent out her little rivers unto all the trees of the field.
- 5 Therefore ^hhis height was exalted above all the trees of the field,
And his boughs were multiplied,⁴ and his branches became long Because of the multitude of waters, when he shot forth.
- 6 All the ⁱfowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs,
And under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young,
And under his shadow dwelt all great nations.
- 7 Thus was he fair in his greatness,—in the length of his branches:
For his root was by great waters.
- 8 The cedars in the ^kgarden of God could not hide him:
The fir trees were not like his boughs,
And the chesnut trees were not like his branches;
Nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.
- 9 'I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches:
So that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, envied him.
- 10 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;—Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height,
And he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs,
And ^mhis heart is lifted up in his height;
- 11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of ⁿthe mighty one⁵ of the heathen;
He shall surely deal with him:—I have driven him out for his wickedness.
- 12 And strangers, ^othe terrible of the nations, have cut him off,—and have left him:
^pUpon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen,
And his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land;
And all the people of the earth are ^qgone down from his shadow,—and have left him.
- 13 ^rUpon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain,
And all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:
- 14 To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height,
Neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs,

¹ This short prophecy declares that the reverses which the Egyptians have suffered (perhaps in their unsuccessful attempt to relieve Jerusalem, 2 Kings xxiv. 7; Jer. xxxvii. 7, 8) are only the beginning of the destruction of their power by the Chaldeans (vers. 20—26).

² In ch. xxxi., a threatening is addressed to Pharaoh, derived from the recent fall of the Assyrian monarchy; which is represented as a lofty and beautiful cedar, cut down in its pride as a warning to others (vers. 1—18).

³ Or, 'and an overshadowing thicket.'

² Rather, 'are comforted.' The conquered nations are consoled by finding that a kingdom once so mighty has become like themselves. Compare Isa. xiv. 10.

³ Ch. xxxii. contains two prophetic songs of lamentation over the king and people of Egypt; uttered probably at an interval of a fortnight from each other, and rather more than a year after the fall of Jerusalem. In the first, Pharaoh is compared to a lion or a crocodile; which shall be hunted, captured, and slain, to the dismay of other kings and nations (vers. 1—16).

⁴ Rather, 'in an assembly;' i. e. in their presence and with their help.

⁵ Or, 'With thy hugeness.'

⁶ Or, 'And I water the earth with thy inundation (i. e. with the streams of blood which flow from thee); [some] of thy blood [reaches] up to the hills,' etc. Compare Isa. xxxii. 3; Rev. xiv. 20.

⁷ That is, as with funeral garments. See note on ch. xxxi. 15.

- 13 ^a I will destroy also all the beasts thereof from beside the great waters ;

- 25 They have set her a bed in the midst of the slain
With all her multitude : her graves are round about him :
All of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword :
Though their terror was caused in the land of the living,
Yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit :
He is put in the midst of them that be slain.
- 26 There is ^s Meshech, Tubal,⁷ and all her multitude :

¹ Rather, 'make their waters to subside;' i. e. to become clear and calm. Egypt shall no more be able to disturb the tranquillity of neighbouring states.

² In this second prophetic lamentation, the Egyptian monarch is represented as being taken to the mouth of a vast pit opened for the carcases of the vanquished and slain in battle ; is told to contemplate the dishonoured burial of other mighty princes and people conquered by Nebuchadnezzar ; and is assured that his doom will be the same as theirs (17—32).

³ Or, 'The sword is given (i. e. appointed and prepared for her destruction) ; draw her and all her multitudes [to punishment].'

⁴ Heb., 'Sheol ;' the place of the departed. The figure employed in Isa. xiv. 9—14, etc., is here greatly amplified, according to the peculiar style of Ezekiel.

⁵ Rather, 'Whose graves are appointed in the inmost parts (see Psa. cxxviii. 3, and note) of the pit.' Assyria, the most important of the nations, and the first to fall, lies lowest in the pit of the slain.

⁶ 'Elam,' the name of a province, is perhaps put for the whole of Persia, as in Isa. xxi. 2.

⁷ See note on ch. xxvii. 13.

⁸ Or, 'Shall they not lie,' etc. The 'swords lying under their heads' are probably mentioned as the instruments by which they 'caused their terror' and perpetrated 'their iniquities.' These, so far from helping them now, shall lie with them, as proofs of the sin for which they are punished.

⁹ That is, 'Thou, O Egypt.'

- Which with their might are laid by them that were slain by the sword :
They shall lie with the uncircumcised,—and with them that go down to the pit.
- 30 ^z There be the princes of the north,¹ all of them,
And all the ^a Zidonians, which are gone down with the slain ;
With their terror they are ashamed of their might ;
And they lie uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword,
And bear their shame with them that go down to the pit.
- 31 Pharaoh shall see them,—and shall be ^b comforted² over all his multitude,
Even Pharaoh and all his army slain by the sword,—saith the Lord God.
- 32 ^c For I have caused my terror³ in the land of the living :
And he shall be laid in the midst of the uncircumcised
With them that are slain with the sword,
Even Pharaoh and all his multitude,—saith the Lord God.
- Renewed commission and instructions to the prophet respecting Israel, with warning to the people.*
- 33 AGAIN⁴ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, speak to ^d the children of thy people, and say unto them, ^e When I bring the sword upon a land,
If the people of the land take a man of their coasts,
And set him for their ^f watchman :
3 If when he seeth the sword come upon the land,
^g He blow the trumpet, and warn the people ;
4 Then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning ;
If the sword come, and take him away,—^h his blood shall be upon his own head.
5 He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning ;
His blood shall be upon him.—But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.
6 But if the watchman see the sword come,
And blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned ;
If the sword come, and take any person from among them,
ⁱ He is taken away in his iniquity ;
^k But his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.
- 7 ^l So thou, O son of man,—I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel ;
Therefore ^m thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.
- 8 When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, ⁿ thou shalt surely die ;
^o If thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way,
That wicked man shall die in his iniquity ;
But his blood will I require at thine hand.
- 9 Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it ;
^p If he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity ;
^q But thou hast delivered thy soul.
- 10 Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel ;
Thus ye speak, saying,
If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we ^r pine away⁵ in them,
^s How should we then live ?
- 11 Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God,
^t I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked ;
But that the wicked turn from his way and live :
^u Turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways ;—for why will ye die, O house of Israel ?
- 12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people,
The ^x righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him
In the day of his transgression :
^y As for the wickedness of the wicked, ^z he shall not fall thereby
In the day that he turneth from his wickedness ;
Neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness
In the day that he sinneth.
- 13 When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live ;

¹ These are probably the Tyrians, who were neighbours of the Sidonians, and, like them, were north of Egypt and Judea.

² See note on ch. xxxi. 16. Pharaoh may comfort himself, if he can, by knowing that he is not without companions in destruction.

³ Rather, 'his terror.' I have allowed him to cause terror ; but now I will lay him in the pit.

⁴ Hitherto Ezekiel has been employed as the messenger of the Divine judgments ; he has now the more pleasant office of reviving the hopes of his fallen countrymen by presenting the prospect of a glorious future. In entering upon these new duties, he receives a second solemn charge (vers. 1—9), similar to that in ch. iii. 17—21 ; and a second impressive vindication of the equity of God's government in reply to the murmurings of the people (10—20). Compare ch. xviii.

⁵ This is the language of those who murmur under Divine punishment, instead of humbly confessing guilt and entreating God's mercy.

- ^a If he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity,
All his righteousness shall not be remembered;
But for his iniquity that he hath committed, ^b he shall die for it.
- 14 Again, ^c when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; ^d If he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right;
- 15 If the wicked ^e restore the pledge,—^f give again that he had robbed,
Walk in ^g the statutes of life, without committing iniquity;
^h He shall surely live, he shall not die.
- 16 ⁱ None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him:
He hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live.
- 17 ^k Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the Lord is not equal.
But as for them, their way is not equal.
- 18 ^l When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity,
He shall even die thereby.
- 19 ^m But if the wicked turn from his wickedness,
And do that which is lawful and right,—he shall live thereby.
- 20 Yet ye say, ⁿ The way of the Lord is not equal.
O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

Messages respecting the remnant and the captives of Judah.

- 21 AND ¹ it came to pass in the twelfth year ^o of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, ^p that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, ^q saying, ^r The city is smitten.
- 22 Now ^s the hand of the Lord was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came; and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; ^t and my

And shall ye possess the land?
- 26 Ye stand upon your sword, ^c
^d Ye work abomination, and ye ^e defile every one his neighbour's wife:
^f And shall ye possess the land?

And ^p the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through.
- 29 Then shall they know that I ^q am the Lord,

¹ Ezekiel now recommences his ministry to his people by warning them against the delusive hopes still prevailing among the remnant in Judea (21—29), and by exposing the folly of his fellow-captives in neglecting the warnings of him who was now proved to be a true prophet (30—33).

² As had been foretold in ch. xxiv. 26. The date here given allows a year and five months to have elapsed since the fall of Jerusalem. The news probably had been received long before; now the promised fugitive appears, to open the prophet's lips.

³ That is, one only; a single individual. See Isa. li. 2. 'If Abraham,' they argued, 'when thus alone, was so greatly multiplied, much more shall we, who are many.' They forgot that it was Abraham's faith, shown by his works, which was 'counted to him for righteousness,' and ensured to him the fulfilment of the promise (see Gal. iii. 6; Heb. xi. 8—19; James ii. 21, 22); whereas they were unbelieving and disobedient. To convince them of this difference, their most glaring sins are specified in the two following verses.

⁴ That is, 'Ye trust to your own prowess;' perhaps referring to a determination to use violence, and to live a wild outlaw life in 'caves.' Comp. Jer. xli. 1—10.

⁵ Rather, 'And thou, son of man—the children of thy people, who talk about thee,' etc. This is the beginning of a long and rather unconnected sentence, which ends in ver. 33 with the words, 'And when this comes—lo! it is come—then they know that a prophet hath been among them.' They have come and heard what thou hadst to say, they even professed to admire thee and thy doctrine, but would not act accordingly. Now that thy last prediction to them—that of the fall of Jerusalem—is fulfilled, they cannot but know that all thy words are true.

And they hear thy words; but they will not do them:

^s For with their mouth they show much love,
But ^t their heart goeth after their covetousness:

32 And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song

^u Of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument:

For they hear thy words, but they do them not:

33 ^z And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,)

Then ^y shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

Judgments upon wicked rulers; promises of mercy to the people under the Messiah.

34 AND¹ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the ^z shepherds of Israel; prophecy, and say unto them,

Thus saith the Lord God unto the shepherds;²

^a Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves!

^b Should not the shepherds feed the flocks?

3 ^c Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool,

^d Ye kill them that are fed;—but ye feed not the flock.

4 ^e The diseased have ye not strengthened,

Neither have ye healed that which was sick,

Neither have ye bound up that which was broken,

Neither have ye brought again that which was driven away,

Neither have ye ^fsought that which was lost;

But with ^g force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 ^h And they were ⁱscattered because there is no shepherd:

^j And they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

6 My sheep ^kwandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill:

Yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth,

And none did search or seek after them.

7 Therefore, ^mye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord God,—surely because my flock became a prey,

And my flock ⁿbecame meat to every beast of the field,

Because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock,

^o But the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock;

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord God;—Behold, I am against the shepherds;

And ^pI will require my flock at their hand,

And cause them to cease from feeding the flock;

Neither shall the shepherds ^qfeed themselves any more;

^r For I will deliver my flock from their mouth,

That they may not be meat for them.

11 For thus saith the Lord God;

^s Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

12 As a shepherd seeketh out his flock

In the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered;

So will I seek out my sheep,

And will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered

In ^tthe cloudy and dark day.

13 And ^uI will bring them out from the people,—and gather them from the countries,

And will bring them to their own land,

And feed them upon the mountains of Israel,

By the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 ^vI will feed them in a good pasture,

And upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be:

^y There shall they lie in a good fold,

And in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, ^zand I will cause them to lie down,—saith the Lord God.

1 The sins and sufferings of Israel have been caused in part by the faithlessness and tyranny of their princes, 'the shepherds of the flock' (vers. 1–6): whom God will therefore judge and punish (7–10); whilst he will seek out and restore and feed his people (11–16); distinguishing among them, and putting down the oppressors, whilst he saves the humble (17–22). And this he will do through the agency of the Great and Good Shepherd, the true David, whose rule shall ensure peace, safety, and the highest prosperity (23–31). In this, as in other prophecies of the future, the spiritual reign of the Prince of peace is clearly predicted.

2 See note on Jer. ii. 8. The reference to David as a prince in ver. 24 shows that the chief, if not the only meaning of 'shepherd' here, is that of king. The royal family of Judah had so grossly failed in the duties of the kingly office, that no other king shall rise from it, till a new David, a prince 'after God's own heart,' shall come. Compare Matt. ix. 36 with vers. 5, 6; and see John x. 1–18.

- 16 ^a I will seek that which was lost,—and bring again that which was driven away,
And will bind up that which was broken,
And will strengthen that which was sick :
But I will destroy ^b the fat and the strong ;¹—I will feed them ^c with judgment.
- 17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord God ;
^d Behold, I judge between cattle and cattle, between the rams and the he goats.
- 18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture,
But ye must ^e tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures ?
And to have drunk of the deep waters,
But ye must foul the residue with your feet ?²
- 19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet ;
And they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.
- 20 Therefore thus saith the Lord God unto them ;
^f Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.
- 21 Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder,
And pushed all the diseased with your horns,
Till ye have scattered them abroad ;
- 22 ^g Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey ;
And ^h I will judge between cattle and cattle.
- 23 And I will set up one ⁱ shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, ^k Even my servant David ;—he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.
- 24 And ^l I the LORD will be their God,
And my servant David ^m a prince among them.—I the LORD have spoken it.
- 25 And ⁿ I will make with them a covenant of peace,³
And ^o will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land :
And they ^p shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.
- 26 And I will make them and the places round about ^q my hill ^r a blessing ;
And I will ^s cause the shower to come down in his season ;
There shall be ^t showers of blessing.
- 27 And ^u the tree of the field shall yield her fruit,
And the earth shall yield her increase,⁴
And they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD,
When I have ^v broken the bands of their yoke,
And delivered them out of the hand of those that ^w served themselves of them.
- 28 And they shall no more ^x be a prey to the heathen,
Neither shall the beast of the land devour them ;
But ^y they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid.
- 29 And I will raise up for them a ^z plant of renown,⁵
And they shall be ^a no more consumed with hunger in the land, ^b Neither bear the shame of the heathen any more.
- 30 Thus shall they know that ^c I the LORD their God am with them,
And that they, even the house of Israel, are my people,—saith the Lord God.
- 31 And ye my ^d flock, the flock of my pasture, are men,⁶
And I am your God, saith the Lord God.

The destruction of Edom, Israel's enemy ; and the restoration of Israel.

- 35 MOREOVER⁷ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, ^e set 3 thy face against ^f mount Seir,⁸ and ^g prophesy against it, and say unto it,
Thus saith the Lord God ;—Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee,
And ^h I will stretch out mine hand against thee,
And I will make thee ⁱ most desolate.

¹ The rich and powerful, who, under the misgovernment of ungodly princes, had greatly oppressed the poor.

² A reproach most applicable to those who oppress the poor in civil matters ; or who, in religious, would debar them from obtaining pure instruction in Divine truth, and set before them mere human traditions.

³ That is, a covenant by which peace and prosperity shall be secured to them.

⁴ What Canaan would have been with its best and greatest kings restored again, and all its temporal blessings enjoyed in rich profusion ; such, in the new and higher sphere of the Messiah's kingdom, shall the whole domain be over which he is the Lord, when this promise receives its full and final accomplishment.

⁵ Some refer this to the Messiah, comparing ch. xvii. 22 and Isa. xi. 1, on which see note. The word, however, more properly means a plantation, a place richly planted ; so that ^h they shall be no more consumed with hunger.

⁶ This probably refers to Psa. xcv. 6, 7.

⁷ In ch. xxxv., xxxvi. 1—15, the opposite destinies of Israel and her enemies are forcibly depicted. Her restoration involves their destruction. Compare Isa. xli. 1 ; lxiii. 1, and notes. As Edom had been one of the most malignant and insulting of Israel's foes (Isa. cxxxvii. 7), it is here singled out, and its destruction under Divine judgments (vers. 1—15) is put in contrast with the renewed prosperity of Israel (xxxvi. 1—15). The 'mountains' of Israel and of Edom represent the two countries and nations ; and these again stand for the people of God and their enemies.

⁸ That is, the mountainous country of the Edomites, extending from the Dead Sea to the Elanitic Gulf. See Gen. xxxvi. 9 ; Deut. ii. 8.

- 4 ^m I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate,
And thou shalt know that I am the LORD.
- 5 ⁿ Because thou hast had a perpetual hatred¹ [or, hatred of old^o],
And hast shed the blood of the children of Israel by the force of the sword
In the time of their calamity, ^p in the time that their iniquity had an end.
- 6 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God,
^q I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee :
^r Sith² thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee.
- 7 Thus will I make mount Seir ^s most desolate,
And cut off from it ^t him that passeth out and him that returneth.
- 8 ^u And I will fill his mountains with his slain men :
In thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers,
Shall they fall that are slain with the sword.
- 9 ^x I will make thee perpetual desolations, and thy cities shall not return :
^y And ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 10 Because ^z thou hast said,
These two nations³ and these two countries shall be mine,
And we will ^a possess it;—whereas [or, though] ^b the LORD was there :
- 11 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord God,
I will even do ^c according to thine anger, and according to thine envy,
Which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them ;
And I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.
- 12 ^d And thou shalt know that I am the LORD,
And that I have heard all thy blasphemies,
Which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel,
Saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us to consume.
- 13 Thus ^e with your mouth ye have boasted against me,
And have multiplied your words against me : ^f I have heard them.
- 14 Thus saith the Lord God ;
^g When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate :⁴
- 15 ^h As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel,
Because it was desolate ;—so will I do unto thee :
ⁱ Thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, ^k and all Idumea, even all of it.
And they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 36 Also, thou son of man, prophesy unto the ^l mountains of Israel, and say,
Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD :
2 Thus saith the Lord God ;—Because ^m the enemy hath said against you,
Aha! ⁿ even the ancient⁵ high places ^o are ours in possession :
3 Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord God ;
Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side,⁶
That ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen,
^p And ye are taken up in the lips of talkers,—and are an infamy of the people :
4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord God ;
Thus saith the Lord God to the mountains, and to the hills,
To the rivers [or, dales], and to the valleys,
To the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken,
Which ^q became a prey and ^r derision
To the residue of the heathen that are round about ;
5 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ;
^s Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken
^t Against the residue of the heathen, ^u and against all Idumea,
^x Which have appointed my land into their possession,
With the joy of all their heart,—^y with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey.
6 Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel,
And say unto the mountains, and to the hills,—to the rivers, and to the valleys,
Thus saith the Lord God ;
Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury,
Because ye have ^z borne the shame of the heathen :
7 Therefore thus saith the Lord God ; I have ^a lifted up mine hand,
Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

- 16, 17 MOREOVER² the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man,
When the house of Israel dwelt in their own land,
^p They defiled it by their own way and by their doings:
Their way was before me as ^q the uncleanness of a removed woman.
- 18 Wherefore I poured my fury upon them
^r For the blood that they had shed upon the land,
And for their idols wherewith they had polluted it:
- 19 And I ^s scattered them among the heathen,
And they were dispersed through the countries:
^t According to their way and according to their doings I judged them.
- 20 And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went,
They ^u profaned³ my holy name, when they said to them, ^x These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land.
- 21 But I had pity ^y for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned

- 22 Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God;
^z I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel,
^a But for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned
Among the heathen, whither ye went.
- 23 And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen,
Which ye have profaned in the midst of them;

1 The position of the land of Canaan between the great continents and monarchies of Asia and Africa, was highly advantageous to a nation which enjoyed Jehovah's favour and protection, but peculiarly dangerous if these were withdrawn.

2 In ch. xxxvi. 16—38, Ezekiel is instructed to remind the people of their continued sins, which show that the restoration promised is entirely undeserved (vers. 17—21); and to tell them that, as they have profaned God's name by their sins, he will glorify it by connecting their return to holiness with renewed prosperity (22, 23). He will therefore give them his Spirit to soften and purify their hearts, that they may obey his commands (24—27), and thus enjoy the fulfilment of his promises (28—30) in humble, self-renouncing gratitude (31, 32). Then they shall be as manifestly blessed and honoured as they have before been disgraced (33—38). These promises are evidently to be understood mainly as having a spiritual application to the church of Christ.

3 That is, they caused it to be profaned; even to be blasphemed, through the wickedness of those who bore it. See Rom. ii. 24.

4 An allusion to the methods of purification under the law. See especially Numb. xix.

- 28 ^k And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers ;
^l And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.
- 29 I will also ^m save you from all your uncleannesses :
 And ⁿ I will call for the corn, and will increase it,—and ^o lay no famine upon you.
- 30 ^p And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field,
 That ye shall receive ^q no more reproach of famine among the heathen.
- 31 Then ^r shall ye remember your own evil ways,
 And your doings that were not good,
 And ^s shall lothe yourselves in your own sight
 For your iniquities and for your abominations.
- 32 ^t Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord God,—be it known unto you :
 Be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel.
- 33 Thus saith the Lord God ;
 In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities
 I will also cause you to dwell in the cities,¹—^u and the wastes shall be builded.
- 34 And the desolate land shall be tilled,
 Whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by.
- 35 And they shall say,
 This land that was desolate is become like the garden of ^x Eden ;
 And the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced,
 And are inhabited.
- 36 Then ^y the heathen that are left round about you shall know
 That I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate.
^z I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it.
- 37 Thus saith the Lord God ;
^a I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them.²
 I will ^b increase them with men like a flock.
- 38 As the holy flock,³ ^c as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts ;
^d So shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men :
 And they shall know that I am the LORD.

- 37 THE⁴ ^e hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out ^f in the spirit of the ² LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones, and caused me to pass by them round about : and, behold, there were very many in the open valley ; and, lo, they were very dry.
- 3 And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live ? And I answered, O
 Lord God, ^g thou knowest.
- 4 Again he said unto me, Prophecy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye 5 dry bones, hear the word of the LORD. Thus saith the Lord God unto these 6 bones ; Behold, I will ^h cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live : and I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live ; ⁱ and ye shall know that I am the LORD.
- 7 So I prophesied as I was commanded. And as I prophesied, there was a noise, 8 and behold a shaking,⁵ and the bones came together, bone to his bone. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above : but there was no breath in them.
- 9 Then said he unto me, Prophecy unto the wind,⁶ prophecy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord God ; ^k Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live.
- 10 So I prophesied as he commanded me ; ^l and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

¹ When God's people are prepared, by humility and penitence, to receive a blessing, He is ready to bestow it upon them.

² The people must seek by earnest prayer for the fulfilment of the promise, if they would enjoy it. This suggests a reason why the Jews were not more prosperous after their return from Babylon, and why the church of Christ is still so depressed.

³ The 'holy flock' may mean either the animals designed for sacrifice, or the assembled worshippers at the solemn feasts.

⁴ Chapters xxxvii.—xxxix. contain three expressive symbolical descriptions of the restoration, union, and triumph of the chosen people. In ch. xxxvii., the prophet beholds a valley covered with the bleaching bones of the nation (vers. 1, 2) ; to which he is commanded to address the Divine word, which gives life to the dead (3—6). His first call brings them together into human form (7, 8), the second gives them a new life (9, 10). The symbol is then explained as being intended to console the once presumptuous but now despairing Jews by the prospect both of national restoration and of spiritual vitality (11—14). Like the other prospects held out, it evidently points to the gospel dispensation, when 'the Spirit should be poured out from on high.'

⁵ Rather, 'a rushing.'

⁶ The emblem of the Spirit of God (see John iii. 8), the Author and Giver of life (Gen. ii. 7).

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say, ^m Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for 12 our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them,

Thus saith the Lord God;—Behold, ⁿ O my people, I will open your graves,
And cause you to come up out of your graves,
And ^o bring you into the land of Israel.

13 ^p And ye shall know that I am the LORD,
When I have opened your graves, O my people,
And brought you up out of your graves,
14 And ^q shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live,
And I shall place you in your own land:
Then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it,
Saith the LORD.

15, 16 The ² word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, ^r take thee one stick, ³ and write upon it, For Judah, and for ^s the children ⁴ of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, 'For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:
17 and ^t join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.

18 And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, ^u Wilt thou
19 not show us what thou meanest by these? ^v say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take ^z the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, ^a and they shall be one in mine hand.
20 And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand ^b before their eyes.
21 And say unto them,

Thus saith the Lord God;

Behold, ^c I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone,

And will gather them on every side,—and bring them into their own land:

22 And ^d I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel;
And ^e one king shall be king to them all:
And they shall be no more two nations,
Neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:

23 ^f Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols,
Nor with their detestable things,—nor with any of their transgressions:
But ^g I will save them out of all their dwellingplaces, wherein they have sinned,
And will cleanse them:—so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.

24 And ^h David my servant shall be king over them;
And ⁱ they all shall have one shepherd:

^j They shall also walk in my judgments,—and observe my statutes, and do them.

25 ^k And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant,
Wherein your fathers have dwelt;—and they shall dwell therein,
Even they, and their children, and their children's children ^l for ever:
And ^m my servant David shall be their prince for ever.⁵

26 Moreover I will make a ⁿ covenant of peace with them;
It shall be an everlasting covenant with them:
And I will place them, and ^o multiply them,

1 Although the blessing here promised is plainly a political and moral resurrection, yet the imagery employed assumes that the people were familiar with the doctrine of the resurrection of the body (compare Isa. xxvi. 19, and note).

2 The first blessing which flows from the Divine communication of spiritual life is the union of Israel, hitherto divided, under the rule of the true David. This is symbolized by two rods, the emblems of authority, becoming one; so that the two kingdoms of Judah and Ephraim shall be no more divided (vers. 15—22); but shall be obedient, safe, and prosperous, as in David's days, with God's sanctuary in the midst of them, and his glory resting upon them (23—28). Comp. Isa. xi. 13.

3 Comp. Numb. xvii. 1, etc. The name of 'Ephraim' was given to the kingdom of the ten tribes. See Hosea.

4 That is, such portions of the other tribes as remained with or passed over to the kingdom of Judah. See 2 Chron. xi. 13—17; xv. 9.

5 'As the 'David' of this promise is Christ, so the covenant-people are no longer the Jews distinctively, but the faithful in Christ; and the territory of blessing is no longer Canaan, but the whole earth; and only when it becomes his actual possession can the prophecies respecting him, as the New Testament David, reach their destined accomplishment.'—Fairbairn.

¹ The triumphs of the church of Christ, and the overthrow of its enemies, are represented by the destruction of vast armies of invaders from the extreme north and south (vers. 1—6). Their designs, hopes, and preparations are described (7—13), followed by their attack, which has been long ago foreseen and foretold (14—17), and God's severe indignation and exterminating punishment (18—23). Further threats of destruction (ch. xxxix. 1—8) are vividly illustrated by descriptions of the burning and burying of the arms and corpses of the invading host (9—16), and by a call to all birds and beasts of prey to come and feast on the carcasses (17—20): and God declares that He will be honoured in the punishment of His enemies as well as in the restoration and salvation of His penitent people (21—29). Expositors have differed much in opinion as to the interpretation of this section of prophecy. Some understand it as referring to a literal prodigious armament of many nations for the purpose of attacking the Jews after their restoration to their own land, which will be defeated by the immediate judgments of God. But it appears more consistent with the whole scope of scriptural prophecy, and especially with the visions which immediately follow in chapters xl.—xlviii., to give it a more enlarged meaning, understanding it as describing the consummation of the great conflict which has always been going on between the kingdoms of God and of Satan in the world, and which will end in the universal establishment of the Saviour's spiritual reign. See note on ver. 17.

² Rather, 'Gog of the land of Magog, prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal.' Magog was a son of Japhet. On 'Meshech and Tubal,' see note on ch. xxvii. 13. 'Rosh' is not mentioned elsewhere, and may have the same origin as the word 'Russians.' All these are the northern nations of the Caucasus, and of the Euxine and Caspian Seas, who were known to the Greeks as Scythians. Vast hordes of these people made an irruption into Western Asia, not long before the delivery of this prophecy (see Herod. i. 103—106): and this fact gives peculiar appropriateness to the selection of them here as the representatives of the combined foes of the church of Christ.

³ Probably the Cimmerians, or people of the Crimea and the adjacent regions.

⁴ More properly, 'leader.'

⁵ Rather, 'thou shalt be appointed,' i. e. to lead them.

⁶ Rather, 'restored;' i. e. from the ravages of invasion.

⁷ Rather, 'and they have dwelt securely,' i. e. without fear. Comp. Judg. xviii. 7.

⁸ Or, 'on the height of the land,' as in Judg. ix. 37.

⁹ Hoping to profit by the sale of the booty which these marauders had taken.

- 15 ^a And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts,
Thou, ⁱ and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses,
A great company, and a mighty army:
- 16 ^j And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel,—as a cloud to cover the land;
^k It shall be in the latter days,—and I will bring thee against my land,
^l That the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee,
O Gog, before their eyes.
- 17 Thus saith the Lord God;
^m Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time,
By my servants the prophets of Israel,
Which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them?¹
- 18 And it shall come to pass at the same time
When Gog shall come against the land of Israel,—saith the Lord God,
That my fury shall come up in my face.
- 19 For ⁿ in my jealousy ^o and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken:
^p Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;
- 20 So that ^q the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven,
And the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth,
And all the men that are upon the face of the earth,—shall shake at my presence,
^r And the mountains shall be thrown down,—and the steep places shall fall,
And every wall shall fall to the ground.
- 21 And I will ^s call for ^t a sword against him,
Throughout all my mountains,—saith the Lord God:
^u Every man's sword shall be against his brother.
- 22 And I will ^v plead against him² with ^w pestilence and with blood;
And ^x I will rain upon him, and upon his bands,
And upon the many people that are with him,
An overflowing rain, and ^y a great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.
- 23 Thus will I magnify myself, and ^z sanctify myself;
^a And I will be known in the eyes of many nations,

- 39 Therefore, ^b thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say,

Behold, I am against thee, O Gog,—the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:
- 2 And ^c I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee,³ ^d And will cause thee to come up from the north parts,
And will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel:
- 3 ^e And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand,
And will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand.
- 4 ^f Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel,
Thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee:
^g I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every sort,
And ^h to the beasts of the field to be devoured.
- 5 Thou shalt fall upon the open field:—for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God.
- 6 ⁱ And I will send a fire on Magog,
And among them that dwell carelessly in ^j the isles:
And they shall know that I am the LORD.
- 7 ^k So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel;
And I will not let them ^l pollute my holy name any more:
^m And the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, ⁿ the Holy One in Israel.
- 8 ^o Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord God;
^p This is the day ^q whereof I have spoken.
- 9 And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth,
And shall set on fire and burn the weapons,—both the shields and the bucklers,
The bows and the arrows, and the handstaves, and the spears,
And they shall burn them with fire⁴ seven years:
- 10 So that they shall take no wood out of the field,
Neither cut down any out of the forests;—for they shall burn the weapons with fire:

1 It is evident, then, that these are the enemies and this is the war which had been predicted, with other names and circumstances, both by Balaam (Numb. xxiv. 17), and by the earlier prophets of Israel: see Psa. ii., ex.; Joel iii.; Isa. xxv., xxvi., xxxiv., etc.

2 Rather, 'I will have a controversy with him;' i. e. will bring him to justice for his sins. The punishments threatened against these enemies are those with which Egypt, Sodom, and the Canaanites were visited: see refs.

3 Rather, 'and I will lead thee.'

4 The burning of the armour, etc., signifies that no remnant of anything belonging to the invaders should be left to pollute the land. 'Seven,' the number of completeness, which is applied to the years here and to the months in ver. 12, indicates the vast numbers of the adversaries and their complete removal.

- * And they shall spoil those that spoiled them,
And rob those that robbed them,—saith the Lord God.
- 11 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers ¹ on the east of the sea: ² and it shall stop the noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude: and they shall call it The valley of Hamon-gog [i. e. the multitude of Gog]. And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, ³ that they may cleanse the land. Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown the day that ⁴ I shall be glorified, saith the Lord God. And ⁵ they shall sever out men of continual employment, ⁶ passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, ⁷ to cleanse it. After the end of seven months shall they search; and the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog. And also the name of the city ⁸ shall be Hamonah [i. e. the multitude]. Thus shall they ⁹ cleanse the land.
- 17 And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God; ¹⁰ Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field,
¹¹ Assemble yourselves, and come;
Gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you,
Even a great sacrifice, ¹² upon the mountains of Israel,
That ye may eat flesh, and drink blood.
- 18 ¹³ Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty,
And drink the blood of the princes of the earth,
Of rams, of lambs, and of goats, ¹⁴ of bullocks,—all of them ¹⁵ fatlings of Bashan.
- 19 And ye shall eat fat till ye be full,—and drink blood till ye be drunken,
Of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.
- 20 ¹⁶ Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, ¹⁷ ¹⁸ With mighty men, and with all men of war,—saith the Lord God.
- 21 ¹⁹ And I will set my glory among the heathen,
And all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed,
And ²⁰ my hand that I have laid upon them.
- 22 ²¹ So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God
From that day and forward.
- 23 ²² And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity:
Because they trespassed against me, therefore ²³ hid I my face from them,
And ²⁴ gave them into the hand of their enemies:—so fell they all by the sword.
- 24 ²⁵ According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions Have I done unto them,—and hid my face from them.
- 25 Therefore thus saith the Lord God;
²⁶ Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob,
And have mercy upon the ²⁷ whole house of Israel,
And will be jealous for my holy name;
- 26 ²⁸ After that they have borne ²⁹ their shame,
And all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me,
When they ³⁰ dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.
- 27 ³¹ When I have brought them again from the people,
And gathered them out of their enemies' lands,
And ³² am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;
- 28 ³³ Then shall they know that I am the LORD their God,
Which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen:
But I have gathered them unto their own land,
And have left none of them any more there.
- 29 ³⁴ Neither will I hide my face any more from them:
For I have ³⁵ poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel,—saith the Lord God.

For to the intent that I might show them unto thee art thou brought hither:

ⁿDeclare all that thou seest—to the house of Israel.

5 And, behold, ^oa wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring reed of six cubits long by the cubit and an hand breadth: ^pso he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed.

6 Then came he unto the gate which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad;

7 and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad. And every ^qlittle chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate by the porch of the gate

8 within was one reed. He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts ^rthereof, two cubits; and the porch of the gate was inward. And the little chambers of the 10 gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; they three were of

11 one measure: and the posts had one measure on this side and on that side. And he measured the breadth of the entry of the gate, ten cubits; and the length

12 of the gate, thirteen cubits. The space also before the little chambers was one cubit on this side, and the space was one cubit on that side: and the little

13 chambers were six cubits on this side, and six cubits on that side. He measured then the gate from the roof of one little chamber to the roof of another: the

14 breadth was five and twenty cubits, door against door. He made also posts of 15 threescore cubits, even unto the post of the court round about the gate. And from the face of the gate of the entrance unto the face of the porch of the inner

16 gate were fifty cubits. And there were ^snarrow ^twindows to the little chambers, and to their posts within the gate round about, and likewise to the arches: ^uand windows were round about inward: and upon each post were palm trees.⁷

1 Ezekiel's predictions had begun with a vision of Jehovah on his moving throne, soon withdrawing from the temple (ch. x., xi.), which is shortly afterwards utterly destroyed; whilst Jerusalem is laid in ruins, the land desolated, the prince dethroned, and the people exiled: they now close with another vision, in which he beholds the restoration of the temple, the return of Jehovah, the renewal of worship, the re-establishment of royalty, a new partition of the land, and settlement of the people. Commentators differ greatly in the interpretation of this vision. Some think that it refers to a material temple and city yet to be erected after the return of the Jews to their own land. But this would involve the restoration of the ceremonials of Judaism, in direct contradiction to the doctrine of the New Testament; for 'a temple with sacrifices now would be a daring denial of the all-sufficiency of the sacrifice of Christ. He who sacrificed before confessed the Messiah: he who should sacrifice now would most sacrilegiously deny him.'—Douglas. Besides, the scale on which these things are described seems alone to prove that they are allegorical representations. Accordingly, the most prevalent view in the Christian church has been that this vision is an elaborate symbol of the blessings which God designs to bestow upon his church under the gospel dispensation. The prophecy begins with a description of an ideal temple drawn from that of Solomon, but on a far larger scale (ch. xl.—xlii.) The prophet is taken in vision to Jerusalem, and bidden to declare to Israel what he sees and hears (vers. 1—4). He then describes the outer wall and the eastern outer gate (5—16), the outer court and its chambers (17—19), the northern and southern outer gates (20—27); the gates and porches of the inner court (28—37), the arrangements for the sacrifices (38—43), the chambers and area of the inner court (44—47); the porch and sacred edifice itself (48—xli. 1—4), with its chambers and corridors (5—11), its general measurements (12—17), and various decorations (18—26). He further depicts the external chambers and corridors for the resident priests (xlii. 1—14); and concludes with the exterior measurements of the whole area (15—20). Whatever difficulty there may be in explaining particular parts of this vision, the description evidently belongs to something very different from and very far superior to either the first or the second temple. Its position, too, is altogether different; so that it cannot reasonably be understood as referring to any material edifice which has been or may be built at Jerusalem.

2 That is, bright and sparkling. See ch. i. 7; also Rev. i. 15.

3 This cubit, containing one (common) cubit and a handbreadth, may have been about two feet long. Hence the reed, or rod, will be about twelve feet long.

4 Some render this 'the border;' by which they understand a projecting margin, surrounding the door, ornamented with columns or pilasters at the sides, and with a frieze above. So, in the next verse, the 'posts' are taken to be projections in the wall.

5 Or, 'closed;' i. e. with bars or lattices, which, being let into the walls or beams, could not be opened and shut at pleasure.

6 This may mean 'cornices;' or, more likely, 'porches.'

7 Probably pilasters resembling palm trees; the trunks forming the shafts, and the branches the capitals.

17 Then brought he me into ^rthe outward court, and, lo, there were ^schambers, and a pavement made for the court round about: ^t'thirty chambers were upon 18 the pavement. And the pavement by the side of the gates over against the 19 length of the gates was the lower pavement. Then he measured the breadth from the forefront of the lower gate unto the forefront of the inner court without, an hundred cubits eastward and northward.

20 And the gate of the outward court that looked toward the north, he measured 21 the length thereof, and the breadth thereof. And the little chambers thereof were three on this side and three on that side; and the posts thereof and the arches thereof were after the measure of the first gate: the length thereof was
22 fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits. And their windows, and their arches, and their palm trees, were after the measure of the gate that looketh toward the east; and they went up unto it by seven steps; and the arches
23 thereof were before them. And the gate of the inner court was over against the gate toward the north, and toward the east; and he measured from gate to gate an hundred cubits.

24 After that he brought me toward the south, and, behold, a gate toward the south: and he measured the posts thereof and the arches thereof according to
25 these measures. And there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about, like those windows: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and
26 twenty cubits. And there were ^useven steps to go up to it, and the arches thereof were before them: and it had palm trees, one on this side, and another 27 on that side, upon the posts thereof. And there was a gate in the inner court toward the south: and he measured from gate to gate toward the south an hundred cubits.

28 And he brought me to the inner court by the south gate: and he measured the 29 south gate according to these measures; and the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, according to these measures: and there were windows in it and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits

31 and twenty cubits long, and five cubits broad. And the arches thereof were toward the utter ¹ court; and palm trees were upon the posts thereof: and the going up to it had eight steps.

^x see vers. 21, 25, 33, 36.

32 And he brought me into the inner court toward the east: and he measured the 33 gate according to these measures. And the little chambers thereof, and the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, were according to these measures: and there were windows therein and in the arches thereof round about: it was fifty cubits

35 And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it according to these 36 measures; the little chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth prospect is toward the north is for the priests, ^d the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of ^e Zadok ¹ among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

47 So he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house.

48 And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side. ^f The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were ^g pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

41 Afterward he brought me to the temple, ² and measured the posts, six cubits broad on the one side, and six cubits broad on the other side, which was the breadth of the tabernacle. And the breadth of the door was ten cubits; and the sides of the door were five cubits on the one side, and five cubits on the other side: and he measured the length thereof, forty cubits: and the breadth, twenty cubits.

3 Then went he inward, and measured the post of the door, two cubits; and the door, six cubits; and the breadth of the door, seven cubits. So ^h he measured the length thereof, twenty cubits; and the breadth, twenty cubits, before ³ the temple: and he said unto me, 'This is the most holy place.'

5 After he measured the wall of the house, six cubits; and the breadth of every side chamber, four cubits, round about the house on every side. ^k And the side chambers were three, one over another, and thirty in order; and they entered into the wall which was of the house for the side chambers round about, that they might have hold, but they had not hold in the wall ⁴ of the house. And ^l there was an enlarging, and a winding ⁵ about still upward to the side chambers: for the winding about of the house went still upward round about the house: therefore the breadth of the house was still upward, and so increased from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst. I saw also the height of the house round about: the foundations of the side chambers were ^m a full reed of six great cubits. ⁶

9 The thickness of the wall, which was for the side chamber without, was five cubits: and that which was left was the place of the side chambers that were within. And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side. And the doors of the side chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the place that was left was five cubits round about.

12 Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, and the length thereof ninety cubits. So he measured the house, an hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, an hundred cubits long; also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, an hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, an hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court; the door posts, and ⁿ the narrow windows, and the galleries round about on their three stories, over against the door, cieled with wood round about, and from the ground up to the windows, and the windows were covered; to that above the door, even unto the inner house, and without, and by all the wall round about within and without by measure.

18 And it was made ^o with cherubim and palm trees, so that a palm tree was between a cherub and a cherub; and every cherub had two faces; ⁷ so that the face of a man was toward the palm tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion toward the palm tree on the other side: it was made through all the house round about. From the ground unto above the door were cherubim and palm trees made, and on the wall of the temple. The posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other.

5 Or, 'circuit.' The rebatements in the whole circuit of the wall progressively enlarged the side chambers of the first and second floors.

6 Or, 'six cubits to the joining,' or corner.

7 As the cherubim are described in ch. i. 10 as having each four faces, it is likely that the other two faces were not in sight, being turned to the wall.

22 ^aThe altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, This is ^rthe table that is ^sbefore the LORD.

23, 24 ^tAnd the temple and the sanctuary had two doors. And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for

25 the other door. And there were made on them, on the doors of the temple, cherubim and palm trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were

26 thick planks upon the face of the porch without. And there were ^unarrow windows and palm trees on the one side and on the other side, on the sides of the porch, and upon the side chambers of the house, and thick planks.

42 Then he brought me forth into ^xthe utter court, the way toward the north: and he brought me into ^ythe chamber¹ that was over against the separate place,

2 and which was before the building toward the north. Before the length of an

3 hundred cubits was the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits. Over against the twenty cubits which were for the inner court, and over against the

4 pavement which was for the utter court, was ^zgallery against gallery in three

5 stories. And before the chambers was a walk of ten cubits breadth inward, a way

6 of ^aone cubit; and their doors toward the north. Now the upper chambers were shorter: for the galleries were higher than these [or, did eat of these],² than the

7 lower, and than the middlemost of the building. For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts: therefore the building was

8 straitened more than the lowest and the middlemost from the ground. And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the utter

9 court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits. For the length of the chambers that were in the utter court was fifty cubits: and, lo,

10 before the temple were an hundred cubits. And from under these chambers was the entry on the east side, as one goeth

11 into them from the utter court. The chambers were in the thickness³ of the wall of the court toward the east, over against the separate place, and over against

12 the building. And ^bthe way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they:

13 and all their goings out were both according to their fashions,⁴ and according to their doors. And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the 14 south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

15 Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, ^cthey be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD ^dshall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most

16 holy things, and ^ethe meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; for the place is holy. ^fWhen the priests enter therein, then shall they

17 not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other

18 garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.⁵

19 Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round

20 about. He measured the east side with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds,⁶ with the measuring reed round about. He measured the north side, five hundred

21 reeds, with the measuring reed round about. He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed. He turned about to the west side, and

6 A 'reed' being about 12 feet (ch. xl. 5), 500 of these would make a length of 6000 feet, or more than a mile; and give a circumference of nearly five miles. These dimensions far exceed those of the ancient temple, and even of the city itself; and make it improbable that such an edifice should be built upon Mount Moriah, whilst the land remains unaltered. See note on ch. xlvii. 13.

7 The temple, the palace of the great King, being restored, Jehovah returns by the east gate, by which he had departed (ch. x. 18; xi. 23), and re-occupies his throne (vers. 1—5). dwelling-place (6—11). And now that they may approach him, the altar is reconstructed and consecrated (12—27). But to keep in mind the departure and return of Jehovah, the east gate is hereafter to be closed, except for the entrance of his Viceroy the Prince (xliv. 1—3). The whole is an expressive representation of God's gracious presence in his church, and of the acceptance of his people's offerings.

¹ That is, to predict its destruction: see Jer. i. 10.

² This may possibly allude to the burial of some of the kings, close to or perhaps even within the temple area, which was regarded as a profanation. But it more probably refers to the idols which some of the kings of Judah had set up within the sacred precincts (see 2 Kings xxi. 4, 5), so that 'there was but a wall between' Jehovah 'and them;' and these idols would appropriately be called 'kings' here, as having been rivals of the Divine

Monarch of Israel, who is now returning to his house.

³ When Israel is humbled for his sins, he may expect a restoration and extension of his privileges, as he will be prepared to use them faithfully according to God's will.

⁴ Either the hollowed base of the altar, or the cavity for the fire.

⁵ Or, 'ledge;' perhaps for standing upon.

⁶ Heb., 'Har-el,' either signifying 'the Mount of God,' or the same as 'Ariel,' translated 'altar,' in the next clause and the next verse. Comp. Isa. xxix. 1.

⁷ The ceremonies here prescribed for the consecration of the altar, are even more minute and elaborate than those which had been observed by Divine appointment on the like occasion in the wilderness (see Exod. xxix. 36, 37); showing that, under the new and spiritual dispensation, there should be not less but more attention given to the commands and service of Jehovah.

he "shall burn it in the appointed place of the house, * without the sanctuary.
 22 And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the

 24 bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish. And thou shalt offer them before the LORD, ^y and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and 25 they shall offer them up for a burnt offering unto the LORD. ^z Seven days shalt thou prepare every day a goat for a sin offering: they shall also prepare a 27 ^b And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward, the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and your peace offerings; and I will ^c accept you, saith the Lord God.

 44 Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary
 2 ^d which looketh toward the east; and it was shut. Then said the LORD unto me; This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; ^e because the LORD, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be
 3 shut. ^f It is for the prince; ^g the prince, he shall sit in it to ^h eat bread before the LORD; he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same.

4 THEN ² brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, ⁱ behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD: ^k and I fell

And the LORD said unto me, ^l 'Son of man, mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the 1 Some suppose 'the prince' to be the political governor of the Jews; others, the Messiah: but he is probably only an ideal person, introduced to complete the representation. See note on ch. xliii. 1.

2 In this section the officers of God's house are appointed, and are enjoined to sanctify themselves for his service; and not only to put away from among them all foreigners and strangers, but to degrade those of their own body who had profaned themselves. The ceremonies which are here prescribed are for the most part found in the Levitical institutions; only they are much more strict; the things formerly required of the high priest being here extended to all the priests. These minute specifications, like those of the Mosaic laws, show the universal sanctity which God expects on the part of all his people, since he has granted to them the privilege to approach Him as a 'holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ' (1 Pet. ii. 5).

3 This may be intended to mark a distinction between those who are destitute of internal purity, and those who are careless of the external observances which God enjoins. But it may be designed to afford a glimpse of the spiritual meaning through the veil of the allegory.

4 They shall be employed in the menial offices of the sanctuary.

5 Zadok had succeeded to the high priesthood when the line of Ithamar forfeited that honour, partly through the sins of Eli's sons, and more immediately by the treason of Abiathar in taking part with Adonijah, whilst Zadok loyally adhered to Solomon, whom the Divine Head of the theocracy had chosen to succeed David. See 1 Sam. ii. 35; 1 Kings i. 7; ii. 26, 27, and notes. It is probably on this account that the family of Zadok is chosen to represent the true priests.

 18 ^p They shall have linen bounnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves with anything that causeth

 21 ^u Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court.
 22 Neither shall they take for their wives a ^x widow, nor her that is put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that

45 MOREOVER,¹ when ye shall ⁿ divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall ^o offer an oblation unto the Lord, an holy portion of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth shall be ten

1 The offerings to Jehovah are here prescribed. They consist of, 1. An oblation of land about fifty-six miles square; comprising the portion for the temple and the priests (vers. 1—4), a similar portion for the Levites (5), and half as much for the holy city and its suburbs and dependencies (6); with a portion for the prince on either side (7), that he may not extort money from the people, but may deal justly with them, and may make provision for the public sacrifices (8—17). 2. The offerings at the feasts; which are required to be more frequent and numerous than under the Mosaic ritual

(18—25; xlv. 13—15), many of them being especially connected with the prince's duties (xlv. 1—12), who is forbidden to alienate his own portion or to encroach upon others (16—18). The section ends with some regulations adapted to promote convenience and decorum (19—24). The whole depicts a high state of religious, political, and social order and happiness.

In the land shall be his possession in Israel: and ^y my princes shall no more oppress my people. And the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

¹ The shekel was always 20 gerahs; but the maneh or mina (the pound) seems to have contained 100 shekels: compare 1 Kings x. 17 with 2 Chron. ix. 15. Whether this means that the shekel shall be so large, that 20+25+15=60 shall make an old pound, or that there shall be different values of the maneh, is doubtful. It is possible that there is an error in the numbers: see note on p. 516. The meaning of the whole evidently is, that the weights and measures shall be just and full.

And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

8 ^a And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of ^b that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof. But when the people of the land ^c shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, ^d he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it. And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

11 And in the feasts and in the solemnities ^e the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and ^f an hin of oil to an ephah. Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, ^g one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth ^h one shall shut the gate.

13 ⁱ Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt offering unto the LORD ^j of a lamb of the first year without blemish: thou shalt prepare it every morning. And thou shalt prepare a meat offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the LORD. Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat offering, and the oil, every morning ^k for a continual burnt offering.

16 Thus saith the Lord God; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to ^l the year of liberty; ^m after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them. Moreover ⁿ the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, ^o to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 After he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward. Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall ^p boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall ^q bake the meat offering; that they bear them not out into the utter court, ^r to sanctify the people.

21 Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, in every corner of the court there was a court. In the four corners of the court there were courts joined, of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four corners were of one measure. And there was a row ^s of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about. Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall ^t boil the sacrifice of the people.

The vision concluded; the holy land, and the holy city.

47 AFTERWARD ^u he brought me again unto the door of the house; and, behold, ^v waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: ^w for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from ^x under the right side of the house, at the south side of the altar. ³ The healing and life-giving influence of the blessing which God has in reserve for his church are here represented by a beautiful emblem. Beneath the dwelling-place of Israel's king bursts forth a fountain flowing into the eastern valley (vers. 1, 2). Its streams rapidly become wider and deeper (3—5), its banks are fringed with trees, and its abundant waters sweeten even the briny sea of Sodom, which becomes filled with fish and surrounded by fishermen (6—12). The various particulars of this ideal description, so full of what is cheering and salutary, are exactly such as to present the most complete contrast with the actual state of the sea and its neighbourhood. This passage is evidently referred to in Rev. xxii. 1, 2.

⁴ That is, into and along the valley of the Kidron.

Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins. 1 A recent traveller describes the valley of the Kidron as being 'nothing more than the bed of a winter torrent; gloomy and sterile, with scarcely a shrub' to be seen below Selwân (Siloam).

2 Heb., 'Arabah;' the name of the depressed 'plain' (Gen. xiii. 10, 12) or valley in which the Jordan and the Dead Sea lie.

3 The researches of modern travellers have shown that many statements which have been made respecting the Dead Sea are incorrect; for birds are seen flying over it, and waterfowl sporting on its surface. But they have confirmed the belief that it is destitute of fish. The freshwater fish and mollusks which abound in the Lake of Tiberias (Luke v. 6; John xxi. 6) may occasionally find their way to it; but they soon perish in its waters. The blessings which the gospel brings to a world cursed by sin, are most appropriately depicted by the healing of this sea of death by the waters of life which flow from under the mercy-seat of Jehovah.

4 That is, from one side of the lake to the other. For 'En-gedi,' see note on 1 Sam. xxiv. 1. 'En-eglaim' (or, calves' fountain) was probably on the other side of the sea, in the land of Moab. The description is evidently figurative; for if the waters were as deep as they are represented to be in vers. 3—5, En-gedi and the salt marshes would be all alike swallowed up.

5 That is, for reservoirs of salt, as before. The Dead Sea and its cliffs and salt marshes furnish salt for commerce. This is not therefore a curse, but the contrary. Sterility and death shall be removed; but so much salt shall be left as may serve all useful purposes. Some, however, take this as an intimation that the promised blessings shall not be universal.

6 The vision is completed by an ideal distribution of the land of promise among the people. Its boundaries are first described, agreeing exactly with those of ancient Canaan on the west of the Jordan (vers. 13—20); perhaps signifying that the blessings here held out are those which Abraham and ancient believers had expected: see Heb. xi. 16. The partition is then made; but the stranger may share in it (Isa. lvi. 3; Eph. ii. 19), and the tribes are to take equal portions divided by lines from east to west. Judah and Benjamin, the royal tribes, stand in reversed positions on the north and south of the holy oblation (ch. xlviii. 1—7, 23—29); which is again particularly described (8—22), and the gates and the magnitude of the New Jerusalem are specified (30—35). The whole is closed by a new name given to the city, expressive of its high privilege as the dwelling-place of God (35). The very size, form, and nature of the country are such as to render the literal fulfilment of this portion of the vision physically impossible, without such convulsions as would destroy the identity of the land. And, moreover, an attempt so to interpret it, whilst the re-institution of the Aaronic priesthood and the Levitical sacrifices in the preceding chapters is admitted to be figurative, necessarily introduces arbitrary confusion into a beautiful and consistent allegory.

7 Some of these places are unknown; but their general position is marked by their connection with others.

8 'Hauran' is a district east of the Sea of Galilee, south of Damascus, and north-east of Bashan. It still bears the same name, probably derived from the numerous caves, which the inhabitants use as dwellings. See Gen. xiv. 6, and note.

9 Probably the place called Thamara by Eusebius (and now Kurnub); once a town and fortress situated on the road from Hebron to Elath or Ailah.

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET DANIEL.

DANIEL was of noble birth, if not of the royal family of Judah (ch. i. 3). He was carried captive to Babylon, with other Hebrew youths of rank, to be educated for the service of Nebuchadnezzar's court; for which purpose they were instructed in the language and literature of the Chaldeans. But God endowed them with such superior wisdom that at the end of the appointed course they were not only admitted to the number of the magi, or wise men, but were found greatly to excel them all (ch. i.) Shortly afterwards, Daniel having, by Divine teaching, interpreted a dream of Nebuchadnezzar, rose into high favour with that monarch, and was made ruler of the province of Babylon, and chief of the order of wise men (ch. ii.)

It was probably many years after this that Daniel's three companions were miraculously preserved in a burning fiery furnace (ch. iii.) At a still later period, he was called upon to interpret another dream which revealed God's purpose to visit Nebuchadnezzar with insanity, when we find him uniting the utmost anxiety for the welfare of his princely benefactor, with the energy and fidelity which became him as a prophet of Jehovah (ch. iv.)

Under the successors of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel appears to have held only a subordinate office under the government (ch. viii. 27). At the close of the reign of Belshazzar he was brought again into notice by the wonderful events of the night which preceded the death of the king and the change of the dynasty (ch. v.) Previously to that event, in the first and third years of the same reign, he had two remarkable visions, disclosing to him the rise and career of powerful dynasties not then in existence, with their relation to the kingdom of God and its progress till the end of all things (ch. vii., viii.)

After the conquest of Babylon by the Medes and Persians, Daniel, gathering from the prophecies of Jeremiah that the exile of his people was nearly concluded, gave himself to prayer in their behalf; when he received in answer Divine revelations and promises, far exceeding the tenor of his petitions (ch. ix.)

Under the reigns of Darius and Cyrus, Daniel filled the highest posts of honour in the state. He was soon attacked by the envy and jealousy of his colleagues; who, unable to find any fault in his conduct, endeavoured to effect his downfall through his habits of devotion, and thus gave occasion to the memorable interposition of Providence recorded in the sixth chapter. In the third year of Cyrus, God made known to him in a series of visions many important particulars in the future history of his nation and of the world (ch. x.—xii.) He lived to see the termination of the captivity of his people; but it does not appear that he returned with them to their own land.

The Divine authority of the book of Daniel, which had previously been almost universally admitted, has been called in question by some modern critics, partly on the ground of its miraculous narratives, and partly because of the alleged historical particularity of its predictions. It is obvious that these objections would be equally applicable to other histories and prophecies of the Bible; and full replies to them are to be found in books which treat of the evidences of its Divine authority. (See Angus' Bible Hand-book, ch. ii. sect. 4.) But there is abundant proof that the book of Daniel forms part of the canon of Scripture. It was received as such by the Jews of the times of the Maccabees (see 1 Macc. ii. 59, 60), of our Lord (Matt. xxiv. 15), and of Josephus, who says that its prophecies were shown to Alexander on his arrival at Jerusalem (Antiq. xi. 8, 5). It is included in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament Scriptures, which was completed about 280 years B. C. It is written, not like the apocryphal books in Greek, but, like the book of Ezra, partly in Hebrew and partly in Chaldee; which well agrees with the age and circumstances of Daniel. It displays accurate knowledge of ancient history, and of the peculiar manners and customs of the Chaldeans, indicating an author who lived at or near the time and place to which the book refers. And above all, our Lord, besides repeatedly recognising the Divine authority of the collection of books forming the Old Testament in which it was contained, quotes expressions from the book itself as the words of 'Daniel the prophet' (Matt. xxiv. 15). The Jews, indeed, while acknowledging the canonical authority of the book, have classed it not with 'The Prophets,' but with the Psalms in the third division of the sacred books, on the ground that Daniel, like David, was habitually engaged in worldly business, although he was often favoured with prophetic foresight. But this was not held to be in any way derogatory to the honour and value of the book.

Daniel is alluded to by his contemporary Ezekiel as being already celebrated for holiness and wisdom (Ezek. xiv. 14, 20; xxviii. 3); and all that is recorded of him in this book shows how well his celebrity was deserved. With devotional piety he combined high conscientiousness and great practical wisdom, which gave him influence as the able counsellor of princes, and the faithful ruler of nations. Nor could the pomp of his high offices, or the engrossing cares and employments which they involved, extinguish the spirit or abridge the exercise of devotion (see ch. vi. 10); or make him forgetful of the desolations of his people and country, and of the temple of his God. And He who honours those who honour Him showed his approbation of his servant both by miraculous protection in time of danger, and by the gift of supernatural endowments. Daniel was declared to be a man 'greatly beloved by God.' In answer to his prayer, the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the future revolutions of the world were made known to him. He received clear information respecting the person, the office, the work, and the benefits of the great Redeemer, the precise time of his appearance, and the nature and design of his sufferings; also concerning the troubles and persecutions of the church, the conversion of the Jewish people, the resurrection of the dead, and the final consummation of all things.

Part of this book is written in the Chaldean language, viz. from ch. ii. 4 to the end of ch. vii. These chapters relate chiefly to events which happened at Babylon: it is probable that some passages were extracts from the public registers or annals.

The education of Daniel and three of his fellow-captives at the court of Babylon.

And ^b the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with ^c part of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried ^d into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; ^e and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god.
- 2 And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs,³ that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed,⁴ and of the princes: children⁵ ^f in whom was no blemish,⁶ but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom,⁷ and cunning⁸ in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and ^h whom they might teach the learning⁹ and the tongue of the Chaldeans. 1 Many suggestions have been made to remove the apparent discrepancy between this date and that given in Jer. xxv. 1; xlvii. 1; the simplest of which seems to be the following. After the conquest of Nineveh, Nabopolassar, the king of Babylon, wishing to recover Syria and Palestine from Pharaoh-Necho, but feeling himself too old for fresh expeditions, gave a share in the kingdom to his son Nebuchadnezzar. The young king speedily set out, a little before the end of the third year of Jehoiakim; and early in the fourth year of that prince, and before the first year of his own reign had expired, he defeated the Egyptians at Carchemish, and laid siege to Jerusalem. In the short statements of the two prophets, it was perfectly natural for Jeremiah to mention the time when the army appeared before the city; and it was equally so for Daniel, long accustomed to the reckonings of the Chaldeans, to date from the departure of the expedition.

2 Probably the temple of Belus described by Herodotus (Hist. i. 181). The 'treasure-house' was the depository of consecrated vessels and votive offerings.

3 Eunuchs were anciently, as they are now, much employed and trusted in Eastern courts; and some of them rose to high political and military offices. Both Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar were accompanied in their invasions by a 'Rab-saris,' or chief-eunuch: see 2 Kings xviii. 17; Jer. xxxix. 3, 13.

4 According to Josephus (Antiq. x. 10, 1), Daniel and his three companions were related to the new king Zedekiah. They were certainly of high rank. The conqueror took them not merely as hostages, but probably also with the view of attaching to his own person some of the conquered people.

5 Rather, 'youths;' for the word includes persons of different ages. See Gen. xxi. 15; 1 Kings xii. 8, 10, 14. They were probably about fifteen or seventeen years old.

6 Eastern monarchs and governors still select their attendants and officers for the gratefulness of their person.

7 Whose natural talents and previous acquirements gave reason to expect that higher education would be well bestowed upon them.

8 That is, 'skilled.' See Exod. xxxviii. 23.

9 Or, 'the book and the tongue,' etc.; i. e. Chaldean literature. The language of the country at this time was Eastern Aramaic, which we find in ch. ii. 4, etc. See 2 Kings xviii. 26, and note.

10 The Hebrew word here used appears to mean either 'food of the father,' i. e. the king; or 'food of the idol.'

11 All these four Hebrew names contained the name of God, and were calculated to remind those who bore them of Him. The new names given to them probably had reference to some Babylonian idols; but only that of Bel can be ascertained. All these proceedings are illustrated by the practice in the Ottoman court, down to the present age, of taking handsome and promising youths, either hostages or captives, to be educated for the service of the Sultan, who often selects from them his highest civil and military officers.

12 The food was probably such as the Mosaic law forbade (Lev. iii. 17; xi. 4); and which had been, according to heathen custom, offered to idols (1 Cor. viii. 10).

9 requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. Now

11 Then said Daniel to Melzar,² whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over 12 Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten 13 days; and let them give us pulse³ to eat, and water to drink. Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy 14 servants. So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.
 15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer⁴ and fatter in 16 flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat. Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink; and gave them pulse.

17 As for these four children, ° God gave them ° knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had ° understanding in all visions and dreams.

18 Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, 19 then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar. And the king communed with them;⁵ and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore ° stood they before the king.
 20 ° And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers⁶ that were in all his realm.

21 'And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus.⁷

2 AND⁸ in the second⁹ year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar "dreamed dreams," wherewith his spirit was troubled,¹⁰ and ° his sleep brake 2 from him. ° Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans,¹¹ for to show the king his dreams. So 3 they came and stood before the king. And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac,¹² ° O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation.¹³

1 All that is here told us of Daniel shows that he was at once amiable, modest, and conscientious; and these virtues, no doubt, had conciliated the affection of his governor. But he rightly ascribes the favour of his superior to God; for those good qualities are the gifts of Divine grace, and, but for God's providence, might not have secured his advancement. See Prov. xxi. 1.

2 'Melzar' is probably a Persian word, meaning 'the butler.' As the chief officer's only objection arose from the fear of ill consequences, this proposal of Daniel's was both right and prudent.

3 Rather, 'vegetables' generally.

4 A simple diet is always most conducive both to the enjoyment and to the appearance of health; but in this instance there was a special blessing upon the pious resolution of these youths, increasing both their bodily and mental vigour; and, in the case of Daniel, extending to the bestowment of supernatural gifts (ver. 17), which would be highly appreciated by his Chaldean lord and by his competitors.

5 That is, he examined them. The four Hebrews were so far superior to the rest, that they were immediately appointed to be personal attendants on the king.

6 Rather, 'enchanters.'

7 Whilst his own nation was chastened, and when his early patron had been humbled, Daniel was still preserved and honoured by Him whom he had served from his youth; he lived to see the empire of Babylon fall, and Israel freed by Cyrus; and he was favoured at an advanced age with the vision of the future Messiah.

8 Now that the destined destroyer of Jerusalem had struck his first blow at the throne of David, the power and faithfulness of the God of Israel might be questioned by many, and most of all by the conqueror (compare 2 Kings xviii. 33—35). To him, therefore, Jehovah reveals the instability of his own and of the other earthly empires which would follow, and the setting up of a Divine kingdom which should be universal and permanent. By leading Nebuchadnezzar to demand the dream as well as the explanation, God forced upon him indisputable proof of its certain truth; whilst he showed the falsehood of his Chaldean superstition, and the presence of Jehovah with his servants. Thus he brought the haughty monarch to acknowledge the superiority of Israel's God, and to place his Hebrew captives above his heathen courtiers.

9 Three years at least must have elapsed (see ch. i. 5, 18) since the date of the occurrences recorded in ch. i. 1, 2, where Nebuchadnezzar is called 'king.' It is possible that this title may be there given him by anticipation; but it is more likely that the date in this verse is reckoned from the commencement of his sole reign, at his father's death, about two years after he had undertaken the expedition against Palestine. This would allow an interval of nearly four years; at the close of which Daniel would be numbered with the 'wise men,' but as one of the youngest of the body he might, perhaps, not be summoned to help in the emergency.

10 See note on Gen. xli. 8.

11 The Chaldeans were so much addicted to the occult sciences, that the word Chaldean was used for a soothsayer.

12 Not Syriac, i. e. Western Aramaic, but Chaldee. See note on ch. i. 4. Here the Chaldee portion of the book commences, and it is continued to the end of ch. vii.; this part of the book containing the narratives and prophecies relating particularly to the Chaldeans and to Babylon.

13 The ancient soothsayers claimed the power of learning from obscure intimations the purposes of the gods, and prognostics of future events. But the profession to do more than this was limited to a few persons, mostly priests of certain oracles.

- 5 The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: ¹ if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof,
- 6 ye shall be ^a cut in pieces, ² and your houses shall be made a dunghill. ^b But if ye show the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me ^c gifts and rewards and great honour: therefore show me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.
- 7 They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation of it.
- 8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would gain the time, ³
- 9 because ye see the thing is gone from me. But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, ^d there is but one decree ⁴ for you: for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can show me the interpretation thereof.
- 10 The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can show the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor
- 11 ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean. And it is a rare thing that the king requireth, and there is none other that can show it before the king, ^e except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.
- 12 For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy
- 13 all the wise men of Babylon. ⁵ And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.
- 14 Then Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the captain of the king's guard ⁶ [Heb. chief of the executioners, or, slaughtermen ^f], which was gone
- 15 forth to slay the wise men of Babylon: he answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing
- 16 known to Daniel. Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would show the king the interpretation. ⁷
- 17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah,
- 18 Mishael, and Azariah, his companions: ⁸ that they would desire mercies ⁸ of the God of heaven ⁹ concerning this secret; that Daniel and his fellows ^h should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.
- 19 ⁱ Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel ^j in a night vision. Then Daniel
- 20 blessed the God of heaven. Daniel answered and said,
- ^k Blessed ¹⁰ be the name of God for ever and ever:
- ^l For wisdom and might are his: ¹¹
- 21 And he changeth ^m the times and the seasons:
- ⁿ He removeth kings, and setteth up kings:— ^o he giveth wisdom unto the wise, And knowledge to them that know understanding:
- 22 ^p He revealeth the deep and secret things:
- ^q He knoweth what is in the darkness,—and ^r the light dwelleth with him.
- 23 I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, ¹²
- Who hast given me wisdom and might, ¹³
- And hast made known unto me now what we ^s desired of thee:
- For thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.
- 24 Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will show unto the king

¹ Meaning either, 'the dream has escaped my memory;' or, 'the decree has gone from me,' and is irrevocable.

² Literally, 'made pieces;' a severe but not uncommon punishment: see 1 Sam. xv. 33. Assyrian sculptures represent the infliction of it, by the cutting off the various limbs of the criminal. The destruction and pollution of the houses of criminals was also frequent both in the East and in Greece. See 2 Kings x. 27; Ezra vi. 11.

³ Chaldee, 'buy the time;' i. e. you desire to gain advantage by delay; either by devising some expedient to deceive me (ver. 9), or because, as 'the time is changed' (i. e. passes on), other matters may divert my attention.

⁴ Or, 'one is your purpose;' i. e. ye have agreed together to deceive me.

⁵ Such an edict is quite in conformity with the practice of Oriental despots, and with the personal character of Nebuchadnezzar. See 2 Kings xxv. 7, 18—21.

⁶ See note on Gen. xxxvii. 36.

⁷ The narrative implies that his request was successful. The king's passion may have cooled, or Daniel's recent distinguished examination and modest demeanour may have pleased him; but we must not fail to observe in it God's all-controlling hand. See note on ch. i. 9.

⁸ It was evident that none could help them but God; and that this could only be expected in answer to prayer.

⁹ God, who governs all as supreme and universal King.

¹⁰ This thanksgiving reminds us that every answer to prayer should call forth praise. Comp. Phil. iv. 6.

¹¹ Daniel's mind was evidently occupied not only with the mercy shown to himself and his friends, by the dream being made known to him, but also with the great subjects of the dream itself, as illustrating God's power and wisdom in the change of empires from age to age. This hymn is well adapted to prepare the reader for the subsequent revelations.

¹² Great as had been Israel's sins, which might have annulled God's covenant of mercy, and severe as his chastenings had been, by sending Daniel and his companions into exile, God had shown by hearing their prayer that he was unchangeable in his love, and mindful of his promises to Abraham and his race.

¹³ Or, 'power;' i. e. to tell the dream.

- 25 the interpretation. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, I have found a man of the captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation.
- 26 The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, "Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?
- 27 Daniel answered¹ in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded² cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, show unto the king; ³ but there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known [hath made known] to the king Nebuchadnezzar ⁴ what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these; As for thee, O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter: ⁵ and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass. ⁶ But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, ⁷ but for their sakes² that shall make known the interpretation to the king, ⁸ and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.
- 31 Thou, O king, sawest, and, behold, a great image.³ This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form⁴ thereof was terrible.
- 32 ⁵ This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.⁵
- 34 Thou sawest till that a ⁶ stone was cut out ⁷ without hands, ⁸ which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then ⁹ was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became ¹⁰ like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that ¹¹ no place was found for them.⁷ And the stone that smote the image ¹² became a great mountain, ¹³ and filled the whole earth.
- 36 This is the dream; and we⁸ will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.
- 37 "Thou, O king, art a king of kings:⁹ ¹⁰ for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.¹⁰ ¹¹ And whosoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all.¹¹ ¹² Thou art this head of gold.¹² And after thee shall arise ¹³ another kingdom, ¹⁴ inferior to thee; ¹⁵ and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth. And ¹⁶ the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: ¹⁷ forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise. And whereas thou sawest ¹⁸ the feet and toes,¹⁵ part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry

² Rather, 'but in order that the interpretation may be made known unto the king.'

³ This dream accords perfectly with its great object. A colossal image, in which heterogeneous materials were combined to make one human form, aptly symbolizes the great empires of the world, which, with all their differences, are in nature alike, and all earthly and human. And a mountain rock, detached, moved, expanding by a mysterious, inward, unseen power, beautifully represents the origin, progress, and final universality of that kingdom which is not of this world.

⁴ Rather, 'its appearance was terrible.' Among the monuments of Egypt and Assyria, colossal statues of monarchs are found.

⁵ That is, 'earthenware;' for unless the clay were burnt it could not sustain the image.

⁶ That is, not by human power.

⁷ Or, 'and their whole place was not found;' i. e. they utterly disappeared. Compare Psa. xxxvii. 10; ciii. 16; Rev. xx. 11.

⁸ Daniel modestly includes his companions.

⁹ Daniel here shows how a king may be fully honoured, whilst he is reminded of his subjection to God's authority.

¹⁰ It is commonly supposed that these four empires are those of the Chaldeans, the Medes and Persians, the Greeks under Alexander and his successors, and the Romans. They all bore sway over Palestine, and they filled up the time between the fall of the throne of David, and the establishment of that of Christ. Though they appear simultaneously in the image, they are explained as being successive (ver. 39).

¹¹ The word 'all,' like other absolute terms, is frequently used in Scripture with a limited sense. See Deut. ii. 25; Matt. iii. 5.

¹³ As the fundamental idea of the whole representation is regal authority, it is probably in respect to this that the second empire is inferior to the first. Accordingly, whilst Nebuchadnezzar always appears to act as an absolute autocrat, the Medo-Persian kings are subject to the restraint of unalterable law. See ch. vi. 15; Esth. viii. 8, and note.

¹⁵ Many expositors suppose that the 'toes' were designed to represent ten kingdoms, into which the Roman empire became divided, after the irruptions of the Gothic nations who issued from the north, and conquered the Roman empire. But it is better to understand the 'toes' as only mentioned to complete the representation of the image, especially as there is no express mention of their number, as there is of the horns in ch. vii. 7.

42 clay.¹ And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the 43 kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken [or, brittle]. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men:² but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not 44 mixed with clay. And in the days³ of these kings *shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, *which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left⁴ to other people, *but it shall break in pieces⁵ and consume all these 45 kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever; *forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold.

 threescore cubits,¹⁴ and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors,¹⁵ and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all

1 Rather, 'earthenware clay:' see note on ver. 33. The clay and iron were evidently intermingled (see ver. 43), though they were 'divided,' so that they would not coalesce; and thus the strength of the iron was useless through the brittleness of the clay.

2 Rather, 'They shall be mixing themselves among the race of man, but they shall not be cleaving one to another;' i. e. there shall be mixture, but not union.

3 That is, before they have passed away.

4 That is, it shall not be transferred to another people, as the previous kingdoms had been.

5 The powers which are thus destroyed are evidently regarded not so much as being actively hostile to the people of God, for indeed the Medo-Persian was, on the whole, friendly to them; but rather as being, in their origin and principles, altogether antagonistic to the great principles of the kingdom of Jehovah. And they may therefore be regarded as representing other merely earthly and human powers, whose destiny is here foreshadowed. They must all be either entirely subordinated to the rule of the Messiah, or utterly swept away. Comp. Ps. ii., ex.; Isa. lx. 10—12.

6 That Nebuchadnezzar did not treat Daniel as a god is clear from the next verse; for he attributes the revealing of the secret to Daniel's God. But in the East, the homage paid to the great much resembles, in outward form, the worship paid to God himself.

7 Nebuchadnezzar was evidently convinced of the wisdom and supremacy of Jehovah; yet he remained an idolater, as the sequel shows. He thus furnishes an instructive instance of the inefficiency of evidence and conviction of truth, unless the heart is yielded to the influence of the Holy Spirit. Compare James ii. 19.

8 The district around the capital.

9 The 'wise men' appear to have been arranged in certain orders or classes, each having its head. Daniel was placed over the whole as the president; though he appears to have given no countenance to their proceedings. See ch. iv. 8, and note.

10 Governors of the province under Daniel. Daniel did not forget, in his prosperity, the companions of his captivity.

11 Nebuchadnezzar retained him at court, as one of his confidential advisers.

12 A career of successful ambition seems to have obliterated in Nebuchadnezzar's mind the impressions of his earlier lesson (ch. ii.); and he not only continued to worship his idols, but required all his servants to do so under pain of death (vers. 1—7). Jehovah, therefore, by the unflinching faithfulness of the three Hebrew officers (8—18), and by his own miraculous interposition for their protection and deliverance (19—27), makes the haughty monarch again confess his power, and honour his faithful worshippers (28—30). The date of these events is not given; but it is clear that they occurred when Nebuchadnezzar had greatly enriched himself, and was not personally engaged in war. The most probable period is, therefore, either after the final capture and destruction of Jerusalem (B. C. 587), or after the spoliation of Egypt; and the interval of time between chapters ii. and iii. will be accordingly either about seventeen or more than thirty-two years.

13 From the descriptions which are given of the fabrication of idols in Isa. xl. 18—20; xli. 6, 7; xlii. 10—13; xlii. 6, 7, it appears that golden idols were made of plates of gold covering a mass of wood or stone; and many ancient monuments are found which have evidently been thus plated with metal.

14 As the Babylonian cubit was large (Herod. i. 178), this image must have been above 100 feet high and 10 feet broad. It was thus about the same height as the Colossus at Rhodes; and of the same proportions, and of nearly the same size, as some of the Egyptian obelisks. It is not said to have been a human figure; but it may have been so, as the word rendered 'breadth' may equally well mean 'depth,' i. e. from breast to back, which would give the natural proportions of the body; or it may have been elevated on a lofty pedestal; or the due proportions may have been disregarded, as was sometimes the case in the semi-barbarous works of Babylon. It is supposed to have been an image dedicated either to Bel, the chief deity of the Chaldeans, or to Nebo, the patron-god of the monarch.

15 Some of these titles are of Persian, and some of Aramean origin; but the exact meaning of each cannot now be ascertained. They may perhaps best be translated

- the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up. Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.
- 4 Then an herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, ⁱ O people, nations, and languages, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer,¹ and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up: and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour² ^k be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. Therefore at that time when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music, all the people, ^l the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.
- 8 Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans ^m came near, and accused the Jews. 9 They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, ⁿ O king, live for ever. 10 Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, shall 11 fall down and worship the golden image: and whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. 12 ^o There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego;³ these men, O king, have not regarded thee: they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.
- 13 Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king. 14 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it ^p true,⁴ O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I 15 have set up? Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made; ^q well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace;—^r and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?
- 16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, ^s we are not careful⁵ to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, ^t our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; and he 17 will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, ^u be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.
- 19 Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed⁶ against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more⁷ than it was wont to be 20 heated. And he commanded the most mighty men⁸ that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery 21 furnace. Then these men were bound in their coats,⁹ their hosen, and their hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery 22 furnace. Therefore because the king's commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of the fire ^x slew¹⁰ those men that took up Shadrach, ¹ What these musical instruments were is unknown. Some were evidently of Greek origin; and the peculiar form of the words suggests that they were brought from Egypt, where many Greeks were already settled (Herod. ii. 153, 154). Other instruments of Eastern origin were afterwards used in Greece, under names borrowed from these. It is possible that the different kinds of music were those used by the different nations whose representatives were here assembled.

² Literally, 'in the glance of an eye;' i. e. immediately. The peremptory command and the terrible penalty accord with other actions of this haughty conqueror. Comp. ch. ii. 5, and Jer. xxix. 22.

³ Why these three were selected by the accusers we are not told, and it is useless to inquire. Daniel's character assures us that he would not comply with the king's command; but he may have been absent, or the accusers may have feared to lay a charge against him.

⁴ Rather, 'Is it purposely?'

⁵ Rather, 'we do not need.' It is needless to enter into the matter: we are determined at all risks to worship none but Jehovah, who is able to deliver us if he sees fit.

⁶ Showing the most violent anger.

⁷ The word 'seven' is often employed to denote completeness. The furnace was to be heated to the greatest intensity.

⁸ That is, in bodily strength.

⁹ That is, with all their clothes on. The 'coats' are rather the wide and long pantaloons of the East; the 'hosen,' tunics or under-garments; and the 'hats' should be mantles.

¹⁰ Hurried by the king's peremptory command, the men could not consult their own safety; and therefore,

23 Meshach, and Abed-nego. And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished,¹ and rose up in haste, and spake and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose,² walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like ³the Son of God.²

26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth³ of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither.

Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire. 27 And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, ^aupon whose bodies the fire had no power, ^bnor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, ^cBlessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that ^dtrusted in him, and have changed⁴ ^ethe king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

29 Therefore I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be ^ecut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: ^hbecause 30 there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. ⁱThen the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the great tree, with its interpretation, and fulfilment.

4 NEBUCHADNEZZAR⁵ the king, ^hunto all people, nations, and languages, 2 that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you. I thought it good to show the signs and wonders ⁱthat the high God hath wrought toward me. 3 ^mHow great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! his kingdom is ⁿan everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.

4 I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace: 5 I saw a dream which made me afraid, ^oand the thoughts upon my bed and the 6 visions of my head ^ptroubled me. Therefore made I a decree ^qto bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the 7 interpretation of the dream. ^rThen came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; but they did 8 not make known unto me the interpretation thereof. But at the last⁶ Daniel came in before me, (^swhose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, ^tand in whom is the spirit of the holy gods:⁷) and before him I told the dream, saying,

9 O Belteshazzar, ^umaster of the magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my 10 dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof. Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed; I saw, and, behold, ^va tree in the midst of the earth, 11 and the height thereof was great. The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached ^yunto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth: 12 the leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat⁸ for all: ^zthe beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven 13 dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it. when they 'carried up' the three Hebrews to the opening at the top of the furnace, they were burnt. The apocryphal 'Song of the Three Children' is inserted here in some editions of the Bible.

¹ Astonished.

² Literally, 'like to a son of God;' or, 'of the gods.' Nebuchadnezzar calls this person 'an angel' (ver. 28); and Luther, Calvin, and Coverdale, in common with the majority of commentators, take this to be the meaning. Comp. Job i. 6; Ps. lxxxix. 6, and notes. The heathen monarch probably thought only of a majestic super-human being.

³ Rather, 'door,' an aperture for the use of those who attended to the furnace.

⁴ Perhaps, 'altered;' i.e. transgressed; as in Ezra vi. 11.

⁵ To make the preceding lessons effectual, they are followed by a severe personal chastisement: comp. note on Exod. vii. 20. God first sends to Nebuchadnezzar an alarming dream which confounds his soothsayers, but is explained by Daniel as containing a threatening of madness and deposition if he continue his haughty and tyrannical conduct: and He then inflicts the punishment denounced. By this the monarch is humbled, and brought to acknowledge the supremacy of Jehovah, and he is then restored to his kingdom, and issues an edict in which the whole is narrated. Ver. 37 affords a hope that the proud conqueror whom God had used to humble and chasten Israel, when thus himself humbled and chastened, became a true worshipper of Jehovah.

⁶ Daniel seems to have kept himself aloof from the soothsayers, whose pretensions and artifices he could not countenance.

⁷ Nebuchadnezzar speaks like a polytheist.

⁸ Rather, 'food;' as it should be rendered in almost every instance in which the word 'meat' occurs in the English Bible.

my head upon my bed, and, behold, ^a a watcher¹ and ^b an holy one came down 14 from heaven; he cried aloud, and said thus, ^c Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: ^d let the beasts get away 15 from under it, and the fowls from his branches: nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass,² in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be 16 *with the beasts*³ in the grass of the earth: let his heart be changed⁴ from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven ^e times⁵ pass the word of the holy ones: to the intent⁷ ^f that the living may know ^h that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will,

 and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, ^r and 25 of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the king: That they shall ^u drive¹¹ thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee ^x to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the ¹ That is, 'a watcher [who was] also a holy one.' The word 'watcher' appears to be derived from the doctrines of Parsism; which, throughout this region, were mixed up with the prevailing idolatry, and which taught that there were inferior deities watching over the stars, the world, and the souls of men. The epithet 'holy' is added to distinguish the good class of watchers, the messengers of Ormuzd, from the bad ones, who were supposed to watch for opportunities to do evil, under Ahriman the Evil Genius. See note on Isa. xlv. 7.

² Whether this were a band on the stump to keep it from splitting and decaying, or a fence around it, the signification clearly is, that it should be carefully guarded and preserved.

³ Here is evidently a change from the tree to a person represented by it; and this transition may have particularly awakened the attention and solicitude of the monarch.

⁴ The desires and sympathies of a man, shall be exchanged for the propensities of a beast.

⁵ Many interpreters suppose 'times' to mean 'years,' both here and in ch. vii. 25; xii. 7. But the term is indefinite in itself; and there is not sufficient proof of this particular application to allow us to found anything upon it.

⁶ Or, 'decision.' 'Demand' means 'requirement.'

⁷ To demonstrate the supreme power and unlimited sovereignty of the Most High God over the mightiest potentates.

⁸ Literally, 'the low of men;' a person of humble condition.

⁹ Terrified at the import of the dream.

¹⁰ Rather, 'for an instant.' See ch. iii. 6.

¹¹ Rather, 'thou shalt be driven,' etc.; 'thou shalt be made to eat,' etc.; 'thou shalt be wetted,' etc. The threatening seems to be that, by a Divine visitation for his pride, he should become a maniac (see vers. 34, 36), imagining himself a beast, and constantly endeavouring to act accordingly, by ranging among the animals in the parks connected with the royal residence.

¹² Referring to the Most High, who dwells in heaven. Compare Luke xv. 18.

¹³ Compare Jer. xviii. 7, 8; Jonah iii. 10. Daniel's demeanour on this occasion affords an admirable example of combined faithfulness, courtesy, and generous feeling.

¹⁴ Rather, 'upon.' The flat roofs of Eastern houses are constantly used for walking. See 2 Sam. xi. 2.

¹⁵ Though Nebuchadnezzar was not the founder of Babylon, he had so greatly enlarged and enriched it, that he might naturally say he had built it.

- the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?
- 31 ^s While the word was in the king's mouth,¹ there fell ^h a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; The kingdom is departed
- 32 from thee; and ⁱ they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.
- 33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar: and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.²
- 34 And ^k at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honoured him ^l that liveth for ever, whose dominion is ^m an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation: and ⁿ all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and ^o he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and
- 36 ^p none can stay his hand, or say unto him, ^q What doest thou? At the same time my reason returned unto me; ^r and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me;³ and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was ^s added unto me.
- 37 Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven, ^t all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment: ^u and those that walk in pride he is able to abase.

Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels ^z which his ^a father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem; that the king, and 1 Proving the connection between the crime and the punishment.

2 These words are of course, like those in vers. 11, 12, tinged with Eastern hyperbole. But it seems not unlikely that the king's fancies were gratified as far as was safe; whilst his kingdom was preserved for him when his reason should return. And, though there is no positive information given upon the subject, it seems most probable that the care taken of the king and his empire is to be attributed, in part, to the wisdom and faithfulness of Daniel.

3 They resumed their attendance upon me.

4 The lessons given to Nebuchadnezzar were lost upon his successors, who gave themselves up to voluptuous indulgence. The impious Belshazzar, at one of his feasts, profanes the sacred vessels of Jehovah's temple (vers. 1—4), and thus fills up the measure of his sins. Immediately a Divine hand writes his doom upon the wall of his banquet-house, filling him with alarm, though none of his wise men can interpret the mysterious characters (5—9). At length, through the advice of the queen-mother, Daniel is summoned (10—12); and he reads and explains the terrible sentence (13—29), which is executed the same night (30). The whole chapter impressively illustrates the tendency of sensuality to impiety, and the hopeless ruin which ensues.

5 So contradictory are the statements of profane historians respecting Nebuchadnezzar's successors, that it is unsafe to assert anything respecting them, at present, beyond what is found in the records of Scripture. From these we learn that Belshazzar was a son (i. e. a descendant) of Nebuchadnezzar, that he reigned at least three years, and that he was killed in the night after an impious festival (ch. v. 11, 30; viii. 1). Very recently his name has been deciphered in some inscriptions which have been found at Babylon, from which it is inferred, with some probability, that he was the son of Nabonit (or Labynetus), who is usually regarded as the last king of Babylon; and that he was associated with his father in the kingdom, was left by him to govern and defend the city, and was slain when it was taken by the Medo-Persian forces, whilst Nabonit, who led a Chaldean army to its relief, though defeated, was not killed. If these suppositions be correct, they will remove many difficulties arising from varying accounts of these events.

6 The Babylonians differed from the Persians and other Oriental nations (see Esth. i. 10, 11) in admitting females to their banquets, which became proverbial for their licentiousness (Quint. Curt. v. 1).

7 Rather, 'moment': see note on ch. iii. 6.

8 This supernatural appearance at such a moment might well be regarded as expressing the displeasure of the God of the Hebrews at the desecration of the vessels of his temple; for even the heathen thought it a great impiety to convert sacred things to common uses.

9 The writing being over against the chandelier will be very conspicuous. Some suppose that this was the temple lamp-stand which had been brought from Jerusalem.

10 Literally, 'his brightnesses'; i. e. his bright looks grew pale. The pallor, faintness, trembling, and loud outcry, graphically portray the extreme terror of the conscience-stricken king.

7 loosed, and his ^c knees smote one against another. ^d The king cried aloud to bring in ^e the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spake, and said to the wise men of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing,¹ and show me the interpretation thereof, shall be clothed with scarlet [or, purple], and have a chain of gold about his neck, ^f and shall be the third ruler² in the kingdom. Then came in all the king's wise men: ^g but they could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof. Then was king Belshazzar greatly ^h troubled, and his countenance was changed in him, and his lords were astonished.

10 Now the queen,³ by reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet house: and the queen spake and said, ⁱ O king, live for ever: let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed: ^k there is a man⁴ in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods;⁵ and in the days of thy ^l father light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy father, the king, I say, thy father,⁶ made ^m master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers; ⁿ forasmuch as an excellent spirit, and knowledge, and understanding, interpreting of dreams, and showing of hard sentences, and dissolving of doubts, were found in the same Daniel,^o whom the king named Belteshazzar. Now let Daniel be called, and he will show the interpretation.

13 Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake and said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel, which art of ^p the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my father brought out of ^q Jewry?⁷ I have even heard of thee, that ^r the spirit of the gods is in thee, and that light and understanding and excellent wisdom is found in thee. And now ^s the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof: but they could not show the interpretation of the thing: and I have heard of thee, that thou canst make interpretations, and dissolve doubts: ^t now if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler in the kingdom.

17 Then Daniel answered and said before the king, ^u Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy ^x rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation. O thou king, ^y the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour: and for the majesty that he gave him, ^z all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he set up, and whom he would he put down.

20 ^a But when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened ^b in pride, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him: and he was ^c driven from the sons of men; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; ^d till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will. And thou his son, O Belshazzar, ^e hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this; ^f but hast lifted up thyself⁸ against the Lord of heaven: and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, ^g which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God ^h in whose hand thy breath is, ⁱ and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified. Then was the part of the hand sent from him; and this writing was written.

² If the supposition that Belshazzar was the son and associate of Nabonit be correct (see note on ver. 1), 'the third ruler in the kingdom' would be the next to him in rank.

³ See note on 1 Kings xv. 13. Some suppose 'the queen' to be Nitocris, a woman of great energy and wisdom, mentioned by Herodotus, b. i. c. 185—188.

⁴ Daniel appears always to have avoided connecting himself very closely with the magi; and he probably lost his office as their chief at the death of Nebuchadnezzar; and thus ceased to be connected with the king's court, though employed in some department of the government (ch. viii. 27). It might therefore easily happen that Belshazzar had little or no personal knowledge of him.

⁵ See note on ch. iv. 8.

⁶ This repetition appears to be emphatic, reminding Belshazzar that his royal ancestor Nebuchadnezzar, who was eminently wise and successful, had honoured and trusted Daniel above all his other advisers.

⁷ Or, 'Judea.'

⁸ Nebuchadnezzar's punishment should not only have humbled him, but have instructed his successors. The hard-hearted rejection of this lesson, and of Him who gave it, had led to flagrant impiety, which filled up the measure of Belshazzar's sins. It is to be observed that Daniel does not call him to repent, or hold out to him any hope.

25 And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, 26 UPHARSIN.¹ This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE; ^h God hath 27 numbered thy kingdom,² and finished it. TEKEL; ⁱ Thou art weighed in the 28 balances,³ and art found wanting. PERES; Thy kingdom is divided,⁴ and given to the ^m Medes and ⁿ Persians.

29 Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, ^o that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

30 ^p In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain.

31 ^q And Darius⁵ the Median took the kingdom, being about threescore and two years old.

The conspiracy of the presidents and princes against Daniel, who is cast into a den of lions, and is miraculously preserved.

6 IT⁶ pleased Darius to set ^r over the kingdom⁷ an hundred and twenty princes,
2 which should be over the whole kingdom; and over these three presidents, of 3 whom Daniel was first;⁸ that the princes might give accounts unto them, and 3 the king should have no damage. Then this Daniel was preferred⁹ above the presidents and princes, ^s because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

4 ^t Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; ^u but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch 5 as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him. Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes assembled¹⁰ together to the king, and said
7 thus unto him, ^x King Darius, live for ever. All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, ^y have consulted together to establish¹¹ a royal statute, and to make a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee,¹² 8 O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions. Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the ^z law of the Medes 9 and Persians, which altereth¹³ not. Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree.

10 Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber¹⁴ ^a toward Jerusalem,¹⁵ ^b he kneeled upon his knees ^c three times a day,¹⁶ and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.¹⁷

11 Then these men assembled,¹⁸ and found Daniel praying and making supplication 12 before his God. ^d Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask

5 See notes on ver. 1, and on Ezra i. 1.

6 Under the new dynasty by which the empire of Babylon was overthrown, God again shows the care which he takes of his faithful worshippers; and compels Darius, as he had forced Nebuchadnezzar, to acknowledge his supremacy. Ch. vi. relates Daniel's advancement by Darius (vers. 1-3); the plot formed against him by his envious colleagues, who practise upon the king's vanity with too great success (4-9); his constancy in devotion (10), his impeachment, and exposure to the lions (11-18); his miraculous deliverance (19-23), leading to the punishment of his accusers and the king's confession of Jehovah's power (24-27); and his prosperity in the reigns of Darius and Cyrus (28). Daniel was probably not less than eighty years of age at this time.

7 This may refer only to the kingdom of Babylon.

8 Or, 'was one.'

9 This may mean, that he 'excelled the presidents and princes.' But the probability is, that Daniel was at first appointed one of the three presidents; and then, through his ability and faithfulness, 'was preferred' to be chief, and that Darius designed to make him prime minister of the whole empire. This awakened the jealousy of his colleagues.

10 This word, which recurs in vers. 11, 15, implies eager and even tumultuous haste.

11 That is, to advise the king to establish.

12 This impious claim to Divine honours has often been made by Pagan sovereigns, intoxicated by the possession of extensive authority and the flattery of courtiers. In the present instance, it had the sanction of the religious system of the Persians, which taught its votaries to reverence the king as the personification of Ormuzd.

13 See Esth. viii. 8, and note.

14 Rather, 'upper chamber;' an apartment used for retirement (2 Sam. xviii. 33), and therefore for prayer. See Acts i. 13; x. 9.

15 It was customary with the Jews, in prayer, to turn the face towards Jerusalem, where were the symbols of God's presence and favour towards his people. See 1 Kings viii. 30-48; Ps. v. 7; xxviii. 2; Jonah ii. 4.

16 Probably at the times mentioned in Ps. lv. 17.

17 He made no change in his religious habits on account of the king's decree, though he knew that he exposed himself to the loss of office and dignity, and even to a dreadful death. He presents an instructive example not only of constancy in God's service at all risks, but also of firm avowal of religious principle, as opposed to all subterfuge and concealment.

18 They evidently expected to find Daniel praying.

- a petition of any god or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions?¹ The king answered and said, The thing is true, ^e according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, ^f which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, ^g regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.
- 14 Then the king, when he heard these words, ^h was sore displeased with himself, ² and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured³ till the going down of the sun to deliver him. Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that ⁱ the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed. Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.⁴ ^k And a stone⁵ was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel. Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were instruments of music⁶ brought before him: ^m and his sleep went from him.
- 19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, ⁿ is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions? Then said Daniel unto the king, ^o O king, live for ever.
- 22 ^p My God hath sent his angel, and hath ^q shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: ^r forasmuch as before him innocency⁷ was found in me; ^s and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt. Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, ^t because he believed in his God.
- 24 And the king commanded, ^u and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, ^x their children, and their wives;⁸ and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.
- 25 ^y Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you. ^z I make a decree, that in every dominion of my kingdom men ^a tremble and fear before the God of Daniel;⁹ ^b for he is the living God, ^c and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be ^d destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. ^e He delivereth and rescueth, ^f and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.
- 28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, ^g and in the reign of ^h Cyrus the Persian.¹⁰

Symbolical vision of the four beasts and the judgment.

- 7 IN the first year of Belshazzar¹¹ king of Babylon ⁱ Daniel had a dream and ^h visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

1 Daniel's enemies follow up their plot with skill and determination. They obtain an acknowledgment of the edict from the king; they represent the disregard of it as a personal insult, aggravated by Daniel's condition as a foreign captive; and, when the king hesitates, they vehemently urge the execution of the sentence.

2 Or, 'it sorely displeased him;' i. e. to find that he had been entrapped into issuing an edict which would deprive him of the best of his servants.

3 He tried earnestly to find some expedient, until the evening, beyond which the execution of the penalty could not be delayed.

4 The heathen believed in the interposition of the gods in behalf of their worshippers; and Darius had probably heard of the events recorded in ch. iii.

5 Such stones were generally used for closing caves and sepulchres (Josh. x. 18; John xi. 38, 39), and when fastened, were sometimes sealed (Matt. xxvii. 66). The king's seal kept Daniel's enemies, and the lords' signet his friends, from interfering.

6 The meaning of the Chaldee word here rendered 'instruments of music' has not been precisely ascertained.

7 Daniel was conscious of uprightness before God and man. His disobedience to an impious law he declares to be 'no hurt' or wrong.

8 This extension of punishment to the children and other relatives of criminals was a widely-spread ancient custom. In the Mosaic law there is a merciful provision against it, Deut. xxiv. 16.

9 It is uncertain whether Darius meant that Jehovah should be honoured as the only God, or only that His power and glory should be everywhere revered.

10 So called in distinction from Darius, who was a Mede. Cyrus was of Persian extraction, being of the royal Persian clan of the Achæmenidæ. Daniel certainly lived to the third year of his reign (ch. x. 1).

11 Ch. vii. contains the earliest of Daniel's visions. From the Great Sea, agitated by the four winds, he beholds four beasts arising; the last of which is a terrible monster (vers. 1—8). He sees God in heaven judging and destroying them all (9—12), and giving universal dominion to the glorified Messiah (13, 14). The anxious inquiries

2 Daniel spake and said, I saw¹ in my vision by night, and, behold, 'the four
3 winds of the heaven strove upon² the great sea.³ And four great beasts^m came 4 up⁴ from the sea, diverse one from another. The first wasⁿ like a lion, and had eagle's wings:⁵ I beheld^o till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and^p a man's heart 5 was given to it. And, behold, another beast, a second, like to a bear,⁶ and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between 6 the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, 'Arise, devour much flesh. After this I beheld, and^q lo, another, like a leopard,⁷ which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also 'four heads; and dominion was given 7 to it. After this I saw in the night visions, and, behold, "a fourth beast,⁸ dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was 8 diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns. I considered the horns, and, behold, "there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes^z of man,⁹ and a mouth speaking great things.
9^b I beheld till the thrones were cast down,¹⁰ and^c the Ancient of days¹¹ did sit, whose garment was white as snow,¹² and the hair of his head like the pure wool:¹³
10 his throne was like the fiery flame,¹⁴ and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery which this vision occasions, are met by an explanation, that the four beasts signify four kingdoms, out of the last of which there arises a new dominion more oppressive than any of the preceding; but that they shall all perish, that the Messiah and his saints may reign for ever (15-28). The date of this vision is above forty years after that of Nebuchadnezzar in ch. ii.; but its subject appears to be the same. The different visions of the king and the prophet are adapted to their different characters. Nebuchadnezzar sees the strength and splendour of these kingdoms: Daniel beholds their rapacity, destructiveness, and hostility to God and his people. Taken together, they exhibit the great truth that all human power and glory must perish, if it be not subjected to God's will and service.

1 Chaldee, 'I was seeing;' denoting continued observation.

2 Chaldee, 'rushed to,' or towards.

3 This phrase is always used for the Mediterranean, which formed the western boundary of the Holy Land. And in fact all the empires here symbolized ruled over the countries near the eastern part of this sea.

4 As the prophet observed one of these beasts after another, they were probably successive in their origin. It has always been customary to symbolize kings and kingdoms by different animals. This is very observable in the sculptures at Nineveh, and in the coins of many nations, both ancient and modern.

5 The addition of the eagle's wings to the lion represents ferocious strength widely and rapidly pursuing its victims. The removal of the wings shows either the cessation of conquest or the diminution of the empire; and the change in position and nature to that of man may perhaps indicate the adoption of a milder policy. Almost all expositors refer this symbol to the kingdom of Babylon, which under Nebuchadnezzar was at first remarkable for its irresistible power, and rapid and extensive conquests; but which soon ceased to extend itself by warlike expeditions, and finally, under a succession of inefficient princes, ceased to be formidable.

6 The bear is remarkable for greediness and cunning; and appears here, whilst devouring its prey, to be maintaining an attitude of cautious watchfulness for a fresh victim. It aptly symbolizes the Medo-Persian kingdom, which, at the time of the vision, was watching its opportunity to seize on Babylon, and was soon to be commanded to 'arise and devour,' for the fulfilment of God's purposes against that empire.

7 The leopard, or panther, with four wings, is an emblem of a kingdom not, at first sight, apparently large or strong, though fierce and destructive, but remarkable for the swiftness and extent of its conquests; whilst its four heads probably indicate a division of power. It therefore well agrees with the Macedonian empire under Alexander and his successors, which rose suddenly to power, and conquered Palestine and other countries on the east of the Mediterranean. Some, however, suppose that as the 'four wings' represent extreme rapidity, so the 'four heads' represent power almost universal, extending in all directions; and they therefore understand this symbol as referring to Alexander alone.

8 The prophet found no resemblance between any existing animal and this terrible creature, which surpassed all the preceding in destructive energy; and he was greatly alarmed by its strange appearance with ten horns, iron teeth, and brazen claws, and by the wonderful rise, power, and pretensions of the little horn. Nor were his fears removed (ver. 28) when he learned that this also was a kingdom vastly different from its precursors, and most hostile not only to other earthly powers, but especially to the people of God; who, however, should be delivered, and their oppressor signally punished. What empire is here meant is much disputed. Most commentators hold the fourth beast (like the fourth division of the image in ch. ii.) to be the Roman empire, whose unsparing and all-subduing power is fitly represented by this symbol (see ver. 23): and some of these suppose the ten horns to be ten kingdoms, into which that empire was divided after the irruptions of the northern nations, though they differ in specifying the precise kingdoms.

9 A symbol of intelligence and sagacity (Ezek. i. 18).

10 Rather, 'were placed.' The preparation for judgment is described according to human mode. When Jehovah interposes as the Supreme Ruler or Judge, he is represented in Scripture as if he were attended by the pomp and state of an earthly sovereign. He now summons the four empires to his tribunal; deprives three of them of their dominion, but leaves them to languish; and punishes the fourth with death and ignominy (see Isa. lxvi. 24). This judicial proceeding goes on in heaven, whilst the beasts appear on earth; and when the last has been punished, the Son of man receives the kingdom, which, whatever be its vicissitudes, is never to pass away. It is observable, that the early spread of Christianity was contemporaneous with the decline of the Roman empire; and prophecy leads us to connect the triumphant establishment of the 'kingdom which cannot be moved' with the complete overthrow of all opposing powers.

11 An expression equivalent to the Eternal. The Judge of these transitory monarchies is He whose dominion is 'from everlasting to everlasting.'

12 The royal robe of the Hebrew sovereign was white (see Sol. Song v. 14, and note); perhaps indicating purity and honour.

13 The whiteness, not of age, but of brilliant light.

stream¹ issued and came forth from before him: ^g thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: ^h the judgment 11 was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then because of ⁱ the voice of the great words which the horn spake: ^k I beheld even till the beast was slain, and 12 his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning ^l the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

13 I saw in the night visions, and, behold, ^m one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven,² and came to ⁿ the Ancient of days, and they brought him
 14 near before him. ^o And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all ^p people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is ^q an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.

15 I Daniel ^r was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions 16 of my head troubled me. I came near unto ^s one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the inter-
 17 pretation of the things. ^t These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But ^u the saints of the Most High³ shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

19 Then I would know the truth of ^v the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of 20 brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet; ^w and of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that
 21 spake very great things, ^x whose look was more stout than his fellows. I beheld, ^y and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;
 22 ^z until the Ancient of days came, ^a and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be ^b the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and 24 shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. ^c And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: ^d and another⁴ shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. ^e And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall ^f wear out the saints of the Most High, and ^g think to change times and laws:⁵ and ^h they⁶ shall be
 26 given into his hand ⁱ until a time and times and the dividing of time.⁷ ^m But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and
 27 to destroy it unto the end. And the ⁿ kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the ⁵ That is, interfering with the seasons of worship and the ordinances of religion. This has been repeatedly the practice of the oppressors of God's people.

⁶ That is, the saints of the Most High.

⁷ The plural, 'times,' may probably mean two times; thus the whole will be three times and a half, which most likely is three years and a half. A large class of commentators consider the little horn to mean the Papacy, which grew up among the kingdoms into which the Roman empire was divided; and they take the three times and a half as signifying 1260 years, the commencement of which they date from the establishment of the temporal power of the popes. They understand the 'eyes' and 'mouth' (ver. 8) as referring to the far-seeing policy and blasphemous pretensions of the Roman church, and they apply 'the war against the saints' to the cruel persecutions with which it has always assailed those who reject its supremacy. But some take a different view of the whole of this portion of the prophecy. Those who regard the 'leopard' (ver. 6) as being Alexander of Macedon alone, suppose the fourth beast to signify those kingdoms which arose after his death; they find the ten kings in various Syrian and Egyptian princes, who held or claimed the sovereignty over Palestine before the rise of Antiochus Epiphanes; and they consider the little horn to represent that impious oppressor of God's ancient people, who interrupted the worship of the temple for three years and a half. Others again take the fourth beast, with his ten horns (ver. 7), to be symbols of the different forms of Roman government, which were superseded by the rising power of the Cæsars, who did not venture to assume the title of king, but raised that of emperor above it; and who claimed and received Divine honours. Under them the true Israel suffered severely during the first three centuries of the Christian church; and they inflicted dreadful punishment upon God's ancient people by the destruction of Jerusalem in September A. D. 70, exactly three years and a half after Vespasian's march into Galilee, in the spring of A. D. 67: whilst from nearly the same time began the irruptions of Germans and Parthians, who finally overthrew that mighty empire. These events may be taken to be a partial fulfilment of this prophecy, and to them its numerical details may be particularly applied: at the same time they should be themselves regarded as representing further sufferings of the church, and other judgments on its oppressors, which history records in the past, or which the future may disclose. Another class of commentators, however, are of opinion that the ten kingdoms are still future, and that they shall be succeeded by a tyrannical and atheistic king, who will oppress the saints for three years and a half.

Symbolical vision of the ram and the he-goat; and its interpretation.

8 IN¹ the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me ^s at the first.

2 And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at ^t Shushan² in the palace,³ which is in the province of ^u Elam;⁴ and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.⁵ Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river ^x a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high: but ^y one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last.⁶ I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward;⁷ so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; ^z but he did according to his will, and became great.

5 And as I was considering, behold, ^a an he goat⁸ came from the west⁹ on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground:¹⁰ and the goat had ^b a notable horn between his eyes. And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power. And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was ^c moved with choler against him,¹¹ and smote the ram, and brake his two horns: and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand. Therefore the he goat waxed very great: and when he was strong, the great horn was broken; and for it came up ^d four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven.¹² ^e And out of one of them came forth a little horn,¹³ which waxed exceeding great, ^f toward the south,¹⁴ and toward the east,¹⁵ and toward the ^g pleasant land.¹⁶ ^h And it waxed great, even to [or, against] ⁱ the host of heaven;¹⁷ and ^k it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and ^l stamped upon them. Yea, ^m he magnified himself even to [or, against] ⁿ the prince of the host, ^o and by him¹⁸ ^p the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. 1 Whilst the Babylonian empire is hastening to its fall (ver. 1), Daniel is transported in vision to the capital of the nation by which it is to be overthrown (2); and there beholds a ram, representing the Medo-Persian kingdom (3, 4), and a goat, symbolizing the Græco-Macedonian power under its first head, the 'great horn,' subduing the ram (5—7). Upon the removal of this horn, four spring up, signifying the four monarchies into which his vast empire was divided (8); and from one of these arises a little horn, which becomes exceedingly great, insults God, persecutes his people, and profanes his temple (9—12). The prophet hears the duration of his tyranny declared; and by Divine command he is instructed in the meaning of the vision (13—26). After this he falls sick for some days, but at length returns to his ordinary duties (27).

3 Of the Persian kings.

4 'Elam' is often put for Persia. When this book was completed (ch. i. 21), Elam was a 'province' of the vast empire of Cyrus.

5 The Eukeus, or Choaspes, on the banks of which Susa stood. It is now called Kerah, or Karasu.

6 The Median kingdom was the older, but the Persian became the more mighty, and swallowed up the other.

7 The Persians pushed their conquests chiefly in these directions; comprehending, in the west, Babylonia, Mesopotamia, Syria, Asia Minor; in the north, Colchis, Armenia, Iberia, and the regions round the Caspian Sea; and, in the south, Palestine, Egypt, Ethiopia, and Libya.

8 The goat is said to have been the national emblem of Macedonia. His 'notable (or, conspicuous) horn' is Alexander (ver. 21).

9 That is, from Europe.

10 Alexander's conquests were both extensive and extraordinarily rapid, being completed within twelve years.

11 The Greeks were eager to revenge themselves upon the Persians as their ancient foes, who had made repeated and formidable efforts to subdue them.

12 After some years of contest among Alexander's successors, Cassander obtained the western or European provinces; Lysimachus the northern, on the shores of the Euxine; Seleucus the eastern, including Persia, Babylon, Syria, etc.; and Ptolemy Egypt and the rest of Africa, with Palestine, which, however, was the subject of frequent warfare between the two kingdoms of Syria and Egypt.

13 This 'little horn' is generally thought to be Antiochus Epiphanes; who sprang from one of the four kingdoms into which Alexander's empire was divided, being a successor of Seleucus. But other interpretations are given of it, respecting which see note on ver. 26.

14 Antiochus conquered Egypt 170 B. C. (1 Macc. i. 17—20).

15 Persia, whither he went (1 Macc. iii. 29—37) to replenish his treasury.

16 Rather, 'the glorious land,' i. e. Palestine: see ch. xi. 16, 41; Ezek. xx. 6, 15. Comp. 1 Macc. i. 21, 24.

17 The 'host of heaven' and 'the stars' probably represent the leaders of the Jews, especially the priests. Antiochus, having gained possession of Jerusalem, committed the most cruel and wanton excesses. See 1 Macc. i. 21—64; 2 Macc. ix. 4.

18 Rather, 'from him,' i. e. from the Prince of the host, who is God himself, the Head of the theocracy. Antiochus took away His sacrifices, and desolated His sanctuary.

19 Rather, 'And the host shall be given up, in addition to the perpetual sacrifice, through wickedness; and it (the horn) shall cast down truth to the ground; and it shall do and prosper.' The Jewish leaders were 'given up' to death, and the true worship of the temple was suspended by the 'astonishing' wickedness of Antiochus.

13 Then I heard 'one saint¹ speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long shall be² the vision³ concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation,³ to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, 'Unto two thousand and three hundred days;⁴ then shall the sanctuary be cleansed.⁵

15 And it came to pass, when I, (even I Daniel,) had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then, behold, there stood before me⁶ as the appearance of a man.⁶ And I heard a man's voice⁶ between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, 'Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision. So he came near where I stood: and when he came, I was afraid,⁷ and fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end⁸ shall be the vision. Now as he was speaking with me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: but he touched me, and set me upright. And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be.⁹

20 'The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia. And the rough goat is the king of Grecia:¹⁰ and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king.¹¹ Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power.¹² And in the latter time of their kingdom,¹³ when the transgressors are come to the full,¹⁴ a king¹⁵ of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences,¹⁵ shall stand up. And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power:¹⁶ and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise,¹⁷ and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people.¹⁸ And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by peace¹⁹ shall destroy many: he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes;²⁰ but he shall be broken without hand.²¹ And the vision of the evening and the morning²² which was told is true: wherefore shut thou up the vision;²³ for it shall be for many days.

³ This may mean either, 'the desolating wickedness;' or, 'the astonishing (i. e. horrible) wickedness.'

⁴ Heb., 'evening morning:' comp. Gen. i. 5.

⁵ The sanctuary was cleansed (or vindicated) by Judas Maccabæus, December 25th, 165 B. C. (see 1 Macc. iv. 41—56; 2 Macc. x. 1—5). Taking this event as the close of this period, and reckoning back 2300 days from it, we reach the summer of 171 B. C. as the beginning of the troubles represented in the vision. In that year Menelaus, who had obtained the high priesthood from Antiochus by the promise of a bribe, robbed the temple of a portion of its treasures in order to obtain the means of paying it, and procured the murder of Onias III., the lawful high priest, who had reproved him for this sacrilege. The Jews at Jerusalem, enraged at these crimes, rose against Lysimachus, the Syrian governor, and killed him; and thus brought upon themselves the wrath of Antiochus, who desolated the city, and polluted the temple.

⁶ Evidently an angel in human form: see Gen. xviii. 2; and compare ch. ix. 21; Luke i. 19, where, as in ver. 16, he is named Gabriel, which means 'hero of God.'

⁷ See note on Gen. xv. 12, and compare ver. 18.

⁸ Rather, 'to the time of the end the vision' reaches or refers. By 'the time of the end' may be meant the time of the coming of Messiah, which was to finish the Jewish dispensation, and to introduce 'the last times.' But, as the persecution by Antiochus had passed away long before this, the words may perhaps be better explained by a reference to 'the last end of the indignation' in ver. 19; which seems to mean, that the season of calamity predicted in this vision, as a mark of God's indignation at the sins of the Jews, should close with the vindication of the sanctuary.

⁹ Or, 'for the appointed time there is an end;' these sufferings shall not be perpetual.

¹⁰ Or, 'Javan;' i. e. the Ionians, by which name the Greeks were mostly known in the East. 'King' is put for kingdom: see ch. vii. 17, compared with ch. vii. 23.

¹¹ Alexander was the founder of the Grecian dominion over the Jewish people.

¹² None of Alexander's successors equalled him in power.

¹³ This may mean the time which shortly preceded the absorption of these kingdoms into the Roman empire. Antiochus Epiphanes was, in fact, not independent of the rapidly extending influence of Rome.

¹⁴ When the Jews shall have reached that degree of wickedness which God cannot forbear to punish. Comp. 1 Macc. i. 12. In relation to nations, as well as individuals, God's forbearance has a limit (Gen. xv. 16; Matt. xxiii. 32; 1 Thess. ii. 16).

¹⁵ Rather, 'stratagems.' The whole reign of Antiochus was marked by a combination of cruelty and fraud.

¹⁶ This may allude to the dependence of Antiochus on the power of Rome, or to his reliance upon craft, rather than force, for success. But it may mean that God shall give him his power for the purpose of chastising the Jews.

¹⁷ See note on ver. 12.

¹⁸ Rather, 'the mighty ones, and the people of the saints;' i. e. the princes and the pious among the Jews.

¹⁹ Rather, 'in peace;' i. e. when none suspect him. Comp. Job xv. 21; ch. xi. 21, 24.

²⁰ Against God. See note on ver. 11.

²¹ That is, not by human power, but by God's stroke. See 2 Macc. ix. 4, 5, etc.

²² See ver. 14, and note.

²³ Having written it, seal it up, that it may be preserved (compare Jer. xxxii. 14); for the events are yet distant. The preceding notes have proceeded upon the supposition that vers. 9—12, 23—25, refer to Antiochus, which is the usual, and appears the most natural interpretation of them; though doubtless he is only to be regarded (like Edom in Isa. xxxiv., lxiii.) as a representative of the enemies of the people of God. Jerome, and others of the fathers, considered him to be a type of antichrist. But some apply this portion of the prophecy to the Roman dominion. Others understand it as referring to Mohammed and his followers, who have triumphed and reigned in the regions which formed the scene of the empire, first of Persia, and then of Alexander and his successors; and they consider this little horn to represent the great Eastern apostasy and spiritual tyranny, as distinguished from the Western, which they suppose to be represented by the little horn of the fourth beast in ch. vii. 8.

O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to ⁵ them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments; ^h we have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments: ⁶ neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people ⁷ of the land. O Lord, ^m righteousness belongeth unto thee, ⁿ but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, ^o that are near, and that are far off; through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they ⁸ have trespassed against thee. O Lord, to us belongeth ^p confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. ⁹ ^r To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled ¹⁰ against him; ^r neither have we obeyed the voice of the LORD our God, to walk ¹¹ in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets. Yea, ^s all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice. Therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the ¹² law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him. And he hath ^t confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil: ^x for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem: ^y as it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us. ^z Yet made we not our prayer before the LORD our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy ¹⁴ truth. Therefore hath the LORD ^a watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us: for ^b the LORD our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth: ^c for ¹⁵ we obeyed not his voice.—And now, O Lord our God, ^d that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gotten thee ¹⁶ renown, as at this day; ^f we have sinned, we have done wickedly. O Lord, ^g according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, ^h thy holy mountain: because for our sins, ⁱ and for the iniquities of our fathers, ^k Jerusalem and thy people ^l are become a ¹⁷ reproach to all that are about us.—Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, ^m and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary ⁿ that is desolate, ^o for the Lord's sake. ^p O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, ^q and behold our desolations, and the city ^r which is called by thy name: for we do not present our supplications before thee ^s for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, ¹ In this most interesting chapter, we find Daniel, guided by the prophecies of Jeremiah, looking for the speedy deliverance of Israel (vers. 1, 2), and therefore betaking himself to prayer for the fulfilment of those promises (3). His prayer contains humble confessions of personal and national guilt; with a full justification of God's severe punishments, for the violation of his laws, and the neglect of his warnings (4—14); and earnest pleading for renewed favour, on the ground of God's ancient choice of Israel and former mercies to them (15—19). Whilst he is praying, an angel is commissioned to assure him of acceptance, and to disclose to him the Divine purposes (20—23); which include the restoration of Jerusalem, the coming and the suffering of Messiah, the renewed destruction of the city and temple, and the punishment of the 'desolator' (24—27).

² That is, by the sacred books. Jeremiah had sent a letter to Babylon (ch. xxix.), in which he had been commanded expressly to foretell seventy years from the deportation of Jeconiah as the duration of the captivity of Judah (Jer. xxix. 10). It cannot be doubted that Daniel was well acquainted with this letter, if not with the whole volume of Jeremiah's prophecies. And both his reverence for God's word, and his interest in the destinies of his nation, would combine to fix his thoughts upon this prediction, which now appeared to be so near its accomplishment.

³ This probably means, toward Jerusalem: see note on ch. vi. 10. Daniel well knew that the mercy which God promised to His people must be sought by humiliation and prayer (Ezek. xxxvi. 37).

1 This is an encouraging instance of God's readiness to answer prayer. Comp. Ps. xxxiv. 4; lxxv. 2.

2 See note on ch. viii. 16.

3 Rather, 'being hastened swiftly.'

4 About three o'clock in the afternoon.

5 Or, 'seventy sevens.' Daniel's prayer was founded on the promise respecting the 'seventy years' (Jer. xxix. 10); the answer makes known a period of 'seven times seventy,' or 490 years.

6 'Are decreed respecting thy people,' etc.; i. e. as the period in which these predictions regarding thy people shall be fulfilled.

7 Some commentators apply this verse to the restoration of the people, and the rebuilding of the city, after the exile in Babylon; but most regard it as referring to the coming and work of Messiah. It is not, however, easy to give with certainty the meaning of each clause. Perhaps the best translation is, 'to shut up the transgression, and to seal up the sins; and to expiate iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness; and to seal up vision and prophet, and to anoint the holy of holies.' That is, within this period the sins of thy people shall come to the full; the great work by which sin shall be expiated and man be saved shall be accomplished; prophecy shall have obtained its fulfilment, and the true temple of God shall be consecrated. Whether this temple is Christ (John ii. 19, 21), or the church (Eph. ii. 21), or heaven, where the great High Priest ministers (Heb. ix. 24), it is not easy, nor perhaps important to decide.

8 Though Cyrus had been foretold as the rebuilder of Jerusalem (Isa. xlv. 28), yet the period here spoken of cannot be reckoned either from his decree, or from its subsequent confirmation by Darius Hystaspis; for this reckoning would not bring us to any historical event of importance. But in the reign of Artaxerxes, there were two different decrees, one given to Ezra (Ezra vii. 12), and the other to Nehemiah (Neh. ii. 8). The chronology of this reign is not perfectly settled; but, upon any supposition, a period of 'seven sevens,' or 49 years, reckoned from one of these decrees, includes the building of the city and its defences 'in straitness of times,' and brings us to the close of Nehemiah's administration in 405 B. C.: see Neh. iii.—vi.; xii. 27, and note; xiii. 6, and note. And another period of 'sixty-two sevens,' or 434 years, reaches to A. D. 29, the time of our Lord's suffering.

9 Rather, 'an Anointed One, a Prince.' The temple and city were rebuilt; but for many ages there was no prince of the royal house anointed as king of Israel. The first lawful claimant of this title was Jesus; and his claim was made the legal ground of his crucifixion (Matt. xxvii. 11, 28, 29, 37; Luke xxiii. 2; John xix. 12—15); but was evidently acknowledged by God, who raised him from the dead (Rom. i. 3, 4).

10 Or, 'and nothing for him.' As the subject is the restoration of the anointed royalty and its cutting off, the meaning may be either that the Jewish people shall utterly disown His sovereignty (John i. 11), or that he shall have no heir or successor, or perhaps no help or deliverance (Matt. xxvii. 42; John xvi. 32).

11 The application of this passage to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans under Titus, is not only probable in itself, but appears to be sanctioned by our Lord's quotation from the next verse in Matt. xxiv. 15.

12 Heb., 'his end;' either the end which the prince will bring on the city and sanctuary, or the end or completion of this prophecy.

13 Rather, 'and unto the end [will be] war, a determined measure of desolations.' See Matt. xxiv. 21, 22; Luke xxi. 22—24.

14 Rather, 'a covenant.' This verse refers to the history of the one 'seven' of years which completes the 'seventy sevens.' But the application of it is attended with great difficulties. Some think that the sixty-two sevens closed with the commencement of our Lord's public ministry; and that the event here foretold as occurring in the midst of this seven is the death of our Lord (which took place about 3½ years after his first public appearance), when, by the offering of himself, he caused sacrifice to cease, and ratified the covenant of peace. But to this view it is objected that the other 3½ years which must be added, do not bring the whole 490 years to an end at any remarkable epoch; for the 'consummation' did not arrive for many years. Others suppose that the coming of the desolating nation was to precede the commencement of this last period; and they think that this 'seven' was occupied with the war which led to the fall of Jerusalem, 'in the midst' of which the sacrifice was to cease, the rest being spent in completing the subjugation of the country by the Romans. A third class of expositors regard this period as entirely future. And a fourth put it in the middle of the 62 sevens, applying it to the tyranny and overthrow of Antiochus. Perhaps the second is the best interpretation.

^fabominations he shall make it desolate,¹ ^geven until the consummation,^h and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate² [or, upon the desolator].

Daniel's vision of the angel, with the revelations communicated by him.

10 IN³ the third year of Cyrus⁴ king of Persia a thing was revealed unto Daniel,ⁱ whose name was called Belteshazzar;^k and the thing was true,^l but the time appointed was long:⁵ and ^mhe understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision. In those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks

2 [Heb. weeks of days]. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, ⁿneither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled.

4 And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is ^oHiddekel;⁶ then ^pI lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, ^qbehold, a certain man⁷ clothed in linen,⁸ whose loins were ^rgirded with 7 And I Daniel ^aalone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

8 Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision,^b and there remained no strength in me:¹² for my ^ccomeliness was turned in me into corruption,¹³ and I retained

9 no strength. Yet heard I the voice of his words: ^dand when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

1 Rather, 'and over (or because of) the wing of abominations [shall be] a desolation.' The 'wing' is supposed by some to be a pinnacle of the temple, which should be profaned by the presence of idols; by others it is referred to the eagles of the Roman army, which are called 'abominations' because they were worshipped by the soldiers.

2 If this rendering is correct, the prophecy ends with the destruction of Jerusalem. But if the last word be translated 'desolator,' then it intimates that this future enemy of Israel, after being used by God as the instrument of his justice, shall himself be punished. Comp. Isa. x. 7, and note.

3 Chapters x.—xii. contain one prophetic vision. The prophet, after fasting for three weeks (ch. x. 1—3), beholds an angel, whose appearance he describes (4—6). He is overwhelmed with terror; which the angel gradually dispels (7—19), and then communicates many particulars respecting the people of God (20, 21; xi. 1—45; xii. 1—3), bidding Daniel carefully to preserve the whole (xii. 4). The prophet hears the duration of these events; and is taught the practical bearing of the prophecy, and cheered with assurance of his own safety and happiness (5—13).

4 See note on ch. i. 21. This vision appears to have followed a fast of three weeks (see vers. 2, 3), with which the prophet had begun the year, probably on account of the condition of his people, whose efforts to rebuild their temple were for a time successfully opposed by their enemies. See Ezra iv. 5.

5 Rather, 'the warfare great:' see note on Job vii. 1. This may mean that the vision related to a severe contest; or that it occasioned Daniel great distress of mind (vers. 8—17), before he could listen to the message and understand it. In the latter case the suffering would help to convince him that the vision was 'true.'

6 The Tigris. Daniel had probably now ceased to reside at court, and taken up his abode among some of his people, near this river.

7 See note on ch. viii. 15.

8 White linen was an emblem of purity (Rev. vii. 14;

xix. 8), and was therefore appointed to be worn by the priests (Lev. vi. 10; Ezek. xlv. 17, 18). Hence the seven ministers of God's punitive justice appear clothed in it (Rev. xv. 6).

9 See note on Jer. x. 9. Girdles in the East are richly decorated with gold and jewels. See notes on Sol. Song vii. 2; and compare with the whole description Rev. i. 13—16.

10 See note on Ezek. i. 16.

11 That is, terribly loud. This made Daniel's companions flee in alarm.

12 See notes on Gen. xv. 12; ch. viii. 17; and compare Rev. i. 17. Man in his present state, unless Divinely strengthened (vers. 10, 16), is unable to endure such supernatural displays of glory and power.

13 The bright looks of health were changed for the paleness of death.

14 Rather, 'which placed me tottering upon my knees and the palms of my hands.' So great was Daniel's alarm, that, though thus supported, he trembled.

15 These words are probably intended to connect the present vision with his former prayers (ch. ix.), as well as his recent fast. In all he had but one object, the honour of God in Israel's prosperity. And his perseverance in prayer obtained for him these fuller and brighter disclosures, which contain far more encouragement than the preceding.

16 The interference of Michael, here called 'one of the chief princes' and prince of Israel (ver. 21), and elsewhere 'the archangel' (Jude 9), appears to lead to the conclusion that 'the prince of Persia' and 'the prince of Grecia' represent superhuman beings acting as patrons of those nations, and devoted to their particular interests. Most commentators suppose this passage to contain an intimation of the existence of tutelary angels, good and bad: but some regard it as a figurative representation of the Divine government, by a mode of speaking derived from the provincial satrapies of the Persian monarch. Compare 1 Kings xxii. 19; Job i. 6, and notes.

chief princes,¹ came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia.²
 14 Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people³ in the latter days:⁴ for yet the vision is for many days.
 15 And when he had spoken such words unto me,⁵ I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb. And, behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men⁶ touched my lips.⁷ Then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision⁸ my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength. For how can the servant of this my lord⁹ talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway¹⁰ there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me.
 18 Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me,¹¹ and said, O man greatly beloved,¹² fear not: peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me.
 20 Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I come unto thee? and now¹³ will I return¹⁴ to fight¹⁵ with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come.¹⁶ But I will show thee that which is noted in the scripture of truth.¹⁷ And there is none that holdeth with me in these things¹⁸
 11¹⁹ but Michael your prince. Also I²⁰ in the first year of²¹ Darius the Mede,²² even I, stood to confirm and to strengthen him.²³
 2 And now will I show thee the truth. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings²⁴ in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all: and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia.
 3 And a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and
 4 do according to his will. c And when he shall stand up, f his kingdom shall be broken,²⁵ and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity, g nor according to his dominion²⁶ which he ruled: for his kingdom shall be plucked up,²⁷ even for others beside those.²⁸
 5 And h the king of the south²⁹ shall be strong, and one of his princes;³⁰ and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion; his dominion shall be a great
 6 dominion. And in the end of years³¹ they shall join themselves together; for the king's daughter of the south shall come to i the king of the north to make an agreement:³² but she shall not retain the power of the arm;³³ neither shall he³⁴ stand, nor his arm: but she shall be given up, and they that brought her,

¹ That is, of the angels. 'Michael' (meaning, Who like God?) always appears as the leader and patron either of ancient Israel (as here and in ver. 21; ch. xii. 1; and Jude 9); or of the true Israel (as in Rev. xii. 7). He is supposed by some to be the Son of God; but is more probably one of the highest created spirits. Compare Rom. viii. 38; 1 Thess. iv. 16; Rev. viii. 2.

² Some render this clause, 'Then obtained I the victory with the kings of Persia.' It is clear, however, that the contest was not yet ended (ver. 20).

³ This may mean, in future times.

⁴ Probably the angel who had spoken to him before, and who speaks again (ver. 18). He appears now as a man, without majesty and that splendour which had appalled the prophet.

⁵ See notes on Isa. vi. 6, 7.

⁶ That is, 'I'; an expression of humility.

⁷ As soon as he had made the promised discoveries, which occupy chapters xi., xii.

⁸ The patron of 'Javan' or Greece (see ch. viii. 21) will need the same vigilance, as he is not friendly to the interests of Israel (ver. 21).

⁹ A figure for the unalterable and certain decrees of God. Comp. Ps. cxxxix. 16.

¹⁰ Rather, 'and there is not one strengthening himself with me against these,' etc. This clearly teaches the prophet not to trust in the apparently favourable dispositions of princes or dynasties, but to look to God alone for the protection of his people.

¹¹ See note on Ezra i. 1.

¹² This may apply to Darius, whose good feeling towards Daniel (ch. vi. 3) and the Jews, had required to be confirmed; or to Michael, in which case it forcibly represents the importance of all those agencies which God employs for the deliverance of his people.

¹³ The three being Cambyses, Smerdis, and Darius Hystaspis; and the fourth Xerxes, who invaded Greece with a vast army (Herod. b. vii., viii., ix.), and thus led to the overthrow of the Persian empire by the 'mighty king,' Alexander (ver. 3).

¹⁴ See ch. viii. 8, and note.

¹⁵ None of Alexander's successors obtained an empire so extensive as his.

¹⁶ By his death, which brought to an end the kingdom which he founded and sustained.

¹⁹ This probably means, either one of Alexander's princes, or one of Ptolemy's. Seleucus Nicator, who founded the kingdom of Syria, had been a governor under Ptolemy; and his kingdom became by far the largest and mightiest of the new monarchies, comprising all the eastern provinces of the empire.

²⁰ That is, after some time. The prophecy appears to pass on to the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus and Antiochus Theos. In order to end the wars between these kingdoms, Ptolemy gave his daughter Berenice in marriage to Antiochus; who for this purpose divorced his wife Laodice, and excluded her children from the succession. But Antiochus soon afterwards restored Laodice; who then poisoned him, that her son Seleucus Callinicus might reign. By the order of Seleucus, Berenice was put to death.

²¹ To make things 'straight'; i. e. to make peace.

²² That is, her strength, or influence.

²³ That is, the king of the south and his power.

But out of a branch of her roots² shall one stand up in his estate [or, in his place, or, office^k], which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail: and shall also carry captives into Egypt their gods, with their princes, and with their precious vessels of silver and of gold; and he shall continue more years than the king of the north. So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land.

1 Some, by a slight change, render it 'her child,' who in fact was put to death with her. But, as the text stands, it refers to her father; whose death, though not violent, was the beginning of her downfall.

2 One who sprang from the same root as Berenice. Her brother Ptolemy Euergetes avenged her death, by slaying Laodice, and overrunning Syria and Cilicia with an army, taking the 'fortresses,' and carrying off an enormous booty. See Polybius, l. 5.

3 The sons of the king of Syria were Seleucus Ceraunus (who soon died), and Antiochus the Great, who then carried on the war alone. Vers. 10—19 appear to contain the prophetic history of Antiochus. He took Coele-Syria and Palestine, but was defeated before Raphia by Ptolemy Philopator (11); who, elated by his victory, failed to push his advantage (12), so that Antiochus, fourteen years afterwards, regained the country (13), during the minority of Ptolemy Epiphanes. Being aided by other enemies of the young king, and by a party among the Jews (14), he took Sidon, defeated the choicest Egyptian troops (15), obtained complete possession of Palestine (16), and hoped to get Egypt under his control by means of a marriage between Ptolemy and his daughter Cleopatra (17). But this princess took her husband's part; and the Roman general Scipio soon stripped Antiochus of his conquests in the Grecian isles, and covered his arms with disgrace (18). At last he perished in an attempt to plunder a temple at Elymais (19).

4 Perhaps put collectively for 'fortresses;' or referring to the fortress of Raphia, on the borders of Egypt.

5 Or, 'and the multitude (i. e. of the Egyptian army) shall be elated.'

6 Or, 'the violent.' This marks disapprobation of their conduct; which, though it led to the fulfilment of prophecy, failed to realize their hopes of obtaining independence.

7 Rather, 'and it shall be altogether in his hand.' Comp. Gen. xviii. 21.

8 If this rendering is correct, the name is merely a designation of the Jews. But some translate the passage, 'and he shall make treaties with him.'

9 This may either mean Cleopatra, whom her father instructed to betray the interests of her husband; or it may be rendered 'destroying it,' i. e. Egypt, the government of which Antiochus subjected to his own interests.

10 Rather, 'and a general shall cause his reproach against him to cease, beside that he shall turn his reproach upon himself.' Antiochus dishonoured the Roman arms by invading their allies; Scipio not only wiped off that disgrace, but inflicted upon Antiochus one more severe.

11 Rather, 'fortresses.'

12 That is, as his successor. A brief reference is made to Seleucus Philopator, who was poisoned after a short reign, chiefly distinguished by the taxes which he imposed for the purpose of paying tribute to the Romans (ver. 20); and then the prophecy appears to describe at length the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes. This despicable man obtained the throne by fraud (21), carried on war successfully against Ptolemy Philometor in violation of solemn treaties (22), entered Egypt stealthily with a small army, and subdued and plundered the country, defeating his enemy by craft and treachery (23—27); then returning through Judea, he commenced hostilities against the Jews and their religion (28). Attacking Egypt again, he was compelled by the Romans to retire, and vented his rage upon the Jews, being aided by some apostates (29, 30). By his general Apollonius, he interdicted the sacrifices, and placed the statue of Jupiter in the sanctuary; he gained a party among the Jews, but only aroused the faithful to greater zeal in teaching the people, and in suffering for the truth; so that, though

21 within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle. And in his estate [or, in his place] ^c shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain
 22 the kingdom by flatteries. ^d And with the arms of a flood¹ shall they be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken; ^e yea, also the prince of the covenant.²
 23 ^f And after the league made with him ^g he shall work deceitfully: for he shall 24 come up, and shall become strong with a small people. ^h He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea, and he shall forecast his devices against the few in number, and hindered by faithless adherents and by their own weakness, they endured till the end of the appointed time of trial (31—35). His arbitrary impiety is then displayed (36—39), and the circumstances of his last wars and death are foretold (40—45). Some expositors, however, do not agree in applying vers. 31—45 to Antiochus; but consider that there is here a transition to other subjects, respecting which see note 10 below.

1 That is, by hosts of armed men. Comp. Isa. viii. 8.

2 Or, 'a prince of treaty;' i. e. bound to him by treaty.

3 Each party aiming to deceive the other by an appearance of friendship.

4 This perhaps refers to the scheme of Antiochus to obtain possession of the whole of Egypt; in which Ptolemy, from the hope of advantage to himself, or to his country, concurred. But this was not accomplished. Antiochus left Egypt, and attacked Jerusalem.

5 All these intrigues shall not accomplish the objects of the kings, but in God's time they shall subserve His purposes.

6 Rather, 'He shall accomplish his purpose.' Antiochus took Jerusalem, and ravaged it, and entered and polluted the temple (2 Macc. v. 15—21; 1 Macc. i. 21—28).

7 Rather, 'but it shall not be as the former, so also the latter' time; i. e. the latter invasion shall not be successful like the former.

8 See note on Numb. xxiv. 24. Ptolemy obtained the aid of the Romans, who imperiously required Antiochus to retire from Egypt.

9 Or, 'disheartened;' i. e. afraid.

10 Many expositors apply the remainder of the prophecy to later events. They interpret ver. 31 as a prediction of the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus; and vers. 32—35 as foretelling the state of the church till the rise of 'the wilful king' (ver. 36). Some think this king to be the papacy. Others take it to mean Mahomet and his successors, who have reigned over these Eastern regions as military and religious sovereigns; and they regard vers. 40—45 as having reference to events still future. Others think the whole of this portion to refer to the future, and expect a personal Antichrist, at once infidel and superstitious. It has been stated (see note on ch. viii. 26) that Jerome and other ancient commentators regarded Antiochus as a type of Antichrist; and perhaps the correct opinion is, that that cruel persecutor of the Jews is here primarily spoken of, but that he is introduced as representing other worldly powers which set themselves against 'the Israel of God.' See notes on Ezek. xxxviii. 1, 2.

11 'And arms (i. e. forces, vers. 6, 11) from him shall stand up, and shall profane the sanctuary, the fortress,' etc. The temple itself was fortified, as well as the city.

12 Compare 1 Macc. i. 57.

13 This probably refers to Mattathias and his sons and followers, the history of whose labours and sufferings is found in 1 Maccabees. See also sketch of the history of the Jews between the Old and New Testaments, at the end of the Old Testament.

14 'To make trial among them, and to purify and to make white' (or clean). Suffering tends both to test and to sanctify; and when it has fulfilled its design, its 'end' may be looked for with cheerfulness.

15 The Romans checked the ambitious projects of Antiochus, but not his arbitrary despotism; so that he interfered with the religion as well as the civil rights of his subjects.

37 that is determined shall be done.¹ Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers,² nor the desire of women,³ nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all. But in his estate⁴ shall he honour the god of forces:⁵ and a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold, and silver, and precious stones, and pleasant things. Thus shall he do in the most strong holds with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain.⁶

40 And at the time of the end⁷ shall the king of the south push at him: and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over. He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries: and the land of Egypt shall not escape.

43 But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and the Libyans⁸ and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps.⁹ But tidings out of the east and out of the north¹⁰ shall trouble him: therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

45 And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palaces¹¹ between the seas¹² in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

12 And at that time¹³ shall Michael¹⁴ stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book.¹⁵ And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

3 And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

² Men are commonly held to that worship which was observed by their ancestors; but Antiochus was under none of the restraints by which men are usually influenced. See note on ver. 36; Jer. ii. 10, 11; Mic. iv. 5. It was Jupiter Capitolinus, and not, as might have been expected, the god of his fathers, whose image he placed in the temple at Jerusalem. The language here used appears intended to denote great infidelity and impiety.

³ That is, the object of their desire. Some refer this to their children, and understand it as a charge of cruelty against the tyrant; others to the Messiah, comparing Hag. ii. 7. But it may refer to an idol, 'the queen of heaven,' to whose worship the Syrian women were devoted: see Jer. vii. 18; xlv. 17, and notes. The Græco-Syrian monarchs had adopted the Eastern deities, Baal and Ashtoreth; but Antiochus regarded not 'the god of his fathers,' nor 'any god,' even 'the God of gods,' but aimed to establish the worship of the Roman Jupiter.

⁴ Or, 'in his stead,' i. e. instead of another god.

⁵ Or, 'of fortresses.' Some suppose this to be a Syrian deity which Antiochus obtruded upon the Jews; and others a personification of force or power, which alone the tyrant honoured. But it probably means Jupiter Capitolinus, whose worship Antiochus introduced from Rome and enforced in Syria, and even in Judea, where he placed his statue and altar in the temple. See Livy, lxii. 6; xli. 20; 1 Macc. i. 39. 62.

⁶ Or, 'and he does [his will] to fenced fortresses with a strange god; whoever acknowledges him he will greatly honour, and cause them to rule over many, and will divide the land for a reward.' Regarding his foreign god as the author of his successes, he will honour those who worship it.

⁷ This is apparently the end either of this tyrant's reign, or of these appointed trials; and these nearly coincide. In the imperfect histories that we have of Antiochus there is no account of another war with Egypt; but Porphyry asserts the circumstantial agreement of all this description with the facts of the history, and Jerome quotes his assertion without questioning it. Some regard vers. 40—45 as a summary of the events of his reign, viewed in relation to its close.

⁸ The Libyans were almost always connected with Egypt by subjection or alliance: see 2 Chron. xii. 3, and note.

⁹ That is, they shall follow him as his subjects.

¹⁰ The Parthians on the east (Tacit. Hist. v. 8) and the Armenians on the north (Appian, 45) assailed the dominions of Antiochus, and compelled him to return (1 Macc. iii. 27—37).

¹² Some think 'the seas' to mean the Caspian Sea and the Persian Gulf, where Antiochus is said to have attempted to plunder a 'holy' place in Elymais. But the clause may be better rendered, 'between the seas and the beautiful holy mountain' (i. e. between the Mediterranean and Jerusalem); where he probably halted on his way to the north, and whence he despatched Lysias with a large force to oppose the Maccabees. Soon after this, the vexation caused by his various difficulties brought on, or aggravated, a painful disease, of which he died.

¹³ When God's people are oppressed, their guardian shall interpose; but in the efforts for their freedom there shall be a struggle and suffering of unexampled severity. Yet there shall be a glorious deliverance and resurrection, in which those who were their faithful leaders and teachers in their time of depression shall have the highest honour (vers. 1—3). For use in that time this vision is to be preserved (4).

¹⁴ See notes on ch. x. 13.

¹⁵ The book of the Divine purposes (ch. x. 21).

¹⁶ These words undoubtedly refer to the final resurrection of the just and the unjust; but it is a question whether that event forms part of the prophetic announcement, or is alluded to only as an illustration of a national revival, as in Isa. xxvi. 19; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14 (on which see notes). The former view is taken by those who apply the latter part of the prophecy to the future; the latter by those who refer the whole to the time of Antiochus. If Antiochus be a representative of the enemies of the church, these verses will apply to its resuscitation after it had appeared to be extinct, and to the final glory of the faithful and the shame of apostates.

- 4 'But thou, O Daniel, "shut up the words, and seal the book,¹ even to ^x the time of the end: many shall run to and fro,² and knowledge shall be increased.

2 This perhaps refers primarily to the extensive diffusion of religious truth by the Jewish people before the coming of Christ. If these prophecies may be applied to the times of the gospel, this passage may intimate that zealous missionary effort will distinguish that period of the church which precedes its highest glory.

3 That is, two angels.

4 These solemnities of asseveration indicate at once the importance and the certainty of the announcement.

5 See notes on ch. vii. 24—28.

6 When for 'a time, times, and half a time' the power of God's people has been broken, then this vision shall be completed. Such was the case under the persecutions of Antiochus. But some think that this refers to a future period: see note on ch. xi. 31.

7 As these prophecies have been so variously interpreted, notwithstanding all the light of subsequent events and revelations, it is not surprising that they were mysterious to Daniel.

8 Make no further inquiry; the prophetic communication is now completed. Look rather to the practical end of all, the purifying and instructing of those who are willing to learn.

9 Humble and sincere piety is the best preparative for understanding Divine truth. See John vii. 17.

10 It is clear from these words that some forcible interruption of the temple-service is the date from which the 1290 days begin. This period is supposed by some to be the space of time between the issuing of the command of Antiochus to rifle and pollute the temple, and the restoration of its sacred rites by Judas Maccabeus. Others think that these 'days' signify years, and apply the predictions to the papacy, or to Mahomedanism.

11 A further addition is here made of 45 days; closing with a happy consummation, in which he who shall reach it will be blessed, for the long struggle shall have passed completely away.

12 With this cheering assurance of his personal acceptance and everlasting safety and happiness, the prophet is dismissed from the contemplation of the destinies of the people of God.

HOSEA.

THE book of Hosea and the eleven which follow were anciently collected together, under the title of 'The Book of the Twelve Prophets.' These were called the minor or lesser prophets, simply because their writings were shorter than those of the other four. They are not placed in chronological order; but Hosea stands first, probably because his book is the longest of those which were written before the captivity. Nine of them prophesied before the exile; three after the Jews returned from Babylon; and some of the former were as early, or earlier, than the prophet Isaiah.

Hosea is supposed to have been a native and inhabitant of the kingdom of Israel. He prophesied during the turbulent reigns of the last six or seven of its kings, viz. from Jeroboam II. to Hoshea; a period of about sixty years. He was contemporary with Isaiah, Joel, Micah, and Amos; and, like the last, directed his prophecies chiefly to the kingdom of the ten tribes, whom he addressed by the names of 'Israel' and 'Ephraim.'

When Hosea's ministry began, the kingdom of Israel was apparently strong and wealthy, under the vigorous and successful government of Jeroboam II.; but it rapidly passed into a state of anarchy and ruin. Four successive kings were assassinated by conspirators; and one military chief after another took possession of the throne.

The moral and religious condition of the Israelites at this time was very corrupt. Every description of crime prevailed (ch. iv. 2). The kings and princes were murderers and profligates (ch. vii. 3—7); the idolatrous priests had spread their shameful festivals and their deceitful oracles all over the land (ch. iv. 12—14; xiii. 2); the great parties in the State resorted for help sometimes to Assyria, at other times to Egypt (2 Kings xv. 19; xvii. 4), while the whole nation relied entirely upon an arm of flesh (ch. v. 13; vii. 8—12; viii. 9, 10; x. 13, etc.): worldly and sinful objects were pursued with the same eagerness by Ephraim as by Canaan (ch. xii. 7, 8); a listless security blinded all minds (ch. v. 5; xiii. 6) giving place in the moment of danger to a repentance merely of the lips (ch. vii. 16); and, what was the root of all the other evils, God and his word were forgotten (ch. iv. 1—6; viii. 12).

Considering the long period through which the ministry of Hosea extended, it may appear surprising that his prophetic writings are comprised within so small a compass. But it must be remembered, that there is no reason to suppose that this or any other of the prophetic books contains all the Divine messages of the prophets whose names they bear. Such portions only of their inspired communications are recorded as the Holy Spirit saw fit to preserve for the benefit of their own and of future ages.

The language of Hosea is to us obscure and difficult to be understood. His style is very concise, sententious, and abrupt, abounding with figures and metaphors, which are often much intermixed; and the transitions from one subject and one figure to another are frequent and sudden. But some parts of his prophecies are peculiarly pathetic, animated, and sublime. The particular occasions on which they were delivered are not specified; nor are they in themselves very obvious from any internal evidence. The most probable inferences that can be drawn on this point will be found in the notes.

The principal subjects of this, as of most of the other prophetic books, are God's choice of the Hebrews from among the nations, that he might make with them an everlasting covenant; the chastisements which they brought upon themselves by their rebellions, ending in their captivity and temporary rejection; the mercy to be manifested in their wonderful deliverance; and the blessings which God designed to bestow upon them and upon the whole world in future times.

The book may be divided into two parts, comprising, I. Symbolical representations (ch. i.—iii.); and, II. Prophetic discourses (ch. iv.—xiv.)

I. The first part gives a figurative representation of the past, present, and future history of the people of God. It describes their privileges, their shameful infidelity to God, their chastisement and rejection, the conversion of the Gentiles, and the future repentance and restoration of Israel. These three chapters are an abridgment of the whole book: and the gracious promises which they contain, and which are not noticed in the seven following chapters, reappear in the eleventh, and close the book.

II. In the second part, containing several prophetic discourses delivered at different times, the things which have been before revealed under a symbolical form are further illustrated and enforced. It begins with rebukes and threatenings, which present to view in the foreground approaching calamities; but by degrees the horizon becomes clear, and the glory of the latter time shines forth with unclouded lustre.

God reproves the shameful idolatry of the Israelites: but gives them hope of mercy.

- 3 So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim; ³ which conceived, and

1 To expose the idolatrous excesses of the Israelites, the prophet is ordered to take to wife an unchaste woman (see next note); and, in token of God's intention to avenge the blood shed by Jehu and others in Jezreel, to call the first child she should bear by the name of that place (vers. 2—5). To two subsequent children he is commanded to give names expressive of God's alienation from the people, and of his purpose to reject them (6—9). Yet the time will come when God will restore the people to the enjoyment of his favour, with its attendant blessings (10, 11; ii. 1).

2 This expression probably refers to the character of the woman, whose children were consequently spurious. But it may also mean that the children became as depraved as their mother. The intention clearly is to exhibit in the strongest light the unfaithfulness of the people of Israel to the covenant of Jehovah. See Pref. to Sol. Song. But it has been much questioned whether all this is a parable, or a description of a vision, or a narrative of actual occurrences. That the prophets did sometimes perform actions which were intended to make their instructions more impressive is certain. But there are very serious difficulties in so understanding this passage. As Calvin well observes, such an act as is here described would tend to make the prophet contemptible in the eyes of those whom he was sent to instruct. It is evident also that the whole would require such a length of time as greatly to weaken, if not entirely to destroy, the designed effect. It appears, therefore, better to suppose that this was either a parable, or (which is more probable) a prophetic vision.

3 The names 'Gomer' signifying consummation, and

'Diblaim' meaning cakes of preserved figs (which were deemed a luxury in the East), are probably chosen to intimate the consummate wickedness of the people, and their devotedness to the sensual gratifications which accompanied the practice of idolatry.

4 The name 'Jezreel' appears to be selected partly on account of the historical associations connected with the city (see next note); and partly because of its etymological meaning, 'God will sow.' It may thus be both symbolical (vers. 4, 5) and prophetic (ch. ii. 23).

5 Jezreel was a royal residence in the great plain of Jezreel, and at the head of the valley which bears the same name. See ver. 5, and note on 1 Sam. xxviii. 4. The city was implicated in the murder of Naboth and his sons (1 Kings xxi.), and the punishment of Ahab in his posterity (2 Kings ix. 21—37; x. 11) by Jehu; who shall now in his turn be punished in his descendants, for he acted not from a desire to serve and honour God, but solely under the promptings of a selfish ambition, as he showed by maintaining Jeroboam's image-worship. This threatening was uttered during the reign of Jeroboam II. (the grandson of Jehu); and it was executed in the days of his son. See 2 Kings xv. 10—12. After that time, there was no regular succession of kings, but alternate anarchy and military usurpation.

6 Perhaps referring to the defeat of Saul in this neighbourhood, recorded in 1 Sam. xxxi.: see note on 2 Sam. i. 17. Some have supposed that the Assyrians defeated Hoshea in the valley of Jezreel before they besieged Samaria. But we have no record of such an event.

8, 9 Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son. Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi [i. e. Not my people]: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.¹ Yet ^m the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea,² which cannot be measured nor numbered; ⁿ and it shall come to pass, that in the place where [or, instead of that] it was said unto them, ^o Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are ^p the sons of the living God.³ ^q Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head,⁴ and they shall ² come up⁵ out of the land: ^r for great shall be the day of Jezreel.⁶ ^s Say ye⁷ unto your brethren, Ammi [i. e. My people]; and to your sisters, Ruhamah [i. e. Having obtained mercy].

God pleads with and threatens his people; but promises to pardon them.

2 ^t 'PLEAD⁸ with your mother,⁹ plead:
For¹⁰ ^u she is not my wife,—neither am I her husband:
Let her therefore put away her ^x whoredoms out of her sight,¹¹
And her adulteries from between her breasts;
3 Lest ^y I strip her naked,—and set her as in the day that she was ^z born,
And make her ^a as a wilderness, and set her like a dry land,
And slay her with ^b thirst.¹²
4 ^c And I will not have mercy upon her children;
For they be the ^d children of whoredoms.¹³
5 ^e For their mother hath played the harlot:
She that conceived them ^f hath done shamefully.
For she said, ^g I will go after my lovers,¹⁴
^h That give me my bread and my water,
My wool and my flax, mine oil and my drink.
6 Therefore, behold, ⁱ I will hedge up thy way with thorns,
And make a wall, that she shall not find her paths.¹⁵
7 And ^k she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them;
And she shall seek them, but shall not find them.
Then shall she say, ^l I will go and return to my ^m first husband;
ⁿ For then was it better with me than now.
8 For she did not ^o know that ^p I gave her corn, and wine, and oil,
And multiplied her silver and gold,—^q which they prepared for Baal.¹⁶
9 Therefore will I return, and ^r take away my corn in the time thereof,
And my wine in the season thereof,¹⁷
And will recover [or, take away] my wool and my flax,
Given to cover her nakedness.

1 This denunciation is more severe than the preceding, and imports the disowning of the people. See 2 Kings xvii. 18.

2 An allusion to the promises in Gen. xxii. 17; xxxii. 12; showing that, though Israel is cut off from the ancient covenant as a nation, that covenant in its deep spiritual significance shall be fulfilled.

3 The apostle Paul (Rom. ix. 25, 26) applies this passage to the whole body of the faithful, both Jews and Gentiles. Thus, though the Israelite has lost his national pre-eminence, all the blessings of the gospel are still within his reach, and he shall share them with the Gentiles. See note on Isa. xlii. 6.

4 Thankfully choosing as their King the Messiah whom God has appointed for them, and under his care regaining the happiness of God's people.

5 This may allude to the coming up of the Israelites out of the land of Egypt, or to their return from Babylon, regarded as representative of higher blessings. See Isa. xxxv. 1; xlix. 1; lv. 4, 12, and notes.

6 That is, memorable and illustrious shall be the season of God's sowing to produce a harvest 'which cannot be measured or numbered,' of those who, 'having obtained mercy,' are 'the sons of the living God' (ch. ii. 1).

7 They are permitted and invited to claim the privileges which these new names imply.

8 In further application of the symbolical instruction of the previous chapter, God addresses his people in the character of an injured husband. He complains of their multiplied unfaithfulnesses, exposes the vanity of the hopes which had seduced them from him, as well as the shameless nature of their defection (vers. 2—5); threatens them with severe chastisement in order to reclaim them (6—13); and finally shows the greatness of his love to them, by promising to cure their waywardness, and to reinstate them in their privileges (14—23). Comp. Ezek. xvi., xxiii.

9 'Mother' here, and in ch. iv. 5, may signify the Israelitish community, the individual members of which might be regarded as her children. Those who are alive to the sin and danger of the nation are called upon to join the prophet in his efforts to arouse and reform it.

10 By her base conduct she has forfeited her right to the name and advantages of a wife.

11 Rather, 'from her face;' alluding to the shamelessness with which Israel had sinned.

12 Lest I reduce her to a state of utter destitution and misery. Some think that this refers to the state of the Israelites in Egypt.

13 See note on ver. 2.

14 The idols which I have worshipped. So infatuated had the Israelites become, as to ascribe their prosperity or adversity to these divinities. Comp. Jer. xlv. 17—19.

15 The 'thorns' and the 'wall' represent the restraints and sufferings by which God mercifully checks the fatal pursuit of sin.

16 Or, 'made into the [image of] Baal;' as in Isa. xlv. 17. The very gifts which Jehovah bestowed upon his people they devoted to their idols.

17 Just when she is most confidently counting upon these things as her own (see ver. 5), I will make her feel that they are mine by taking them away.

- 10 And now ^s will I discover her lewdness in the sight of her lovers,¹
And none shall deliver her out of mine hand.
- 11 'I will also cause all her mirth to cease,
Her ^u feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths,²—and all her solemn feasts.
- 12 And I will destroy her vines and her fig trees,
^v Whereof she hath said, These are my rewards—that my lovers have given me:
And ^y I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them.
- 13 And ^z I will visit upon her ^a the days of Baalim,³ Wherein ^b she burned incense to them,
And she ^c decked herself with her earrings and her jewels,
And ^d she went after her lovers,—^e and forgot me, saith the LORD.
- 14 ^f Therefore,⁴ behold, ^g I will allure her,
And ^h bring her into the wilderness,⁵—ⁱ and speak comfortably unto her.
- 15 ^k And I will give her her vineyards from thence,
And ^l the valley of Achor ^m for a door of hope:
And she shall sing⁶ there, as in ⁿ the days of her youth,
And ^o as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt.
- 16 And it shall be at that day, saith the LORD,
That thou shalt call me Ishi [i. e. My husband];
And shalt call me no more Baali⁷ [i. e. My lord].
- 17 For ^p I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, ^q And they shall no more be remembered by their name.
- 18 And ^r in that day will I make a ^s covenant for them—with the beasts of the field,
And with the fowls of heaven,—and with the creeping things of the ground:
And ^t I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the earth,
And will make them to ^u lie down safely.
- 19 And ^v I will betroth⁸ thee unto me ^y for ever;
Yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment,
And in lovingkindness, and in mercies.
- 20 I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness:
And ^z thou shalt know the LORD.⁹
- 21 And it shall come to pass in that day,—^a I will hear, saith the LORD,
I will hear the heavens,—and they shall hear the earth;¹⁰
- 22 And the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil;
^b And they shall hear Jezreel.
- 23 And ^c I will sow her unto me in the earth;
^d And I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy;
And I ^e will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people;
And they shall say, ^f Thou art my God.

2 The yearly, monthly, and weekly festivals were designed to be seasons of holy joy; but the people had deprived them of their sacredness, and had turned them into occasions of sinful pleasure; and now God will deprive them of their joyfulness.

3 That is, the days of the worship of Baalim, as opposed to the festivals of Divine appointment (ver. 11).

4 This word seems to refer to vers. 6, 9. As my people have sinned against me, therefore I will first check them, then correct them, and lastly will draw them by my long-suffering mercy back to myself.

5 As the wanderings of Israel in the wilderness, and the occurrences at Ai and Achor, however painful, had been in reality a most merciful preparation for the conquest and possession of Canaan, so shall the chastenings just mentioned be a preparation for the enjoyment of the spiritual blessings of the new covenant which God will make with his people. Comp. Deut. viii. 2—6; Josh. vii. viii. 1, 2.

6 Literally, 'shall answer;' gratefully responding to God's kindness. Many regard this as alluding to the song of the Hebrews at the Red Sea: see Exod. xv. 21, and note.

7 The term 'Baal,' in its common use, signified 'lord,' and was usually applied to the husband by the wife. See 1 Pet. iii. 6. But this name had been so connected with idolatrous worship, that God refuses any more to be called by the title.

8 Treating her not as a justly divorced wife, but as a chaste virgin.

9 The meaning probably is, Thou shalt learn by thy own experience that I am, as my name Jehovah implies, unchanging and faithful. See notes on Exod. iii. 14; vi. 3.

10 'All creation' has groaned under the curse caused by Israel's sin (ver. 9; comp. Rom. viii. 22); but now, by a beautiful figure, each link in the chain of natural agencies is personified as calling for vivifying power to that which is above it, and the highest, 'the heavens,' as invoking Jehovah. And they no longer ask in vain for the blessing needful to fertility; for He who alone possesses the power will now bless his repentant people. The highest natural causes are but instruments by which the supreme First Cause works out his designs; and all are subordinated by him to the purposes of his moral government.

11 The image of a woman with adulterous propensities, whom the prophet is commanded to love and retain in his household (vers. 1—3), is employed to represent the condition of the Israelites; who, though alienated in heart from God, shall nevertheless remain, for a long season, untainted with actual idolatry (4); and be at length, through his long-suffering mercy, converted to his service (5). This also, like ch. i., is probably either a parable or a prophetic vision: see note on ch. i. 2.

^h friend,¹ yet an adulteress, ² according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, ^h and love flagons of wine.² So 'I bought her to me for fifteen pieces of silver, and for ^m an homer of barley,³ and an half homer of barley. And I said unto her, Thou shalt ⁿ abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man: so will I also be for thee.

4 For the children of Israel shall abide many days ^o without a king, and without a prince,⁴ ^p and without a sacrifice, and without an image [or, statue^q], and without an ^r ephod,⁵ and without ^s teraphim.⁶ Afterward shall the children of Israel return and ^t seek the LORD their God, and ^u David⁷ their king; ^x and shall fear the LORD and his goodness, in the ^y latter days.

The ignorance and heinous wickedness of the people.

4 HEAR⁸ the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel:

For the LORD hath a ^z controversy with the inhabitants of the land, Because there is ^a no truth, nor mercy, nor ^b knowledge of God in the land.

2 By swearing, and lying,—and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, They break out,⁹—^c and blood toucheth blood.

3 Therefore ^d shall the land mourn,¹⁰ And ^e every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, ^f With the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; Yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

4 Yet ^g let no man strive, nor reprove another:¹¹ For thy people are as they ^h that strive with the priest.

5 Therefore shalt thou fall ⁱ in the day, ^k And the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night,¹² And I will destroy ^l thy mother.

6 ^m My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge:

ⁿ Because thou hast rejected knowledge,¹³

^o I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me:

Seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God,—I will also forget thy children.

7 ^p As they were increased, so they sinned against me:

^q Therefore will I change their glory into shame:

8 ^r They eat up the sin¹⁴ of my people,—and they set their heart on their iniquity.

9 And there shall be, ^s like people, like priest:¹⁵

And I will punish them for their ways,—and reward them their doings.

10 For ^t they shall eat, and not have enough:

They shall commit whoredom, ^u and shall not increase:

1 This may mean, 'beloved by a paramour;' but probably the word 'friend' is here used for husband; because she was not to enjoy at present all the rights of a wife, though she was still the object of his unalterable affection.

2 Rather, 'raisin-cakes.' See notes on ch. i. 3, and on Isa. xvi. 7.

3 See note on Gen. xxix. 18. The price appears to have been paid half in money and half in corn; and thus the whole amount is equal to the value of a slave. See Exod. xxi. 32; Zech. xi. 12, 13. This suggests the degraded condition of Israel at the time when God interposes for his restoration.

4 That is, There shall be among them no kind of civil government: they shall be like a mutilated body without a head.

5 See Exod. xxviii. 6, and note.

6 See note on Gen. xxxi. 19. The whole verse describes a period during which the Israelites would have no political independence, no legitimate sacrifices or priest, and no idolatrous statue or deity. Such was their state during some of their earlier captivities, and such it has been during the long period which has elapsed since the last destruction of their temple. For eighteen centuries they have been separated from idolaters, and have professedly belonged to Jehovah, though they have not been acknowledged by Him.

7 The house of David was appointed by Jehovah as his vicegerents, so that revolt from its authority was like a renunciation of God, and had led to Jeroboam's image-worship: it was also the representative of the King-Messiah, to whose just and benignant rule all must submit who would serve Jehovah acceptably, and enjoy his favour. This Israel shall do 'in the latter days.' See Jer. xxx. 9, and note.

8 The prophet now drops the allegory of the preceding chapters, making only casual allusions to it; and points out, in plain words, the sins, errors, and dangers of the people. Ch. iv. begins with accusations and threatenings on account of the corruption of the nation (vers. 1—5); and then charges the evil upon the priests, who had forsaken the knowledge of God, and had led the people into idolatry, superstition, and licentiousness (6—10), till they were so stupefied and debased in profligacy (11—14) as to be unfit associates for their brethren of Judah, and ripe for punishment (15—19). The chapter vividly depicts the state of Israel during the anarchy which followed the death of Jeroboam II., when 'blood touched blood' (ver. 2).

9 They burst forth as a torrent; and bloodshed is incessant.

10 See note on ch. ii. 21.

11 That is, Reproof and rebuke will be thrown away upon them; for they have reached the highest pitch of lawlessness and impiety. See Deut. xvii. 8—12, and note.

12 By day and by night the common people, the prophets, yea, the whole nation (see ch. ii. 4), shall feel my anger.

13 This is addressed to the priests of Israel. They have rejected the knowledge of Jehovah, and he refuses to acknowledge them as his priests.

14 Probably, 'the sin-offering.' These false priests earnestly upheld the wicked image-worship of the people for the sake of their own profit.

15 The one shall share the fate of the other. See Isa. xxiv. 2.

- Because ^x they have left off to take heed to the LORD.
 11 Whoredom and wine and new wine ^y take away the heart.¹
 12 My people ask counsel at their ^z stocks,—and ^a their staff² declareth unto them :
 For ^b the spirit of whoredoms hath caused them to err,
 And they have ^c gone a whoring from under their God.
 13 ^d They sacrifice upon the tops of the mountains,—and burn incense upon the hills,
 Under oaks and poplars and elms;³—because the shadow thereof is good :
^e Therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom,
 And your spouses shall commit adultery.⁴
 14 I will not punish your daughters when they commit whoredom,
 Nor your spouses when they commit adultery :
 For themselves are separated with whores,—and they sacrifice with harlots :
 Therefore the people that ^f doth not understand shall fall.
 15 Though ^g thou, Israel, play the harlot,—^h yet let not Judah offend;⁵
 And come not ye unto Gilgal,⁶—neither go ye up to ^k Beth-aven,
 Nor swear, The LORD liveth.⁷
 16 For Israel ^m slideth back as a backsliding heifer :⁸
 Now the LORD will feed them as a lamb in a large place.⁹
 17 ⁿ Ephraim¹⁰ is joined to idols;—^o let him alone.¹¹
 18 ^p Their drink is sour :¹²—they have committed whoredom continually :
^q Her ^r rulers [Heb. shields] with shame do love, Give ye.
 19 ^s The wind hath bound her up in her wings,
 And ^t they shall be ashamed because of their sacrifices.

The princes and priests of Israel and Judah reprov'd, and invited to repent.

- 5 HEAR¹³ ye this, O priests;—and hearken, ye house of Israel;
 And give ye ear, O house of the king;—for judgment is toward you,
 Because ^v ye have been a snare upon ^x Mizpah,—and a net spread upon Tabor.¹⁴
 2 And the revolvers are ^y profound to make slaughter,
 Though I have been a rebuker of them all.¹⁵
 3 ^z I know ^a Ephraim,—and Israel is not hid from me :

 And they have not known the LORD.

¹ See Prov. ii. 19 ; xxiii. 29—35, and notes. These are the causes of that stupidity which leads Israel to take a stock for his god, and a stick for his prophet (ver. 12).

² Referring probably to a mode of divination by a rod, called Rhabdomancy. It seems to have resembled divination by arrows, mentioned in Ezek. xxi. 21.

³ Rather, 'terebinths.'

⁴ These words appear to be used in this place literally, not figuratively. The idolatrous worship to which the Israelites were prone was connected with the most disgusting licentiousness. Comp. Judg. ii. 13, and note.

⁶ The sacred associations connected with Gilgal and Bethel in the history of the Israelites (Gen. xxviii. 10—22 ; xxxv. 1—7 ; 1 Sam. x. 3, 8 ; xi. 14, 15 ; xv. 21, 33), seem to have led to the establishment of false worship there. Hence the prophets denounce these places (see ch. ix. 15 ; xii. 11 ; Amos iv. 4, 5) ; and, instead of calling the latter 'Bethel,' the house of God, they transfer to it the name of a neighbouring village, Beth-aven, the house of vanity, referring to the unprofitableness of sin.

⁷ Comp. Deut. x. 20. The sin of the Israelites was greatly aggravated by their profession of reverence for Jehovah, while they persevered in idolatry. They thus added hypocrisy to impiety. Comp. Zeph. i. 5.

⁸ Rather, 'Israel is stubborn, as a stubborn heifer ;' as in Deut. xxi. 18.

⁹ They wish to range at large ; they shall do so, unprotected.

¹⁰ Ephraim, as the leading tribe, gives its name to the kingdom of Israel. See note on title to Psa. lxxviii.

¹² Rather, 'Their carousal is over, they commit whoredom (i. e. they turn from wine to lewdness) ; her shields (or rulers) desperately love shame. Therefore the wind binds her (the nation) in its wings (i. e. to carry it away), and they shall be ashamed,' etc.

¹³ The priests and princes of Judah, as well as Israel, are reprov'd for their inveterate wickedness (vers. 1—7), and threatened with speedy punishment, which their Assyrian protector shall not be able to avert (8—14) ; for God will withdraw his favour from them till they penitently return to him (15 ; vi. 1—3). This chapter evidently belongs to a time when idolatry prevailed in Judah as well as in Israel, and when Assyria was looked to as a helper ; and all this agrees with the reign of Ahaz. See 2 Kings xvi. 7.

¹⁴ Mizpah of Gilead and Tabor, being well-wooded hills which afforded covert to game, are appropriately introduced as places for setting snares and nets. These 'snares' and 'nets' represent the seductions to idolatry of the kings and priests of Israel. See 1 Kings xii. 26—33.

¹⁵ Or, 'And the apostates have deepened (i. e. increased) slaughter, and I [will increase] punishment to them all.' The 'slaughter' may be either that of sacrifices or of murder.

¹⁶ That is, They will not apply their endeavours to turn.

¹⁷ Some render this, 'And the glory of Israel is brought low before him ; yea, Israel and Ephraim shall fall,' etc.

- Therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity;
Judah also shall fall with them.
- 6 ^e They shall go with their flocks and with their herds, to seek the LORD;¹
But they shall not find him;—he hath withdrawn himself from them.
- 7 They have ^f dealt treacherously against the LORD:
For they have begotten strange² children:
Now shall ^g a month³ devour them with their portions.
- 8 ^h Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah,—and the trumpet⁴ in Ramah:
ⁱ Cry aloud at ^k Beth-aven,—^l after⁵ thee, O Benjamin.
- 9 ^m Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke:
Among the tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be.
- 10 The princes of Judah were like them that ⁿ remove the bound:⁶
Therefore I will pour out my wrath upon them ^o like water.
- 11 Ephraim is ^p oppressed—and broken in judgment,
Because he willingly walked after ^q the commandment.⁷
- 12 Therefore will I be unto Ephraim ^r as a moth,
And to the house of Judah ^s as rottenness⁸ [or, a worm].
- 13 When Ephraim saw his sickness,—and Judah saw his ^t wound,
Then went Ephraim ^u to the Assyrian,⁹—^x and sent to king Jareb.¹⁰
^y Yet could he not heal you,—nor cure you of your wound:
- 14 For ^z I will be unto Ephraim as a lion,—and as a young lion to the house of Judah:
^a I, even I, will tear and go away;—I will take away, and none shall rescue him.
- 15 I will go and return to ^b my place,¹¹
Till ^c they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face:
^d In their affliction they will seek me early.
- 6 ^e Come, and let us return unto the LORD:
For ^f he hath torn, and ^g he will heal us;—he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.
- 2 ^h After two days¹² will he revive us:
In the third day he will raise us up,—and we shall live in his sight.¹³
- 3 ⁱ Then shall we know, ^k if we follow on to know the LORD:
His going forth is prepared ^l as the morning;¹⁴
And ^m he shall come unto us ⁿ as the rain,
As the latter and former rain unto the earth.
- Israel's inconstancy, formality, and impiety.*
- 4 ^o O EPHRAIM,¹⁵ what shall I do unto thee?
O Judah, what shall I do unto thee?
For your goodness is ^p as a morning cloud,¹⁶—and as the early dew it goeth away.
- 5 Therefore have I hewed¹⁷ them ^q by the prophets;
I have slain them by ^r the words of my mouth:
And thy¹⁸ judgments are as the light that goeth forth.

3 Perhaps put for 'new moon'; the meaning of the clause being that their hypocritical feasts shall be their ruin. Or the word 'month' may signify a very short space of time: see next verse. The 'portions' may be either their possessions or their idols. Comp. Ps. xvi. 5.
4 That is, 'Sound an alarm.'
5 Or, '[the enemy] is behind thee, O Benjamin.'
6 That is, they are grasping and fraudulent. See Deut. xix. 14, and note.
7 'The commandment' is, perhaps, the institution of image-worship by Jeroboam, which the people readily adopted (see 1 Kings xii. 28—32); or the 'statutes of Omri' (see 1 Kings xvi. 25, and note). But the old versions appear to have had different readings; some rendering the word 'vanity,' and others 'filthiness.'
8 I will gradually consume them.
9 This refers to the vassalage to the Assyrian king, which both Israel and Judah promised in the hope of gaining his protection. See 2 Kings xv. 19; xvi. 7.
10 Some translate this, 'the warlike' or 'the contentious king'; others think it is a symbolical name for Assyria, like 'Rahab' for Egypt.
11 God's withdrawal involves the deprivation of that all-sufficient protection and aid which his presence implies. The prophet refers, probably, to the approaching exile, when the people would lose the usual tokens of God's favour; and he declares that, when that discipline shall have had its due effect, leading them to return to God, it shall end in renewed prosperity (ch. vi. 1—3).

12 That is, after a very brief period. The number 'two' is sometimes used indefinitely for a few. See 1 Kings xvii. 12; Isa. vii. 21.

13 As they had been, like the prey of a lion, torn and slain under God's wrath (see ch. v. 14); so, under his favour, they shall be 'healed and revived.'

14 Or, 'And we shall know, we shall know; let us follow on (i. e. eagerly strive) to know Jehovah; [for] like the dawn his coming forth is fixed,' etc.; i. e. it is as certain as the cheering dawn and the fertilizing rain (see Gen. viii. 22), and therefore we cannot be disappointed.

15 The people of Israel are charged with inconstancy and formality in religion (vers. 4—7), and their sacred cities are described as strongholds of impiety and wickedness (8—10); nor is Judah free from the guilt (11). The allusion in ver. 8 to the bloodshed of the Gileadites suggests a reference to the events related in 2 Kings xv. 25, and seems to fix the date in Pekah's reign.

16 During the dry season in Palestine, the clouds usually vanish by nine or ten o'clock, and the sky becomes quite clear.

17 I have threatened them severely. Comp. Isa. xi. 4; Heb. iv. 12.

18 This is addressed to the people. The judgments denounced against thee (see ch. v. 1) go forth as the light, to be seen and understood by all.

- 6 For I desired ¹mercy, and not sacrifice;¹
 And the ²knowledge of God more than burnt offerings.
 7 But they ³like men² ⁴have transgressed the covenant:
 There ⁵have they dealt treacherously against me.
 8 ⁶Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity,—and is polluted³ with blood.
 9 And as troops of robbers wait for a man,
 So ⁷the company of priests murder in the way by consent,⁴
 For they commit lewdness.
 10 I have seen ⁸an horrible thing in the house of Israel:
 There⁵ is ⁹the whoredom of Ephraim,—Israel is defiled.
 11 Also, O Judah, ¹⁰he hath set an harvest⁶ for thee.

The corruptions of the court and people reprov'd and threatened.

- ¹WHEN⁷ I returned the captivity of my people,
 7 ²When I would have healed Israel,⁸
 Then ³the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered,—and ⁴the wickedness of Samaria.
 For ⁵they commit falsehood;
 And the thief cometh in,—and ⁶the troop of robbers spoileth without.
 2 And they consider not in their hearts that I ⁷remember all their wickedness:
 Now ⁸their own doings have beset them about;⁹—they are ⁹before my face.
 3 They make the king glad with their wickedness,
 And the princes ¹⁰with their lies.
 4 ¹¹They are all adulterers,—¹²as an oven heated by the baker,
 Who ceaseth from raising, after he hath kneaded the dough,—until¹⁰ it be leavened.
 5 ¹³In the day¹¹ of our king, the princes have ¹⁴made him sick with bottles¹² of wine;
 He stretched out his hand with scorners.
 6 For ¹⁵they have made ready their heart ¹⁶like an oven,¹³—whiles they lie in wait:
 Their baker sleepeth all the night;—in the morning it burneth as a flaming fire.
 7 They are all hot as an oven,—and have ¹⁷devoured their judges;
¹⁸All their kings ¹⁸are fallen:¹⁴—¹⁹there is none among them that calleth unto me.
 8 Ephraim, he ¹⁹hath mixed himself among the people;
 Ephraim is ²⁰a cake not turned.¹⁵
 9 ²¹Strangers¹⁶ have devoured his strength—and he knoweth it not;
 Yea, gray hairs¹⁷ are here and there upon him—yet he knoweth not.
 10 And the ²²pride of Israel testifieth to his face:¹⁸

¹ The most exact observance of Divine ordinances is only acceptable to God when it honestly expresses the feelings of intelligent piety. See refs., and especially the quotation of this passage by our Lord in Matt. ix. 13; xii. 7.

² Perhaps, 'like Adam:' comp. Rom. v. 14. If 'like men' is the correct rendering, the meaning probably is, like other men 'they have transgressed my covenant (as if they had no advantages from it); there (i. e. in respect to the covenant from which they derive their blessings) they act falsely to me.'

³ Rather, 'tracked with blood.' This was probably Ramoth-Gilead, the chief city of the district; which, though a priests' city, and one of the cities of refuge, had become notorious for idolatry and bloodshed. See 2 Kings xv. 25. The natural inference is, 'If Gilead is thus corrupt, what must other cities be!'

⁴ Rather, 'in the way to Shechem;' which was another city of refuge. It is probable that the privilege of sanctuary had been abused, so that these cities had become nests of banditti.

⁵ That is, even in these priestly cities.

⁶ A harvest, probably, of punishment.

⁷ The efforts which have been made to restore and heal the Israelites have served only to show the force of their disease (ver. 1). Chief among their sins is their falsehood and treachery (1, 2), especially towards their kings, to those lusts they pander whilst they plot against them (3—7). Another sin for which they are reprov'd and threatened is their foolish love of foreign alliances, particularly with Egypt (8—16). This seems to fix the date of the prophecy in the reign of Hoshea: see 2 Kings xvii. 4. But some think that the allusions to the conspiracies among the courtiers, in vers. 1—7, point rather to the times of anarchy preceding this reign.

⁸ Or, 'When I would bring back the captivity of my people, when I would heal Israel, then the iniquity,' etc.

⁹ The meaning seems to be, that their evil doings stand up as witnesses around them to condemn them.

¹⁰ That is, only for a little while, until the dough is leavened. The Israelites would not brook more than the very slightest interruption to their licentiousness. See 2 Pet. ii. 14. Some, however, apply the words to the intensity of their licentious desires.

¹¹ Such as a birthday or coronation-day, celebrated with riotous excess.

¹⁴ Zechariah was slain by Shallum, Shallum by Menahem, Pekahiah by Pekah, and Pekah by Hoshea; and of all of them it is recorded that they 'did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord.'

¹⁶ Their heathen allies rendered them no help, whilst they drained the resources of the country, and withdrew the people from Jehovah their strength.

¹⁷ There is perhaps an allusion to the premature old age and decay which follow a youth spent in luxury and intemperance.

¹⁸ See note on ch. v. 5.

- And ^f they do not return to the LORD their God,—nor seek him for all this.
- 11 ^g Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart :¹
- ^h They call to Egypt, they go to Assyria.
- 12 When they shall go, ⁱ I will spread my net upon them ;
^k I will bring them down as the fowls of the heaven ;
 I will chastise them,—^l as their congregation hath heard.²
- 13 Woe unto them ! for they have fled from me :
 Destruction unto them ! because they have transgressed against me :
 Though ^m I have redeemed them,—yet ⁿ they have spoken lies against me.
- 14 ^o And they have not cried unto me with their heart,
^p When they howled upon their beds :³
^q They assemble themselves⁴ for corn and wine,—and they rebel against me.
- 15 ^r Though I have bound⁵ and strengthened their arms,
 Yet do they imagine mischief against me.
- 16 ^s They return, but ^t not to the Most High : ^u they are like a deceitful bow :
 Their princes shall fall by the sword for the ^v rage⁶ of their tongue :
 This shall be their derision ^x in the land of Egypt.

The approaching punishment of the people.

- 8 SET⁷ ^y the trumpet to thy mouth.
 He shall come ^z as an eagle against ^a the house of the LORD,⁸
 Because ^b they have transgressed my covenant,—and trespassed against my law.
- 2 ^c Israel shall cry unto me, My God, ^d we know thee.⁹
- 3 Israel hath cast off the thing that is good :—^e the enemy shall pursue him.
- 4 ^f They have set up kings, but not by me :
 They have made princes, and I knew it not :¹⁰
^g Of their silver and their gold have they made them idols,
^h That they may be cut off.
- 5 ⁱ Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off ;—^k mine anger is kindled against them :
^l How long will it be ere they attain to innocency ?
- 6 For ^m from Israel was it also :¹¹—ⁿ the workman made it ;
 Therefore it is not God :
 But ^o the calf of Samaria shall be broken in pieces.¹²
- 7 For ^p they have sown the wind,—and they shall reap the whirlwind :
^q It hath no stalk :—the bud shall yield no meal :
 If so be it yield, ^r the strangers shall swallow it up.
- 8 ^s Israel is swallowed up :
 Now shall they be ^t among the Gentiles—^u as a vessel wherein is no pleasure.
- 9 For ^v they are gone up to Assyria,—^w a wild ass alone by himself :¹³
 Ephraim ^x hath hired lovers.¹⁴
- 10 Yea, though they have hired among the nations, now ^a will I gather them,

1 That is, without understanding : see note on ch. iv. 11. As the dove in its alarm often rushes into the danger which it fears, so the Israelites foolishly court those foreign alliances which will ruin them.

2 By the public warnings of the prophets.

3 Their cry was only that of fear and anguish, not that of penitence and confession. Comp. Ps. xxxii. 3, 4.

4 That is, to pray to their idols. Some follow the Septuagint, in reading, 'they cut themselves,' i. e. in invoking their gods : see 1 Kings xviii. 28.

5 Or, 'admonished them.' Whether God chastised or strengthened them, they neglected Him for their idols.

6 Or, 'insolence.' As a punishment for this they shall be made a laughing-stock to their allies and defenders.

7 The approach of a conqueror is foretold who shall subdue the kingdom. The invader is close at hand to punish Israel for their sins (vers. 1—3), in setting up their own kings and idols, which they shall find to be useless (4—8); in seeking foreign alliances, which shall bring oppression upon them (9, 10); and in multiplying altars and fortresses, which God will destroy (11—14). As the first attack of the Assyrian king was impending, and Judah was building fortresses, the chapter seems to agree best as to time with the reigns of Menahem and Uzziah. Comp. 2 Kings xv. 19; 2 Chron. xxvi. 6—15.

8 The brevity of the language expresses the nearness of the danger : 'To thy mouth the trumpet ! Like an eagle to the house of Jehovah !' 'The house of Jehovah' probably means his land and people.

9 Rather, 'To me they will cry, My God ; we [thine] Israel know thee. Israel hath rejected good,' etc. The people use their covenant name of 'Israel' as an appeal to God ; but he disowns them on account of their sins. Only those who have the character of God's people may claim their privileges.

10 That is, without consulting me. In the establishment of a separate kingdom, and in their choice of kings, they have had no regard to my will ; they have joined idolatry with rebellion, and shall therefore 'be cut off.'

11 Perhaps referring to vers. 2, 3. Israel, who claims covenant-relation to Jehovah, has made a calf which is no God.

12 Or, 'shall be flames;' i. e. shall be burnt.

13 The point of comparison in the 'wild ass' is its untractableness and waywardness, which lead it to forsake the haunts of other animals.

14 Sending presents to foreign nations to obtain their alliance.

15 Or, 'Yea, since they have given hire among the nations, now will I gather them (i. e. the nations), and they (i. e. the nations) shall shortly begin from the burden of the King of princes.' The king of Assyria (see note on Isa. x. 8), whom they have hired to help them, shall be their first oppressor, and that very quickly ; but this shall be only the beginning of their sufferings.

- 11 Because Ephraim hath made 'many¹ altars to sin,
Altars shall be unto him to sin.
- 12 I have written to him / the great things of my law ;
⁵ But they were counted as a strange thing.
- 13 ^h They sacrifice flesh for the sacrifices of mine offerings, and eat it ;
ⁱ But the LORD accepteth them not ;
^k Now will he remember their iniquity, and visit their sins :
^l They shall return to Egypt.
- 14 ^m For Israel hath forgotten ⁿ his Maker, and ^o buildeth temples ;²
And ^p Judah hath multiplied fenced cities :
But ^q I will send a fire upon his cities,—and it shall devour the palaces thereof.

The aggravated sins of Israel, and their fatal consequences.

- 9 REJOICE³ not, O Israel, for joy, as other people :
For thou ' hast gone a whoring from thy God,
Thou hast loved a ^r reward upon every cornfloor.⁴
- 2 ' The floor and the winepress shall not feed them,
And the new wine shall fail in her.⁵
- 3 " They shall not dwell in ^s the LORD's land ;
^t But Ephraim shall return to Egypt,
And ^u they shall eat unclean things ^a in Assyria.⁶
- 4 ^b They shall not offer wine offerings to the LORD,
^c Neither shall they be pleasing unto him :
^d Their sacrifices shall be unto them as the bread of mourners ;⁷
All that eat thereof shall be polluted :
For their bread ^e for their soul⁸ shall not come into the house of the LORD.
- 5 What will ye do in / the solemn day,—and in the day of the feast of the LORD ?
- 6 For, lo, ^f they are gone because of destruction :
^h Egypt shall gather them up, ^g i Memphis shall bury them :
The pleasant places for their silver, ⁱ j nettles shall possess them :
Thorns shall be in their tabernacles.
- 7 The days of visitation are come,—the days of recompence are come ;
Israel shall know it :—^k the prophet is a fool,—the spiritual man ^l is ' mad,
For the multitude of thine iniquity, and the great hatred.
- 8 The ^m watchman ⁿ of Ephraim was with my God :
^o But the prophet is a snare of a fowler in all his ways,
And hatred in [or, against] the house of his God.
- 9 ^p They have deeply corrupted themselves,—as in the days of ^q Gibeah :
^r Therefore he will remember their iniquity,—he will visit their sins.
- 10 ' I found Israel like grapes¹³ in the wilderness ;
I saw your fathers, as ^s the firstripe in the fig tree ' at her first time :
But they went to " Baal-peor,—and ^t separated themselves ^u unto that shame ;

¹ This sin was expressly prohibited in Deut. xii. 13, 14, with the threat that those who committed it should be left to serve idols in a foreign land : see Deut. iv. 28. As they disregard God's law (ver. 12), He disregards their sufferings, and will punish them with a bondage like that which their forefathers endured in Egypt (13). See ch. ix. 3.

² Perhaps 'palaces,' as in 1 Kings xxi. 1 ; Dan. i. 4.

³ The chief subject of chapters ix., x. is, the bitterness of the captivity awaiting the Israelites, caused by their unfaithfulness to God and his worship, and the delusions of the false prophets (vers. 1—9). They have sinned away God's love to them, and must now be rejected, and their children be destroyed (10—17) : the blessings which they have abused, and the idols which they have trusted, shall be alike taken away (x. 1—6). Yet their present sufferings, though severe, if rightly used, may lead to righteousness and piety ; but if not, they will be speedily followed by terrible ruin both to king and people (7—15). The allusions in the prophecy seem to suit best the time of Hoshea.

⁵ Or, 'shall deceive her,' i. e. the nation ; it shall disappoint their expectations.

⁶ As they have preferred unclean things in their own holy land, they shall soon be forced to eat them in a foreign land.

⁷ See note on Ezek. xxiv. 17.

⁸ Rather, 'Their bread shall be for their soul (i. e. for themselves only) ; it shall not come into the house of the Lord.' They withheld God's offerings when they had abundance : now they shall have but little, and that little not fit to offer ; so that they shall be unable to keep their festivals (ver. 5).

⁹ For burial ; i. e. they shall die in Egypt.

¹¹ That is, the man who professed to be inspired. Israel has believed his own false prophets rather than God ; now by the 'visitation' (or chastening) to which he is to be subjected for his iniquity and great hostility to God, he shall learn that those men were fools and madmen.

¹² Rather, 'Ephraim looks out (i. e. for help) from my God.' The false prophets have taught him to expect this even whilst cherishing his hatred to the service of Jehovah ; so that his crimes have equalled the atrocities related in Judg. xix. (ver. 9).

¹³ Israel was at first as acceptable to me as grapes are to a traveller in the desert, or as the earliest figs are to the eater : see note on Jer. xxiv. 2. But the people soon gave themselves up to idolatry and licentiousness. See Numb. xxv. 1—5, and notes.

- ^z And their abominations were according as they loved.¹
- 11 As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away like a bird,
From the birth, and from the womb, and from the conception.²
- 12 ^a Though they bring up their children,
Yet ^b will I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left:
Yea, ^c woe also to them when I ^d depart from them!
- 13 Ephraim, ^e as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place:³
^f But Ephraim shall bring forth his children to the murderer.
- 14 Give them, O LORD:—what wilt thou give?
Give them ^g a miscarrying womb and dry breasts.⁴
- 15 All their wickedness ^h is in Gilgal:⁵—for there ⁱ I hated them:
^k For the wickedness of their doings, I will drive them out of mine house,⁶
I will love them no more:—^l all their princes are revolvers.
- 16 Ephraim is smitten, ^m their root is dried up,—they shall bear no fruit:
Yea, though they bring forth,—yet will I slay even the beloved fruit of their womb.
- 17 My God will cast them away,—because they did not hearken unto him:
And they shall be ⁿ wanderers among the nations.
- 10 ISRAEL is ^o an empty⁷ vine,—he bringeth forth fruit ^p unto himself:
According to the multitude of his fruit, ^q he hath increased the altars;
According to the goodness of his land, ^r they have made goodly images.
- 2 Their heart is ^s divided;—now shall they be found faulty:⁸
He shall break down their altars,—he shall spoil their images.
- 3 ^t For now they shall say,—We have no king, because we feared not the LORD;
What then should a king do to us?⁹
- 4 They have spoken words,—^u swearing falsely in making a covenant:
Thus judgment springeth up ^x as hemlock¹⁰ in the furrows of the field.
- 5 The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear, because of ^y the calves of ^z Beth-aven:
For the people thereof shall mourn over it,
And ^a the priests thereof that rejoiced¹¹ on it,
^b For the glory thereof,—because it is departed from it.
- 6 ^c It shall be also carried unto Assyria—for a present to ^d king Jareb:
Ephraim ^e shall receive shame,—and Israel shall be ashamed ^f of his own counsel.
- 7 ^g As for Samaria, her king is cut off—as the foam¹² upon the water.
- 8 ^h The high places also of Aven,¹³ ⁱ the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed:
^k The thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars;
^l And they shall say to the mountains, Cover us;¹⁴—and to the hills, Fall on us.
- 9 ^m O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah:—there they stood:¹⁵ ⁿ The battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them.
- 10 ^o It is in my desire that I should chastise them;
And ^p the people shall be gathered against them,
When they shall bind themselves in their two furrows.¹⁶
- 11 And Ephraim is as ^q an heifer that is taught, ^r and loveth to tread out the corn;
^s But I passed over upon her fair neck:—I will make Ephraim to ride;¹⁷
Judah shall plow,—and Jacob shall break his clods.

¹ Rather, 'And they became abominations, like their love;' i. e. they became as abominable as the impure gods which they loved. Such is always the result of substituting another object of reverence for Jehovah.

² Their 'glory,' or prosperity, shall be destroyed by the failure of population; for they shall have few children, and those few shall be slain (vers. 12, 13).

³ This may mean that the situation of Ephraim was as favourable for national prosperity as that of Tyre.

⁴ Some suppose this to be the prophet's intercession: Rather inflict upon them barrenness, which is commonly regarded as a curse, than let them bring forth children 'for the murderer.' Comp. Luke xxiii. 29.

⁵ See note on ch. iv. 15.

⁶ Meaning probably the land of Israel. Comp. ch. viii. 1.

⁷ Or, 'Israel is a luxuriant vine; he maketh his fruit equal to himself;' i. e. putteth forth fruit according to his luxuriance. The 'luxuriance' is outward prosperity; the 'fruit' is the sins (in this case, idolatry) to which men are so prone to pervert the gifts of Providence.

⁸ Rather, 'now shall they be punished.'

⁹ Rather, 'for us.' They shall be made to acknowledge that their king cannot save them without Jehovah's help. Comp. 1 Sam. viii., and notes.

¹¹ Some render this, 'And the priests shall leap (i. e. with fear) on account of it.' Respecting the word here rendered 'priests,' see note on 2 Kings xxiii. 5.

¹² Perhaps 'as a chip;' a thing utterly powerless.

¹³ Probably used for Beth-aven: comp. ch. iv. 15.

¹⁴ Those who have trusted in their king and their idol, and despised Jehovah, shall be helplessly exposed to His wrath. Comp. Isa. ii. 19; Rev. vi. 15, 16.

¹⁵ Or, 'there they have stood,' or remained. The punishment of the sinners in Gibeah has not rooted out the sin from Israel, where it still remains.

¹⁶ Or, 'When I shall bind them for their two transgressions;' probably the two calves.

¹⁷ That is, I will take her away (see Job xxx. 22) from the easy work of treading corn; and, having put a yoke upon her neck, I will set her to plough and harrow. The comfort and liberty which Israel has abused shall be exchanged for servitude and suffering.

- 12 'Sow to yourselves in righteousness,¹—reap in mercy;
 "Break up your fallow ground:

- 13 ^y Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity;
^z Ye have eaten the fruit of lies:
 Because thou didst trust in thy way,—^a in the multitude of thy mighty men.
- 14 ^b Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people,
^c And all thy fortresses shall be spoiled,
 As Shalman² spoiled ^d Beth-arbel in the day of battle:
^e The mother was dashed in pieces upon her children.
- 15 ^f So shall Beth-el do³ unto you—because of your great wickedness:
 In a morning⁴ ^g shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

Israel's ingratitude for God's unceasing mercy; threatenings and promises.

^m They sacrificed unto Baalim,—ⁿ and burned incense to graven images.
- 3 ^o I taught Ephraim also to go,⁸ taking them by their arms;

^b Because of their own counsels.
- 7 And my people are bent to ^c backsliding from me:

¹ Rather, 'for righteousness;' and 'according to mercy.' Prepare your neglected and hardened hearts to receive the seed which shall produce a harvest of holiness and piety, under the blessing of God, who will 'rain upon you (or perhaps 'teach you') righteousness.'

² 'Shalman' seems to be an abbreviated form of Shalmaneser. 'Beth-arbel' was probably a fortress which he took in his first campaign. It is identified by many with Arbela in Galilee (now Irbid). Near this place are extensive caverns, which were repeatedly fortified by the Jews. See Robinson's Bib. Res. iii. 279—282.

³ Your idolatrous worship at Bethel is the first cause of your sufferings.

⁴ That is, 'suddenly.'

⁵ From Israel's childhood—the very beginning of his national life—Jehovah has loved, and delivered, and enriched him; yet Israel has been ungrateful and unfaithful (vers. 1—4). God therefore must give him up to severe chastisement (5—7); yet His heart, full of Divine love, yearns over His people, and He cannot destroy them, but He will recal and restore them (8—11).

⁶ These words are quoted in Matt. ii. 15, and are applied to the childhood of the Son of God, which was partly spent in Egypt. Jehovah's fatherly love and purposes of mercy, which led Him to deliver Israel from Egypt, led Him also to protect our Lord in his infancy by sending him thither.

⁷ That is, 'the prophets,' my messengers.

⁸ Or, 'to walk;' as a child is taught.

⁹ Not by violence, but by gentleness; like one who, instead of urging his cattle to the utmost, lifts the yoke from their necks, lest it should heat and gall them, whilst he feeds them. These two metaphors beautifully express God's condescending regard to the circumstances and wants of his people.

¹⁰ This may mean, either that Israel shall not be able to obtain protection from Egypt against his Assyrian oppressor; or that he shall not again be sent to Egypt, but shall be subjected to a severer tyrant in Assyria.

¹¹ Or, 'his bars;' perhaps used figuratively (like 'shields' in ch. iv. 18) for chiefs.

¹³ The meaning may be either, 'I will not come against the city (i. e. the city of Samaria), as I did against Admah and Zeboim;' or, 'I will not come with wrath,' or 'terror,' as in Jer. xv. 8, on which see note.

¹⁴ Rather, 'shall flutter;' i. e. fly hastily; and so in the next line. Israel shall follow Jehovah obediently, and shall hasten from all quarters to enjoy their long-lost privileges; and then will God show his anger against their oppressors. See Isa. lx. 8.

God's controversy with both Israel and Judah.

- 12 ^r EPHRAIM¹ compasseth me about with lies,
And the house of Israel with deceit:
But ^s Judah yet ruleth² with God,—and is faithful with the saints.
- 12 Ephraim 'feedeth on wind,—and followeth after the east wind:³
^u He daily increaseth lies and desolation;⁴
^x And they do make a covenant with the Assyrians,—and ^y oil is carried into Egypt.⁵
- 2 ^z The LORD hath also a controversy with Judah,
And will punish Jacob according to his ways;
According to his doings will he recompense him.
- 3 He took his brother ^a by the heel in the womb,⁶
And by his strength he ^b had power with God:
- 4 Yea, he had power over ^c the angel,⁷ and prevailed:
He wept, and ^d made supplication unto him:

ⁱ Keep mercy and judgment,—and ^j wait on thy God continually.
- 7 ^k He is a merchant¹⁰ [or, Canaan^l], ^m the balances of deceit are in his hand:

- 9 And ^p I that am the LORD thy God from the land of Egypt
^q Will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles,¹² as in the days of the solemn feasts.
- 10 ^r I have also spoken by the prophets,—and I have multiplied ^s visions,

- 11 ^u Is there iniquity in Gilgal?¹³
^x Surely they are vanity:—they sacrifice bullocks in ^y Gilgal;
Yea, ^z their altars are as heaps¹⁴ in the furrows of the fields.
- 12 And Jacob ^a fled¹⁵ into the country of Syria,
And ^b Israel ^c served for a wife,—and for a wife he kept sheep.
- 13 ^d And by a prophet the LORD brought Israel out of Egypt,
And by a prophet was he preserved.
- 14 ^e Ephraim provoked him to anger most bitterly:
^f Therefore shall he leave his ^g blood upon him,¹⁶
^h And his ⁱ reproach shall his Lord return unto him.

1 This section (ch. xi. 12; xii. 1—14) contains a series of contrasts between Israel's unfaithfulness and other sins, and God's ancient and long-enduring love to their ancestor and themselves, and his readiness to accept their penitence and prayers; all adapted to urge and encourage them to return to him; but showing that, if they do not return, they are worthy of punishment (xi. 12; xii. 1—6; 7—11; 12—14). Ver. 8 points to a time when the nation was still prosperous, perhaps in the reign of Jeroboam II.

2 The rendering in the text is hardly consistent with ch. xii. 2. The clause is more correctly translated thus: 'And Judah still wandereth (see note on Jer. ii. 31) with respect to God, and to the Most Holy, the Faithful One.' The faithlessness of Israel stands in marked contrast to the faithfulness of Jehovah.

3 Which is not merely unprofitable, but noxious and destructive. See Gen. xli. 6.

4 Rather, 'violence.'

5 As a present to obtain the aid of the Egyptians. Oil was one of the most valuable productions of Canaan, and a profitable article of exportation.

6 This incident seems to be alluded to as showing before the birth of their ancestor God's purpose to give the nation superior power. Comp. Rom. ix. 11—13. God's special love to his chosen people, and his readiness to hear and answer their humble and penitent prayers, are here connected with the sacred associations of the four names, 'Jacob,' 'Israel,' 'Bethel,' and 'Jehovah.'

7 See note, Gen. xxxii. 24. The 'weeping and supplication' may refer to Jacob's prayers in Gen. xxxii. 9—11; 24—30.

8 This refers to the promises both in Gen. xxviii. 10—22, and in Gen. xxxv. 9, 14; which were given, says the prophet, not only to Jacob, but to 'us.'

9 Rather, 'Jehovah.' See Exod. vi. 3, and note.

10 He is not Israel, a successful wrestler with God; but Canaan, a deceitful trafficker like those whom he was commissioned to expel from the land.

11 That is, 'none that involves me in guilt.' See Zech. xi. 5. Men are prone to harden themselves in impenitence by the false notion that God regards them with favour, because they are successful in their sinful courses. Comp. Deut. xxix. 19.

12 Rather, 'Yet I, Jehovah, am thy God from the land of Egypt: I will yet make thee dwell in tents,' etc. Some understand this as a threatening: As thou hast forgotten my former mercies, and made light of prophetic warnings and parables, I will bring thee again into that wilderness-state which thy feast of tabernacles commemorates. Others take it as a promise: Sinful as thou hast been, yet, if thou wilt repent and listen to the multiplied teachings and warnings of my prophets, I will repeat the deliverance which thy festival commemorates. Others again regard it as a representation of God's forbearance in allowing them, notwithstanding their sins, still to keep the joyful festivals.

13 Such an interrogation is equivalent to a strong assertion. 'Gilgal' and 'Gilgal' probably represent all the tribes on the two sides of the Jordan, and are particularly specified with reference to ch. iv. 15; vi. 8.

14 That is, 'as numerous as heaps of stones.'

15 Vers. 12, 13 show how God had raised the Hebrew nation from a low condition to great prosperity, and had faithfully kept his promises to them; thus rendering their ingratitude the more criminal.

16 That is, the guilt of bloodshed, whether by murder or by human sacrifice, shall lie upon him.

The sin and punishment of Israel; calls to repentance; and encouraging promises.

- 13 ^k WHEN¹ Ephraim spake trembling, he exalted himself in Israel;²
 But ^lwhen he offended in Baal,³ he died.
 2 And now they sin more and more,
 And ^mhave made them molten images of their silver,
 And idols according to their own understanding,
 All of it the work of the craftsmen:
 They say of them,—Let the men that sacrifice ⁿkiss⁴ the calves.
 3 Therefore they shall be ^oas the morning cloud,

^x Job 34. 31, 32.

1 In chapters xiii., xiv. the connection between the sins and the sufferings of the people is forcibly shown (vers. 1–8); and the willingness of Jehovah to rule and save them is declared, all, alas! frustrated by their wilfulness and obstinacy (9–16). Yet for these backsliders, if they will penitently turn from their sins (xiv. 1–3), there is mercy and a rich and abundant blessing (4–8); which, however, is only to be realized by a wise obedience to Jehovah's will (9).

2 This clause is very obscure. Some render it, ‘When Ephraim spake, there was trembling; he exalted himself in Israel;’ and they apply it to the predominance of that tribe. Others translate the verse, ‘When Ephraim uttered perversity, then he bore his sin in Israel; and he incurred guilt in reference to Baal, and died.’

3 By introducing the worship of Baal.

4 See note on Job xxxi. 27. This verse appears to refer to the establishment of the calf-worship by Jeroboam. Having made their images, they say, Let those who wish to perform religious service worship the calf instead of going to Jerusalem. See 1 Kings xii. 28.

5 Or, ‘the opening’ in the wall; through which the smoke might make its escape.

6 I regarded thee with favour.

7 The meaning is, ‘According as they were fed, they were also satiated.’ Compare Deut. xxxii. 13–15.

8 The pericardium, or membrane which contains the heart. The phrase means, I will tear the vitals.

9 Rather, ‘Where is thy king now, that he may save thee in all thy cities?’

10 Some suppose this to refer to the first establishment of kingly government under Saul (see 1 Sam. viii. 7–9); but it is better to apply it to the frequently changing dynasties, all of which were a curse to the nation, and were successively removed by God for their sins.

11 See Job xiv. 17, and note.

12 This unusual metaphor represents the extreme folly of the impenitent Israelites, who brought themselves into imminent peril by delaying to comply with God's design in laying upon them their sufferings.

13 Many slightly alter the Hebrew pointing, and render (as in ver. 10), ‘Where is thy plague, O death? Where is thy destruction, O grave?’ Comp. 1 Cor. xv. 55. The words intimate Jehovah's power and readiness to restore the nation to life if they repent. Comp. Isa. xxvi. 19; Ezek. xxxvii. 13, and notes.

14 Meaning either, ‘My purposes are unchangeable;’ or, ‘I see no repentance in them.’

15 Alluding to the name ‘Ephraim:’ see Gen. xli. 52.

JOEL.

WE have no account in the Bible of the personal history of Joel. It is inferred from his writings that he lived in Judah, and prophesied to the people of that kingdom, probably not later than the reign of Uzziah, which extended from 810 B. C. to 758 B. C. : for, when he mentions the enemies of his country, he names the Phœnicians, Philistines, Idumeans, and Egyptians (ch. iii. 4, 19) ; but makes no reference to the Assyrians and Babylonians ; as he probably would have done had those two empires been already formidable to the Jews. And the whole book indicates, that at the period of his ministry the people of Judah had not fallen into that extreme depravity which in later times drew down upon them such heavy chastisements. Joel must therefore be considered as one of the earliest of the prophets whose writings we possess.

The style of Joel is remarkably clear and elegant. He is distinguished for the vividness and animation of his descriptions, the perfect regularity of his parallelisms, and the easy flow of his sentences.

The prophecy first describes present and approaching visitations upon Judah (ch. i., ii. 1—27), and then predicts the outpouring of the Holy Spirit under the gospel dispensation, the infliction of God's judgments on his enemies, and the ultimate peace, purity, and prosperity of the church (ch. ii. 28—32, iii.)

Predictions of coming judgments, and exhortations to repentance and prayer.

1 THE¹ WORD OF THE LORD THAT CAME TO JOEL THE SON OF PETHUEL.

2 HEAR this, ye old men,—and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land.

^a Hath this been in your days,—or even in the days of your fathers ?

3 ^b Tell ye your children of it,—and let your children tell their children,
And their children another generation.

^a ch. 2. 2.

1 In this first section (ch. i., ii. 1—27), the prophet describes vast swarms of locusts, whose destructive ravages have caused universal lamentation throughout the land (vers. 1—10), especially to the husbandmen (11, 12), and to the priests through the failure of offerings (13, 14). This is to be closely followed by a drought, which shall involve both man and beast in misery (15—20). But a still more terrible visitation is coming—a mighty host of invincible locust-warriors, led by Jehovah himself, to destroy in the city as well as the fields (ii. 1—11). Let the people, therefore, all unite in beseeching God to avert or remove the threatened plague (12—17) ; and then he will pity and relieve them, restoring to them his bounties, and calling forth their praise and confidence (18—27). It has been debated whether this description is to be understood literally of either a past or a future plague of locusts, or figuratively as signifying the Assyrian and Chaldean invaders from the north. It seems most probable that Joel was an eye-witness of the ravages which he so graphically describes, and that he refers to the locusts and the drought as the forerunners and representatives of future chastisements which would be much more severe ; including indeed the Assyrian and Chaldean invasions, but extending further than these. And accordingly he passes on immediately to the days of Messiah and the future church.

- 4 ^c That which the palmerworm¹—hath left hath the locust eaten;
And that which the locust hath left—hath ^d the cankerworm eaten;
And that which the cankerworm hath left—hath ^e the caterpillar eaten.
- 5 Awake,² ye drunkards, and weep;—and howl, all ye drinkers of wine,
Because of the new wine;—^f for it is cut off from your mouth.
- 6 For ^g a nation is come up upon ^h my land,—strong, and without number, ⁱ Whose teeth are the teeth of a lion,—and he hath the cheek teeth of a great lion.³
- 7 He hath ^k laid my vine waste,—and barked⁴ my fig tree:
He hath made it clean bare, and cast it away;—the branches thereof are made white.
- 8 ^l Lament⁵ like a virgin girded with sackcloth for ^m the husband of her youth.
- 9 ⁿ The meat offering and the drink offering—is cut off from the house of the LORD;
The priests, the LORD's ministers, mourn.
- 10 The field is wasted,—^o the land mourneth;
For the corn is wasted:—^p the new wine is dried up,—the oil languisheth.
- 11 ^q Be ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen;—howl, O ye vinedressers,
For the wheat and for the barley;—^r because the harvest of the field is perished:
- 12 ^s The vine is dried up, and the fig tree languisheth;
The pomegranate tree, the palm tree also, and the apple tree,
Even all the trees of the field, are withered:
Because ^t joy is withered away from the sons of men.
- 13 ^u Gird yourselves,⁶ and lament, ye priests:—howl, ye ministers of the altar:
Come, ^v lie all night in sackcloth,—ye ministers of my God:
For ^w the meat offering and the drink offering
Is withholden from the house of your God.
- 14 ^x Sanctify ye a fast, call ^y a solemn assembly,⁷
Gather the elders and ^z all the inhabitants of the land
Into the house of the LORD your God,—and cry unto the LORD.
- 15 ^a Alas for the day!—for ^b the day of the LORD is at hand,
And as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come.⁸
- 16 ^c Is not the meat cut off before our eyes,
Yea, ^d joy and gladness from the house of our God?
- 17 The seed is rotten under their clods,
The garners are laid desolate, the barns are broken down;—for the corn is withered.
- 18 How do ^e the beasts groan!
The herds of cattle are perplexed,—because they have no pasture;
Yea, the flocks of sheep are made desolate.
- 19 O LORD, ^f to thee will I cry:
For ^g the fire⁹ hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness,
And the flame hath burned all the trees of the field.
- 20 The beasts of the field ^h cry¹⁰ also unto thee:
For ⁱ the rivers of waters are dried up,
And the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness.
- 2 ^m Blow ye the trumpet in Zion,—and ⁿ sound an alarm in my holy mountain:
Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble:
For ^o the day of the LORD cometh, for it is nigh at hand;
- 2 ^p A day of darkness and of gloominess,—a day of clouds and of thick darkness,¹¹
^q As the morning spread upon the mountains:—^r a great people and a strong;
^s There hath not been ever the like,—neither shall be any more after it,

1 The four words translated 'palmerworm,' 'locust,' 'cankerworm,' and 'caterpillar,' are supposed to refer to the locust, either in its different stages of existence or its various species. They appear to mean respectively the gnawing, the swarming or burking, the licking, and the consuming insect; all expressive of its destructiveness.

2 The calamity will particularly affect those who are given to excess in drinking, and who will thus be deprived of those enjoyments which they most value.

3 Rather, 'lioness.' The invasion of a country by a swarm of locusts is a fearful calamity. They sometimes cover the earth for several miles; and, wherever they spread, the verdure of the country entirely disappears, the corn is consumed, and the trees and plants are stripped of their leaves, and the rind is peeled from the young shoots.

4 Rather, 'broken' by their strong mandibles, or by the numbers which settle upon it. The next clause mentions the stripping off of the bark, which lays bare the white wood.

5 The land (mentioned in ver. 6) is here addressed.

6 That is, with sackcloth.

7 Among the Jews a public assembly appears commonly to have been connected with a general fast, for the purpose of making united confession and prayer.

8 Comp. Isa. xiii. 6, and note. It is probable that both prophets used a well-known phrase.

9 This may be a figure for scorching drought, or it may refer to the actual kindling of the herbage through extreme heat.

10 Rather, 'pant;' as in Ps. xlii. 1.

11 Here, as in ch. i. 4, four nearly synonymous words are used to depict this terrible visitation, the darkness of which shall spread as irresistibly and widely as the morning light does over all the land.

Even to the years of many generations.

- 3 'A fire devoureth before them;—and behind them a flame burneth :
The land is as "the garden of Eden before them,
" And behind them a desolate wilderness;—yea, and nothing shall escape them.
- 4 "The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses ;¹
And as horsemen, so shall they run.
- 5 "Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap,
Like the noise of a flame of fire that devoureth the stubble,
" As a strong people set in battle array.²
- 6 Before their face the people shall be much pained :
" All faces shall gather blackness.
- 7 "They shall run like mighty men;—they shall climb the wall like men of war ;
And they shall march every one on his ways,
And they shall not break their ranks :³
- 8 Neither shall one thrust another;—they shall walk every one in his path :
And when they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded.
- 9 They shall run to and fro in the city ;
They shall run upon the wall,—they shall climb up upon the houses ;
They shall "enter in at the windows "like a thief.
- 10 "The earth shall quake before them;—the heavens shall tremble :
" The sun and the moon shall be dark,—and the stars shall withdraw their shining ;
- 11 "And the LORD shall utter his voice before "his army :
For his camp is very great :—" for he is strong that executeth his word :
For the "day of the LORD is great and very terrible;—and "who can abide it ?
- 12 Therefore also now, saith the LORD,
" Turn ye even to me with all your heart,
And "with fasting, "and with weeping, and with mourning :
- 13 And "rend your heart, and not "your garments,⁴
And turn unto the LORD your God :—for he is "gracious and merciful,
" Slow to anger, and of great kindness,—"and repenteth him of the evil.
- 14 "Who knoweth if he will return and repent,—and leave "a blessing behind him ;
Even "a meat offering⁵ and a drink offering unto the LORD your God ?
- 15 "Blow the trumpet in Zion,—"sanctify a fast,—call a solemn assembly :
- 16 Gather the people, "sanctify the congregation,—"assemble the elders,
"Gather the children, and those that suck the breasts :
"Let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber,—and the bride out of her closet.⁶
- 17 Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep "between the porch and the altar,⁷
"And let them say, "Spare thy people, O LORD,
And give not thine heritage to reproach,—that the heathen should rule over them :
"Wherefore should they say among the people,—Where is their God ?
- 18 Then will the LORD "be jealous for his land,—"and pity his people.
- 19 Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people,
Behold, I will send you "corn, and wine, and oil,
And ye shall be satisfied therewith :
And I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen :
- 20 But "I will remove far off from you "the northern army,⁸
And will drive him into a land barren and desolate,
With his face "toward the east sea,⁹—and his hinder part "toward the utmost sea,¹⁰
"And his stink¹¹ shall come up,—and his ill savour shall come up,
Because he hath done great things.¹²

⁶ Those who would commonly be excused from appearing in public congregations should now come forth. See Deut. xxiv. 5.

⁷ That is, in the priests' court, between the altar of burnt-offering and the holy place.

⁸ Coming into Palestine (as locusts sometimes do) from Syria. But as this is not the quarter from which they usually come, the promise seems to point to the removal of the northern invaders: see note on ch. i. 1.

⁹ That is, the Dead Sea.

¹⁰ Rather, 'the hinder (i. e. the western) sea;' the Mediterranean.

¹¹ Referring to the putrid heaps of dead locusts. The sudden destruction of the vast army of Sennacherib, when Hezekiah and his people had humbled themselves before God, may be regarded as one fulfilment of this promise.

¹² He hath dealt proudly. But God will be exalted over him (ver. 21).

- 21 'Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice:—for the LORD will do great things.
 22 Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field:—for ^xthe pastures of the wilderness do spring:
 For the tree beareth her fruit,—the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength.
 23 Be glad then, ye children of Zion,—and ^yrejoice in the LORD your God:
 For he hath given you the former rain moderately,¹
 And he ^zwill cause to come down for you ^athe rain,
 The former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.
 24 And the floors shall be full of wheat,—and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.
 25 And I will restore to you the years ^bthat the locust hath eaten,
 The cankerworm, and the caterpillar, and the palmerworm,
^cMy great army which I sent among you.
 26 And ye shall ^deat in plenty, and be satisfied,
 And praise the name of the LORD your God,
 That hath dealt wondrously with you:—^eand my people shall never be ashamed.
 27 ^fAnd ye shall know that I am ^gin the midst of Israel,
 And that ^hI am the LORD your God, and none else:
 And my people shall never be ashamed.

Promises of great blessings to the church; and threatenings against her enemies.

- 28 'AND² it shall come to pass afterward,
 That I ⁱwill pour out³ my spirit upon all flesh;
^jAnd your sons and ^kyour daughters shall prophesy,
 Your old men shall dream dreams,—your young men shall see visions.
 29 And also upon ^lthe servants and upon the handmaids⁴
 In those days, will I pour out my spirit.
 30 And ^mI will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth,
 Blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.
 31 ⁿThe sun shall be turned into darkness,—and the moon into blood,⁵ ^oBefore the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.
 32 And it shall come to pass,
 That ^pwhosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered:
 For ^qin mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance,⁶
 As the LORD hath said,—and in ^rthe remnant whom the LORD shall call.
 3 For, behold, ^sin those days, and in that time,
 When I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem,
^tI will also gather all nations,
 And will bring them down into ^uthe valley of Jehoshaphat,⁷
 And ^vwill plead with them there—for my people and for my heritage Israel,
 Whom they have scattered among the nations,—and parted my land.
 3 And they have ^wcast lots for my people;—and have given a boy for an harlot,
 And sold a girl for wine,⁸—that they might drink.

1 Rather, 'for he giveth you the former rain in just or due measure.' Many render the clause, 'he giveth you the Teacher of righteousness;' and understand it as referring personally to the Messiah. But the latter clause shows that this is a promise of restoration and of future gospel blessings, taking its peculiar form from the drought mentioned in ch. i. 15—20.

2 The prophet, having directed the hopes of his readers to the days of Messiah, now describes the abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit in supernatural gifts and sanctifying grace by which those times are to be distinguished (vers. 28, 29), as well as the terrible convulsions by which that blessed era is to be introduced (30—32). For then the enemies of God and of his church shall be judged and recompensed (iii. 1—8), all their united powers shall be overthrown, and their multitudes destroyed by the wrath of Zion's God (9—16, 19); whilst Jerusalem shall be cleansed, enriched, abundantly blessed, and made a blessing (17, 18, 20, 21). Some have restricted the application of some of these predictions to certain portions of Jewish history; but it is far more in accordance with the connection, and with the other prophetic writings, to regard them as referring to the conflicts and the ultimate triumph of the church, and to the destruction of all the powers which are hostile to the kingdom of the Redeemer. Comp. Isa. xxiv.—xxvii., and notes. On the quotation and use of ch. ii. 28—32 by the apostle Peter, see Acts ii. 16—21, and notes.

3 This evidently means an effusion far larger than at any former period. God's Spirit had been with his church from the beginning; but his influences had not been so largely communicated as they were to be after the manifestation of the Saviour, when his supernatural gifts, as well as his sanctifying grace, should be bestowed.

4 The most despised classes in society shall participate in these Divine influences.

5 The time of mercy to the church will be a time of vengeance upon the impenitent. Thus the first extensive diffusion of the gospel and the overthrow of the Jewish nation were contemporaneous.

6 Rather, 'shall be the escaped;' referring to those who 'call upon the name of Jehovah,' and are 'saved.'

7 This name has been affixed by Jewish tradition to the valley of the Kidron, between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. But some suppose it to be the valley in which Jehovah destroyed the combined hosts of the Ammonites, Moabites, etc., when arrayed against Jehoshaphat, and which, in 2 Chron. xx. 26, is called 'the valley of Berachah.' It is probable that this place and event are alluded to here, but only as representing the final destruction of all the worldly powers which oppose God's kingdom. Hence the king's name 'Jehoshaphat' (signifying God judges) is substituted for 'Berachah' (blessing).

8 Making a boy the price of a harlot's company, and a girl the price of a draught of wine. No language could more forcibly express the reckless and contemptuous way in which their oppressors had treated them.

- 4 Yea, and what have ye to do with me,¹ ^bO Tyre, and Zidon,
And all the coasts of Palestine?
^cWill ye render me a recompence?—And if ye recompense me,
Swiftly and speedily will I return your recompence upon your own head;
- 5 Because ye have taken ^dmy silver and my gold,
And have carried into your temples my goodly ^epleasant things:²
- 6 The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem ^fhave ye sold unto the Grecians,
That ye might remove them far from their border.
- 7 Behold, ^gI will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them,
And will return your recompence upon your own head:
- 8 And ^hI will sell your sons and your daughters
Into the hand of the children of Judah,
And they shall sell them to the ⁱSabeans,³ to a people ^kfar off:
For the LORD hath spoken it.
- 9 ^lProclaim ye this among the Gentiles;
Prepare war, wake up the mighty men,
Let all the men of war draw near; let them come up:
- 10 ^mBeat your plowshares into swords,—and your pruninghooks into spears:⁴
ⁿLet the weak say, I am strong.
- 11 ^oAssemble⁵ yourselves, and come, all ye heathen,
And gather yourselves together round about:
Thither cause ^pthy mighty ones⁶ to come down, O LORD.
- 12 Let the heathen be wakened, ^qand come up—to the valley of Jehoshaphat:
For there will I sit to ^rjudge all the heathen round about.
- 13 ^sPut ye in the sickle, for 'the harvest⁷ is ripe:
Come, get you down; for the ^tpress is full,—the fats overflow;
For their wickedness is great.
- 14 ^uMultitudes, multitudes—in ^vthe valley of decision⁸ [or, threshing]:
For ^wthe day of the LORD is near in the valley of decision.
- 15 The ^xsun and the moon shall be darkened,
And the stars shall withdraw their shining.
- 16 The LORD also shall ^yroar out of Zion,—and utter his voice from Jerusalem;
And ^zthe heavens and the earth shall shake.
^aBut the LORD will be the hope of his people,
And ^bthe strength of the children of Israel.
- 17 So ^cshall ye know that I am the LORD your God
Dwelling in Zion, ^dmy holy mountain.
Then shall ^eJerusalem be holy,
And there shall no ^fstrangers pass through her any more.
- 18 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That the mountains shall ^gdrop down new wine,—and the hills shall flow with milk,
^hAnd all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters,
And ⁱa fountain shall come forth of the house of the LORD,
And shall water ^jthe valley of Shittim.⁹
- 19 ^kEgypt shall be a desolation,—and ^lEdom shall be a desolate wilderness, ^mFor the violence¹⁰ against the children of Judah,
Because they have shed innocent blood in their land.
- 20 But Judah shall dwell ⁿfor ever,—and Jerusalem from generation to generation.
- 21 For I will ^ocleanse their blood that I have not cleansed:
^pFor the LORD dwelleth in Zion.

1 Or, 'What are ye [doing] to me?' What injury have I done to you that you treat my people as if you had something to retaliate? If you do so, I will avenge them upon you. The Phœnicians are mentioned because they appear to have been always ready to take advantage of the depression of the Israelites: see Ezek. xxvi. 2.

4 The result of the establishment of Messiah's kingdom is just the reverse of this: see Isa. ii. 1—4, and notes. But the introduction of it into a sinful world excites the most deadly hostility of man, which calls for the judgments of God. See Matt. x. 34.

9 The Moabite plains near the mouth of the Jordan: see ref. Perhaps 'Shittim' is mentioned because it was the scene of Moab's temptation and of Israel's sin and punishment (comp. Mic. vi. 5). And these words may be designed to intimate that the church shall no more be polluted by the world, but shall diffuse a purifying influence over the most degraded sinners.

10 The Egyptians, as the earliest oppressors of Israel; and the Edomites, who cherished their hostility to the last, and showed it especially at the fall of Jerusalem (see Ps. cxxxvii. 7), are repeatedly brought forward by the prophets as representatives of the most inveterate enemies of the church. See Isa. lii. 9; lxiii. 1.

A M O S.

As the prophet Amos fulfilled his ministry in the reigns of Uzziah and of Jeroboam II. (ch. i. 1), he must have been contemporary with Hosea; and, like him, he was sent to the ten tribes (ch. vii. 10—13). He did not, however, belong to the kingdom of Israel; but was an inhabitant, and probably a native, of Tekoa, a city south of Jerusalem, on the borders of the vast open pastures of the hill country of Judah.

He was by profession a shepherd, and a husbandman (ch. vii. 14), 'not a prophet, or a prophet's son' (i. e. not trained to that office); but he was called, by an irresistible Divine commission (ch. iii. 8; vii. 15), to prophesy to Israel. To this fact he alludes, when Amaziah, the idolatrous priest in Bethel, charged him with conspiring against Jeroboam. His previous occupation ought to have removed all suspicion of political connection with the house of David; whilst it illustrates the sovereignty and wisdom of Him who selects his ministers from the tents of the shepherd, as well as from the palace of the monarch, adapting each for the duties to which he is appointed.

The style of Amos is simple, but by no means deficient in picturesque beauty. His manner of life may be traced in his original and striking illustrations, which are taken mostly from rural employments, and are painted with the life and freshness of nature. His knowledge of the events of remote antiquity (ch. ix. 7), and of others more recent, not elsewhere recorded (ch. vi. 2), the regular course of his thoughts, and the correctness of his language, all tend to show that the responsible and often dangerous (ch. iii. 12) occupation of a shepherd was still as favourable to mental culture as it had been in the days of Moses and David.

The people of the kingdom of Israel were now rapidly filling up the measure of their sins. The mission of Amos was therefore mainly one of warning and threatening. He rebukes, among other things, the corruption of their manners, which kept pace with their prosperity: he charges the great men with partiality as judges, and violence towards the poor: and he foretells, as a punishment from God, the captivity of the ten tribes in a foreign country; which was accomplished about sixty years afterwards, when Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria, overthrew the kingdom. But, beyond this calamity, the prophet is commissioned to foretell new things in the distant future, and to assure the people that God will not utterly destroy the house of Israel; but, after sifting and cleansing it among the nations, will raise it again to more than its former glory and happiness, in the kingdom of the Messiah (ch. vii.—ix.) One of these cheering intimations of future blessings is quoted by the apostle James (Acts xv. 16, 17), to show that the favour in reserve for the Jews will be extended to all the nations of the earth.

1 Chapters i., ii. denounce Divine judgments, first on the heathen nations around Israel, and then on Judah and Israel themselves. Fire, captivity, and sword shall depopulate Damascus (ch. i. 3—5), Philistia (6—8), Tyre (9, 10), Edom (11, 12), Ammon (13—15), and Moab (ii. 1—3), as a punishment for their extreme cruelty to Israel, and to others whom they have oppressed; they shall also ravage Judah (4, 5) for its faithlessness and idolatry; but they shall fall with peculiar severity upon Israel, on whose sins and punishments the prophet dwells at length. He exposes their oppressive treatment of the poor, their bold and obscene idolatry (6—8), and their attempts to corrupt God's servants (12); reminds them that the ancient and long-continued favours and instructions which they have received from God add to these sins the guilt of ingratitude (9—11), and warns them of their speedy overthrow (13—16).

2 More properly, shepherds or sheep-breeders.

3 Now Tekoa, situated on an elevated hill six miles south of Bethlehem. In its vicinity were extensive tracts of pasture-land, called 'the wilderness of Tekoa' (2 Chron. xx. 20), which still supports a vast number of flocks.

4 As Jeroboam II. died in the fifteenth year of Uzziah's reign, this earthquake could not have happened later than the seventeenth year of Uzziah. Palestine is subject to such convulsions; but this was doubtless peculiarly awful, so that it was distinguished and remembered as 'the earthquake,' and is alluded to long afterwards in Zech. xiv. 5.

5 As the metaphors of Amos are mostly of a pastoral character, this probably refers to the roar of the lion rather than the shout of the warrior. See ch. iii. 8.

6 Or, 'pastures'; as in Psa. xxiii. 2.

7 This is probably 'Carmel by the sea' (see Isa. xxxv. 2; Jer. xlv. 18), which has always been celebrated for the luxuriance of its woods and herbage.

8 Because of its multiplied or repeated transgressions. This expression is repeated at the commencement of each of the following denunciations; and then one offence on the part of each of the guilty nations is specified as being peculiarly aggravated. See note on Prov. vi. 16.

9 Or, 'I will not reverse it;' i. e. the decree of punishment.

10 'Gilead' here signifies the tribes east of the Jordan. See 2 Kings x. 32; xiii. 3, 7, where both Hazael and his son Ben-hadad are mentioned, and their cruel oppression is described as 'threshing.'

¹ As 'Aven,' or 'On,' is the Egyptian name for the city of the sun, Heliopolis (see Gen. xli. 45; Ezck. xxx. 17), this may refer to the Syrian Heliopolis, the celebrated city of Baalbek, which lay in the Bukaa or valley between Lebanon and Hermon. Or it may mean 'the valley of vanity,' i. e. of idolatry. See note on Hos. iv. 15.

² 'Beth-eden,' the house of pleasure, is probably the name of a royal residence in the mountains of Lebanon, called by Ptolemy (v. 15) 'Paradise.'

³ See note on 2 Kings xvi. 9.

⁴ Gaza was the most important city of the Philistines. The old site has long been forsaken, but the modern town is still large and populous. The other ancient Philistine cities are now small villages; and the site of Gath is not known. See note on Isa. xiv. 29.

⁵ Rather, 'a full captivity;' i. e. they swept off all that were within their reach. This is probably the invasion which is recorded in 2 Chron. xxi. 16, 17.

⁹ The Ammonites aimed utterly to exterminate the Israelites, that they might extend their own territory.

¹⁰ See note on Jer. xlix. 2.

¹¹ According to an uncertain tradition preserved by Jerome, these were the bones of the king of Edom who was allied with Jehoshaphat and Jehoram (2 Kings iii. 9). The disinterment was an act of cold-blooded revenge. Although this crime was committed not against Israel, but against Edom, it was not therefore overlooked.

¹² The instrument of his revenge shall be the means of his punishment.

¹³ Probably 'idols:' see note on Ps. xxxi. 6.

- 6 Thus saith the LORD;—For three transgressions of ^c Israel, and for four,
I will not turn away the punishment thereof;
Because ^d they sold the righteous for silver,—and the poor for a pair of shoes;¹
- 7 ^e That pant after² the dust of the earth on the head of the poor,

^x Neither shall the mighty deliver himself:
15 Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow;
And he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself:
^y Neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself.

Shall flee away naked⁸ in that day,—saith the LORD.

¹ Rather, 'sandals;' mere soles fastened by thongs; things of the smallest value. Compare Ezek. xiii. 19. The word 'sold' is to be understood here in the sense of selling into slavery, which was frequently done. See Lev. xxv. 39; 2 Kings iv. 1.

² The meaning probably is, that they grudge the poor the very dust that they put on their heads as a mark of mourning.

⁴ They not only appropriated to their own use the garments which had been pledged (see Exod. xxii. 6), and the fines which had been levied; but to this injustice they added the impiety of using these things at their idol-feasts.

⁵ See note on Gen. xv. 16.

⁶ See note on Numb. vi. 2.

⁷ Rather, 'Behold, I will press you down,' etc. (i. e. I will overpower you with punishment), 'and flight shall fail,' etc.

⁸ That is, the bravest shall throw off his armour and flee.

⁹ The people of Israel are reminded of the responsibility resulting from their peculiar privileges (vers. 1, 2), and then, by a series of pungent and suggestive questions, they are taught that they cannot expect God's friendship while they oppose his will (3), that he does not threaten, nor will they suffer, without cause (4, 5), and that they may well fear when God requires his servants to warn them (6–8). And their heathen neighbours are called to observe and bear witness to their disorders and their punishment (9–15).

¹¹ The lion roars when eager for his prey, or exulting over it. He does not roar without cause; so God does not threaten and punish where there is no sin.

¹² It was no vain alarm which the prophets were sounding in the ears of their countrymen; and, whoever might be the instruments, God was the author of the chastisement.

¹³ The word 'evil' here means calamity, as in Gen. xix. 19.

¹⁴ Before God inflicts his strokes, he mercifully warns men by his prophets, whose words may well excite alarm, for they are uttered under his impulse.

- 8 ^f The lion hath roared, who will not fear?
The Lord God hath spoken, ^g who can but prophesy?
- 9 Publish in the palaces at Ashdod,—and in the palaces in the land of Egypt,

1 The disorders connected with acts of oppression.

2 For the fulfilment of this, see 2 Kings xvii. 5, 6.

3 The shepherd was expected to make good any loss that occurred in his flock, unless he could prove that the animal had been torn by a wild beast, by producing some fragment as evidence of the fact (Exod. xxii. 10—13). In allusion to this custom, the prophet says that no more than the mere fragments of God's flock shall be left to show how they have been devoured.

4 According to the present Hebrew vowel-points, this should be translated, 'in the corner (i.e. the place of honour) of a sofa, and in the damask of a couch;' referring to the luxurious habits of the people.

5 Rather, 'against the house of Jacob.'

6 As idolatry has been the parent of other crimes, so it shall be punished with them.

7 The nobles are charged with oppression and threatened with exile (vers. 1—3); and all the people are charged with superstitious will-worship (4, 5), for which they have already suffered famine, drought, blight, pestilence, and the destruction of some of their cities; but as all these judgments have failed to reform them (6—11), destruction, like that of Egypt or of Sodom, must follow (12, 13).

8 See note on Ps. xxii. 12. In this passage, masculine and feminine forms are intermingled, to designate the effeminacy and tyranny of the courtiers and companions of the king of Israel (compare Hos. vii. 5), who is called 'their master,' as they are called 'kine,' or cows, of Bashan.

9 That Divine excellence which their sin had outraged is here engaged to vindicate itself. God's holiness must be hostile to the sinner.

10 Perhaps the best rendering of this verse is, 'And at the breaches (of your walls) ye shall go forth, each straight before her; and ye shall throw yourselves down from the citadel, saith Jehovah.' The figure is derived from the headlong rushing of frightened cattle.

11 See Deut. xiv. 28, and note. This seems to mean, You may maintain your worship carefully, but you only provoke me; for I have forbidden your calf-worship, and have chosen Jerusalem, not Beth-el, for my sanctuary.

12 See Lev. vii. 13, and note.

13 This is the same as 'want of bread.'

14 The 'latter rain,' which falls in Palestine about February, is necessary for the growth of the corn: see note on Deut. xi. 14. This was not yet absolutely withheld, but was very partial.

- 8 So two or three cities wandered unto one city, to drink water ;
But they were not satisfied :—^k yet have ye not returned unto me,—saith the LORD.
- 9 ' I have smitten you with blasting and mildew :
When your gardens and your vineyards
And your fig trees and your olive trees increased,
^m The palmerworm devoured them :
Yet have ye not returned unto me,—saith the LORD.
- 10 I have sent among you the pestilence "after the manner of Egypt :¹
Your young men have I slain with the sword,—ⁿ and have taken away your horses ;
And I have made "the stink of your camps to come up unto your nostrils :
^q Yet have ye not returned unto me,—saith the LORD.
- 11 I have overthrown some of you,—as God overthrew "Sodom and Gomorrah,²
^s And ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning :
^t Yet have ye not returned unto me,—saith the LORD.
- 12 Therefore "thus³ will I do unto thee, O Israel :
And because I will do this unto thee,—^x prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.
- 13 For, lo, he that formeth the mountains,—and createth the wind,

1 That is, as I formerly did to the Egyptians. See refs.

2 This refers to some awful catastrophe, not noticed elsewhere, by which some of the cities of Israel were burnt, whilst others narrowly escaped, like a brand plucked from the fire. Comp. Zech. iii. 2 ; 1 Cor. iii. 15.

3 As I have done to Egypt and Sodom, and have threatened (Deut. xxviii.), and have already begun, to deal with thee.

4 Israel's God is almighty, omniscient, and supreme. How awful for the ungodly to be summoned to meet Him !

5 Lamenting the approaching desolation of Israel (vers. 1–3), the prophet calls upon them to seek not their idols but Jehovah (4–6). His power is opposed to unrighteousness (7–9) such as they have practised (10–13), and from which they must turn to God if they would escape his anger (14–17).

6 Or, 'over you,' as a funeral lamentation.

7 Probably to war. The population of a city was reckoned by the number of warriors it could send out.

8 A city of Judah (1 Kings xix. 3), on its southern frontier. From this passage and ch. viii. 14, it appears to have been at this time a place of idolatrous resort.

9 The kingdom of Ephraim, or the ten tribes.

10 Rather, 'and who cast righteousness down to the ground.'

11 The Pleiades : see notes on Job ix. 9 ; xxxviii. 31.

12 Rather, 'That flasheth forth destruction upon the strong ; and destruction cometh upon the fortress.' The power of the Almighty Creator is put forth to destroy the stronghold of the sinner.

13 This may mean the prophets, who uttered their rebukes 'in the gate,' the most frequented part of the city ; or it may be rendered, 'him that contendeth in the gate,' referring to those who brought these men to public trial. Comp. ver. 12, and Isa. xxix. 21.

14 Or, 'presents ;' i. e. bribes.

- 12 For ^c I know your manifold transgressions—and your mighty sins.
^d They afflict the just,—they take a bribe,
 And they ^e turn aside the poor ^f in the gate from their right.

^o Wailing shall be in all streets;
 And they shall say in all the highways, Alas! alas!
 And they shall call the husbandman to mourning,
 And ^p such as are skilful of lamentation ^q to wailing.
 17 And ^r in all vineyards shall be wailing:

1 In such a time, the wise and pious can only wait in silence for God's interposition to check the overwhelming power of public and private wickedness.

2 See Eccles. xii. 5; Jer. ix. 17, and notes.

3 Two grounds of false confidence are here exposed; namely, first, God's expected interposition, which however would be to punish rather than to bless a people so faithless to Him (vers. 18—27); and, secondly, the strength of the two capitals of Israel and Judah, which encouraged the inhabitants, notwithstanding the fall of other cities, in luxurious security and disregard of the sufferings of the rest of the country (ch. vi. 1—6). For these reasons, they and their cities shall be the chief sufferers by pestilence and earthquake (7—11), that they may learn how unprofitable is their sin, and how unavailing their strength in the time of God's chastisements (12—14).

4 'The day of the Lord' may be either the day of his anger, which these men boldly despise, as if they said, 'Let him do his worst;' or, more probably, the day of his interposition; which they thought must be to them, as Israelites, a time of blessing; but which, because they were faithless to his covenant, would bring to them only darkness and misery. Such was Christ's first coming, and such will be the day of his second appearing.

5 Proverbial expressions representing men as finding destruction where they hoped to find safety.

6 See Isa. i. 10—15, and notes.

7 Rather, 'Did ye offer unto me, etc., and (yet, i. e. at the same time) ye bore,' etc. The Israelites are accused of having, from the earliest periods of their history, mixed superstitious practices with a professed attention to the ritual observances of the Mosaic law.

8 This is rendered by some, 'Ye carried the shrine of your king, and the pillar of your images, the star of your gods.' The heathen were accustomed to make portable shrines; and several of the deities of Nineveh are represented as being carried on the shoulders of men, each deity having a star over its head. Those who adopt the rendering of the text suppose 'Chiun' to be the planet Saturn, of which they think Remphan to be the Egyptian name. The text is quoted in Acts vii. 43 nearly according to the Septuagint version.

9 Even to Babylon. See Acts vii. 43, and note.

10 Rather, 'the distinguished men of the chief of the nations;' i. e. the princes of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah, who, trusting in the strength of their capitals, set the people, who looked up to them, an example of confident ease and recklessness of Divine warnings. The same epithets are applied by Isaiah (Isa. xxxii. 9, 11) to the luxurious women of Israel.

11 Or, Calno (Isa. x. 9), probably Ctesiphon; situated opposite Seleucia, and for a time the capital of the Parthians.

1 Gath was one of the principal cities of the Philistines, the residence of Goliath. Uzziah, in whose reign Amos prophesied, took it and destroyed its wall (2 Chron. xxvi. 6), and probably also the entire city, as it is not mentioned in ch. i. 6—8.

2 Of the various explanations given to this question the most probable is, See how these mighty cities are humbled and reduced, and learn to fear my judgments.

3 Banishing all fear of the threatened punishment, men hold fast to their iniquities.

4 The judgment-seat, where injustice was practised.

5 Cultivating merely for their own diversion an art which David consecrated to the service of God. The word here rendered 'bowls' (ver. 6) is everywhere else applied to the capacious vessels used in the sanctuary. These men were not only voluptuous, but profane.

6 Rather, 'and the shouting of those that recline (on couches) shall depart.' Having been chief in sin, they shall be chief in punishment.

7 See note on Ps. xlvii. 4 ; and Ezek. xxiv. 21.

8 Or, 'A man's uncle, even he who burneth him, shall take him up,' etc. This probably means that the mortality will be so great as to throw the care of the dead upon their more distant relatives ; who, to prevent infection, will burn the bodies instead of burying them.

9 Or, 'Be silent ; for [it is not a time] to mention the name of the Lord.' The meaning is not very obvious, but perhaps it is this : that one of the household, confined to the chamber by the disease, says that he is the sole survivor ; and he is told that it is of no use now to call upon God, for his case is hopeless.

10 You cannot reasonably expect to profit by injustice.

11 That is, power. The strength in which you trust and rejoice for success is 'nought,' when opposed to the agents of my justice.

12 Rather, 'the stream of the Arabah ;' i. e. the Jordan-valley. As this is probably the boundary mentioned in 2 Kings xiv. 25, it is either the Kidron, or some stream falling into the northern part of the Dead Sea.

13 Chapters vii., viii., ix. 1—10 contain a series of symbolical visions indicating progressive Divine judgments. The first (ch. vii. 1—3) and the second (4—6) predict devastation ; against which Amos pleads with some success. The third foreshows the destruction of the idol-temples and of the royal house (7—9). Upon delivering this vision, the prophet is, by a perversion of his words, charged with treason ; but he defends himself, and foretells the punishment of his accuser (10—17). The fourth vision shows the ripeness of the people for the judgments which are at hand (viii. 1—3) ; and is followed by a catalogue of their crimes, with their retributions (4—14). In the fifth, the Divine Judge appears at the idolatrous altar, whence their other sins had originated, and decrees the destruction of the idol-temple and of its votaries ; declaring that all attempts at escape are hopeless, for their Judge is the omnipotent and omnipresent Creator, who has cast off this rebellious people, and will let none escape, whilst he will take care that none of his servants shall perish (ix. 1—10).

14 Rather, 'locusts.'

15 'The king's mowings,' or croppings, may refer either to the exaction by the monarch of the first growth of the ^b I will not again pass by them any more:

 9 ^c And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate,
 And the sanctuaries⁴ of Israel shall be laid waste;
 And ^d I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.
 10 Then Amaziah ^e the priest of Beth-el sent to ^f Jeroboam king of Israel, saying,
 Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land 11 is ^g not able to bear all his words. For thus Amos saith, ^h Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and ⁱ Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

grass for his own cattle (see 1 Sam. viii. 14); or to the invasions of the Syrian kings (2 Kings xiii. 3-7). If locusts destroyed the after-crop, there was no hope of any grass till the summer was passed.

¹ Rather, 'Who is Jacob that he should stand?' i. e. How can a nation already brought so low by thy judgments endure any more? And so in ver. 5.

² Rather, 'the part;' i. e. the other part; the dry land in opposition to the deep. The 'fire' denotes a heavier judgment than the 'locusts.'

³ The application of the line and plummet to a completed building implies that its correctness and stability are being tested, and that, if found faulty or dangerous, it will be taken down. This symbol therefore represents God's trial of a people, which often results in their condemnation. Comp. Isa. xxviii. 17; 2 Kings xxi. 13.

⁴ Their idol-temples.

⁵ Gain thy living by prophesying there. The idolatrous priest apparently regards Amos as merely a hireling, like himself, doing his work for the maintenance which the king gave him.

⁶ Rather, 'the king's sanctuary.' As Bethel was frequented by the kings of Israel for their idolatrous worship, it had also a royal residence.

⁷ That is, I was not a disciple of the prophets. See note on 1 Sam. x. 12.

⁴ Your prosperity shall be suddenly eclipsed by the deepest and darkest sorrow (ver. 10). Comp. Jer. xv. 9.

⁵ Those who despise God's faithful messengers shall have none to guide and comfort them in perplexity and distress.

⁷ This peculiar designation of the golden calf, founded on the words of Deut. ix. 21, shows the aggravation of their crime, as being a repetition of that which had brought upon their ancestors severe punishment.

⁸ That is, 'As thy god liveth;' a formula of swearing (see 1 Sam. xx. 3). 'The manner of Beer-sheba' is an elliptical phrase for the idol whose worship was practised there. See ch. v. 5.

⁹ Many suppose this to be the altar at Jerusalem. But the reference of this series of visions to the northern kingdom, and the mention of their idolatries in the preceding verses, render it not improbable that this was the altar in 'the king's sanctuary' at Beth-el (ch. vii. 13). Already had Jehovah smitten Jeroboam's altar there (1 Kings xiii. 5); and he now appears, to demolish utterly the idol-temple and destroy its worshippers.

¹⁰ Rather, 'Smite the capital, and the thresholds shall shake, and smite them upon the head of all of them,' etc. Bring down the temple upon the heads of those who worship in it: comp. Judg. xvi. 22—30.

4 Like the other prophets, Amos is instructed to cheer God's faithful people with the prospect of Messiah's days, when the house and kingdom of David shall be restored in surpassing glory (ver. 11), and his former subjects and enemies shall yield a cheerful homage (12). Then shall the ancient promises be fulfilled in the abundant and eternal blessedness of God's people (13—15). Comp. Isa. xi., xxxv., lx., and notes.

5 The Edomites had been subjects, but were now, as ever, the bitterest enemies of Israel. Yet these, with other 'heathen,' are to be blessed through Him who fills the throne of David. The apostle James partially quotes this prophecy from the Septuagint (Acts xv. 15—17) expressly to show that the blessings of the covenant of mercy were to be extended to the Gentile world.

OBADIAH.

THE date of Obadiah's ministry is uncertain; but it was probably between the destruction of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, in the year 588 B. C., and the conquest of Idumea by Nebuchadnezzar, which took place about five years afterwards. At this time Edom was an independent nation, priding itself upon its mountain fastnesses and the wisdom for which it was proverbial.

The jealousy which had existed between the two brothers, Esau and Jacob, was perpetuated among their posterity. The Edomites unkindly refused the Israelites a passage through their territory (Numb. xx. 14—21). They also joined zealously in the great confederacies formed against David, until they were for a time completely subdued by him (2 Sam. viii. 14). They were among the first to revolt in the latter days of Solomon; but, though they made many attempts to regain their independence, they did not succeed till the time of Jehoram (2 Chron. xxi. 10). From that period they were among the bitterest of Israel's enemies: sometimes, indeed, conquered, as by Amaziah and Uzziah (2 Kings xiv. 7; 2 Chron. xxvi. 2), but always ready to renew the conflict; and, when the whole race of Jacob was humbled, triumphing maliciously in its fall (Psa. cxxxvii. 7). So bitter and persevering was their hostility that they are often introduced by the prophets as representing the earthly powers that oppose God and his kingdom (Isa. xxxiv., lxiii.; Ezek. xxxv.)

Such aggravated and obstinate wickedness could not pass unpunished; and Obadiah was commanded to announce to the Edomites their ruin, and to give as the reason for it, not only their pride and presumptuous confidence in their own strength and wisdom, but chiefly their bitter enmity to the people of God.

But the chosen race themselves had just been carried into captivity; the holy land was deserted; and the chastisement denounced against the Edomites might therefore appear not to differ from that which had already been inflicted upon the seed of Jacob. The prophet, however, goes on to declare that Edom shall be as though it had never been, and shall be swallowed up for ever: while Israel shall rise again from her present fall; shall repossess not only her own land, but also Philistia and Edom; and shall finally rejoice in the holy reign of the promised Messiah.

The sins and punishment of Edom; and the future restoration and happiness of Israel.

1 THE¹ VISION OF OBADIAH.

Thus saith the Lord God^a concerning Edom;²

^b We³ have heard a rumour from the Lord,
And an ambassador⁴ is sent among the heathen,
Arise ye, and let us rise up⁵ against her in battle.

2 Behold, I have made thee small among the heathen:—thou art greatly despised.

3 The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee,
Thou that dwellest in the clefts^c of the rock,—whose habitation is high;
^d That saith in his heart,—Who shall bring me down to the ground?

4 ^e Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle,
And though thou^f set thy nest among the stars,
Thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord.

5 If^g thieves came to thee,—if robbers by night, (how art thou cut off!⁶)
Would they not have stolen till they had enough?

If the grapegatherers came to thee,—^h would they not leave some grapes?

6 How are the things of Esau searched out!—how are his hidden things sought up!

7 All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border:⁷

ⁱ The men that were at peace with thee have deceived thee,
And prevailed against thee;⁸

*They that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee:*⁹

^k *There is none understanding in him.*¹⁰

8 ^l Shall I not in that day, saith the Lord,—even destroy the wise men out of Edom,
And understanding out of the mount of Esau?

9 And thy^m mighty men, Oⁿ Teman, shall be dismayed,
To the end that^o every one of^p the mount of Esau may be cut off by slaughter.

10 For thy^q violence against thy brother Jacob¹¹
Shame shall cover thee, and^r thou shalt be cut off for ever.

11 In the day that thou stoodest on the other side,¹²
^s In the day that the strangers carried away captive his forces,
And foreigners entered into his gates,—and^t cast lots upon Jerusalem,
Even thou wast as one of them.

12 But thou shouldst not have^u looked on^x the day¹³ of thy brother,
In the day that he became a stranger;
Neither shouldst thou have^y rejoiced over the children of Judah,
In the day of their destruction;
Neither shouldst thou have spoken proudly,¹⁴—in the day of distress.

13 Thou shouldst not have entered into the gate of my people
In the day of their calamity;

1 Jehovah summons the nations to his aid against the Edomites (ver. 1); for the pride they take in their inaccessible fortresses shall be humbled (2—4); their hidden treasures shall all be carried off (5, 6); their allies, neighbours, and vassals shall disappoint, deceive, and injure them, and their boasted wisdom and strength shall fail them (7—9). Their terrible doom is then connected with their cruelty to Israel in the day of his calamity (10, 11); because they exulted over his sufferings, joined in spoiling his country, and treacherously slew his fugitives (12—14): therefore their turn to suffer is come, and their punishment shall have no termination (15, 16). But Israel shall be fully restored, shall triumph over Edom, and shall be blessed in the reign of Jehovah (17—21).

2 Edom, or Idumea, was the territory of the descendants of Esau (see Gen. xxv. 30; xxxvi. 8), who drove out the Horim and took possession of Mount Seir, the mountainous tract south of the Dead Sea, between the valley of the Arabah (now El-ghor) and the eastern desert. On its capital Sela, see 2 Kings xiv. 7; Jer. xlix. 16, and notes.

3 The prophet speaks in the name of his countrymen.

4 Or, 'messenger,' to summon them to God's work.

5 God himself will arise, and lead them on.

6 That is, utterly stripped; nothing is left.

7 Or, 'have sent thee to the frontier;' refusing to receive the messengers whom thou hast sent to ask for help.

8 Taking the conqueror's side; a retribution for Edom's conduct towards Israel (ver. 11).

9 That is, 'have given thee a secret blow.' But many substitute 'snare' for 'wound.'

10 That is, in Edom. See note on Jer. xlix. 7.

11 The word 'brother' is inserted to aggravate the sin of the Edomites, to whom the Hebrews had been instructed to show peculiar kindness (Deut. xxiii. 7). Enmity between nearly related nations has in it the guilt of fratricide.

12 That is, on the enemy's side.

13 Or, 'Look not (i. e. with pleasure) on the [evil] day of thy brother,' etc.

1 Perhaps 'the ravine,' or narrow pass.

2 When God chastises his own people, the time for punishing others must be very near : see 1 Pet. iv. 17, 18.

3 These words are probably addressed, by a sudden apostrophe, to the Jews. Great as were their sufferings, those of the nations which had attacked them shall not only be far greater, but shall be destructive ; whilst Judah (it is implied) shall be restored. But some understand the whole as applying to Edom.

4 This may refer to the temple and its services, from which Jerusalem was called the Holy City (now El-kuds, the holy). And the following verse may allude to the conquest of Edom by the Jews in the times of the Maccabees. But it may also represent the spiritual holiness of the church of God, which makes it the enemy of the ungodly. Comp. Isa. lx. 21 ; lxi. 1.

5 That is, the southern part of Palestine. The 'plain' is the low district on the west of Judah, near the cities of the Philistines. This prediction figuratively represents the extension of the church.

6 The exiles of the ten tribes were very numerous ; their deportation from their own land having been more complete than that of Judah. They are to spread northwards. On Zarephath, see note on 1 Kings xvii. 9.

7 An unknown district where some of the Jewish exiles were then located. Recent discoveries appear to support Jerome's rendering (which he derived from his Hebrew teacher) the Bosphorus.

8 Or, 'deliverers.' All who deliver God's people are 'judges' of his enemies. But Isaiah points more distinctly to the Messiah in this twofold character : see Isa. lxiii. 1—5, and notes.

JONAH.

JONAH was a native of Gath-hepher in Galilee. He is mentioned, in 2 Kings xiv. 25, as having predicted the extension of the kingdom of Israel to its former boundaries ; which was accomplished by means of the valour and prudence of Jeroboam II. He is supposed to have lived during that reign ; or perhaps at an earlier period, about the time of Jehoahaz. In either case he is the most ancient of the prophets whose writings we possess ; and may have been a contemporary, and as some think, a disciple of Elisha.

This book, with the exception of the prayer in ch. ii., is a simple narrative, apparently extracted from a larger volume ; for it begins with the word 'and,' and terminates abruptly. It relates that Jonah, being sent on a mission to Nineveh, attempts to flee to Tarshish ; but is overtaken by a storm, is cast into the sea, and is swallowed by a great fish, in whose belly he continues for three days (ch. i.), when, earnestly praying to God, he is wonderfully delivered (ch. ii.) At the renewed command of God he goes to Nineveh, and announces its destruction ; upon which the Ninevites, believing his words, fast, pray, repent, and are graciously spared (ch. iii.) Jonah is vexed at the Divine forbearance, and wishes for death. Leaving the city, he is sheltered by a gourd, which, however, shortly withers ; and Jonah, manifesting great impatience, is taught, through his concern about the gourd, the propriety of God's mercy to Nineveh (ch. iv.)

That this book is a strictly historical narrative, to be understood according to its plain literal import, and not allegorically, as some have argued, is evident, not only from the plain meaning of the language employed, but also from the manner in which the ministry of Jonah, and the main facts of his history, are referred to by our Lord (Matt. xii. 39—41; xvi. 4; Luke xi. 29, 30), who recognises his prophetic office as explicitly as he does that of Elijah, Isaiah, and Daniel; speaks of his being in the belly of the fish as a real miracle; grounds upon it as a fact the certainty of a future analogous event in his own history; and after mentioning the prophet's preaching at Nineveh, and the repentance of the inhabitants, declares respecting himself, 'Behold, a greater than Jonah is here.'

This history is probably the source from which have been derived the traditions anciently current in the Levant respecting the deliverance of persons who had been exposed to sea-monsters.

The whole narrative presents the most striking contrast between the long-suffering mercy of God, and the rebellion and impatience of his servant: and further, between the readiness with which the Ninevites repented, at the preaching of a prophet who visited them as a stranger, and the manner in which the Israelites treated the servants of Jehovah, who lived and laboured amongst them. And these events would serve to teach them that the Divine regards and compassion were not confined to them alone, but were extended to men of all nations.

Jonah being commanded to go to Nineveh attempts to flee to Tarshish, is cast into the sea, and is miraculously preserved.

1 NOW the word of the LORD came unto ^aJonah the son of Amittai, saying,
2 Arise, go to ^bNineveh,¹ that ^cgreat city, and cry against it; for ^dtheir wicked-3 ness is come up before me. But ^eJonah ^frose up to flee unto Tarshish² from the presence of the LORD,⁴ and went down to ^gJoppa;⁵ and he found a ship going to ^hTarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish ⁱfrom the presence of the LORD.

4 But ^jthe LORD sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty 5 tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken. Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god,⁶ and ^kcast forth the wares⁷ that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten ^lit of them. But Jonah was gone down 6 ^minto the sides⁸ of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep. So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, ⁿcall upon thy God, ^oif so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

7 And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us ^pcast lots, that we may know ^qfor whose cause⁹ this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, ^rand the lot 8 fell upon Jonah.¹⁰ Then said they unto him, ^sTell us, we pray thee, for whose ^t cause this evil is upon us: What is thine occupation? and whence comest thou?
9 What is thy country? and of what people ^uart thou? And he said unto them, I am ^van Hebrew; and I fear the LORD [or, JEHOVAH], the God of heaven, ^wwhich hath made the sea and the dry land.

10 Then were the men exceedingly afraid,¹² and said unto him, Why hast thou

But the great object of this book, and its place in the whole system of the Bible, can be understood only as it is regarded in connection with the rest of prophetic revelation: see Pref. to Prophetic Books, p. 721. For Jonah was a kind of link between the earlier and the later prophets. Like the former, he delivered oral promises of temporary mercies, and of these little is preserved. But he is closely connected with his successors, by this fragmentary portion which has been handed down to us; and which contains an intimation of God's gracious purposes to raise up among the Israelites, however opposed this might be to their views, the instruments for extending his mercy to other nations; to fit them for this work by needful chastisements; to give them a success among the heathen far greater than among their own people; and in the end so to vindicate all his doings that they should be constrained, instead of murmuring, to adore the riches of His power and wisdom: see Rom. ch. xi. And as if to direct attention to this chief object of the prophet's mission, God was pleased to arrange certain circumstantial coincidences between this pioneer of the more permanent and extended portion of Old Testament prophecy, and the Divine Author of our faith. See Matt. xii. 39—42; xvi. 4.

It is probable that the book was composed by Jonah himself. If so, it affords satisfactory evidence that he had a due sense of the faults which he here unshrinkingly displays for the warning and instruction of others.

^s Ps. 146. 6; Ac. 17. 21.

² There is nothing strange in Jonah's reluctance to undertake a mission to a distant heathen city, which appeared likely to expose him to great peril both from the king and from the people. Moses (Exod. iv.), and even the bold Elijah (1 Kings xix.), had shrank from similar dangers; and there are few of God's servants who have not quailed before smaller difficulties. He alleges, however, an additional reason in ch. iv. 2, on which see note.

³ See note on 1 Kings x. 22.

⁴ Or, 'from before Jehovah.' Jonah, like other men under the power of wrong feelings, seems to have forgotten the omnipresence of God. See Ps. cxxxix. 7—12.

⁵ Joppa (now Yaffa) lies on the east coast of the Mediterranean, at ten hours' distance from Jerusalem, of which, though an insecure harbour, it was for a long time the only seaport. See 2 Chron. ii. 16; Ezra iii. 7.

⁶ This was probably a Phœnician vessel, manned by sailors of various nations, who worshipped different idols.

⁷ Perhaps, 'tackle.'

⁸ Rather, 'into the inner parts.'

⁹ It was an anciently a prevalent belief that extraordinary calamities were visitations for special guilt. See Preface to Job, and refs.

¹⁰ See notes on Josh. vii. 14, and Prov. xvi. 33.

¹¹ The sailors were unwilling to condemn Jonah without a personal confession.

¹² They were alarmed by this proof of the omniscience of God, and of the ease with which he could discover and reach any who were seeking to shun him.

done this? For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, 11 because he had told them. Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? For the sea wrought, and was tem-12 pestuous.¹ And he said unto them, "Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: ^afor I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

13 Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring it to the land; ^ybut they could not:
14 for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them. Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and ^zlay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, 15 ^ahast done as it pleased thee.² ^bSo they took up Jonah, and cast him forth 16 into the sea: ^cand the sea ceased from her raging. Then the men ^dfeared the LORD exceedingly;³ ^eand offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.
17 Now the LORD had prepared a great fish⁴ to swallow up Jonah. And ^fJonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

Jonah's prayer, thanksgiving, and deliverance.

2 THEN⁵ Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly, and said,

2 I ^gcried by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD,—^hand he heard me;

ⁱOut of the belly of ^khell⁶ cried I,—and thou heardest my voice.

3 ^lFor thou hadst cast me into the deep,—in the midst of the seas;
And the floods compassed me about:

^mAll thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 ⁿThen I said,—I am cast out of thy sight;⁷

Yet I will look again ^otoward thy holy temple.

5 The ^pwaters compassed me about, even to the soul:

The depth closed me round about,—the weeds were wrapped about my head.

6 I went down to the bottoms of the mountains;⁸

The earth with her bars was about me⁹ for ever:

Yet hast thou brought up my life ^qfrom corruption [or, the pit],—O LORD my God.

7 When my soul fainted within me—^rI remembered the LORD:

^sAnd my prayer came in unto thee,—into thine holy temple.

8 They that observe ^tlying vanities¹⁰ forsake their own mercy.

9 But I will ^usacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving;

^vI will pay that that I have vowed.—^ySalvation is of the LORD.

10 And the LORD ^zspake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

Jonah's second mission to Nineveh; and the repentance of the people.

3 AND¹¹ the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying, Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and ^apreach unto it the preaching that I bid

3 thee. So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD.

4 Now Nineveh was an exceeding great¹² city, of three days' journey. And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey,¹³ and ^bhe cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

1 Or, 'grew more and more tempestuous.'

2 That is, Do not punish us as murderers of an innocent man; for we are only following the indications of thy will.

3 Under the overpowering conviction of Jehovah's justice and power, which were shown both in raising and in so suddenly quelling the storm. These foreign sailors appear in favourable contrast to the erring prophet, in respect to both humanity and reverence.

4 That there are fishes in the Mediterranean capable of swallowing a man whole has been fully proved by credible testimony. But the event is clearly related as a miraculous Divine interposition: and, though God is not said to have 'created,' but to have 'appointed' a fish, it is not necessary to inquire further of what kind it was. It was doubtless fit for the purpose. It may, however, be remarked that there is nothing in the Hebrew of this passage, or in the Greek of Matthew or Luke, to show that it was 'a whale,' as some have supposed.

5 This brief summary of Jonah's supplications in his living prison shows the reality of his penitence and faith. It also indicates the use which God's people may make of the Psalms in their distresses: for every verse contains a passage found in some of the Psalms (comp. ver. 2 and Ps. cxx. 1; 3 and xlii. 7; 4 and xxxi. 22; 5 and lxix. 1; 6 and ciii. 4; 7 and cxlii. 3; 8 and xxxi. 6; 9 and iii. 8); and in almost every case it is probable that the prophet adopted the psalmist's words, which were already familiar to him, as the fittest expression of his own anxieties and hopes. See Pref. to Psalms, p. 562.

6 Heb., 'Sheol;' the place of the dead; here used metaphorically, to denote the prophet's desperate condition.

7 That is, from thy notice and care. He who had attempted to flee from God's presence now feels how necessary to his life and happiness is the compassionate regard of that Divine Providence which watches over all; and he would gladly avail himself of the hopes founded upon the sacrifices offered in Jehovah's temple.

8 Or, 'clefts of the mountains;' probably a figure for inaccessible recesses.

9 Or, 'behind me;' as if he were shut out for ever from light and freedom.

10 See note on Ps. xxxi. 6.

11 The new commission which Jonah now receives appears to be, as to himself, more comprehensive, requiring him to declare anything which God pleases; and, as to the Ninevites, more distinctly significant of impending danger (ver. 4).

12 Literally, 'great to God.' See note on Gen. x. 9.

- 5 So the people of Nineveh ^cbelieved God,¹ and ^dproclaimed a fast, and put on 6 sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them. For word came unto the king² of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe 7 from him, and covered him with sackcloth, ^eand sat in ashes. ^fAnd he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast,³ herd nor flock, taste any 8 thing:⁴ let them not feed, nor drink water: but let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God: yea, ^glet them turn every one from 9 his evil way,⁵ and from ^hthe violence⁶ that is in their hands. ⁱWho can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?
10 ^kAnd God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; ^land God repented⁷ of the evil that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

Jonah's discontent, and God's reproofs.

- 4 ^mBUT it displeased⁸ Jonah exceedingly, ⁿand he was very angry. And he 2 prayed unto the LORD, and said, I pray thee, O LORD, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I ^ofled before unto Tarshish:⁹ for I knew that thou art a ^pgracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great 3 kindness, and ^qrepentest thee of the evil. ^rTherefore now, O LORD, take, I beseech thee, my life¹⁰ from me; for ^s*it* is better for me to die than to live.
4 Then said the LORD, Doest thou well to be angry?¹¹
5 So Jonah went¹² out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would 6 become of the city. And the LORD God prepared a gourd,¹³ and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief. So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd.
7 But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote
8 the gourd that it withered. And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a vehement east wind;¹⁴ and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.
9 And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death.¹⁵ 10 Then said the LORD, Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and 11 perished in a night: and should not I spare Nineveh, ^tthat great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons ^uthat cannot discern between their right

1 Although the Ninevites might have heard of the wonders which God had wrought for the Jews, and perhaps also of Jonah's remarkable personal history, and might thus be induced to listen to him; yet that which chiefly urged them to regard his message was a sense of their own guilt. And this we must attribute to a Divine influence, granted in mercy to them, and perhaps also that their penitence might rebuke the more strongly the stubbornness of the Israelites, and might lead them to repentance. Thus our Lord (Matt. xii. 41) reproaches the Jews of his own day with being less open to impression than the Ninevites.

2 It is not as yet ascertained who this king was.

3 This was not uncommon among ancient nations; who upon such occasions not only put away the decorated trappings of their horses, but made them and other animals literally to fast.

4 The Orientals, when fasting, abstained from all food until the evening. See 2 Sam. i. 12.

5 If outward acts of humiliation are to be acceptable to God, they must be accompanied with the putting away of cherished sin.

6 That is, 'the rapacity.' In a great city many vices prevail; but this may be mentioned as being at the time the most predominant.

7 See note on Gen. vi. 6.

8 Both the verbs here used are sometimes applied to grief rather than to anger (see Neh. ii. 3; 1 Sam. xv. 11); yet it can hardly be doubted that both these feelings had place in Jonah's heart.

9 Jonah's want of sympathy with God's sparing mercy is commonly ascribed to a selfish regard to his own safety and reputation, or to a strong national exclusiveness which made him unwilling that the doom of a heathen city should be averted. Some, however, think that he feared lest his own people should abuse this Divine forbearance to encourage themselves in sin, and thus bring upon themselves the destruction with which they had been threatened.

10 If the supposition mentioned in the preceding note be correct, Jonah may have wished to die that he might not witness the obstinacy and doom of God's people. Elijah also had wished to die when all his efforts for Israel's reformation were apparently frustrated. See 1 Kings xix. 9—18, and notes.

11 Rather, according to the Hebrew idiom, 'Art thou exceedingly vexed?'

12 Apparently before the forty days had expired. Had he remained in the city, and fulfilled his ministry of repentance, the reformation of the Ninevites might have been more thorough and lasting.

13 This plant, in Hebrew 'kikayon,' is probably the ricinus communis, or palma christi; a broad-leaved plant, rapid both in its growth and in its decay, but now apparently made to grow with extraordinary quickness, for Jonah's shelter.

14 Dry and scorching.

15 Rather, 'I am exceedingly vexed, even to death.'

16 That is, children of a tender age, incapable of personal transgression. Reckoning these, according to the usual calculation, as a fifth part of the population, the city would contain 600,000 inhabitants.

MICAH.

MICAH was a native of Mareshah or Moresheth, a town of Judah near Gath. The date of his ministry is distinctly attested by Jeremiah (ch. xxvi. 18). He appears to have been commissioned soon after Hosea, Amos, and Isaiah had begun their ministry, about 750 B. C., to repeat the reproofs, warnings, and pleadings which they had addressed to both Israel and Judah, and to reveal God's purposes of mercy toward his people, and the happiness and glory of the church, under the reign of Messiah. His book should be compared throughout with the writings of these prophets.

Micah has much of the poetic beauty of Isaiah, and of the vigour of Hosea: but his style is occasionally obscure, through his conciseness and sudden transitions.

Impending judgments upon Samaria and upon Jerusalem.

- 1 THE¹ word of the LORD that came to ^a Micah the Morasthite² in the days of Jotham, Abaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, ^b which he saw³ concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.
- 2 ^c HEAR, all ye people; ^d hearken, O earth, and all that therein is: And let the Lord God ^e be witness against you,—the Lord from ^f his holy temple.
- 3 For, behold, ^g the LORD cometh forth out of his ^h place, And will come down, and tread upon the ⁱ high places of the earth.
- 4 And ^j the mountains shall be molten under him,—and the valleys shall be cleft, As wax before the fire,—and as the waters that are poured down a steep place.
- 5 ^k For the transgression of Jacob is all this,—and for the sins of the house of Israel. What is the transgression of Jacob?—^l is it not Samaria? And what are the high places of Judah?—^m are they not Jerusalem?⁵
- 6 Therefore I will make Samaria ⁿ as an heap of the field, And as plantings of a vineyard:⁶ And I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, And I will ^o discover the foundations thereof.
- 7 ^p And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, And all the ^q hires thereof shall be burned with the fire, And all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: For she gathered it of the hire of an harlot,⁷ And they shall return to the hire of an harlot.
- 8 Therefore ^r I will wail and howl,—^s I will go stripped and naked:⁸ ^t I will make a wailing like the dragons,—and mourning as the owls.⁹
- 9 For ^u her wound is incurable;—for ^v it is come unto Judah; ^w He¹⁰ is come unto the gate¹¹ of my people, even to Jerusalem.
- 10 ^x Declare ye it not at Gath,—weep ye not at all:¹² In the house of ^y Aphrah^b roll thyself in the dust.
- 11 ^z Pass ye away, thou inhabitant of Saphir, having thy ^a shame naked: The inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth In the mourning of Beth-ezel, he shall receive of you his standing.¹³
- 12 For the inhabitant of Maroth waited carefully¹⁴ ^e for good: But ^f evil came down from the LORD—unto the gate of Jerusalem.

1 Micah, whose commission includes both Israel and Judah (ver. 1), in God's name summons all nations to witness the judgment which he passes (2—4), first upon Samaria and then upon Jerusalem (5—9). He then graphically describes the terror and sufferings of some of the towns and fortresses of Judah (10—16).

2 Micah is called a 'Morasthite,' probably, as being a native of Moresheth-Gath, a village in the west of Judah, near Eleutheropolis.

3 Vision, being one mode of revelation, is sometimes used generally for any kind of prophetic inspiration.

4 Jehovah, as Lord and Judge of the whole earth, summons all nations (for all are deeply interested in the matter) to hear his testimony and sentence against Israel, whom he immediately addresses. This description of Jehovah's judicial terrors resembles Nah. i. 2—6.

5 The national sins of the two kingdoms are traced to their respective capitals; which, instead of being centres of holy influence, were only sources of corruption.

6 By the stones of its buildings being used to form terraces for the growth of the vine on its hill-sides. See notes on 1 Kings xvi. 24; Isa. xxviii. 1.

7 The Israelites had regarded their possessions as the gifts of their false gods (comp. Hos. ii. 5; Jer. xlv. 17); and God will treat them accordingly.

8 Without the outer garment: see Isa. xx. 2, and note.

9 Rather, 'as the ostriches;' which often make a loud moaning by night.

10 That is, 'the enemy.' The prophet sees him entering Judah (ver. 9), attacking its northern towns and villages, destroying Jerusalem (10—12), and passing on to places in the south of Judah (13—15).

11 That is, their chief place of concourse.

12 Or, as many render, 'In Accho, weep ye not.' As in ver. 2 there is an allusion to the threats of an earlier prophet against Ahab (see 1 Kings xxii. 28), so is there here to David's lament over Saul and Jonathan (2 Sam. i. 20). This indicates a triumph of Israel's enemies over the kingdom and family of David similar to that of the Philistines over the kingdom of Saul. Throughout this passage the verbs are adapted to the meanings and sounds of the proper names; giving by this paronomasia, which cannot be transferred to an English translation, a peculiar emphasis to the denunciation.

13 Rather, 'The mourning of Beth-ezel takes from you his standing;' i. e. keeps him from standing beside you to help you; for 'Ezel' means 'by the side of.' In both places the people are themselves in such distress that they can give no help.

14 Rather, 'is in anguish, anxiously longing for good.'

- 13 O thou inhabitant of ^g Lachish, ^h bind the chariot to the swift beast :
(She is the beginning¹ of the sin to the daughter of Zion :)
For the transgressions of Israel were found in thee.
- 14 Therefore shalt thou ⁱ give presents² to Moresheth-gath :
^k The houses of ^l Achzib [i. e. a lie] shall be a lie³ to the kings of Israel.
- 15 Yet will I bring ^m an heir⁴ unto thee, O inhabitant of ⁿ Mareshah :

^a From which ye shall not remove your necks ;
Neither shall ye go haughtily :—^b for this time is evil.¹⁰

1 Of this fact we have no other record nor any further explanation. The city Lachish, which, like others here mentioned, was strongly fortified, appears to have suffered from both the Assyrians and the Chaldeans. See Isa. xxxvi. 1, and note ; Jer. xxxiv. 7.

2 Rather, 'Thou shalt give a divorcee ;' i. e. thou shalt give her up as unable to protect her any longer.

3 All hope of aid from them shall prove vain.

4 A 'master ;' or, 'possessor ;' i. e. the enemy shall possess Mareshah.

5 Or, 'The glory of Israel shall come to Adullam ;' perhaps meaning, The princes shall be reduced to the same straits into which David was formerly brought. See 1 Sam. xxii. 1, 2.

6 That is, when it has lost its plumage ; or, 'as the vulture,' which has a bare head.

7 The sins which have provoked the impending judgments are denounced ; particularly the rapacity of the powerful, which led them to hate God's faithful prophets (vers. 1—11) ; who nevertheless are commissioned to hold out promises of future restoration (12, 13).

8 Sin is here traced through three stages—the purpose, the elaboration of a plan, and the execution.

9 Their rapacity grasped the persons as well as the property of their victims. Comp. Jer. xxxiv. 8—16.

10 Or, 'for it shall be an evil time.'

11 Or, 'to a rebel (i. e. an idolater, or an enemy) he hath divided our fields.'

12 The land which was once apportioned among you

(see refs.), shall now be possessed by strangers.

13 Perhaps the best rendering of this verse is, 'Prophecy not, [they say.] They shall prophesy. If they prophesy not thus, shame will not depart.' Those whose sins the prophets denounce wish to restrain them ; but God will have them speak : for, if they do not, men will go on in their sins.

14 Can the spirit of prophecy speak only of evil ? Are these punishments things in which God delights ? Are they not rather the necessary consequences of your sins ? Are not his words benignant to the upright ? But my people have long resisted me (ver. 8).

15 Rather, 'in time past.'

16 The 'garment' is the cloak mentioned in Exod. xxii. 26, a necessary article of dress ; the 'robe' is probably an ornamental addition. Comp. Josh. vii. 21. These oppressors deprived their peaceable neighbours of their common dress as well as their ornaments, and drove their females and children from their homes.

17 This may mean 'ornaments ;' but it seems better to understand it as referring to their inheritance, which was designed to be kept 'for ever,' in Canaan, God's glorious gift to Israel (comp. ver. 2). Hence, by a righteous retribution, the oppressors are driven into exile ; for the land which their crimes have 'polluted' cannot be their 'rest' (ver. 10).

18 So corrupt had the people become, that no prophet was acceptable to them who did not sanction their voluptuous habits.

- 12 ¹ 'I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee;
I will surely gather the remnant of Israel;¹
I will put them together ²as the sheep of Bozrah,²
As the flock in the midst of their fold:
³They shall make great noise—by reason of the multitude of men.
- 13 ⁴ The breaker is come up before them:
⁵They have broken up, and have passed through the gate,—and are gone out by it:
And ⁶their king shall pass before them,—⁷and the LORD on the head of them.
- The cruelty and rapacity of the princes and rulers, and the corruption of the false prophets;
the destruction of Jerusalem, and its future restoration.*
- 3 AND³ I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob,
And ye princes of the house of Israel;⁴—⁵*Is it not for you to know judgment?*⁵
- 2 Who hate the good, and love the evil;
⁶Who pluck off their skin from off them,—and their flesh from off their bones;
3 Who also ⁷eat the flesh of my people,—and flay their skin from off them;
And they break their bones,—and chop them in pieces, as for the pot,
And ⁸as flesh within the caldron.⁶
- 4 Then ⁹shall they cry unto the LORD;—but he will not hear them:
¹⁰He will even hide his face from them at that time,
As they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.
- 5 Thus saith the LORD,—¹¹concerning the prophets that make my people err,
That ¹²bite with their teeth,⁷ and cry, Peace;
And ¹³he that putteth not into their mouths,—they even prepare war against him:
- 6 ¹⁴Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision;
And it shall be dark unto you, that ye shall not divine;
¹⁵And the sun shall go down over the prophets,
And the day shall be dark over them.⁸
- 7 ¹⁶Then shall the seers be ashamed,—and the diviners confounded:
Yea, they shall all ¹⁷cover their lips;⁹—¹⁸*for there is no answer of God.*
- 8 But truly ¹⁹I am full of power¹⁰ by the spirit of the LORD,
And of judgment, and of might,
²⁰To declare unto Jacob his transgression,—and to Israel his sin.
- 9 Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob,
And princes of the house of Israel,
That abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.
- 10 ²¹'They build up Zion¹¹ with ²²blood,—and Jerusalem with iniquity.
- 11 ²³The heads thereof judge for reward,—and ²⁴the priests thereof teach for hire,
And ²⁵the prophets thereof divine for money:
²⁶Yet will they lean upon the LORD,¹² and say,
Is not the LORD among us?—²⁷None evil can come upon us.
- 12 Therefore shall Zion for your sake be ²⁸plowed as a field,¹³ ²⁹And Jerusalem shall become heaps,
And ³⁰the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest.
- 4 But ³¹in the last days¹⁴ it shall come to pass,

² A chief city of a district celebrated for its numerous flocks. Comp. Jer. xlviii. 24; 2 Kings iii. 4; Isa. lx. 6, 7.

³ In this section, the prophet denounces and threatens the cruel rapacity of the princes (vers. 1—4); the corruption and deceit of the false prophets, with which he contrasts his own inspired teachings (5—8); and again the injustice of the rulers, who will cause the ruin of Jerusalem (9—12). He then discloses the future happy destinies of Israel; for when God has purged out their crimes, he will restore and elevate Zion; granting her peace and strength, and all the glories of former days (iv. 1—8). Comp. Isa. ii.—iv., and notes.

⁴ Not of one kingdom only, but of both.

⁵ You, as rulers and magistrates, ought above all others to know and practise what is just.

⁶ Entirely consuming them for your own use.

not afford them the means of gratifying their appetites.

¹⁰ Supernatural energy, clear spiritual perception and discrimination, and strong moral courage to declare unwelcome truth, are the characteristics of a true prophet. Comp. 2 Tim. i. 7.

¹¹ See Jer. xxii. 13; vi. 13; viii. 10, where the same charges are brought against the rulers and teachers of a later period.

¹² They were so insensible of their sinfulness, that they still expected Jehovah's protection.

¹³ The city in all its parts, its royal castle, its houses, and its temple, shall be destroyed, and its site as depopulated as when it was partly cultivated and partly a thicket. The well-known repeated fulfilments of this prediction sufficiently attest its truth, without resorting to an uncertain Jewish tradition, that the Romans drove a plough over the site of the temple.

¹⁴ See notes on Isa. ii. 1—4. These lines were probably derived both by Isaiah and Micah from a well-known prophecy of an earlier date, which Micah quotes the more largely (see ver. 4).

- Shall be established in the top of the mountains,
And it shall be exalted above the hills;—and people shall flow unto it.
- 2 And many nations shall come, and say,
Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD,
And to the house of the God of Jacob;
And he will teach us of his ways,—and we will walk in his paths:
For the law shall go forth of Zion,—and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.
- 3 And he shall judge among many people,—and rebuke strong nations afar off;
And they shall beat their swords into ^s plowshares,
And their spears into pruninghooks:
Nation shall not lift up a sword against nation,
^h Neither shall they learn war any more.
- 4 ⁱ But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree;¹
^k And none shall make them afraid:
For the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.
- 5 For ^l all people will walk every one in the name of his god,
And ^m we will walk in the name² of the LORD our God—for ever and ever.
- 6 In that day, saith the LORD,—ⁿ will I assemble her that halteth,

² As the name of God expresses his revealed perfections, so to 'walk in his name' means to act as one who reverences and trusts Him on account of them. The honour and confidence which others give to their idols we (says the prophet) will yield to Jehovah alone, in whom we shall never be disappointed.

³ I will not destroy her that was feeble, but will save a 'remnant,' and make it the germ of 'a strong nation.'

⁴ This is evidently the fortress of Zion; from which the kings of Judah, as 'shepherds' of the people, watched and succoured their flock.

⁵ Rather, 'the former dominion,' of the glorious days of David and Solomon; whose prosperous reigns represent that of Messiah. See note on Isa. lx. 1.

⁶ This section contains a triple prediction of sufferings and deliverances, which many regard as being historically successive: the first (vers. 9, 10) referring to the Babylonian exile; the second (11—13) to the Syrian and Egyptian oppressions, terminated by the triumphs of the Maccabees; and the third (ch. v. 1) to the Roman tyranny, under which Messiah shall be born. His earthly birth-place is now for the first time distinctly announced, in contrast with his higher nature (2); and the blessings of his peaceful reign are promised (3—5). Under his rule Israel shall triumph over his most formidable enemies (5, 6), and shall grow marvellously in numbers and in power (7—9). All Israel's false confidences shall then have been removed, as well as all who have tempted or injured him (10—15). The section should be carefully compared with the prophecies of Isaiah referred to in the following notes.

⁸ The approaching captivity, though temporarily painful, shall have a happy termination.

⁹ Or, 'profaned.' To that which is sacred, defilement is destruction. Comp. 1 Cor. iii. 17, and note.

¹⁰ See note on Isa. x. 7. After they have fulfilled God's purpose in chastening Israel, they shall be themselves utterly destroyed.

¹¹ See notes on Isa. xxi. 10; xxviii. 28; xli. 15.

¹² The figure of an ox threshing corn is followed by a further description of the power which God will give to his people, in order that all which they thus acquire may be consecrated to Him.

- 5 Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops :¹
He² hath laid siege against us :
They shall ^k smite the judge³ of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.
- 2 But thou, ^l Beth-lehem ^m Ephratah,⁴
Though thou be little⁵ ⁿ among the ^o thousands⁶ of Judah,
Yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me⁷ that is to be ^p ruler in Israel ;
^q Whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.⁸
- 3 ^r Therefore will he give them up,
Until the time that ^s she which travaileth⁹ hath brought forth :
Then ^t the remnant of his brethren¹⁰ shall return unto the children of Israel.

1 An appellation of Zion, perhaps derived from the military spirit and skill shown by the people in the obstinate defence of their city.

2 That is, the enemy.

3 The term 'judge' is here used probably for king, on account of the paronomasia or similarity between 'judge' and 'rod' in Hebrew ; but it may refer to the rulers at large, who will be treated with indignity by their conquerors.

4 See note on Ps. cxxxii. 6.

5 The littleness of Bethlehem is referred to probably as forming a link of connection between the past and the future deliverance of Israel through the fact that the 'Ruler' in each case would spring from an origin so despised ; and also as clearly showing that this Divine interposition was to be in complete accordance with the rules of God's government : comp. John i. 46 ; 1 Cor. i. 26, 27. It is worthy of notice, that David and his successors appear to have left their ancestral town in its original insignificance.

6 Districts, probably like our hundreds.

7 Coming forth to show my power and fulfil my purpose. Comp. Heb. ii. 10.

8 The word rendered 'goings forth' is the noun of place or manner derived from the verb meaning to 'come forth' used in the former clause ; and it indicates that the Ruler, who hereafter shall 'come forth' from Bethlehem, had already repeatedly gone forth in ancient times, 'from everlasting,' in the exercise of the same beneficent authority and power. And this clearly proves the personal pre-existence of the Messiah as the Lord of all. Comp. John i. 1—3 ; Col. i. 16, 17 ; Heb. i. 2, 3.

9 Some commentators, including Hengstenberg and Henderson, suppose this to be the mother of our Lord, and connect the passage with the prediction in Isa. vii. 14, on which see note. Others, among whom are Calvin and Pye Smith, think that the allusion is to the church, which has shortly before been represented (ch. iv. 9, 10) as being in the pangs of suffering, but which shall be delivered and blessed by the coming of the Messiah, the accession of the Gentiles, and the recovery of Israel.

10 Some refer this to the return of the Jews from Babylon, which was to precede Messiah's coming ; others to their restoration to the true church, which shall be one of the fruits of His work.

11 That is, 'the author of peace.' Comp. Isa. ix. 6 ; Eph. ii. 14.

12 'Seven' and 'eight' are used, as in Eccles. xi. 2, to signify an abundance—enough and more than enough. The degradation of Israel is represented by a lack of governors (see Isa. iii. 1—12), and its strength and safety by the large number of rulers and defenders.

13 The enemies who threatened Israel in the prophet's time (compare Isa. x.) represent all future foes of the people of Messiah.

14 So called because Nimrod had taken possession of it. See marginal reading of Gen. x. 11. The 'entrances' are either the mountain-passes, often called 'gates,' or the gates of their cities.

15 By a wonderful and unexpected exercise of God's power, his people shall be made numerous (comp. ver. 7 with Ps. cx. 3) and mighty (ver. 8) among the nations. Some suppose that the 'dew' and 'rain' indicate also the beneficial nature of their influence.

16 The objects of their carnal confidence. Comp. Isa. ii., xxxi., and notes.

17 Fortresses. In ver. 14, the 'cities' are probably the centres of idol-worship, such as Bethel.

- 13 ^aThy graven images also will I cut off,
And thy standing images out of the midst of thee;
And thou shalt ^rno more worship the work of thine hands.
14 And I will pluck up thy groves¹ out of the midst of thee:
So will I destroy thy cities.
15 And I will ^sexecute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen,
Such as they have not heard.

God's controversy with Israel; the reasonableness of his requirements.

- 6 HEAR² ye now what the LORD saith;
Arise, contend thou before the mountains,³—and let the hills hear thy voice.
2 ^tHear ye, O mountains, "the LORD's controversy,
And ye strong foundations of the earth:
For ^xthe LORD hath a controversy with his people,—and he will plead with Israel.
3 O my people, ^ywhat have I done unto thee?⁴
And wherein have I wearied thee?—testify against me.
4 ^zFor I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt,
^aAnd redeemed thee out of the house of servants;
And I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and ^bMiriam.⁵
5 O my people, remember now what ^cBalak king of Moab consulted,
And what Balaam the son of Beor answered him:⁶—from ^dShittim unto Gilgal:⁷
That ye may know ^ethe righteousness of the LORD.
6 Wherewith⁸ shall I come before the LORD,
And bow myself before the high God?
Shall I come before him with burnt offerings,—with calves of a year old?
7 ^fWill the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams,
Or with ten thousands of ^grivers of oil?
^hShall I give my firstborn for my transgression,

² The prophet, in Jehovah's name, summons the earth to hear, whilst he pleads against Israel (vers. 1, 2), declaring the reasonableness of his requirements, and the strength of his claims upon their gratitude for his delivering, protecting, forbearing mercy (3—5). The people are then supposed to inquire what they shall offer to please him, proposing costly and even human sacrifices (6, 7); which God rejects, declaring that moral rectitude has always been his chief demand (8). He then makes proclamation of the coming punishment, and rebukes especially the sins of injustice and idolatry, on account of which it will be sent (9—16).

³ Call them to listen to this controversy between Jehovah and Israel. Comp. Deut. xxxii. 1; Isa. i. 2.

⁴ For similar expostulations, showing the reasonableness of God's commands, see Isa. xliii. 23; Jer. ii. 5, 31.

⁵ Miriam was a prophetess: see Exod. xv. 20, and note.

⁶ Being compelled to bless instead of cursing Israel.

⁷ The meaning appears to be, And remember what happened to Israel from Shittim (where you might all just have perished for your sin) to Gilgal (the head quarters of your nation upon your first entrance into Canaan).

⁸ Such an inquiry on the part of the people proved their criminal ignorance of what God had taught them, and their tendency towards the most cruel superstitions of heathenism.

⁹ See notes on Lev. xx. 2; 2 Kings xvi. 3.

¹⁰ These things had always been insisted upon as the weightier matters of the law (see Deut. x. 12, from which these words are partly derived, and 1 Sam. xv. 22). And this was done the more emphatically when the people began to pride themselves upon their temple and their ritual, to the neglect of moral and spiritual obedience. See Isa. i. 11—15.

¹¹ Rather, 'will see (i. e. will regard) thy name.' When God sends a message of warning to the city, the wise will attend to it. Or, 'and wisdom is theirs who regard (or fear) thy name;' i. e. it is the part of wisdom to attend. Attend, then, to the rod (i. e. the threatened chastisement), and to Him who has appointed it.

¹² See note on Amos viii. 5.

¹³ Or, 'and depression (i. e. feebleness) shall be within thee;' i. e. thy food shall not nourish thee.

- And thou shalt take hold,¹ but shalt not deliver;
 And that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword.
- 15 Thou shalt ^a sow, but thou shalt not reap;
 Thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil;
 And sweet wine,² but shalt not drink wine.
- 16 For the statutes of ^b Omri³ are ^c kept,—and all the works of the house of ^d Ahab,
 And ye walk in their counsels;
 That I should make thee ^e a desolation,—and the inhabitants thereof an hissing:
 Therefore ye shall bear the ^f reproach of my people.⁴
Judah is universally corrupt; but God is the refuge and deliverer of his people, and calls forth their adoring praise.
- 7 WOE⁵ is me!⁶—for I am as when they have gathered the summer fruits,⁷
 As ^g the grape gleanings of the vintage:
There is no cluster to eat: ^h my soul desired the first ripe fruit.⁸
- 2 The ⁱ good man is perished out of the earth:
 And there is none upright among men:
^k They all lie in wait for blood;—^l they hunt every man his brother with a net.
- 3 That they may do evil with both hands earnestly,⁹
^m The prince asketh, ⁿ and the judge asketh for a reward;
 And the great man, he uttereth his mischievous desire:—so they wrap it up.¹⁰
- 4 The best of them ^o is a brier:—the most upright is sharper than a thorn hedge:
^p The day of thy watchmen¹¹ and thy visitation cometh;
 Now shall be their perplexity.
- 5 ^q Trust ye not¹² in a friend,—put ye not confidence in a guide:
 Keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.
- 6 For ^r the son dishonoureth the father,—the daughter riseth up against her mother,
 The daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law;
^s A man's enemies are the men of his own house.
- 7 Therefore¹³ ^t I will look unto the LORD;
^u I will wait for the God of my salvation:—^x my God will hear me.
- 8 ^y Rejoice not against me, ^z O mine enemy:—^a when I fall, I shall arise;
 When I sit in darkness, ^b the LORD shall be a light unto me.
- 9 ^c I will bear the indignation of ^d the LORD,—because I have sinned against him,
 Until he plead my cause, and execute judgment¹⁴ for me:
^e He will bring me forth to the light,—and I shall behold his righteousness.
- 10 Then ^f she that is mine enemy shall see it,
 And ^g shame shall cover her which said unto me, ^h Where is the LORD thy God?
ⁱ Mine eyes shall behold her:
 Now shall she be trodden down ^k as the mire of the streets.
- 11 In the day that thy ^l walls are to be built,
 In that day shall ^m the decree¹⁵ be far removed.
- 12 In that day also ⁿ he shall come even to thee from Assyria,
 And from the fortified cities,—and from the fortress even to the river,¹⁶
 And from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain.¹⁷
- 13 Notwithstanding the land shall be desolate
 Because of them that dwell therein,—^o for the fruit of their doings.¹⁸

4 Who have proved faithless to my covenant.

5 The prophet laments the universal corruption of the people (vers. 1—4), which is such that all confidence is destroyed, even between members of the same family (5, 6). He finds solace in God alone, to whom he looks with submission and hope; and he obtains a cheering assurance of renewed Divine favour when the chastisement is past (7—13). This encourages him to pray (14); and his prayer is answered by a promise of deliverance such as God accomplished for his people in Egypt, humbling and confounding their foes (15—17); upon which the prophet breaks forth in adoration of Jehovah's long-suffering and pardoning grace (18—20).

6 The prophet here speaks as the representative of the remnant of the faithful.

7 I look in vain for a godly man, as one looks in vain for fine grapes or early figs when the fruit has been gathered.

8 Rather, 'no early fig which my soul desireth.'

9 Or, 'Their hands are well prepared for evil.'

10 Or, 'they pervert it;' i. e. the cause which is brought before them.

11 That is, the day of calamity predicted by thy watchmen, the prophets. See Hos. ix. 7.

12 This warning forcibly shows the faithlessness of the people in all the relations of life.

13 So desperate is the depravity, that God's people can find solace only in Him and his purposes of saving mercy.

14 See note on Psa. lxxii. 3.

15 Some apply this to tyrannical and persecuting edicts (see Psa. xciv. 20); others to the authority of foreign rulers, or to enactments in favour of idolatry: comp. ch. vi. 16. But it may be rendered, 'the line shall be extended;' i. e. the city shall be enlarged to admit those who come from Assyria, etc. (ver. 12). The church shall be greatly extended. Comp. Isa. liv. 2.

16 Rather, 'In that day shall they come to thee from Assyria to Egypt, and from Egypt even to the river,' i. e. the Euphrates. Comp. Isa. xix. 18—23, and notes.

17 That is, from regions far asunder.

18 Before these blessings can be enjoyed, the people must be chastised for their sins. Comp. Isa. lvi. 9, and note.

⁴ This verse is applied, with a little variation, in the inspired song of Zacharias, to Him whose herald and forerunner his infant son was to be (Luke i. 72, 73).

NAHUM.

NOTHING is known respecting Nahum but that he was of Elkosh; which some have identified with Al-kush, in Assyria, near the modern Mosul; but it was probably a village in Galilee, which is mentioned long after by Jerome. The date of this prophecy is uncertain. Some suppose that it was uttered shortly after the conquest of Egypt and Ethiopia, and the complete subjugation of the kingdom of Israel, by the Assyrians, and during the interval which elapsed between the two invasions of Judah by Sennacherib, when Jerusalem had been drained of its treasures by Hezekiah in the vain hope of turning away the fury of the conqueror (2 Kings, ch. xviii., xix). If such were its date, it was well adapted to comfort the believing Jews, by assuring them that not only should the purpose of the enemy fail and his forces be entirely destroyed, but his capital itself should be taken, and his empire overturned. But it is not unlikely that it was written after the latter portions of the book of Isaiah, as it contains some expressions which seem to be derived thence. In either case, this prophecy must have been to the believing Hebrews of that age, in some measure, what the Apocalypse was to the early Christians—a ground of assurance that the people of God should ultimately triumph in the great conflict in which they were engaged with the powers of darkness. It is also of permanent and universal value as displaying the mercy of God towards his people, and his justice towards his enemies. The prophet announces to Nineveh, and, through her, to all worldly powers which set themselves against the people of God, that their ruin is certain, because Jehovah is a jealous and avenging God.

Nineveh, at the time when this prophecy of its destruction was uttered, was a city of vast extent and population, and the centre of the principal commerce of the world. Its wealth, however, was not altogether derived from trade. It was a 'bloody city,' 'full of lies and robbery' (ch. iii. 1). It plundered the neighbouring nations; and is compared to a family of lions, which 'fill their holes with prey and their dens with ravin' (ch. ii. 11, 12). It was also strongly fortified; its colossal walls, a hundred feet high, with their fifteen hundred towers, bidding defiance to all enemies. The doom which Jonah had pronounced had been delayed by the repentance of the people. But their repeated and aggravated sins brought upon them an irrevocable sentence; and so totally was the city destroyed, that, in the second century after Christ, not a vestige remained of it; and its very site was a matter of doubt and uncertainty until it was discovered a few years ago by Botta and Layard, who have drawn out from its long-buried ruins some monuments of the highest value, as enlarging our historical knowledge, and illustrating the truth of the prophecies and the accuracy of the narratives of Scripture.

This book is surpassed by none in elegance of language or sublimity of description. It consists of a single poem, which predicts the overthrow of the Assyrian empire, and the capture of Nineveh its capital.

God's justice and mercy manifested in the destruction of his enemies, and the deliverance of his people.

¹ Vers. 2—8 describe a sublime manifestation of Jehovah, who is terrible in his avenging justice, but gracious and faithful to all who trust in Him. The purpose of this Divine interposition is declared to be the vindication of His glory, in the destruction of his enemies and their gods, and the deliverance of his oppressed people (9—14).

² Indignant at the invasion of His rights. The repetition of the name JEHOVAH, and of words signifying vengeance, gives great force and solemnity to this sublime introduction.

¹ Delay of punishment is the result not of want of power, but of Divine long-suffering; and it does not involve the acquittal of the wicked, though it gives them opportunity for repentance. God's patience, therefore, must not be supposed to arise from any defect of resources.

² Or, 'heaves itself.'

³ That is, of Nineveh. To express emphatically the utter destruction of the city, its very 'place,' or site, is said to be destroyed.

⁴ If this be addressed to the Assyrians, the meaning is, that all their plots shall be vain, and that God will cut them off by a stroke which shall not need to be repeated. But it may be understood as being addressed to the Jews, and be rendered, 'What do ye think respecting Jehovah?' i. e. What do you imagine Jehovah's designs to be? Do you apprehend your own destruction? No, he will make an utter end of your enemies, so that you shall not suffer from them again.

⁶ If the version in the text is correct, this is addressed to Nineveh, from which the Assyrian king went forth upon his expedition against Jerusalem. But it may, like the next verse, be an apostrophe to Jerusalem; and then it should be rendered, 'He hath departed from thee who plotteth evil against Jehovah,' etc., i. e. Sennacherib.

⁷ Rather, 'perfect,' i. e. in strength. Whatever be their power and their numbers, they shall be cut down; and he (i. e. their mighty monarch) shall pass away.

⁸ That is, Jerusalem, or Judah.

⁹ The Assyrian; probably the monarch, as the head of the people. His race shall become extinct.

¹⁰ The prophet sees the messenger who announces the fall of the Assyrian oppressors (15). He describes the attack upon their capital, which they are challenged to defend with all their might (ii. 1), for God is about to deliver his people from them (2). He beholds the preparations for the assault (3, 4), the ineffectual defence, the storming of the city, the captivity or flight of its inhabitants, the pillage of its treasures, and the utter despair of the people (5—10); and he triumphs over the stronghold of rapacious tyranny, now desolated by Jehovah's wrath (11—13).

¹¹ See notes on Isa. xl. 9, and lii. 7.

¹² The destruction of the Assyrian invaders allowed the Israelites to resume their national festivals, and called for additional thank-offerings on their part, on account of their deliverance.

¹³ This appears to be addressed to Nineveh, against which the invader is coming.

¹⁴ Rather, 'For Jehovah restores (i. e. will restore) the excellency of Jacob as the excellency of Israel.' Some think that 'Jacob' and 'Israel' signify the two kingdoms into which the nation was divided. But it is more likely

- For ² the emptiers have emptied them out,—and marred their vine branches.¹
- 3 The shield of his mighty men² is made ² red,³—the valiant men are in scarlet :
The chariots shall be with flaming torches—in the day of his preparation,

- 4 The chariots shall rage in the streets,
^a They shall jostle one against another in the broad ways :
They shall seem like torches,—they shall run like the lightnings.
- 5 He shall recount⁵ his worthies :—they shall stumble in their walk ;
They shall make haste to the wall thereof,—and the defence⁶ shall be prepared.
- 6 ^b The gates of the rivers⁷ shall be opened,—and the palace shall be dissolved.

And filled his holes with prey,—and his dens with ravin.
- 13 ^k Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts,
And ^l I will burn her chariots in the smoke,¹³
And the sword shall devour thy young lions :

2 Of the army which should come against Nineveh.

3 The shields seem to have been painted, or sprinkled with blood, to render their appearance more terrible.

4 Rather, 'With fire of steel is the chariot, at the time of his preparation, and the fir-lances are brandished.' Chariots were sometimes armed with scythes, and were commonly strengthened and decorated with polished steel or brass, which flashed in the sun-light.

5 Heb., 'remember ;' probably with the view of calling them to his aid. But in vain ; for, through fear or weakness, 'they stumble in the ways.'

6 Rather, 'the covert ;' meaning perhaps the engine called by the Romans testudo ; a shed to protect the besiegers and their battering-ram, in attacking the wall (see Layard's Nineveh, ii. 366—370) ; or more probably, as the rest of the verse refers to the besieged, a kind of breast-work to shield them from the missiles of the enemy.

7 Some take this to be a figurative description of the invasion, and the consequent dissolution of the Assyrian empire ; but it may perhaps refer to the entrance of the invaders through the river-gates, or to an inundation of the Tigris and its tributaries, of which an account, not altogether accurate, is given by Diodorus Siculus, ii. 27.

8 Or, 'And it is determined (i. e. by Divine decree, see ch. i. 14) ; she (i. e. the city) is stripped bare ; she is carried away ; her maidens moan as with the voice of doves, smiting on their breasts.'

9 Water, especially in large quantities, is a frequent emblem of abundant population and prosperity, such as Nineveh had long enjoyed. But this is now rapidly flowing away, and cannot be stopped. Comp. Hos. xiii. 15 ; Rev. xvii. 1, 15.

10 Or, 'There is abundance of all precious vessels.' Gold was much used by the Assyrians in their ornaments, and even in adorning their buildings ; bricks and tiles of gold and silver being placed in the exterior walls of their palaces (see Layard, vol. ii. 416). The ruins of Nineveh afford evidence that the palaces were plundered before they were set on fire.

11 Or, more emphatically, 'emptiness, and a void, and a waste !'

13 Rather, 'into smoke ;' i. e. completely. See Psal. xxxvii. 20.

14 Such as Rabshakeh, 2 Kings xviii. 17.

15 In ch. iii. the prophet connects the punishment of Nineveh with its crimes ; for bloodshed must be avenged by slaughter (1—3), and meretricious guile by public infamy (4—7). Nor can she escape ; for, as the mighty No-Amon has suffered (8—10), so shall Nineveh drink the cup of wrath ; her forts, her warriors, and her defences shall fall (11—13). Let her lay in provisions for the siege, and strengthen her fortifications (14) ; yet she shall be destroyed, her multitudes shall flee, and her princes shall perish, without remedy ; whilst all nations shall exult in her fall (15—19).

16 Or, 'The horseman making [his horse] prance, and the flame of the sword and the lightning of the lance ; and a multitude of the slain,' etc.

¹ Comp. Isa. xx. 3; Jer. xli. 25, and notes. No-Amon (which was called by the Egyptians, Tapé, i. e. the head; and by the Greeks, Thebae) was one of the mightiest cities of the ancient world. It was celebrated even in the Homeric age for its warriors and its magnificence (Il. ix. 381—384), and still retains in the grandeur of its ruins proofs of its former splendour. Of the conquest of this city before the time of Nahum we have no record; but it is most probable that this prophecy alludes to the events predicted in Isa. xx.; where, as in this place, the captivity of the inhabitants is mentioned, but not the destruction of the city, which was not begun till a later period.

⁸ Or, 'locust.' From these animals three illustrations are here derived: their devastations represent the utter destruction of Nineveh, their vast swarms its numerous merchants and princes, and their sudden flight its strange depopulation. Comp. Joel i., and notes.

¹⁰ That is, nobles, who wore a kind of diadem. But this word, and that rendered 'captains' (comp. Jer. li. 27), are probably of Assyrian origin, and refer to military chiefs of different grades.

¹¹ Rather, 'thy nobles rest;' i. e. are dead. Compare 1 Kings xxii. 17.

¹³ The 'wickedness' for which Nineveh was to be punished is attested by her own sculptures, which have been recently brought to light after being buried nearly 2500 years. In these are portrayed the burning of cities, and the impalement, decapitation, and flaying alive of prisoners, besides other cruel modes of torture. See Layard's Nineveh and Babylon, p. 456. One more denunciation was uttered against this wicked city some years later by Zephaniah (ii. 13—15); and shortly afterwards the whole was fulfilled, B. C. 606.

HABAKKUK.

NOTHING is known with certainty of the parentage and life of Habakkuk. Some suppose him to have prophesied in Judah during the reign of Josiah; but from ch. i. 2—4 it appears more likely that he lived in the reigns of Manasseh and Amon, or in that of Jehoiakim.

As Nahum foretold the destruction of the Assyrians, who carried the ten tribes captive, so Habakkuk foretels the judgments that shall come on the Chaldeans, who completed the captivity of Judah and Benjamin. But with the force and sublimity of the former prophet he unites, like Jeremiah, the personal and the pathetic. His descriptions are in the form either of a complaint, or a song of triumph, or a prayer.

This book contains two parts. Ch. i. and ii. depict the sins of the Israelites; and foretel their punishment by the Chaldeans, which shall be followed by the overthrow of these enemies. Ch. iii. is a sublime psalm, in which the prophet dwells especially upon the last subject as a new manifestation of the God of Israel.

The approaching chastisements of the Jews by the Chaldeans; and the overthrow of the conquerors.

1 The prophet complains to God that the crimes which prevail among his people are not corrected (ch. i. 2—4); and is informed that God is preparing the proud and cruel Chaldeans as his scourge (5—11). He then pleads with God, and prays that, for the sake of His unchangeable justice, these cruel and impious oppressors may not be left unpunished (12—17); and watches for a reply (ii. 1). The answer comes, with a warning against unbelief and a promise to the patient believer (2—4): it describes the rapacity of the Chaldeans, and denounces woes upon them for their covetousness, luxury, cruel oppression, and impious idolatry (5—20).

2 Some regard this as an anticipation of the dreadful oppressions of the Chaldeans: but it probably represents the tyranny and disorders prevailing in the kingdom of Judah, which were recompensed by a punishment resembling the crime. See vers. 6—11.

3 The complaint is, that the Divine law has lost its power over men's minds; and that not only is judgment often delayed, but unjust judgment is pronounced.

4 The prophet addresses the Jews, announcing a wonderful and fearful work of Jehovah which shall be accomplished in their own days—namely, the elevation of the Chaldean power, and its rapid and extensive conquests (vers. 6—10).

5 See note on Isa. xxiii. 13.

6 They shall be self-relying and arbitrary.

7 See note on Dan. vii. 6.

8 That is, they shall spread themselves over the country for plunder.

9 The length of their march shall not abate their impetuosity.

10 Rather, 'The eagerness of their faces is [as] an east wind,' which parches and destroys everything.

11 Rather, 'earth;' i. e. mounds: see Jer. xxxii. 24.

12 Or, 'Then their spirit will go forwards, and pass on and sin; this his might [will be] as his god.' The meaning is, that the king of Babylon will be led on by his successes to trust in his own power as if it were Divine.

13 That is, as the instruments of thy judgments for our 'correction.' Therefore thou wilt not allow them

- And, O ^x mighty God,¹ thou hast established them ^y for correction.
- 13 ^z Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil,—and canst not look on iniquity:²
^a Wherefore lookest thou upon them that deal treacherously,
^b And holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth
The man that is more righteous³ than he?
- 14 And makest men as the fishes of the sea,
 As the creeping things, that have no ruler⁴ over them?
- 15 They ^c take up all of them with the angle,—^d they catch them in their net,
 And gather them in their drag.—^e Therefore they rejoice and are glad:
- 16 Therefore ^f they sacrifice unto their net,—and burn incense unto their drag;⁷

- 17 Shall they therefore empty their net,⁶
 And not spare continually to slay the nations?
- 2 I will ^g stand upon my watch,—and set me upon the ^h tower,⁷

 And a taunting proverb against him, and say,
 Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his!—^y How long?
 And to him that ladeth himself with thick clay!¹²
- 7 ^z Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee,¹³
 And awake that shall vex thee,—and thou shalt be for booties unto them?

utterly to destroy us, for thou art our God, the unchangeable Jehovah.

1 Heb., 'O Rock.' Comp. Deut. xxxii. 4.

2 Or, 'grievance;' as in ver. 3.

3 Though the Jews were wicked, the Chaldeans were much more deeply sunk in crime.

4 No chief to guard or defend them.

5 The victims of the Chaldeans being called 'fishes,' the 'hook' and 'net' are the policy and power by which their conquests were effected; and to which alone, instead of to God's permission, they ascribed their success: see ver. 11, and note.

6 As fishermen do, in order to cast it again for a fresh draught.

7 As a watchman looking for help.

8 Rather, 'in regard to my remonstrance,' namely, that in ch. i. 12—17.

9 Write that which I shall reveal to thee legibly, that even the hasty passer-by may read it (see Isa. viii. 1); and durably, for a long time will elapse before it is fulfilled (ver. 3).

10 Rather, 'Behold [the man of] presumption, his soul is not right in him; but the just by his faith shall live.'

He who rejects me (whether the proud and self-sufficient Chaldean, ch. i. 11, 16; or the mistrustful Hebrew, Numb. xiv.; Isa. xxxi.) is ungodly, and displeasing to me; but he who patiently trusts my word shall be preserved by me as a righteous person. See Heb. x. 38.

11 Or, 'And moreover wine is treacherous; the mighty man is proud, and cannot rest.' As in the next clause the rapacity of the Chaldeans is compared to that of death, so here their treachery appears to be likened to that of wine (Prov. xxiii. 31, 32), or their insolence to that of the drunkard (Prov. xx. 1, and note).

12 Rather, 'with a mass of pledges.' The Chaldean, like a rapacious usurer, gathers what is 'not his.' But 'how long' shall he be suffered to do this? Shall he not 'suddenly' be punished? (ver. 7).

13 Rather, 'Shall not thy usurers (those who shall spoil thee as thou hast spoiled others) arise suddenly?'

14 That is, the violence which thou hast done in it.

15 From all chances of calamity.

16 By this bold personification, the very materials used in the sumptuous buildings of Babylon are described as accusing the king of the rapine by which they have been procured, and the crimes which they have witnessed.

2 The just and appropriate punishment of the Chaldean oppressors shall not only display the glory of a righteous and holy God, but shall prepare the way for the new manifestation of his glory in the gospel. See Isa. xi. 9; xlv. 1, and note.

3 Rather, 'Who pourest out thy heat (i. e. thy wrath), and makest him drunken.' Some understand this as applying literally to the well-known drunken habits of the Chaldeans; but it more probably refers to the prostration and ignominy to which they reduced the conquered nations (see Isa. li. 17, 21, 22, with notes); with perhaps a further allusion to their treacherous policy.

4 That is, 'the violence done to Lebanon.' See note on ver. 8.

5 All idols give false notions of the Deity; and lying oracles were uttered by the priests of many of them.

6 Rather, 'To the dumb stone, Arise. It teach! Behold, it is overlaid with gold and silver.' Who can imagine that such a thing can teach?

7 Idols have no 'breath,' and their pretended oracles are 'lies;' but Jehovah is present 'in his temple,' and speaks there with truth and authority.

8 This sublime psalm was evidently designed for public use. The prophet, alarmed by the approaching chastenings of his nation, which have been revealed to him, beseeches God to mingle mercy with wrath (ver. 2). He sees Jehovah again interposing, as of old, in glory like the rising sun (3, 4), in destructive power shaking the eternal hills (5, 6) and destroying his foes (7), and riding as a victor through the waters (8, 9); till all nature trembles, and the sun and moon shrink from his wrath (10, 11). But this wrath is against the oppressors of Israel, for He is come to save his people (12—15). Yet the prophet's fear of coming judgments is not removed (16); but, however heavy they may be, he determines to confide in God, and thus rises to holy assurance and joyful expectation of future glory (17—19). The form and the imagery in which the destruction of the Chaldeans is here predicted, is derived in part from the records of former deliverances; and this new Divine interposition is evidently regarded chiefly as a pledge of the more glorious salvation by Christ.

9 See note on title of Ps. vii.

10 Thy revelation to me concerning the judgments which are to be executed.

11 That is, during the time of the threatened chastening, do thou repeat and 'make known' 'thy work' of 'mercy' by delivering thy people.

12 Rather, 'God will come from Teman,' etc.; i. e. He will renew his 'work,' interposing for Israel as He did in those ancient manifestations celebrated in Deut. xxxiii. 2; Judg. v. 4, 5; Ps. lxxviii. 7, 8. Future salvation is often announced by the prophets in terms borrowed from the past: see Isa. lii. 11, 12, and note. 'Teman' and 'Paran' (see notes on Gen. xxi. 21; Jer. xlix. 7) are put together for the desert through which the Israelites passed on their journey from Egypt to Canaan.

13 The coming of God is compared to the sun rising over the hills of Edom and Sinai, his rays (not 'horns') streaming forth, as it were, 'from his hand,' and lighting up the heavens and the earth. Yet this glorious appearance is not God himself; it is but the veil in which he wraps his omnipotence. Comp. Ps. civ. 2.

14 Rather, 'burning fever,' as in Deut. xxxii. 24, on which see note.

15 Rather, 'He stands, and shakes the earth; he looks, and agitates the nations.'

^z Heb. Neginoth, Ps. 4, title.

1 He comes as he did of old. Comp. Mic. v. 2, and note.

2 This may refer to the deliverances of the Hebrews from their oppressors in ancient times (see Judg. iii. 8—10 ; vi., vii.), which are introduced here as pledges of future salvation.

3 Drawn out from its case, for use.

4 Various renderings have been given of this clause, of which the best appears to be, 'The spears were sworn [to thy] command ;' i. e. thy instruments of vengeance were certain to execute thy will.

5 See Psa. lxxvii. 16—19, and notes.

6 Or, 'Sun [and] moon, [each] stands [back] into the dwelling (i. e. shrinks into the chamber whence it rose, Psa. xix. 5), at the light of thine arrows [as] they went, at the bright flash of thy lance.' The lightning of God's wrath eclipses sun and moon.

7 Rather, 'for the salvation of thine anointed.'

8 Not only the 'head' of the building, but all the rest, from 'the foundation up to the neck,' is destroyed.

9 Or, 'Thou hast pierced with his spears (see note on ver. 9) the head of his scattered tribes ;' or, perhaps, 'of his leaders.'

10 Or, 'the boiling up.' Here, as in ver. 8, Jehovah is described as riding as a conqueror.

11 Calvin thinks that the prophet here returns again to the fear which he had entertained (see ver. 2) on account of God's voice in the threatenings which he uttered ; and that what he now represents himself as hearing are the judgments with which God had determined to visit the contumacy of his people.

12 Or, 'Because I must wait for the day of calamity, for the invader to come up against my people.'

13 This triumphant close to the prophet's song most impressively illustrates the power of true religion to sustain the soul in the absence or loss of every earthly good.

14 See 2 Sam. i. 19, and note.

ZEPHANIAH.

ALL our knowledge of this prophet is derived from the title to his book, which informs us that he prophesied in the reign of Josiah, and records the names of his ancestors through four generations. Though the name of the head of the family is the same in Hebrew as that of the pious king Hezekiah, there is no reason to suppose that he was the same person. The description which Zephaniah gives (ch. i. 4) of the disorders prevailing among the Jewish people, has led some to suppose that his messages must have been delivered before the great reformation which Josiah effected in the eighteenth year of his reign. But the prophecy may be of later date ; for that reformation was evidently very partial; enforced by the example and authority of the monarch, but not heartily entered into by the princes and people (see note on 2 Kings xxii. 17).

This book may be divided into three parts, which are, however, intimately connected with one another:—

I. Denunciations of the sins and punishments of Judah, with a call to repentance (ch. i., ii. 1—3).

II. Exemplary judgments upon neighbouring nations (ch. ii. 4—15).

III. Severe rebukes and threatenings against Jerusalem, followed by gracious promises of restoration under the gospel (ch. iii.)

Judgments upon the Jews for their idolatry and other sins.

- 1 THE word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah.
- 2 ^a I¹ will utterly consume all things from off the land, ²—saith the LORD.
- 3 ^b I will consume man and beast;
I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, ³
And ^c the stumblingblocks with the wicked; ⁴
And I will cut off man from off the land,—saith the LORD.
- 4 I will also stretch out mine hand upon Judah,
And upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem;
And ^d I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place,
And the name of ^e the Chemarims⁵ with the priests;
- 5 And them ^f that worship the host of heaven upon the housetops; ⁶
^g And them that worship and ^h that swear by the LORD,
And that swear by ⁱ Malcham; ⁷
- 6 And ^h them that are turned back from the LORD;
And those that ⁱ have not sought the LORD, nor inquired for him.
- 7 ^m Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord God:
ⁿ For the day of the LORD is at hand:—for ^o the LORD hath prepared a sacrifice,
He hath bid [or, sanctified^p] his guests. ⁸
- 8 And it shall come to pass in the day of the LORD's sacrifice,
That I will punish ^q the princes, and the king's children, ⁹
And all such as are clothed with strange apparel.
- 9 In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, ¹⁰
Which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit.
- 10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD,
That there shall be the noise of a cry from ^r the fish gate,
And an howling from the second, ¹¹—and a great crashing from the hills.
- 11 ^s Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, ¹²
For all the merchant people ¹³ are cut down;—all they that bear silver are cut off.
- 12 And it shall come to pass at that time,
That ^t I will search Jerusalem with candles, ¹⁴
And punish the men that are ^u settled on their lees:
^v That say in their heart,—The LORD will not do good, neither will he do evil. ¹⁵
- 13 Therefore their goods shall become a booty,—and their houses a desolation:
They shall also build houses, but ^w not inhabit them;
And they shall plant vineyards, but ^x not drink the wine thereof.
- 14 ^y The great day of the LORD is near,—it is near, and hasteth greatly,
Even the voice of the day of the LORD:—^z the mighty man shall cry there bitterly.
- 15 ^a That day is a day of wrath,—a day of trouble and distress,

1 Without preface, the prophet utters his awful threatenings. The whole land shall be devastated, and its idolatrous inhabitants shall be destroyed (vers. 2—6). The punishment is near (7); it shall fall upon the princes and their lawless menials (8, 9), and upon all parts of the city (10, 11), searching out and chastising the practical atheism of the luxurious worldling (12, 13). The punishment is very near, and it is fearful, inevitable, and utterly destructive (14—18). Let, therefore, those who would escape its horrors seek God in humility and righteousness (ii. 1—3).

 5 Woe unto the inhabitants of ^z the sea coasts,—the nation of the Cherethites!⁵
 The word of the LORD is against you;—O ^a Canaan, the land of the Philistines,
 I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.
 6 And the sea coast shall be dwellings and cottages⁶ for shepherds,
^b And folds for flocks.
 7 And the coast shall be for ^c the remnant of the house of Judah;
 They shall feed thereupon:
 In the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening:
 For the LORD their God shall ^d visit them,—and ^e turn away their captivity.
- 8 ^f I have heard the reproach of Moab,
 And ^g the revilings of the children of Ammon,⁷
 Whereby they have reproached my people,
 And ^h magnified themselves against their border.
- 9 Therefore as I live, saith the LORD of hosts,—the God of Israel,
 Surely ⁱ Moab shall be as Sodom,—and ^k the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, ^l Even the breeding of nettles, and saltpits,—and a perpetual desolation:
^m The residue of my people shall spoil them,
 And the remnant of my people shall possess them.
- 10 This shall they have ⁿ for their pride,
 Because they have reproached and magnified themselves
 Against the people of the LORD of hosts.
- 11 The LORD will be terrible unto them:—for he will famish all the gods of the earth;⁸
^o And men shall worship him,⁹
 Every one from his place, even all ^p the isles of the heathen.
- 12 ^q Ye Ethiopians¹⁰ also,—ye shall be slain by ^r my sword.
- 13 And he will stretch out his hand against the north,—and ^s destroy Assyria;
 And will make ^t Nineveh¹¹ a desolation,—and dry like a wilderness.
- 14 And ^u flocks shall lie down in the midst of her,—all ^x the beasts of the nations:
 Both the ^y cormorant¹² and the bittern shall lodge in the upper lintels of it;
 Their voice shall sing in the windows;—desolation shall be in the thresholds:
 For he shall uncover the ^z cedar work.

1 Turning again to Jerusalem, the prophet denounces woe against it as polluted, unjust, unteachable ; its rulers being cruelly oppressive, and its religious teachers faithless and deceitful (vers. 1—4). Even Jehovah's presence has not shamed, nor his judgments on other nations warned them (5—7). Therefore they must suffer in the day of vengeance (8). But, after this, a new era shall begin ; the people shall be pure, devout, accepted, humble, truthful (9—13). Let, then, the true Israel exult ; for their Divine King will come and give them joy and glory (14—20).

2 The voice of God's messengers, the prophets.

3 Rather, 'for the morning ;' i. e. They leave nothing for the morning, but greedily devour all immediately.

4 As they have prided themselves upon Jehovah's presence, they ought to have imitated the justice which constantly marked his doings ; but they went on shamelessly in iniquity.

5 Rather, 'I have cut off nations.' This may refer to the nations mentioned in ch. ii., or to others which had been destroyed. By their punishment the Jews should have taken warning. See note on ch. ii. 4.

6 Or, 'And her dwelling shall not be cut off, according to all that I appointed against her.' Had the Jews profited by the exemplary punishment of others, they might have escaped the doom appointed for them.

7 Both the Jews and the neighbouring nations on which judgment was to be executed.

8 The rest of this chapter is very similar to Isa. xi., xxxv., lx. ; Ezek. xxxvi., xxxvii. ; and the same general principles are applicable to its interpretation. See the notes on those chapters.

- 20 At that time ^dwill I bring you again,—even in the time that I gather you :
^eFor I will make you a name and a praise—among all people of the earth, ^fWhen I turn back your captivity before your eyes,—saith the LORD.

HAGGAI.

HAGGAI was the first of the three prophets sent to the Jews after their return from the captivity, and began to prophesy about sixteen years after that event, in the second year of the reign of Darius Hystaspis. In the year after their arrival, the Jews had laid the foundations of the temple; but, having been interrupted by an interdict which the Samaritans obtained from the king of Persia, Pseudo-Smerdis, in opposition to the decree of Cyrus in their favour, they lost all courage, became indifferent, and neglected to resume their work, although the death of Pseudo-Smerdis appears to have given them the opportunity to do so. The time was not come, they said, to build the house of the Lord: and, meanwhile, they gave themselves to building and adorning their own houses, cultivating their fields and vineyards, and tending their flocks. But God visited his disobedient people with stroke upon stroke, to bring them back to himself (ch. i. 4—11; ii. 15—19; Zech. viii. 9—12); and sent the prophets Haggai and Zechariah to arouse them to the performance of their duty, and to encourage them in it. See Ezra v. 1, 2.

This book contains four prophetic messages, which were all directed to this object, and were delivered in the space of about four months. They are so exceedingly brief, that they are supposed to be only a summary of the original prophecies.

Reproofs of the people for neglecting the building of the temple; with exhortations and encouragements to exertion.

- 1 IN¹ ^athe second year of Darius the king,² in the sixth month,³ in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet unto ^bZerubabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to ^cJoshua the son of ^dJosedech,⁴ the high priest, saying,
- 2 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying,
^eThis people say, The time is not come,
The time that the LORD's house should be built.
- 3 Then came the word of the LORD ^fby Haggai the prophet, saying,
- 4 ^gIs it time for you, O ye,⁵ to dwell in your cieled houses, ^hAnd this house lie waste?
- 5 Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts;—ⁱConsider your ways.⁶
- 6 Ye have ^ksown much, and bring in little;—^lye eat, but ye have not enough;
Ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink;—ye clothe you, but there is none warm;
And ^mhe that earneth wages earneth wages, to put it into a bag with holes.
- 7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;—Consider your ways.
- 8 Go up to the mountain, and bring wood,—and ⁿbuild the house;
And I will take pleasure in it,—and I will be glorified,⁷ saith the LORD.
- 9 ^oYe looked for much, and, lo, it came to little;
And when ye brought it home, ^pI did blow upon it.
Why? saith the LORD of hosts.

¹ Haggai, addressing the leaders of the Jews (ver. 1), reproves them for neglecting the temple, whilst they rebuilt their own houses (2—4); shows them that their depressed condition is to be attributed to God's displeasure at their sinful supineness, exhorts them to exertion, and promises them a blessing (5—11). In less than a month after this appeal, the people resumed the building of the temple (12—15).

² That is, the king of Persia, of whose empire Judea was a province. This Darius was the son of Hystaspes. The events here referred to are related in Ezra v., vi., on which see notes.

³ Probably of the Hebrew year.

⁴ Josedech was son of Seraiah, the high priest who was slain when Jerusalem was taken. See 2 Kings xxv. 18—21.

⁵ Or, 'even for you.' As a contrast to the spirit here condemned, see Ps. cxxxii. 1—5.

⁶ Consider both how wrong your ways have been, and to what they have led you. You have seen how easily God can take from you what you refuse to give Him.

⁷ The meaning may be either, 'I will accept it as done for my glory;' or, 'I will display my glory in it' (see ch. ii. 9).

- Because of mine house that is waste,—and ye run¹ every man unto his own house.
 10 Therefore ² the heaven over you is stayed from dew,
 And the earth is stayed from her fruit.
 11 And I ³ called for a drought—upon the land, and upon the mountains,
 And upon the corn, and upon the new wine,
 And upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth,
 And upon men, and upon cattle,—and ⁴ upon all the labour of the hands.
 12 ‘Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant² of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD.
 13 Then spake Haggai ‘the LORD’s messenger in the LORD’s message unto the people, saying, ² I am with you,³ saith the LORD.
 14 And ⁴ the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ² governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; ⁴ and they came and did work in 15 the house of the LORD of hosts, their God, ⁶ in the four and twentieth day⁴ of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

The superior glory of the second temple foretold.

- 2 IN⁵ the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the 2 word of the LORD by the prophet Haggai, saying, Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,
 3 ‘Who is left among you—that saw this house in her first glory?
 And how do ye see it now?—⁴ is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?⁶
 4 Yet now ⁶ be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD;
 And be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest;
 And be strong, all ye people of the land,—saith the LORD, and work :
⁷ For I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts :
 5 ⁸ According to the word that I covenanted with you—when ye came out of Egypt,
 So ⁹ my spirit remaineth⁷ among you :—fear ye not.
 6 For thus saith the LORD of hosts ;—¹⁰ Yet once,⁸ it is a little while,
 And ¹¹ I will shake the heavens, and the earth,—and the sea, and the dry land;⁹
 7 ¹² And I will shake all nations,—¹³ and the desire¹⁰ of all nations shall come :
 And I will fill this house with glory,—saith the LORD of hosts.
 8 ¹⁴ The silver is mine, and the gold is mine,—saith the LORD of hosts.
 9 ¹⁵ The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former,
 Saith the LORD of hosts :
 And in this place will I give ¹⁶ peace,¹¹—saith the LORD of hosts.

Remonstrance with the people, and promise of prosperity as the reward of obedience; with a special message to Zerubbabel assuring him of Divine protection and favour.

- 10 IN¹² the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of 11 Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying, Thus saith

 8 There shall be one great change, and that soon. The occasion of this prophecy was the change which was now taking place in the temple and worship of God by the diminution of its outward magnificence and splendour.
 The prediction therefore may be understood as foretelling another great religious change, namely, that which was caused by the introduction of Christianity; which, springing out of the very system and worship now restored, shall cause a moral revolution through ‘all nations,’ and give to the service of Jehovah a higher glory than it ever possessed before. This clearly predicts the spiritual glory of the gospel. See Heb. xii. 26.

9 This figure is often used to signify great commotions and changes, political, social, or religious.

10 Heb., ‘the desires,’ i. e. the objects of their desire.
 Some regard this as applying to the Messiah personally ;
 but the plural form of the word in the Hebrew forbids such an explanation of the passage. The meaning may be either, that the wealth (ver. 8) which they delight in ‘shall come’ as an offering to Jehovah (comp. Isa.
 lx. 5 ; lxi. 6), or that the blessings which they desire shall come to them. There seems to have been for some time previously to our Lord's coming a general dissatisfaction with the existing forms of religion, and a widely prevailing, though vague desire for something better. See Plato, Alcib. 2, ss. 22, 23.

11 The worship which is now being re-established shall prepare the way for the gospel of peace.

12 Two months after the preceding message Haggai again stirs up the people, by showing them that God will not accept their worship whilst his temple is neglected (10—14) ; he reminds them of God's chastenings, and promises them prosperity upon their obedience (15—19).
 To this is added a special promise of protection to their pious leader amidst approaching dangers (20—23).

12 the LORD of hosts; ^q Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying, ^r If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered
13 and said, No. Then said Haggai, If one that is ^s unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be 14 unclean.¹ Then answered Haggai, and said,

^t So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD;
And so is every work of their hands;—and that which they offer there is unclean.
15 And now, I pray you, ^u consider—from this day and upward,²
From before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD:
16 Since those days were,
^x When one came to an heap of twenty measures,—there were but ten:
When one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press,³
There were but twenty.

17 ^y I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail ^z In all the labours of your hands;—^a yet ye turned not to me,⁴—saith the LORD.

18 Consider now from this day and upward,
From the four and twentieth day of the ninth month,
Even from ^b the day that the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid,
Consider it.

19 ^c Is the seed yet in the barn?⁵—Yea, as yet the vine, and the fig tree,
And the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth.
^d From this day will I bless you.

20 AND again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth 21 day of the month, saying, Speak to Zerubbabel, ^e governor of Judah, saying,

^f I will shake the heavens and the earth;⁶
22 And ^g I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms,
And I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen;
And ^h I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them;
And the horses and their riders shall come down,
ⁱ Every one by the sword of his brother.⁷

23 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts,
Will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant,—the son of Shealtiel,
Saith the LORD,
^k And will make thee as a signet:⁸—for ^l I have chosen thee,
Saith the LORD of hosts.

¹ The holy offering does not sanctify whatever touches it; but the unclean pollutes anything that comes in contact with it: so your good works do not compensate for your neglect of my temple; but this neglect makes everything else that you do unacceptable. Hence your want of that success which would be a mark of Divine favour towards you. Comp. James ii. 10.

² That is, backwards; whilst the temple had been neglected.

³ Or, 'to draw out fifty vats;' a measure doubtless large, but probably indefinite, like our 'hogshead.'

⁴ The people did not lay to heart these calamities as the judgments of God upon their sins.

⁵ This may mean either, Is not your store exhausted? yet, little as you have, you shall soon have plenty; or, 'Your grain is sown,' and you cannot tell what the produce will be, but I promise you an abundant harvest.

⁷ That is, one by another.

⁸ The seal which, according to ancient custom, contained a person's signature, was of the highest value to him, and kept with jealous care. So, amidst all the convulsions of the nations, God will preserve his faithful servant Zerubbabel. The reigns of Darius and his successor were marked by great and disastrous wars, which might have brought great trouble upon the Jewish prince, as a dependant on the Persian kings, had he not been favoured with Divine protection. This promise, like that in Matt. xxviii. 20; Mark xvi. 16, 17, may be regarded as having a further application to all God's servants who are called to similar duties, and especially to their Divine Master.

ZECHARIAH.

ZECHARIAH, like Jeremiah and Ezekiel, was of the priestly race; his grandfather Iddo being the chief of one of the classes of priests who returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel and Joshua (see Neh. xii. 4); at which time Zechariah must have been very young. He was contemporary with Haggai, and co-operated with him in exhorting and encouraging the Jews to rebuild the temple and to restore its public ordinances. But, in addition to this, he was commissioned to deliver many important prophecies relating to the future.

The prophecies of Zechariah, like those of Daniel, extend to the 'times of the Gentiles' (Luke xxiii. 24); but in Zechariah the history of the chosen people forms the centre of his predictions; and that history is set forth both in direct prophecy, and in symbolical acts and visions.

Although the language and style of this book are by no means obscure, there is considerable difficulty in explaining its visions and prophecies. Yet some portions are very clear, and they diffuse light around them. Much, too, may be learned from a comparison with the writings of the earlier prophets, to which repeated allusions may be found.

The book of Zechariah may be divided into three parts :

I. The first part (ch. i.—vi.) contains a series of eight visions, which were communicated to the prophet in the second year of Darius, revealing the dispensations of God's providence relative both to the Jews and to the nations which had oppressed them.

Introductory calls to repentance.

- 1 IN¹ the eighth month,² ^a in the second year of Darius,³ came the word of the LORD ^b unto Zechariah, (the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo,) the prophet, saying,
- 2 The LORD hath been sore displeased with your fathers.
- 3 Therefore say thou unto them,—Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
- Turn ^c ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts,
- ^d And I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.
- 4 Be ye not as your fathers,—^e unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying,
- Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
- ^f Turn ye now from your evil ways,—and from your evil doings :
- ^g But they did not hear,—nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD.
- 5 Your fathers, ^h where are they?—and the prophets, do they live for ever?⁴
- 6 But ⁱ my words and my statutes,⁵—which I commanded my servants the prophets,
- Did they not take hold of your fathers?
- And they returned and said,⁶—^k Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us,
- ^l According to our ways, and according to our doings,—so hath he dealt with us.

Zechariah's first vision—the angel standing in the myrtle grove and the four horses ; promises of the restoration of Jerusalem.

- 7 UPON⁷ the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, (which is the month Sebat,⁸) in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, (the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo,) the prophet, saying,
- 8 I saw by night, and behold ^m a man riding upon a red horse,⁹ and he stood among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom,¹⁰ and behind him were there
- 9 ⁿ red horses, speckled, and white. Then said I, O my lord, what are these?
- And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will show thee what these be.
- 10 And ^o the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, ^p These are
- 11 they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth. ^q And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle trees, and said,
- We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.
- 12 Then ^r the angel of the LORD answered and said, ^s O LORD of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which
- 13 thou hast had indignation 'these threescore and ten years?'¹¹ And the LORD answered the angel that talked with me with ^t good words and comfortable words.
- 14 So ^u the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, ^x vers. 9, 13.

1 Vers 1—6 are an introductory section, renewing God's ancient calls to repentance.

2 Just two months after Haggai began to prophesy, and about one month after the temple was recommenced.

3 See note on Hag. i. 1.

4 The generation to whom God's word was revealed has passed away ; but that word has still its bearing upon you. Comp. Isa. xl. 6—8.

5 Rather, 'decrees.' The things which I had decreed 'took hold of' (i. e. befel) your fathers.

6 That is, to Jehovah ; acknowledging that their sufferings were the fruit of their sins.

7 From this verse to ch. vi. 8 we have a series of symbolical visions, which appear to have been beheld by the prophet in one night, all referring to the rebuilding of the temple and city. The first is a vision of the Angel of Jehovah as a warrior (comp. Josh. v. 13, and note), standing in a myrtle grove, and followed by others, who, after having patrolled the whole world, report that all is now at rest (8—11). He then intercedes for Jerusalem, and obtains a cheering promise of its restoration, which an interpreting angel communicates to the prophet (12—17). The vision appears to refer to the state of general peace under Darius Hystaspis which followed the bloody and chequered scenes connected with the overthrow of the Babylonian monarchy and the establishment of the Persian empire. But though the whole earth had rest, and the seventy years of predicted desolation and captivity had expired, the Jews were still molested. And a consolatory reply is given to the angel's inquiry, expressing the determination of Him who controls the affairs of all nations to secure to Jerusalem the fulfilment of his promises of mercy.

8 About three months after the former message. 'Sebat' was the Chaldee name of the eleventh month.

9 Similar representations of God's controlling and protecting providence are given in Gen. xxxii. 1, Josh. v. 13 ; 2 Kings vi. 17. The red, piebald (or perhaps brown), and white horses, may respectively denote sanguinary, unsettled, and peaceful periods. See Rev. vi. 4, etc.

10 Or, 'in the deep valley,' which the myrtle prefers.

11 See note on 2 Kings xxv. 8.

- Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
 I am ^yjealous for Jerusalem—and for Zion with a great jealousy.
 15 And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease :
 For ^zI was but a little displeased,—and they helped forward the affliction.¹
 16 Therefore thus saith the LORD ;—^aI am returned to Jerusalem with mercies :
^bMy house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts,
 And ^ca line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.²
 17 Cry yet, saying,—Thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
^dMy cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad ;³
^eAnd the LORD shall yet comfort Zion,—and ^fshall yet choose Jerusalem.

Second vision—the four horns and four workmen ; prediction of the deliverance of the Jews.

- 18, 19 THEN lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, four ^ghorns.⁴ And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these ? And he answered me, ^hThese are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.
 20, 21 And the LORD showed me four carpenters. Then said I, What come these to do ? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head : but these are come to fray⁵ them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which ⁱlifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

Third vision—the angel with the measuring line ; promise of protection and prosperity to Jerusalem.

- 2 I⁶ LIFTED up mine eyes again, and looked, and, behold, ^ka man with a 2 measuring line in his hand. Then said I, Whither goest thou ? And he said unto me, ^lTo measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.
 3 And, behold, ^mthe angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel
 4 went out to meet him, and said⁷ unto him, Run, speak to this young man, ⁿsaying, ^oJerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls,
 For the multitude of men and cattle therein :
 5 For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her ^pa wall of fire⁹ round about, ^qAnd will be the glory in the midst of her.
 6 Ho ! ho ! come forth, and flee ^rfrom the land of the north, saith the LORD :
 For I have ^sspread you abroad—as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD.
 7 ^tDeliver thyself, O Zion,¹⁰—that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.
 8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts ;
^uAfter the glory¹¹ ^vhath he sent me¹² unto the nations which spoiled you :
 For he that ^wtoucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.¹³
 9 For, behold, I will ^xshake mine hand upon them,
^yAnd they shall be a spoil to their servants :
 And ^zye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me.
 10 ^aSing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion :
^bFor, lo, I come,—and I ^cwill dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD.
 11 ^dAnd many nations shall be joined to the LORD ^ein that day,
 And shall be ^fmy people :—and I will dwell in the midst of thee,
 And ^gthou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee.

2 That is, the measuring line for rebuilding it.

3 Rather, 'My cities shall overflow with prosperity.'

4 In the second vision (vers. 18—21) Zechariah sees four 'horns,' the emblems of power, in this case hostile to Israel ; and four 'workmen,' who come to terrify the 'horns,' and to deliver Israel. The 'four horns' probably signify enemies from every quarter ; and the 'four workmen' in like manner seem to be God's agents for the deliverance of his people, who overpower all these foes.

5 That is, to dismay and deter them.

6 In the third vision the prophet sees an angel who is about to measure Jerusalem (vers. 1, 2), but is told that its abundant population shall need no walls, for Jehovah will protect it (3—5). Upon this the exiles who still remain in Babylon are invited to return, and the nations which have oppressed Israel are threatened (6—9). And Zion is called to rejoice in Jehovah's favour ; while all men silently reverence him (10—13). This prophecy is evidently one of that class in which the deliverance from Babylon is regarded as an earnest of 'the great salvation' wrought by Messiah. See Isa. xlix., lx., and notes.

7 That is, as many suppose, the first angel said.

 self : but it may be the measurer. Comp. Mark xvi. 5.

10 That is, O ye that belong to Zion.

11 Probably meaning, after (i. e. in addition to) the glory promised (see ver. 5).

12 Many regard these as the words of 'the Lord of hosts,' who, as being 'sent' by Jehovah, must be the Divine Messiah, whose mission of deliverance includes the punishment of those who have 'spoiled' Israel. See Isa. lxiii. 1, and note. Others think that they are the words of the angel (ver. 3), and expressive simply of Jehovah's will and intention.

And ^kshall choose Jerusalem again.

Fourth vision—the High Priest standing before the angel, and Satan at his right hand; prophecy of the Messiah.

3 AND² he showed me ^pJoshua³ the high priest standing before ^qthe angel of the LORD,⁴ and ^rSatan⁵ standing at his right hand to resist him.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan,—^sThe LORD rebuke thee, O Satan;
Even the LORD that ^thath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee:
^uIs not this a brand plucked out of the fire?⁶

3 Now Joshua was clothed with ^xfilthy garments,⁷ and stood before the angel.
4 And he answered and spake ^yunto those that stood before him, saying, ^zTake away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, ^aI have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, ^band I will clothe thee with change of raiment. And I⁸ said, Let them set a fair ^cmitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by. And the angel of the LORD protested unto Joshua, saying,
7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;

If thou wilt walk in my ways,—and if thou wilt ^dkeep my charge,
Then thou shalt also ^ejudge my house,—and shalt also keep my courts,
And I will give thee places to walk ^famong these that ^gstand by.

Behold, ⁿI will engrave the graving thereof,—saith the LORD of hosts,
And ^oI will remove the iniquity of that land in one day.¹²

10 ^pIn that day, saith the LORD of hosts,
Shall ye call every man his neighbour,—^qunder the vine and under the fig tree.¹³

Fifth vision—the golden chandelier and its supply of oil; assurance of success to Zerubbabel.

4 AND¹⁴ ^rthe angel that talked with me came again, and waked me,¹⁵ ^sas a man that is wakened out of his sleep, and said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and, behold, ^ta candlestick all ^{qf}gold, with a bowl upon the top of it, ^uand his seven lamps thereon, and seven pipes to the seven lamps,¹⁶ which ^vare upon the top thereof; ^xand two olive trees by it, one upon the right ^{side} of the bowl, and the other upon the left ^{side} thereof.

1 In adoration of Jehovah, who thus displays his power and grace.

2 The reparation of the city having been promised, Zechariah next beholds in vision the priesthood delivered from its degradation, its guilt removed, and all its honourable functions and privileges restored (ch. iii. 1—7). Yet this is but a partial accomplishment of God's promises; a sign of the Great Priest, Foundation, and Temple, through whom sin shall be forgiven, and the safety and happiness of the human race secured (8—10).

³ See Hag. i. 1; Ezra ii. 1, and note.

⁴ See note on ch. ii. 8.

⁵ Or, 'the accuser;' who, in ancient courts of justice, stood at the right hand of the accused: see Ps. cix. 6. Satan here appears as accusing Joshua, the representative of the Jews, in order to obstruct their deliverance.

⁶ That is, a remnant rescued from destruction. See Amos iv. 11.

⁷ Denoting the sins and pollutions of the people, and especially of the priesthood.

⁸ If this reading is correct, the prophet seems to interpose a request. But the Chaldee, Syriac, and Vulgate read 'he said,' which accords better with the context.

⁹ That is, thou shalt have free access to my palace among my favoured attendants. Some, however, render the passage, 'I will give thee guides;' and understand it as meaning that Jehovah's angelic attendants shall always render their aid to Joshua.

¹⁰ Rather, 'men of wonder,' or sign; i. e. men intended for signs and tokens: comp. Isa. xx. 3; Ezek. xii. 11; xxiv. 24. You and your brethren, now restored to your country and to your priestly functions, are a sign and pledge of the fulfilment of my great promise of the Messiah. Hence he is here spoken of as 'the Branch,' a title intimating the revival in him of Israel's glory: see Isa. iv. 2; xi. 1, and notes.

¹¹ That is, the foundation of the temple, which had been laid in the presence of Joshua (see Ezra iii. 8—13). This one building shall be specially watched over by God's omniscient providence, and shall be adorned with his glory: comp. ch. iv. 10, and note.

¹² That is, speedily.

¹³ See 1 Kings iv. 25, and note.

¹⁴ In this vision, the prophet sees a golden chandelier, which is unfailingly supplied with oil (vers 1—3); and it is explained to him, as being designed to afford encouragement amidst the difficulties which beset the restoration of God's house: for Zerubbabel, who has commenced, shall complete the structure (4—9) under the omniscient providence of God (10), who will supply abundant grace to his people (11—14).

¹⁵ Or, 'aroused me,' from the meditations suggested by the preceding vision.

¹⁶ Heb., 'seven and seven pipes to the lamps;' meaning apparently, either twice seven pipes to the whole, or seven to each lamp. This candelabrum bears some resemblance to that in the temple; but it has only one central bowl, which feeds all the lamps, and is itself supplied by two olive-trees. These peculiarities show that it is not the temple lampstand, but an ideal object.

4 So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are 5 these, my lord? Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto 6 me, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord. Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the LORD unto Zerub-babel, saying,

^y Not by might, nor by power,¹—but by my spirit, saith the LORD of hosts.

7 Who art thou,² O great mountain?—^a Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain :
And he shall bring forth ^b the headstone thereof
^c With shoutings, crying, ^d Grace! grace unto it!

8 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,
9 The hands of Zerubbabel ^e have laid the foundation of this house ;
His hands ^f shall also finish it ;
And ^g thou shalt know that the ^h LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you.
10 For who hath despised the day of ⁱ small things ?
For they shall rejoice,—^k and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel
With those seven ; ^l they are the eyes of the LORD, which run to and fro through the whole earth.²

11 Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these ^m two olive trees upon 12 the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof? And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive branches which through the 13 two golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves? And he answered me 14 and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord. Then said he, ⁿ These are the two anointed ones,³ ^o that stand by ^p the Lord of the whole earth.

Sixth and seventh visions—the flying roll and the flying ephah; the punishment of the wicked, and the removal of sin.

5 THEN⁴ I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, a flying
2 ^q roll. And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits.⁵

3 Then said he unto me, This is the ^r curse that goeth forth, over the face of the whole earth:⁶ for every one ^s that stealeth shall be cut off, as on this side according to it; and every one that sweareth shall be cut off, as on that side⁷ 4 according to it. I will bring it forth, saith the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of ^t him that sweareth falsely by my name: and ^u it shall remain in the midst of his house, and ^x shall consume it, with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.⁸

5 Then ^y the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up 6 now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth. And I said, What is it?
And he said, This is an ephah⁹ that goeth forth. He said moreover, This is 7 their resemblance¹⁰ through all the earth. And, behold, there was lifted up a 8 talent of lead: and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah. And he said, This is wickedness.¹¹ And he cast it¹² into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof.

^y ch. 1. 9.

² Rather, 'And those seven eyes of Jehovah, those that run to and fro in all the earth, rejoice and see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel.' God's all-watchful providence (ch. iii. 9; Prov. xv. 3) beholds with joy and favour the work of Zerubbabel; and, however some may 'despise' the small beginning, He will take care that the work shall be gloriously completed.

³ Some suppose these 'two anointed ones' to be Zerubbabel and Joshua—the civil and religious leaders of the people—through whom God would revive and sustain their pious zeal. Others regard them as representing the Law and the Prophets, the two teachers of ancient Israel. Calvin thinks that they denote the abundance and constancy with which God supplies grace to his people.

⁴ In ch. v. two visions of a different character follow; namely, of a flying roll (vers. 1—4), and of a flying ephah

(5—11), each represented as charged with the iniquities of the country (3, 4, 8). The flight of these beyond its borders (11) appears to symbolize the removal from the land of all existing causes of offence.

⁵ Making the length more than ten yards, and the breadth more than five. The unusually large size of the roll indicates the great number of sins and curses which it contained.

⁶ Rather, 'of the whole land;' i. e. of Judea.

⁷ The roll was written on both sides (comp. Ezek. ii. 10); containing on one side the crimes against the second table of the Law, represented by 'theft;' and on the other those against the first table, represented by 'swearing.'

⁸ Utterly destroying all that he has.

⁹ The ephah was one of the largest measures used by the Hebrews, containing about a bushel. Some think that it denotes the full measure which the sins of the Jews had attained before their captivity.

¹⁰ Or, 'appearance;' i. e. their sin is as large as this.

¹¹ That is, This woman represents wickedness. That the size of the woman does not agree with that of the measure is not strange in a vision.

¹² Rather, 'cast her,' the woman. He hides and effectually imprisons her.

9 Then lifted I up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings; for they had wings like the wings of a stork: ¹ 10 and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven. Then said I to 11 the angel that talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah? And he said unto me, To build it an house in ^a the land of Shinar: ² and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

Eighth vision—the four chariots going forth into various countries.

6 AND ³ I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass. ⁴ In the first chariot were ^b red ⁵ horses; and in the second chariot ^c black horses; and in the third chariot ^d white horses; and in the fourth chariot ^e grisled and bay horses. Then I answered ^f and said unto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord?

5 And the angel answered and said unto me, ^g These are the four spirits ⁶ of the heavens, which go forth from ^h standing before the Lord of all the earth. The black horses which are therein go forth into ⁱ the north country; and the white 7 go forth after them; ⁷ and the grisled go forth toward the south ⁸ country. And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might ^j walk to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

8 Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my ^k spirit in the north country. ⁹

Symbolical crowns to be made and placed on the head of the high priest; prophecy of the Messiah and the future church.

9, 10 AND ¹⁰ the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Take of them of the captivity, ¹¹ even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, ¹² which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of 11 ^m Zephaniah; then take silver and gold, and make ⁿ crowns, ¹³ and set them upon 12 the head of ^o Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest; and speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying,

Behold ^p the man whose name is The ^q Branch;

And he shall grow up ¹⁴ out of his place,

^r And he shall build the temple of the LORD: ¹⁵

13 Even he shall build the temple of the LORD;—and he ^s shall bear the glory, And shall sit and rule upon his throne;—and ^t he shall be a priest upon his throne: And ^u the counsel of peace shall be between them both. ¹⁶

14 And the crowns shall be to Helem, ¹⁷ and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to 15 Hen the son of Zephaniah, ^v for a memorial in the temple of the LORD. And

¹ That is, very strong. Some suppose that these two women denote the Assyrians and Babylonians; who, by carrying the Israelites into captivity, cured them of idolatry, their grossest sin. But they seem only to be accessories in the picture. It is probable that all this foreshadows the purification of the future church.

² 'Shinar' is the country around Babylon; where, as in its appropriate home, the Jews left their propensity to idolatry.

⁴ This represents solidity. What these 'mountains of brass' mean is doubtful. Some think them to be the Medes and Persians: others, with greater probability, the fixed decrees from which proceed God's providential dealings. See Psa. xxxvi. 6.

⁵ See note on ch. i. 8.

⁶ Agents of God's will. Or, perhaps, 'winds;' i. e. destructive agencies.

⁷ If this is the correct rendering, the meaning may be, that the 'north' (probably Assyria and Babylonia) is destined to suffer desolation, and then to enjoy peace. But it may be rendered, 'go forth westward.'

⁸ That is, towards Egypt.

⁹ The judgments which have been inflicted on Babylon have now satisfied my justice.

¹⁰ Some of the exiles living in Babylon having brought gifts for the rebuilding of the temple, the prophet is commanded to make the silver and gold into crowns; which are first to be placed on the high priest's head, and then to be laid up in the temple as memorials of the promise that, in the Messiah, the royal dignity shall be restored and be united with the priesthood; and there shall be a new temple, in which distant nations shall present their gifts and worship (9—15).

¹¹ Rather, 'Take from them of the captivity,' etc.; 'yea, take silver and gold,' etc. (ver. 11).

¹³ As these were symbols of the priestly and royal dignities, they were probably the kingly crown, and the golden plate, or ornament on the tiara (Exod. xxviii. 36), of the high priest. Whether they were separate or combined into one head-dress is not said.

¹⁵ As Zerubbabel had been assured that he should finish the temple then building (ch. iv. 9), this prophecy clearly points to another temple to be built by and for the Messiah as Royal Priest. See Eph. ii. 19—22; 1 Pet. ii. 4.

¹⁶ The meaning probably is, between the two offices just mentioned. The Messiah unites all the functions and honours of the priestly and kingly offices. All this is clearly applied to our Lord in Heb. ch. vii. Compare also Gen. xiv. 18; Psa. cx., and notes.

¹⁷ The same person as Heldai (ver. 10). 'Hen' may be the same as Josiah (ver. 10); but some render the clause, 'and to the generosity of the son of Zephaniah.'

Inquiry respecting two national fasts, and God's reply through the prophet, with reproofs and promises of mercy.

7 AND³ it came to pass in the fourth year of king Darius, that the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu; 2 when they had sent unto the house of God⁴ Sherezzer and Regemmelech, and 3 their men, to pray before the LORD [Heb. to entreat the face of the LORD], and to ^a speak⁵ unto the priests which were in the house of the LORD of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I weep in ^b the fifth month, ^c separating myself, as I have done these so many years?

4, 5 Then came the word of the LORD of hosts unto me, saying, Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye ^d fasted and mourned in the fifth ^e and seventh month,⁶ ^f even those seventy years, did ye at all fast ^g unto me, even to me?⁷ And when ye did eat, and when ye did drink, did not ye eat 7 for yourselves, and drink for yourselves? Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited ^h the south and the plain?⁸

8, 9 And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying, Thus speaketh⁹ the LORD of hosts, saying, ⁱ Execute true judgment,

And show mercy and compassions every man to his brother :

10 And ^k oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless,—the stranger, nor the poor ;

^l And let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

11 But ^m they refused to hearken,—and ⁿ pulled away the shoulder,¹⁰

And ^o stopped their ears, that they should not hear.

12 Yea, they made their ^p hearts as an adamant stone,

^q Lest they should hear the law,—and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent ¹¹ In his spirit by the former prophets :

^r Therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

13 Therefore it is come to pass,—that as he cried, and they would not hear ;

So ^s they cried, and I would not hear,—saith the LORD of hosts :

14 But ^t I scattered them with a whirlwind, among all the nations ^u whom they knew not.

1 As the spiritual temple of the Messiah is the subject of the prophecy, these words predict the conversion of the Gentiles to Christ. See Eph. ii. 19—22.

2 Their disobedience could not frustrate the plans of God; but it might, and did, exclude the Jews for many ages from the blessings promised.

3 Messengers having come, as some suppose from the Jews in Babylon, to inquire of the prophet whether a national fast which had been instituted at the commencement of the captivity ought to be continued (ch. vii. 1—3), Zechariah is bidden to remind them of what had been taught by earlier prophets respecting the nature of a true and acceptable fast (4—10), and of their fathers' neglect of these teachings, which had brought punishment upon them (11—14). But he is also commanded to assure them of God's interest in Jerusalem, where he purposes still to dwell; making the city sacred, populous, and secure (viii. 1—6), and by his wonderful power gathering and blessing his people (7, 8). He further reminds them of the distress they were in before they began to rebuild the temple (9, 10): and God promises to turn the curse into a blessing (11—15), if they will obey his precepts (16, 17). Then shall their fasts be turned to feasts (18, 19), and the people of many cities shall come and join in their worship (20—22), desiring the privileges of the 'Israelite indeed' (23). It is clear that the blessedness and glory of the spiritual worship and the true Israel are the ultimate objects of this cheering prophecy.

4 Rather, 'when Bethel sent Sherezzer,' etc. 'Bethel' may perhaps be put here for the inhabitants of the town of Bethel, or it may mean the 'house (i. e. the people) of God.'

5 It was the priest's duty (see Mal. ii. 7) to direct the people in the worship of God, and the observances of his law.

6 These two fasts were of merely human appointment; that of the fifth month commemorating the destruction of the temple by the Chaldeans; that of the seventh the murder of Gedaliah: see refs. The question was whether, when the seventy years of captivity were expired and the temple was rebuilt, these fasts should be continued. The Jews still retain them in their calendar.

7 Have your fasts and your feasts been seasons of true humiliation before God, or of real thankfulness to Him? The question implies that they had not, otherwise they would not have been accompanied by the sins rebuked in ver. 10. Compare Isa. i. 11—20; lviii. 3—6; to which probably ver. 7 refers.

8 This 'plain' is the low country along the coast of the Western Sea. These parts were probably at this time almost depopulated, the 'plain' being the track of the great armies passing between Egypt and Asia.

9 Rather, 'Thus spoke;' i. e. to your ancestors: see refs., and ver. 11.

10 See note on Neh. ix. 29.

11 Rather, 'sent.' So ver. 13, 'it came to pass.' See note on ver. 9. These allusions to the conduct and punishment of their ancestors showed the peculiar guilt of their descendants, who refused to take warning from them.

12 Rather, 'I have been jealous;' i. e. against the foes of Zion.

- And I was jealous for her with great fury.
- 3 Thus saith the LORD;
^a I am returned ¹ unto Zion,—and ^b will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem:
 And Jerusalem ^c shall be called a City of truth;
 And ^d the mountain of the LORD of hosts ^e the Holy Mountain.
- 4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;
^f There shall yet old men and old women dwell in ^g the streets of Jerusalem,
 And every man with his staff in his hand for very age.
- 5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.
- 6 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;
 If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, ^h Should it also be marvellous in mine eyes?—saith the LORD of hosts.
- 7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;—Behold, ⁱ I will save my people
 From the east country,—and from the ^k west country;²
- 8 And I will bring them, ^l and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem:
^m And they shall be my people,—and I will be their God, ⁿ In truth and in righteousness.³
- 9 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;—^o Let your hands be strong,
 Ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of ^p the prophets,
 Which were in ^q the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid,
 That the temple might be built.
- 10 For before these days there was no ^r hire for man, nor any hire⁴ for beast;
^s Neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in,
 Because of the affliction:⁵—for I set all men every one against his neighbour.
- 11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people
 As in the former days,—saith the LORD of hosts.
- 12 ^t For the seed shall be prosperous;—the vine shall give her fruit,
 And ^u the ground shall give her increase,—and ^v the heavens shall give their dew;
 And I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.
- 13 And it shall come to pass,—That as ye were ^w a curse among the heathen,
 O house of Judah, and house of Israel;
 So will I save you, and ^x ye shall be a blessing.
 Fear not, but ^y let your hands be strong.
- 14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts;
^z As I thought to punish you,—when your fathers provoked me to wrath,
 Saith the LORD of hosts,—^a and I repented not:
- 15 ^b So again have I thought in these days
 To do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah.—Fear ye not.⁶
- 16 These are the things that ye shall do;
^c Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour;
 Execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates:
- 17 ^d And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbour;
 And ^e love no false oath:—for all these are things that I hate, saith the LORD.
- 18, 19 And the word of the LORD of hosts came unto me, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^f The fast of the fourth month,⁷ ^g and the fast of the fifth, ^h and the fast of the seventh, ⁱ and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah ^j joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts. ^k Therefore love the truth and peace.
- 20 Thus saith the LORD of hosts;
It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people,
 And the inhabitants of many cities:
- 21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying,
^l Let us go speedily [Heb. going] ^m to pray before the LORD,
 And to seek the LORD of hosts:—I will go also.
- 22 Yea, ⁿ many people and strong nations shall come
 To seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem,—and to pray before the LORD.

² From all places, wherever they are dispersed.

³ They shall act towards me, as I have always done towards them, truly and uprightly. God's truth and justice are then illustrated by a reference to their depressed condition before they set to work at the temple, as contrasted with the great blessings which he will bestow upon them (vers. 9—17).

⁴ That is, no reward of labour.

1 That is, many men.

2 In the manner of one who desires to go with another, and will not take a refusal. See Isa. iii. 6.

3 Here begins a series of prophecies which some expositors apply, in part, to the victories of the Maccabees over Antiochus, and other events about to occur shortly, but which evidently in their chief intention refer to a more remote futurity. The prophet commences by denouncing the destruction of the neighbouring states which have been hostile to Israel (vers 1—6), followed by a promise that the remnant of those nations shall be joined to the chosen people (7). He promises protection to Zion (8); calls her to rejoice in the coming of her King Messiah, who shall be a gentle and peaceful Prince, yet possessing universal dominion (9, 10), and in faithfulness to his covenant achieving the salvation of his captive people (11, 12). He then describes the triumphs of this King and his hosts over all opposing powers, and the glory, prosperity, and happiness that shall result from his conquests (13—17). These prophecies are very similar to those in Isa. xi., liv., lx., and are to be interpreted in the same way.

4 The name 'Hadrach' does not occur elsewhere; but it may be inferred from the context that it was either a part of Syria or a city near Damascus.

5 That is, of the burden; the place on which the impending judgment shall settle.

6 Rather, 'For the eyes of men and of all the tribes of Israel,' etc. These judgments shall compel men to acknowledge Jehovah's hand.

7 Rather, 'And Hamath also [which] borders thereby;' i. e. Hamath shall share in the same judgment.

8 That is, Tyre. See Isa. xxiii.; Ezek. xxvi.—xxviii., and notes, particularly Ezek. xxviii. 3, 4, 17.

9 Meaning, perhaps, a mongrel, degraded race.

10 The remnant of the people shall forsake their idolatrous and abominable practices for the worship of 'our God;' and thus be incorporated (like the ancient Jebusites in Jerusalem), with God's people.

11 While the above revolutions are taking place in the neighbouring states, God will guard his own people against the armies that march to and fro, and not suffer any enemy to injure them; for which purpose his eyes will be continually on the watch.

12 Heb., 'saved.' As to his subjects he is 'just;' as to his enemies he is 'saved' from all their designs, and therefore he becomes 'the Author of salvation' to his people. Yet he does not ride in the chariot or on the horse of the warrior (ver. 10), nor in regal state upon 'the king's mule;' but, as one who is both peaceful and lowly, upon 'the foal of an ass.' Comp. Matt. xxi. 4, etc.

13 This is addressed still to Zion.

14 That is, on account of the blood of thy covenant; i. e. the covenant which I have made with thee. See Exod. xxiv. 8.

15 That is, 'out of their prison;' empty cisterns being often used as dungeons (see Jer. xxxviii. 6).

16 Rather, 'return.' The stronghold is Zion, now securely guarded by Jehovah.

17 That is, abundantly. See note on Isa. xl. 2.

- 13 When I have bent Judah for me,—filled the bow with Ephraim,¹
And raised up thy sons, O Zion,—against thy sons, O Greece,
And made thee as the sword of a mighty man.
- 14 And the LORD¹ shall be seen over them,
And ^m his arrow shall go forth as the lightning:
And the Lord Godⁿ shall blow the trumpet,
And shall go^o with whirlwinds of the south.²
- 15 The LORD of hosts shall defend them;
And ^p they shall devour, and subdue with sling stones;³
^q And they shall drink,⁴ and make a noise as through wine;
And they shall be filled like bowls,⁵—and as ^r the corners of the altar.
- 16 And the LORD their God shall save them in that day—^s as the flock of his people:
For ^t they shall be as the stones of a crown,
^u Lifted up as an ensign upon his land.⁶
- 17 For ^x how great is his goodness, and ^y how great is his beauty!
^z Corn shall make the young men cheerful,—and new wine the maids.

Promises of strength, prosperity, and glory to Israel.

- 10 ASK⁷ ye^a of the LORD⁸ ^b rain^c in the time of the latter rain;⁹
So the LORD shall make bright clouds [or, lightnings^d], ^e And give them showers of rain,—to every one grass in the field.
- 2 For the ^f idols¹⁰ have spoken vanity,—and ^g the diviners have seen a lie,
And have told false dreams;—they ^h comfort in vain:
ⁱ Therefore they went their way¹¹ as a flock,
They were troubled, ^k because there was no shepherd.
- 3 ^l Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds,—^m and I punished the goats.¹²
For the LORD of hosts ⁿ hath visited his flock the house of Judah,
And ^o hath made them as his goodly horse¹³ in the battle.
- 4 ^p Out of him came forth ^q the corner,—out of him ^r the nail,
Out of him the battle-bow,—out of him every oppressor¹⁴ together.
- 5 And they shall be as mighty men, which ^s tread down their enemies
In the mire of the streets in the battle:
And they shall fight, ^t because the LORD is with them,
And the riders on horses¹⁵ shall be confounded.
- 6 And I will strengthen the house of Judah,—and I will save the house of Joseph,
And ^u I will bring them again to place them;—for I ^x have mercy upon them:
And they shall be ^y as though I had not cast them off:
For I am the LORD their God, and ^z will hear them.
- 7 And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man,
And their ^a heart shall rejoice as through wine:
Yea, ^b their children¹⁶ shall see it, and be glad;
Their heart shall rejoice in the LORD.
- 8 I will ^c hiss¹⁷ for them, and gather them;—^d for I have redeemed them:
^e And they shall increase as they have increased.¹⁸
- 9 And ^f I will sow them¹⁹ among the people:
And they shall ^g remember me in far countries;

¹ Rather, 'For I will use Judah as my bow, and Ephraim as my arrow, and raise up,' etc.; making my people, now saved and led by the Messiah (ver. 14), the conquerors of the world for Him. The 'Greeks' are selected, perhaps, as the most martial people known to the prophet.

⁶ The earth now subject to Messiah. See Isa. lxii. 3.

⁷ That the foregoing blessings may be enjoyed, the people must seek them earnestly from Jehovah (ver. 1), not repenting the idolatries and incurring the chastisements of their fathers (2, 3); for God yet designs to give them power and honour (3—5). Ephraim shall be blessed as well as Judah; being freed, strengthened, and multiplied (6—9), as when the Hebrews were brought from Egypt and from Assyria, and planted in Canaan (10). Nor shall any difficulty or opposition hinder their restoration (11, 12). This passage resembles Isa. xi. lii. 4 (on which see notes), in the application of God's past interpositions to his future dealings with his church.

⁸ Jehovah is the source of all good. If, then, you would have the blessings promised, ask Him for them. See note on Ezek. xxxvi. 37.

¹⁹ I will so multiply them, that they shall spread over the world. Some, however, render the clause, 'Though I scatter them among the people, yet they shall remember me,' etc. If I have to chastise, I will yet cause them to repent.

- And they shall live with their children, and turn again.
 10 ^a I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt,
 And gather them out of Assyria;
 And I will bring them ⁱ into the land of Gilead and Lebanon;
 And ^k place shall not be found for them.
 11 ⁱ And he shall pass through the sea with ^l affliction,

 3 ^u There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds;—for their glory is spoiled:
 A voice of the roaring of young lions; ⁶—for the pride of Jordan ⁷ is spoiled.
 4 Thus saith the LORD my God;—^x Feed the flock of the slaughter; ⁸
 5 ^y Whose possessors slay them,—and ^z hold themselves not guilty:
 And they ^a that sell them ^b say,—Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich:
 And ^c their own shepherds pity them not.
 6 For ^d I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD:
 But, lo, I will deliver the men
 Every one ^e into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king: ⁹
 And they shall smite the land,—and out of their hand I will not deliver them.
 7 And I will ^f feed the flock of slaughter, even you, ^g O poor of the flock. ¹⁰
 And I took unto me two staves; ¹¹ the one I called Beauty, ¹² and the other I

^l I will not feed you:—^m that that dieth, let it die;

1 Or, 'of affliction;' i. e. he shall remove the obstacles in their way, as he made a passage through the Red Sea for them. Some render it, 'He shall pass through the sea; he shall cleave and smite the waves of the sea.'

2 That is, the Nile.

3 As in the prophecies of Isaiah, the prophecy of Messiah and the true Israel is accompanied with a disclosure of the fate of the impenitent and apostate, both rulers (vers. 1—3) and people (4—6). The prophet, personating the Messiah, desires to feed them (7); but they reject him and despise his ministry; he, therefore, will no more be their Shepherd, but breaks his crooks (8—14); and in his place God will let them have false shepherds, who shall destroy the flock and be punished themselves (15—17). This has been exemplified in the rejection of Jesus by the Jews, and their readiness to follow false Christs.

4 Lebanon and Bashan, with their forests, are often put for the princes and nobles (see Isa. ii. 12, 13, and note; x. 34; Ezek. xvii. 3), here called 'shepherds' and 'lions.' Some, however, think that these terms refer to the city or the temple of Jerusalem.

5 Rather, 'the fortified forest;' i. e. that which seemed least liable to injury.

6 The 'shepherds,' or rulers, may be called 'lions,' because, instead of protecting, they preyed upon the people.

7 See note on Jer. xii. 5.

8 That is, the flock devoted to slaughter, and valued only for that purpose. In Palestine and Arabia the flocks are kept and prized much more for their wool and their milk than for their flesh.

9 This probably refers to the subjection of the Jews, not only to the Romans, but also to other oppressors, through many ages.

10 Or, 'verily a most miserable flock!'

11 That is, shepherds' crooks.

12 Or, 'Pleasantness.' As the crook 'Bands' denotes the 'brotherhood' between Judah and Israel (ver. 14), this probably refers to a state of peace and comfort. The two crooks together seem to refer to God's merciful dealings with his people; who, when these fail, shall be scattered and utterly wretched. Comp. Matt. xxiii. 37, 38.

13 Rather, 'The three.' This probably means 'all,' possibly with reference to the three classes of rulers among the Jews—the priests, magistrates, and prophets. All these were unfaithful.

14 That is, within a short space of time.

15 That is, Let them suffer the worst consequences of war and famine: see 2 Kings vi. 26—29. During the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans, this was actually done. See Jos. Bell. Jud. b. 5, c. 10, s. 3; b. 6, c. 3, ss. 3, 4.

16 Restraining them from dispersing Israel.

17 Or, 'and the truly miserable flock,' etc. Those of the enfeebled nation who observed this, saw in it the fulfilment of God's threatenings.

18 I asked the rulers what they deemed the hire of a good shepherd. The contemptible sum they offered showed how little value they set both upon the shepherd and upon his work.

19 That is, 'a goodly price indeed!' The value set on a slave's life (Exod. xxi. 32)! Cast it publicly, in the temple itself, to the potter, the despised and polluted workman of Tophet (Jer. xviii., xix.) This passage is quoted in Matt. xxvii. 9, 10, on which see note.

prized at of them! And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

14 Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel.

15 And the LORD said unto me, "Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish¹ shepherd.

16 For, lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land,
Which shall not visit those that be cut off;²—neither shall seek the young one,
Nor heal that that is broken,—nor feed that that standeth still:³
But he shall eat the flesh of the fat,—and tear their claws⁴ in pieces.

17 * Woe to the idol⁵ shepherd that leaveth the flock!
† The sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye:
His arm shall be clean dried up,—and his right eye shall be utterly darkened.⁶

Destruction of the enemies of God's people; the repentance, deliverance, and purification of Israel.

12 * THE⁷ burden of the word of the LORD^a for Israel,
Saith the LORD,^b which stretcheth forth the heavens,
And layeth the foundation of the earth,
And ^cformeth the spirit of man within him.

2 Behold, I will make Jerusalem^d a cup of trembling⁸
Unto all the people round about,
When they shall be in the siege—both against Judah and against Jerusalem.⁹
3 * And in that day will I make Jerusalem—^ea burdensome stone¹⁰ for all people:
All that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, ^fThough all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

4 In that day, saith the LORD,
^gI will smite every horse with astonishment,—and his rider with madness:
And ^hI will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah,¹¹
And will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart,
The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my ^hstrength
In the LORD of hosts their God.¹²

6 In that day will I make the governors of Judah ⁱ'Like an hearth¹³ of fire among the wood,—and like a torch of fire in a sheaf;
And ^mthey shall devour all the people round about,
On the right hand and on the left:
And ⁿJerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem.

7 The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first,¹⁴
That the glory of the house of David
And the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem
Do not magnify themselves against Judah.

8 In that day shall the LORD^o defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem;
And ^phe that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David;¹⁵
And the house of David shall be as God,—^qas the angel of the LORD before them.

1 That is, 'wicked;' for 'folly,' in the Scriptures, is equivalent to wickedness.

2 Rather, 'He will not attend to those that are perishing, the strayed he will not seek,' etc.; 'that which standeth (is healthy) he will not feed,' etc. Christ, the 'Good Shepherd,' being rejected, the people shall be given over to selfish deceivers.

3 This probably denotes the sound portion of the flock—those which, instead of being prostrated by disease, retain sufficient strength to continue standing.

4 Rather, 'and break their hoofs.' Instead of keeping his flock from harm, he will injure and destroy them.

5 Rather, 'the worthless shepherd.'

6 God will justly deprive him of the power and understanding which he has abused.

7 Ch. xii., xiii. 1—6 appear to form one prophecy; in which Jehovah, the Almighty Creator (ver. 1), promises to deliver and to purify Jerusalem. He will make her terrible to her foes (2), destructive (3), and confounding (4), by his Divine strength (5), so that she shall consume them (6); whilst the feeblest of her sons and dependants shall become mighty (7—9). He will also give the people a deeply contrite spirit, especially on account of their rejection of Him (10—14); will cleanse away all their guilt (xiii. 1); and will teach them to hate the sins which they once cherished (2—6). Many interpret this as a prophecy of a national restoration of the Jews; but it seems better to regard it as a representation of the salvation and purity of God's true Israel. See note on Ezek. xxxvi. 16.

8 Compare Isa. li. 17. Some render the words, 'a threshold of bruising;' i. e. that all who come to attack her shall stumble at the very threshold.

9 Rather, 'And against Judah also shall it be, in the siege against Jerusalem.' This may refer either to the 'trembling' which is to affect Judah as well as other nations; or to the 'burden' (ver. 1) which is 'against Judah' as well as 'against Israel.'

10 A stone so heavy, that any who attempt to carry it shall be lacerated or bruised. Comp. Matt. xxi. 44.

11 Constantly guarding it.

12 Or, 'My strength, O inhabitants of Jerusalem, is in the LORD of hosts their God.'

13 Rather, 'Like a firepan among logs of wood.'

14 That is, the rural population. The more obscure and feeble shall be first delivered, that the princes and the citizens may not despise them.

- 9 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That I will seek to ^r destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.
- 10 ^s And I will pour upon the house of David,—and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem,
The spirit of grace and of supplications:
And they shall ^t look upon me whom they have pierced,¹
And they shall mourn for him,—“as one mourneth for his only son,
And shall be in bitterness for him,—as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.
- 11 In that day shall there be a great ^x mourning in Jerusalem,
^y As the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.²
- 12 ^z And the land shall mourn, every family apart;
The family of the house of David apart,^a and their wives apart;

13 The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart;
The family of ^c Shimei³ apart, and their wives apart;
14 All the families that remain,—every family apart, and their wives apart.
- 13 In ^d that day there shall be ^e a fountain opened
To the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem,
For sin and for uncleanness.⁴
- 2 And it shall come to pass in that day,—saith the LORD of hosts,
That I will ^f cut off the names of the idols out of the land,
And they shall no more be remembered:
And also I will cause ^g the prophets and the unclean spirit⁵ to pass out of the land.
- 3 And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy,
Then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him,
Thou shalt not live;—for thou speakest lies in the name of the LORD:
And his father and his mother that begat him
^h Shall thrust him through when he prophesieth.⁶
- 4 And it shall come to pass in that day,—that ⁱ the prophets shall be ashamed
Every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied;
Neither shall they wear ^k a rough garment to deceive:
5 ^l But he shall say, I am no prophet,—I am an husbandman;
For man taught me to keep cattle⁷ from my youth.
- 6 And one shall say unto him,—What are these wounds in thine hands?

Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.⁸
Suffering of the Messiah; the punishment of his enemies, and the glory of the church.

And against the man ⁿ that is my fellow,¹⁰—saith the LORD of hosts:
^o Smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered:
And I will turn mine hand upon ^p the little ones.
- 8 And it shall come to pass, that in all the land,—saith the LORD,

² On account of the death of Josiah: see 2 Kings xxiii. 30; 2 Chron. xxxv. 25, and notes. ‘Hadad-rimmon’ was the name of a place near Megiddo.

³ Nathan and Shimei are probably the son and grandson of David and Levi (see 2 Sam. v. 14; Numb. iii. 18), and are mentioned to show that families as well as tribes shall mourn apart.

⁴ This promise includes both the remission of sin, and the gift of sanctifying grace.

⁵ This may refer to the ‘spirit of impurity’ which dwelt in and prompted the ‘false prophets’: see Rev. xvi. 13.

⁶ Fulfilling the law in Deut. xiii.

⁷ Rather, ‘one purchased me,’ i. e. as his servant. A man will rather be thought a slave than a false prophet.

⁸ These are either marks of punishment, or more probably superstitious marks, the blame of which he attempts to throw upon his friends.

⁹ In order to the accomplishment of the foregoing deliverance and purification, there must be a manifestation of Divine justice. This shall be, first, in the death of the Royal and Divine Messiah, and then in the slaughter of God’s ancient people (vers. 7, 8); part of whom, however, shall be purified and numbered with the true Israel (9). And the day of this terrible destruction is near, when Jerusalem shall be destroyed and her people enslaved (xiv. 1, 2), but the people of God shall be wonderfully delivered (3—5); so that after this dreadful darkness (6) there shall come a day that shall have no evening (7). From the Jerusalem of that new era shall go forth streams of life all around (8); her Divine King shall be universally acknowledged (9); she shall be exalted, populous, and safe (10, 11). Whilst her enemies shall suffer plague and blindness, her people are enriched with their spoil (12—15). All shall submit to her King and join in his service, or, if they will not, shall perish (16—19); and she shall become peculiarly holy to Jehovah (20, 21). This passage is very similar to Isa. lxxv., lxxvi., in its references to the ancient and the new Jerusalem, which appear in combination and in contrast; and a comparison with those chapters greatly assists in its correct interpretation.

¹⁰ See note on Ps. xlv. 7. The Messiah is here represented as a Ruler. If he, the Shepherd, is cut off, the sheep and lambs (‘the little ones’) must expect to suffer.

- 14 Behold, ^x the day of the LORD cometh,
And thy spoil¹ shall be divided in the midst of thee.
- 2 For ^y I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle;
^z And the city shall be taken,—and ^a the houses rifled, and the women ravished;
And half of the city shall go forth into captivity,
And the residue of the people ^b shall not be cut off from the city.
- 3 Then shall the LORD go forth,
^c And fight against those nations,—^d as when he fought in the day of battle.²
- 4 And his feet shall stand in that day
^e Upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east,
And the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof
Toward the east and toward the west,—f and there shall be a very great valley;
And half of the mountain shall remove toward the north,
And half of it toward the south.³
- 5 And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains;⁴
For the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal:⁵
Yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the ^g earthquake⁶
In the days of Uzziah king of Judah:
^h And the LORD my God shall come,—and ⁱ all the saints⁷ with thee.
- 6 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That the light shall not be clear,—nor dark.⁸
- 7 But it shall be ^k one day—^l which shall be known to the LORD,
Not day, nor night:⁹
But it shall come to pass, that at ^m evening time it shall be light.
- 8 And it shall be in that day,—that living ⁿ waters shall go out from Jerusalem;
Half of them toward the former ^o sea,—and half of them toward the hinder sea:¹⁰
In summer and in winter shall it be.
- 9 And the LORD shall be ^p king over all the earth:
In that day shall there be ^q one LORD,—and his name one.¹¹
- 10 All the land shall be turned ^r as a plain from ^s Geba to ^t Rimmon
South of Jerusalem:—and it shall be lifted up,¹²—and ^u inhabited in her place,
From Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, ^v And from the tower of Hananeel¹³ unto the king's winepresses.
- 11 And men shall dwell in it,—and there shall be ^w no more utter destruction;¹⁴ ^x But Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited.
- 12 And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people
That have fought against Jerusalem;
Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet,
And their eyes shall consume away in their holes,
And their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.
- 13 And it shall come to pass in that day,
That ^a a great tumult from the LORD shall be among them;
And they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour,
And ^b his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.
- 14 And ^c Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem;¹⁵
^d And the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together,
Gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.
- 15 And ^e so shall be the plague of the horse,
Of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass,
And of all the beasts that shall be in these tents,—as this plague.¹⁶

¹ That is, the spoil of Jerusalem.

² As he formerly fought against the enemies of Israel—the Egyptians, Canaanites, and others.

³ The marvellous salvation of God's people from the punishment of ancient Israel appears to be here figuratively represented by the opening of a way through the mountain, as God anciently opened one through the sea.

⁴ Or, 'Ye shall flee by the valley of my mountains;' i. e. those which I make by cleaving the Mount of Olives.

⁵ Probably the name of a place close to Jerusalem.

⁶ See note on Amos i. 1.

⁷ Or, 'holy ones;' perhaps angels, as in Deut. xxxiii. 2.

⁸ Rather, 'And it shall be in that day, there shall not be light; the splendid [luminaries] shall withdraw.'

⁹ Some think this means a kind of twilight; representing a mixture of knowledge and ignorance, of prosperity and adversity. But others render the verse, 'And there shall be one day—it is known to Jehovah—not day and night (i. e. day succeeded by night), but at evening there shall be light;' referring to an eternal 'day' of glory, which shall arrive at a time known only to Jehovah: see Matt. xxiv. 36.

¹⁰ Half toward the Dead Sea, and half toward the Mediterranean. No permanent stream flows by Jerusalem; but it is to be the source of living waters flowing in all directions. Comp. Ezek. xlvii. 1, and note.

¹¹ Jehovah alone shall be regarded as God.

¹² Jerusalem, though built on hills, is surrounded by hills still higher: but the new city is to be conspicuous from afar. Comp. Isa. ii. 2.

¹³ See note on Jer. xxxi. 38.

¹⁴ Or, 'there shall be no more curse:' see Rev. xxii. 3.

¹⁵ Or, 'in Jerusalem,' against those who in ver. 12 are said to fight 'against Jerusalem.'

¹⁶ The plague upon the enemies of God's church shall be as extensive as those of Egypt: see Exod. ix. 1—7.

- 16 And it shall come to pass,
That every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem
Shall even ^fgo up from year to year
To worship the King, the LORD of hosts,—and to keep ^gthe feast of tabernacles.¹
- 17 ^hAnd it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth

Even upon them ⁱshall be no rain.²
- 18 And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not,—^kthat have no rain;
There shall be the plague,³—wherewith the LORD will smite the heathen
That come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

^l'HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD';⁴
And the pots in the LORD's house shall be like the bowls before the altar.

The imagery and the expressions used in the latter part of this chapter are evidently derived from the Jewish ritual and polity; the rewards and punishments of the new dispensation being described, as they often are in the prophetic writings, under figures borrowed from the old.

MALACHI.

MALACHI was the last of the Old Testament prophets, and is supposed to have prophesied about a hundred years after Haggai and Zechariah. As the word 'Malachi' means my angel, or my messenger (i. e. of the Lord), it has been supposed by some to be rather an appellation than a proper name. Nothing is known of his personal history: but he evidently lived after the second temple had been built, and its offerings and sacrifices had been re-established; for it is an insincere and mercenary spirit in those services, especially among the priests, which he labours to correct. It is probable that he was contemporary with Nehemiah, or immediately followed him. The offences which he particularly censures are those which excited the indignation of that pious governor, and called forth his earnest endeavours for their removal.

It appears from this book that the moral and religious state of the people had greatly declined since the time of Haggai and Zechariah. For whereas at the former period they were addressed chiefly in the language of promise and encouragement, in the time of Malachi they had more need of reproofs and warnings. They were the slaves of formalism and self-righteousness; satisfied with themselves; complaining of God; irritated at the afflictions which he sent them; and not hesitating even to accuse him of injustice, and to blaspheme his name.

Malachi reproves both the priests and the people; announces the unexpected appearance of the Lord for whom they looked, preceded by his harbinger to prepare his way; declares the distinction that shall be finally made between the righteous and the wicked; and concludes with an assurance of approaching salvation to those who fear God, upon whom 'the Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing in his wings;' and with a solemn injunction to the people of God to observe the law of Moses, while expecting the promised Saviour.

The manner in which this book concludes implies that the Jewish people were to expect no more prophets till the Messiah's forerunner should come: and from this period the spirit of prophecy appears to have ceased until the commencement of the New Testament era.

Israel's ungrateful returns for God's peculiar mercies; and special reproofs of the priests.

¹ The Jews, forgetful of their obligations to God, are reminded of his peculiar mercy towards them in preferring them to their kinsmen and neighbours of Edom (vers. 1—5): and the priests, who bear a special relation to Jehovah (6), are severely reproofed for their scandalous contempt of his worship and disregard of his honour; which he will yet maintain, though he will reject their offerings as worthless and offensive (7—14). As they have neglected their spiritual duties, and perverted their judicial office, notwithstanding God's covenant and the example of their pious ancestors; they shall be made contemptible in the sight of all (ii. 1—9).

9 Rather, 'him that waketh and him that answereth;' a proverbial expression, derived probably from the calls and replies of watchmen, and signifying every one. See Psa. cxxxiv.; Isa. lxii. 6.

10 This probably means, 'And this second thing have ye done;' i. e. beside taking idolatrous wives, ye have divorced your Hebrew wives, whose tears cover my altar and make your offerings distasteful to me.

11 That is, Did he not make one man for one woman, though his Divine power was not exhausted, and he could have created many for one? And why did he appoint the one for the one? Because he desired a holy race. And, in fact, polygamy and facility of divorce have always had the most deteriorating effects upon families and upon nations. Some, however, consider the 'one' to refer to Abraham, thus: 'But ye say, Did not the one (Abraham, Isa. li. 2; Ezek. xxxiii. 24) practise polygamy? yet the Spirit was not withdrawn from him. Granted; but wherefore did he do it? In order to obtain the 'holy seed' promised to him. Whereas you do it to gratify your lusts.'

12 Rather, 'covereth his garment with violence;' i. e. is cruel to his wife by divorcing her. The word 'garment' seems to have acquired the meaning of conjugal protection (see Ruth iii. 9; Ezek. xvi. 8), and even to be used for 'a wife,' as it is among the Orientals now.

¹ As many of the people profanely questioned the justice of God's threatenings (ver. 17), the prophet announces the speedy coming of the Messiah, not for such purposes as they hoped, but to judge these sceptics, and thoroughly to sift and purify his people (ch. iii. 1—5); and shows that their preservation hitherto has been owing entirely to Divine forbearance (6). He exhorts the people to return to God, and to bring the tithes and offerings which they have withheld; and promises them a correspondent blessing (7—12). He then reproves their presumptuous arraignment of the dispensations of Providence; and declares that those who encourage one another in humbly trusting and serving God shall be acknowledged and protected by Him in the day of trial, and shall see the difference that He will make between the righteous and the wicked (13—18). And he concludes by describing the terrors and the blessings of the approaching time of sifting and trial, and announcing again the harbinger of the Judge Messiah (iv. 1—6).

6 See note on ch. iii. 1.

7 Family discord was the natural result of those divorces and foreign marriages which the prophet had denounced. Hence its removal is selected to describe the change produced by the preaching of John the Baptist:
see Luke i. 17. Thus the last prophecies of the Old Testament, like the earliest, rebuke corruption and promise deliverance; they uphold the authority of the first dispensation while they reveal the second; combining the establishment of the law and of spiritual obedience with the assurance of approaching salvation.

NOTE ON THE FULFILMENT OF PROPHECY.

UPON this extensive and important subject, nothing more can be attempted here than to notice very briefly two of its principal branches: (1) the prophecies relating to the coming of the Messiah, and the establishment and diffusion of the Christian religion; and (2) those which refer to the future destinies of the Jewish nation.

I. Among the particulars foretold respecting the promised MESSIAH were, the time when he was to appear (Dan. ix. 25, etc.); the nation, tribe, and family from which he was to descend, and the place of his birth (Isa.
xi. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5, 6; Mic. v. 2, etc.); his Divine as well as his human nature (Isa. vii. 14; ix. 6, 7, etc.);
the poverty and meanness of his external condition (Isa.
xlix. 7; lii. 14; liii. 2, etc.); and the unparalleled excellence and dignity of his personal character, combining wisdom and knowledge, purity, righteousness, and invincible courage, with meekness, kindness, compassion, and humility, more than human forbearance, unfaltering trust in God, and complete resignation to his will (Isa. xi.

2—5; xl. 10, 11; xlii. 2, 3; i. 5—7; Dan. ix. 26, etc.) The prophecies are also as minutely descriptive of his work and sufferings. They set forth the greatness and the benignity of his miracles, and the gracious character of his ministry (Isa. xxv. 6; liii. 4; lxi. 1, etc.); they foretel his rejection by his countrymen, and his judicial condemnation; they describe him as 'bearing the sins of many,' 'healing by his stripes,' 'giving his soul an offering for sin,' and 'making intercession for transgressors'

NOTE ON THE FULFILMENT OF PROPHECY.

(Isa. lii. 13—15; liii.; Zech. xiii. 7; xii. 10, etc.) To all this they add the most glowing descriptions of his subsequent exaltation and glory, and his success in his great enterprise, as the consequence and reward of his sufferings (Isa. ix. 6, 7; lii. 13—15; liii. 10—12, etc.) That all these predictions were fulfilled in our Lord Jesus Christ, the whole history of his life and death, his resurrection and ascension, abundantly testifies; as will be clearly seen by turning to the passages to which references are given in the margin.

The prophecies further present to us the character of the GOSPEL, as well as of its Author. They explicitly foretel a future and perfect revelation of the Divine will (Isa. xi. 9; xl. 5; Jer. xxxi. 31—34, etc.); and the promulgation of the gospel, and the conversion of the Gentiles to a religion proceeding from Judea (Isa. ii. 2—4; xlii. 1—7; xlix. 6; lx. 1—3, etc.)—a place and a people which might seem the most unlikely to have been the instruments of communicating such a gift to the world. For, separated as the Jews were from the rest of mankind by their civil institutions, their peculiar prejudices, and the feeling of contempt with which they were regarded by other nations, they appeared, especially in their broken and humbled state, the last people from whom a universal religion could be expected to arise. Yet the history of the establishment of Christianity as a known, unquestionable fact, contains the fulfilment of all these prophecies which were recorded so many ages before. And, though we see not yet that universal reception of the gospel, and that prevalence of Christianity over the whole earth, which these great promises reveal, it is to be remembered, that what has been accomplished is in itself a sure pledge of a more perfect consummation: and the present state of the world in many of its relations encourages the hope, as it affords the opportunity and the means, by the power and grace of God's Holy Spirit, of such universal diffusion.

II. PREDICTIONS CONCERNING THE JEWS. While promises were given to the chosen people that prosperity and happiness should attend their obedience, they were threatened, if disobedient, with punishments proportioned to their sins. The first predictions upon this subject were delivered by Moses more than 3200 years ago (Lev. xxvi. 36—39, 44; Deut. iv. 27; xxviii. 20—68); and the writings of succeeding prophets abound with similar declarations. These predictions contain several remarkable peculiarities, quite out of the usual course of human affairs.

1. It was repeatedly foretold that they should be scattered, and removed into the utmost parts of the earth (Jer. xv. 4; Ezek. xiii. 10—16; Hos. ix. 17, etc.) And all the records of history attest that dispersion has been the fate of the Jewish people in a manner and degree in which it has never befallen any other race. The first infliction of this national calamity was by the Assyrian power, when the Ten Tribes were swept into captivity. The second great infliction of it befel the surviving kingdom of Judah at the time of the Babylonian conquest: and after the days of the Messiah, followed the catastrophe effected by the Roman arms, which extended and aggravated the calamity of dispersion beyond any former example.

Not only in the extent and manner of their dispersion, but in its continuance, the case of the Jews is without a parallel. To this day their own country is lying waste and desolate: whilst they, its proper owners, are to be seen everywhere, living in the heart of cities, and taking a part among the busiest traffickers in the great markets of the world; present in all countries, but with a home in none; closely incorporated among themselves, yet universally dispersed; intermixed, and yet separated; neither amalgamated, nor lost. What race has suffered so much, and yet endured so long? What nation has subsisted as a distinct people in their own country so long as the Jews have done in their dispersion in all countries!

2. It was further foretold of them, that they should become 'an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word among all the nations whither the Lord should lead them' (Deut. xxviii. 37; Jer. xxiv. 9, 10; xxix. 18, etc.) Here a circumstance apparently dependent upon the capricious judgment of men was made the subject of a specific prediction. But is it not one of the most observable things, among all which this outcast people has been made to endure, that over and above spoliation of property, civil disfranchisement, and severe persecutions under the name of law, their cup of suffering has had that last ingredient largely infused,—that they have been marked out for the scorn and contempt of the world?

3. Another prediction respecting this nation was, that while the kingdom—the body politic—was to be destroyed, and the people were to be 'sifted' through the nations, yet the seed so sifted was not to perish (Jer. xli. 28; Amos ix. 8, 9). And how remarkably is the history of the Jews made up of these opposite particulars, destruction and preservation, scattering and safekeeping, combined! They have not been utterly destroyed, though 'a full end has been made of their enemies.' Though oppressed and vanquished, banished and spoiled, they have survived the mightiest monarchies, and now overspread the world.

It is worthy of notice, with reference to the present condition of this people, that whilst an obstinate attachment to the name and memory of their law is the proximate visible cause which cements and perpetuates their scattered race; their rejection of Christianity, when it was offered to them, is imputed in the Christian Scriptures to their corruption and violation of the moral law, and their culpable blindness as to the sense of the prophecies (Acts vii.; xxviii. 25—28; Rom. ix.—xi.; 2 Cor. iii. 14—18, etc.); and these appear still to be the hindrances to their reception of the gospel.

Many prophecies of more propitious import concerning the Jews, that yet remain to be accomplished, are reserved for testimonies to future generations, if not to the present (Deut. xxx. 3—5; Isa. xi. 11, 12; Jer. xxxi., xxxiii.; Ezek. xxxvi., xxxvii.; Amos ix. 13—15, etc.) And it is a very observable circumstance that, throughout all the changes which have occurred among the kingdoms of the earth during so many centuries, nothing has happened to render the accomplishment of these prophecies impossible; but that, on the contrary, the state of the Jewish people, as well as of Christian and heathen nations at this day, is such as to render them easily capable of receiving a complete fulfilment. And when these predictions of their conversion to Christ shall be accomplished, the whole taken together will be, indeed, a sign and wonder to all nations, and a prelude to the universal triumph of true Christianity.

Another large class of prophecies (intimately connected with those last mentioned), concerning the LAND OF JUDEA, has received an equally striking fulfilment. The particular features of the future desolation, as foretold by the prophets, exactly accord with the descriptions of modern travellers. The country has been 'overthrown by strangers;' is 'laid waste,' and is 'utterly spoiled;' has become as a 'desolate wilderness;' 'few men are left;' and 'the mirth of the land is gone.'

Beside the above two great subjects of prophecy, we have many predictions concerning HEATHEN STATES AND KINGDOMS which surrounded the Holy Land, or came into contact with the covenant people. Some of these had reference to the most powerful empires of antiquity;—Nineveh, Babylon, Egypt, and Tyre. Others related to states and kingdoms of less note, and of which we know scarcely anything but from their connection with the Israelites, to whom they were jealous neighbours or active enemies;—Ammon, Moab, Philistia, and Edom. The exact accomplishment of these prophecies, as recorded in many instances in the pages of history, and as exhibited in numerous others in the present condition of those countries, or the existing remains of their cities, is too large a field to be entered upon here: but this subject will be found fully and strikingly illustrated in Keith's Evidence of Prophecy, Wilson's Lands of the Bible, Layard's Nineveh and Babylon, Davidson's Lectures on Prophecy, and other works.

SKETCH OF THE HISTORY OF THE JEWS DURING THE PERIOD BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

ALTHOUGH we have not in Scripture any history of the events of these four hundred years, many of them are referred to in prophecy. Some important predictions which the prophets had delivered respecting Babylon, Tyre, Egypt, and other nations, received their fulfilment during this period; and the accounts which the best heathen historians give of the principal events wonderfully agree with the inspired prophecies. The following sketch will, however, be limited to the Jewish history.

Judea continued subject to the kings of Persia about two hundred years, but does not appear to have had a separate governor after Nehemiah. It was annexed to the province of Syria; and the administration of its affairs was left to the high priest, subject to the control of the provincial rulers. This raised the high priesthood to a degree of temporal dignity and power which very soon made it an object of ambition to the different members of the family of Aaron, and gave rise to many violent and disgraceful contests among them for the office.

Upon the overthrow of the Persian army by Alexander, Syria and the neighbouring countries fell under his power; and Tyre was taken after an obstinate resistance. Alexander then marched into Judea, to punish the Jews, who, as faithful subjects of the king of Persia, had sent the Tyrians supplies of provisions, and refused them to him. But it is related that, as he approached Jerusalem, and saw a procession of the people clothed in white coming to meet him, headed by Jaddua the high priest, and all the priestly race, in their robes of office, his heart was turned to spare and favour them. He continued to them the free enjoyment of their laws and religion, and exempted them from tribute during their sabbatical years; and when he built the city of Alexandria, he placed a great number of Jews there, and gave to them the same privileges as to his Greek subjects.

After the death of Alexander, and the division of his empire among his generals, Judea became a subject of contention between the kings of Syria and Egypt, which ended in its forming for a time part of the monarchy of Egypt. Ptolemy Soter, the king of Egypt, brought many thousands of the Jews into that country, settled them there, and treated them kindly, placing them on an equality with the Greeks at Alexandria. Greek being the common language of that city, it was quickly learned by the Jewish settlers, and became the native language of their children who were born there, and who on that account, in process of time, were called Hellenists, or Grecian Jews;—a name which afterwards came to be applied generally to all Jews speaking the Greek language in foreign countries (see Acts vi. 1; ix. 29; xi. 20, etc.) These Grecian Jews had synagogues in Alexandria; in which the writings of Moses and of the prophets, translated into Greek for this purpose, were read every sabbath day. This translation, which is called the Septuagint (see General Preface, p. vi.), contributed much to spread the knowledge of true religion through the western part of the world. It came into common use among the Jews; and the quotations made from the Old Testament Scriptures in the New, by the evangelists and apostles, are often, though not always, from this version.

Egypt was not the only foreign country in which the Jewish people found protection. Seleucus, having become possessed of the kingdom of Syria, about 300 B. C., built numerous cities in Syria and Asia Minor; and regarding the Jews as good and faithful citizens, he endeavoured to attract them to his new cities by the offer of the same privileges as were enjoyed by the Greeks and Macedonians. They accordingly settled there in great numbers; especially at Antioch in Syria, where, in process of time, they formed almost as large a proportion of the population as they did at Alexandria.

It is worthy of notice, that by these events the Jews were brought into contact with a new form of heathenism.

They had already encountered its more ancient and more barbarous forms during their sojourns in Egypt and in Babylon—the head quarters and central seats of idolatry in their days. But now, by their dispersion in Egypt, and the other countries bordering on the eastern end of the Mediterranean, they were everywhere brought into contact with the more cultivated and refined mythology and philosophy of the Greeks; and there are good grounds for believing that they were the means of communicating, to the more candid and teachable among them, some knowledge of a purer religion.

During the reign of Ptolemy Soter, the prosperity of the Jews was much promoted by the internal administration of an excellent high priest, Simon the Just. He repaired and fortified their city and temple; and made a spacious reservoir of water, 'in compass as a sea.' He is said to have completed the canon of the Old Testament, by the addition of the books of Ezra, Haggai, Zechariah, Nehemiah, Esther, and Malachi. The Jews also affirm that Simon was 'the last of the Great Synagogue,' which is said to have consisted of one hundred and twenty patriotic and devoted men (comprising, among others, Ezra, Haggai, Zechariah, Nehemiah, and Malachi), who appear to have distinguished themselves by their labours in collecting the sacred books, and in settling and improving the civil and religious institutions of their country. Simon died in the year 291 B. C.

After the Jewish nation had been tributary to the kings of Egypt for about eighty years (during which time it enjoyed almost uninterrupted tranquillity), it became, by the conquest of Antiochus the Great, subject to the kings of Syria: but the Jews were still governed by their own laws, under the high priest and council of the nation.

Judea, being situated between Syria and Egypt, suffered much during the whole of this period, from the frequent wars in which those countries were engaged; and was the arena of many bloody and destructive battles. Beside this, the peace of the nation was greatly disturbed by the claims of rival candidates to the office of high priest, which afforded to the kings of Syria frequent pretexts for interfering with the internal affairs of the nation. And all these evils were considerably aggravated by the corruption and misconduct of the chief men, and the increasing wickedness of the people, who began to neglect the worship and the law of God far more than they had ever done since their return from the captivity.

God saw fit to punish the Jews for this defection by the hand of Antiochus Epiphanes, who came with an army and plundered the city and temple of Jerusalem with every conceivable circumstance of cruelty and profanation. For three years and a half they were altogether deprived of their civil and religious liberties. The daily sacrifice was suspended; the temple itself was dedicated by Antiochus to Jupiter Olympius, whose statue was erected on the altar of burnt offering; the worship of Jehovah and the observance of his law were prohibited under the severest penalties; every copy of the sacred writings that could be seized was burned; and the people were required, under pain of death, to sacrifice to idols. Never before had the Jews been exposed to so furious a persecution. The apostates were numerous, but a remnant continued faithful; and these events were doubtless useful in calling the attention of the heathen around to those great principles for which many of the Jews were willing to peril their lives.

At length, God raised up a deliverer for his people in the noble family of the Asamoneans. Mattathias, a priest eminent for his piety and resolution, and the father of five sons, encouraged the people, by his example and exhortations, 'to stand up for the law;' and having collected around him a large number of faithful men, he undertook to deliver his people, and to restore the worship of the God of Israel. But being very old when he engaged in this arduous work, he did not live to see its completion. At his death, his eldest son Judas succeeded to the command of the army, in which he was greatly assisted by his brother Simon, a man of remarkable prudence. The motto on his standard was, Exod. xv. 11, 'Who is like unto thee among the gods, O Jehovah?' the Hebrew words being, Mi Camoka Baalim Jehovah: and from the initial letters of these words, M C B I, is said to be derived the word Maccabi or Maccabee, which became the surname of the family.

After several victories over the troops of Antiochus, Judas Maccabeus gained possession of Jerusalem; and his first care was to repair and purify the temple for the restoration of the Divine worship. This re-consecration of the temple and revival of its worship was ever after celebrated by an annual feast of eight days. It occurred at the time of the winter solstice (165 B. C.), and was called the Feast of the Dedication (John x. 22).

The war was carried on for twenty-six years, with five successive kings of Syria; and after many sanguinary battles the Syrians were driven out of the country, and the Jews, under their Maccabean princes, regained for a time their independence and the free exercise of their religion; which they commemorated by commencing a new epoch in 143 B. C. as the year of 'the freedom of Jerusalem.' They had again regular troops, strong garrisons, and alliances with other powers, including even Rome; and the boundaries of the state were extended by the subjugation of the Idumeans and Philistines, as well as of Moab, Ammon, and Arabia Petrea. Previously to this, in the year 153 B. C., as the Asamonean family were descended from the eldest branch of the race of Aaron, the office of high priest was assumed by Jonathan, the then reigning prince; and it remained in the family until the usurpation of Herod.

This season of prosperity was, however, of short duration. The nation was exceedingly troubled by internal dissensions, especially on the part of the Pharisees, who first appear prominently in history in the reign of John Hyrcanus, as forming a large and powerful body, of turbulent character and lofty pretensions, and carrying on fierce quarrels with the rival sect of the Sadducees; which led upon one occasion to a dreadful civil war. There were also violent contests for the throne between rival members of the royal family, which greatly weakened the nation; and it was ill prepared to withstand the extending power of Rome, which in the year 65 B. C. subjugated Syria, and soon afterwards conquered Egypt. In the year 63 B. C. Pompey marched his army into Judea, besieged and took Jerusalem, and made the country tributary to the Romans, though it was still governed by the Maccabean princes. During the reigns of the later princes of this family, Herod Antipater, an Idumean by birth, obtained a position of power and influence in the land; and after his death, his son, Herod the Great, so ingratiated himself with the Romans that he obtained the appointment of king of Judea in the place of Antigonus. He had, however, some difficulty in obtaining possession of his kingdom, as the people were greatly attached to their Maccabean kings. But he came against Jerusalem with a Roman army of 60,000 men; and, after a siege of above half a year, took the city by storm, and massacred many of the inhabitants. Shortly afterwards he put to death Antigonus; and thus ended the Asamonean dynasty, after it had subsisted a hundred and twenty-six years.

Herod was a man of great abilities, and of indomitable resolution; but an ambitious and cruel tyrant, a slave to his passions, and utterly unscrupulous as to the means by which he gained his ends. With cruel jealousy he persecuted to death all the members and adherents of the Asamonean house; and he even put to death his wife and two of his own sons. He degraded the high priesthood by making the tenure of the office dependent on his own pleasure. In order to gain popularity with his subjects, as well as to increase his own fame, he greatly enlarged and beautified the temple at Jerusalem at vast expense; making it, in some respects, more magnificent than that of Solomon. He also erected in neighbouring cities many heathen temples, and constructed numerous public works, such as bridges, roads, baths, aqueducts, and harbours, the cost of which he defrayed by heavy exactions upon his subjects.

In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Herod, while Augustus was emperor of Rome, the SAVIOUR of the world was born.

Herod was succeeded in the government of the greater part of Palestine by his son Archelaus, who acted with great cruelty and injustice; and in the tenth year of his reign, upon a complaint being made against him by the Jews, he was banished by Augustus to Vienne in Gaul, where he died. Publius Sulpitius Quirinus (who is called in Greek Cyrenius, Luke ii. 2), the president of Syria, was then sent to reduce the countries over which Archelaus had reigned to a Roman province: and a governor of Judea was appointed under the title of Procurator, subordinate to the president of Syria. But the Jews were still permitted to exercise their religious worship without molestation or restraint.

During the period comprehended in the preceding sketch, the Jews had become very extensively dispersed among the nations; carrying with them their Divine law and prophecies, and establishing everywhere their synagogues and their worship. Many thousands of them had at different times gone to Egypt, Syria, and Asia Minor; sometimes as captives, and at other times as voluntary settlers. They had become a very numerous body at Alexandria in Egypt, at Antioch in Syria, and at Ephesus and other cities of Asia Minor; whence they went to Corinth, Rome, and other remoter places, where many of them became by trade rich and powerful. So that there was scarcely a country in the whole Roman empire in which there were not Jews living. A few only of the Gentiles had become complete converts to the Jewish religion, so as to observe strictly the Mosaic law; but many more, particularly of the female sex, had embraced it so far as to renounce their national idolatries and to worship Jehovah as the only true God.

All these widely dispersed Jews, and many of the Gentile proselytes, regarded Jerusalem as their common capital; and not only sent yearly contributions and offerings to the temple, but also frequently repaired thither to the great festivals. Thus it came to pass, that on that memorable day of Pentecost (Acts ii. 5, 9—11) 'there were assembled at Jerusalem Jews' (either by birth or proselytes), 'devout men out of every nation under heaven.' Thus also it was that in almost every city of the Roman empire where Paul preached he found a body of his countrymen, many of whom were waiting for the 'Consolation of Israel.'

Meanwhile, in the Gentile world, the old systems of idolatry had fallen into disrepute, partly through the extreme corruptions of worship and of morals connected with them, and partly through the cultivation of Grecian philosophy; the conflicting theories of which, however, utterly failed to satisfy the wants of mankind, as they afforded little solid truth, and produced no moral renovation. At the same time, the universal prevalence of the Roman power, insuring internal peace, and facilitating communication between different parts of the world, together with its indifference to the various forms of religious belief and worship, opened, for a time, a wider field for the diffusion of the gospel. So that Providence combined with prophecy to mark this as the 'fulness of time,' when the expected Saviour should come into the world.
